§ 23.63 A motion to adjourn is not in order while a Member has the floor unless he yields for the motion.

On Oct. 18, 1945,⁽¹²⁾ Mr. Edward E. Cox, of Georgia, who had the floor, yielded to Mr. John Edward Sheridan, of Pennsylvania, at the latter's request. Mr. Sheridan then moved that the House adjourn, and Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, inquired of Mr. Cox whether he yielded for that purpose. Mr. Cox replied:

Mr. Speaker, I do not yield for that purpose, and the gentleman should not have taken advantage of the courtesy I extended to him.⁽¹³⁾

§ 23.64 The Chair cannot refuse to recognize a Member having the floor for a motion to adjourn.

On Mar. 16, 1945,⁽¹⁴⁾ Mr. Robert F. Jones, of Ohio, objected to the vote on a question to recommit on the ground that a quorum was not present. A call of the House was ordered and a quorum failed to vote. Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, was recognized for a parliamentary inquiry and then stated that if there was not a quorum, he moved that the House adjourn. Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, asked him to withhold his request and Mr. Hoffman responded "If the Chair is refusing recognition, I will." The Speaker stated that he could not so refuse recognition for a motion to adjourn. Mr. John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, then moved adjournment and the motion was agreed to.⁽¹⁵⁾

§ 23.65 A Delegate to the House may offer the motion to adjourn (in this instance while serving as Acting Majority Leader).

On Jan. 9, 1981,⁽¹⁶⁾ Mr. Fofu I. F. Sunia, the Delegate from American Samoa, made the following motion:

MR. SUNIA: Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 25 minutes p.m.), under its previous order, the House adjourned until Tuesday, January 13, 1981, at 12 o'clock noon.

sider, but he may not vote on any motion so offered.

§ 23.66 While the motion to adjourn takes precedence over any other motion under clause 4 of Rule XVI, the Speaker may through his power of recognition recognize the Majority Leader by unanimous consent for one minute to announce the legislative program prior to entertaining the motion to adjourn; and on one occasion, the Speaker recognized the Majority Leader to announce the program for the remainder of the day and declined to recognize a Member to offer a motion to adjourn pending that announcement, although the Majority Leader had neglected to obtain unanimous consent to address the House for one minute. The Speaker then suggested that decorum would best be maintained by unanimous-consent permission to announce the leadership program pending a motion to adjourn.

On Dec. 14, 1982,⁽¹⁷⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House:

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁸⁾ The Chair recognizes the majority leader, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Wright).

MR. [DENNY] SMITH of Oregon: Mr. Speaker, I have a preferential motion I send to the desk.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will be seated. The Speaker has the right of recognition.

MR. SMITH of Oregon: Mr. Speaker, I have a preferential motion.

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Regular order, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair recognizes the majority leader, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Wright).

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

MR. [JAMES C.] WRIGHT [Jr., of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, let me simply announce for the benefit of the Members that it is our intention now to have no further votes tonight. We plan to take up the things that we put off last night in order that Members might go and attend the reception in the White House, the remaining suspension, as was agreed with the Republican leadership and our leadership last night, but we will not have any votes. We will roll the votes until tomorrow, let the votes be the first thing tomorrow.

MR. SMITH of Oregon: Mr. Speaker, I offer a preferential motion.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state his preferential motion.

MR. SMITH of Oregon: Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

THE SPEAKER: The question is on the preferential motion offered by the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. Smith).

The question was taken, and the Speaker announced that the noes appeared to have it.

MR. SMITH of Oregon: Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 122, nays 202, not voting 109, as follows: . . .

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will make the following statement:

It is the usual and customary practice in this House that when we come to the end of a proceeding, as we did, that the majority leader then announces the program for the remainder of the night. The majority leader had informed me that he was going to make that announcement. Normally it is a unanimous-consent request, and that is what the Chair anticipated that the majority leader would do.

It is the prerogative and the duty of the Speaker of the House to run this body in an expeditious manner and he should be informed when motions are going to be made, whether they are privileged or otherwise, and when he is suddenly confronted with a privileged motion, then it is my opinion, while the Chair appreciates that he follows the rules of the House, it does not improve the decorum of the House. The Speaker at all times tries to be fair, and thought he was being fair with the Members when he was recognizing the majority leader to inform the membership what the program was for the remainder of the evening.

at the end of special-order speeches, there being an objection by a minority Member on the floor, the Member objecting was then recognized to move adjournment; there was no majority Member on the floor at the time.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on May 23, 1984:⁽¹⁹⁾

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽²⁰⁾ Without objection, the House stands adjourned.

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I object.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Walker) have a motion?

MR. WALKER: Mr. Speaker, I have always wanted to do this.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair is going to recognize the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Walker).

MR. WALKER: Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 11 o'clock and 37 minutes p.m.) the House adjourned until tomorrow, Thursday, May 24, 1984, at 10 a.m.

§ 23.68 Where the two Houses have adopted a concurrent resolution permitting an adjournment of the House to a day certain in excess of three days upon motion made by the Majority Leader or a Member designated by him, the Speaker may recognize the Member so designated to move to adjourn pursuant to the concurrent resolution, over another Member whose motion to adjourn if agreed to would only permit the House to adjourn overnight.

On Aug. 4, 1983,⁽¹⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House:

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽²⁾ The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas.

MR. [HANK] BROWN of Colorado: Mr. Speaker, I have a privileged motion. I move the House adjourn.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas.

D. CONTROL AND DISTRIBUTION OF TIME FOR DEBATE

§ 24. In General; Role of Manager

In the practice of the House, one or more designated Members manage a measure during its consideration on the floor of the House. The manager of the measure has prior right to recognition unless he surrenders or loses control or unless a preferential motion is offered which is within the province of those who oppose the bill.⁽³⁾

The manager is generally designated by the committee reporting the bill or resolution and is normally the chairman of the full committee or of the relevant subcommittee. Where a proposition is considered pursuant to a special order from the Committee on Rules, the special order typically provides that debate be controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the committee which has applied to the Committee on Rules for such an order.⁽⁴⁾

3. For prior rights to recognition of the Member in control, see §§ 24.1, 24.2, infra. An example of a motion within the province of the opposition (with priority of recognition to the minority party) is the motion to recommit (see Ch. 23, supra). For the surrendering or losing of control, see § 33, infra.
4. For management by the reporting committee, see § 26, infra. The effect

If a measure is considered under the hour rule in the House, the Member calling it up is normally entitled to one hour of debate, which he may in his discretion yield to other Members. He may at any time move the previous question, thereby bringing the matter to a vote and terminating further debate.⁽⁵⁾ On conference reports and amendments reported in disagreement from conference, the hour is equally divided between the majority and minority parties.⁽⁶⁾ Where a bill is called up in the House under suspension of the rules, debate continues for forty minutes, equally divided (see Chapter 21, supra).

If a matter is to be considered in the Committee of the Whole, general debate therein is controlled and divided by the Members in charge. When the bill is read for amendment in the Committee, the managers have prior right to recognition for debate and to move to limit debate or to move that the Committee rise.⁽⁷⁾ and forms of special orders are discussed in § 28, infra.

5. For further discussion of the hour rule, see § 68, infra. For the previous question, see § 24.21, infra.
6. See Ch. 33 (House-Senate Conferences), infra. See also § 26, infra, for the requirement that one-third of debate time be allotted to one opposed.
7. For priority of recognition to move that the Committee rise, see § 24.15,

During consideration in the House as in the Committee of the Whole, only five-minute debate is conducted, with priority of recognition to members of the reporting committee for debate or to move the previous question or to limit debate.

recognition on a bill being handled by Mr. Sabath. Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, recognized Mr. Sabath since he had priority of recognition as the Member in charge and then answered parliamentary inquiries on the order of recognition:

MR. RICH: After the reading of section 4 of the bill which contained subsections (a), (b), and (c), could not a Member have risen to strike out the last word and have been recognized?

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman did not state for what purpose he rose. The gentleman from Illinois who is in charge of the resolution was on his feet at the same time. The Chair recognized the gentleman from Illinois, and the gentleman from Illinois made a preferential motion.

MR. [CLARE E.] HOFFMAN [of Michigan]: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state it.

MR. HOFFMAN: Must a Member on the floor addressing the Speaker state the purpose for which he addresses the Speaker before he may be recognized?

THE SPEAKER: Two Members rose. The Speaker always has the right to recognize whichever Member he desires. The Chair recognized the gentleman from Illinois who was in charge of the resolution. The gentleman from Illinois made a preferential motion; the Chair put the motion and it was adopted.⁽⁹⁾

§ 24.2 Where the Member handling a bill on the floor and a minority Member both seek recognition, the Chair gives preference to the former.

On Nov. 15, 1967,⁽¹⁰⁾ the Committee of the Whole was considering H.R. 2388, economic opportunity amendments, reported by the Committee on Education and Labor (chaired by Carl D. Perkins [Ky.]). Mr. Edward J. Gurney, of Florida, sought recognition to offer an amendment, but Chairman John J. Rooney, of New York, recognized Mr. Perkins to submit a unanimous-consent request (to close debate at a certain hour).

Mr. Gurney made a point of order against recognition of Mr. Perkins, and the Chairman overruled the point of order:

MR. GURNEY: Mr. Chairman, I am a member of the committee. I was on my feet. The Chair recognized me, and I did not yield for a unanimous-consent request on the other side.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair asked the gentleman for what purpose he rose.

MR. GURNEY: And I said to offer an amendment, and I was recognized for that purpose.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair had not recognized the gentleman from Florida at that point.

The Chair now recognizes the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. Poage delivered the following remarks when calling up the report:

Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, today I find myself in the same position which I occupied when we sent this bill to conference. I have no desire to interfere with or delay consideration of the bill. I full well recognize the very proper desire of every Member of this House to secure and maintain the very best possible meat inspection program for the United States. I join in that desire. The conference report which our committee brings you is intended to achieve that result. I hope it will.

This report is signed by all of the conferees on the part of the Senate and all but two of the conferees on the part of the House. I am one of those two.⁽¹³⁾

On Dec. 1, 1982,⁽¹⁴⁾ during consideration of H.R. 6995 (Federal Trade Commission Authorization Act) in the Committee of the Whole, the Chair responded to an inquiry regarding debate, as indicated below:

MR. [JAMES T.] BROYHILL [of North Carolina]: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry with respect to the procedure followed here.

It is my understanding that the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Florio) [the manager of the bill] will control the time in opposition to the Luken amendment; is that correct?

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁵⁾ If the gentleman is opposed to the amendment.

The following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole on June 18, 1986,⁽¹⁶⁾ during consideration of H.R. 4868 (Anti-Apartheid Act of 1986):

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁷⁾ Under the rule, the gentleman from California (Mr. Dellums) will be recognized for 30 minutes, and a Member opposed to the amendment will be recognized for 30 minutes.

Will those gentlemen who are opposed to the Dellums amendment kindly stand so the Chair can designate?

Is the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Bonker) opposed to the amendment?

MR. [DON] BONKER [of Washington]: I advise the Chair that I oppose the amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN: Then the Chair will recognize the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Bonker) for 30 minutes in opposition to the Dellums amendment.

Does the gentleman from Washington wish to yield any of his time or share any of his time?

MR. BONKER: Mr. Chairman, I would yield half the allotted time, 15 minutes, to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Siljander).

THE CHAIRMAN: The time in opposition will be equally divided between the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Bonker) and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Siljander). . . .

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Chairman, do I understand that the process that has just taken place has given the minority side one-quarter of the time.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair would counsel the gentleman from Pennsylvania in regard to his inquiry that the rule provides that a Member will be recognized in opposition. The gentleman from Washington (Mr. Bonker) was recognized in opposition, and he shared his time with your side.

MR. WALKER: In other words, the minority, though, was not recognized for the purposes of opposition. Is that correct?

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair would state that the procedures of the House are governed by its rules, but more importantly in this instance, by the rule adopted by the House as reported from the Committee.

Manager's Right To Make Essential Motion

§ 24.7 The Speaker recognized the manager of a special rule, pending when a recess had been declared to await the copy of an engrossed bill, to withdraw the special rule from consideration.

Res. 665), offered by Mr. Richard Bolling, of Missouri, from the Committee on Rules, providing for taking a bill from the Speaker's table and agreeing to Senate amendments thereto. Before a vote was had on the resolution, Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, declared a recess pending the receipt of an engrossed bill, H.R. 10222, the Food Stamp Act of 1964. When the House reconvened, the Speaker announced that the unfinished business was the reading of the latter bill. Mr. Oliver P. Bolton, of Ohio, made a parliamentary inquiry as to the status of the resolution pending at the recess and the Speaker, without responding to the inquiry, recognized Mr. Bolling, the manager of the resolution, who then withdrew the resolution from consideration. In answer to further parliamentary inquiries, the Speaker stated that the withdrawal of the resolution terminated the reason for the parliamentary inquiry.

Parliamentarian's Note: The rules no longer permit a Member to demand the reading of an engrossed bill.

Manager's Right To Withdraw Resolution; Effect on Debate

§ 24.8 A Member calling up a privileged resolution from the Committee on Rules is recognized for a full hour notwithstanding the fact that as manager he has previously called up the resolution and withdrawn it after debate.

On Apr. 8, 1964,⁽¹⁹⁾ Mr. Richard Bolling, of Missouri, called up at the direction of the Committee on Rules House Resolution 665, making in order the consideration of a bill. As noted above (§24.7, supra), Mr. Bolling withdrew this resolution in order that the engrossed copy of a bill could be taken up as unfinished business. In response to a parliamentary inquiry, the Speaker, John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, stated that when the Committee on Rules resolution was again brought up, the Member calling it up would be recognized for a full hour despite the fact that it had already been brought up and withdrawn:

MR. [CHARLES A.] HALLECK [of Indiana]: Mr. Speaker, in view of the withdrawal of the resolution by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Bolling] do I understand that we start all over again on the consideration of the rule for the wheat-cotton bill?

THE SPEAKER: When the gentleman calls it up, the understanding of the gentleman is correct.

19. 110 CONG. REC. 7303-08, 88th Cong. 2d Sess.

MR. HALLECK: We will start all over again with 30 minutes on a side?

THE SPEAKER: That is correct.

Manager's Right To Offer and Debate Amendments

§ 24.9 Recognition to offer amendments is first extended to the manager of a bill, and the fact that the Committee of the Whole has just completed consideration of one amendment offered by the manager does not preclude his being recognized to offer another.

On Apr. 6, 1967,⁽²⁰⁾ Robert W. Kastenmeier, of Wisconsin, was the Member in charge of H.R. 2512, being considered for amendment in the Committee of the Whole. Mr. Kastenmeier had offered an amendment, which was adopted by the Committee. He then immediately offered another amendment. Mr. Byron G. Rogers, of Colorado, made a point of order against recognition for that purpose, and Chairman John H. Dent, of Pennsylvania, overruled the point of order:

MR. ROGERS of Colorado: The gentleman from Wisconsin just offered an amendment, and certainly I as a member of the committee ought to have the privilege of offering an amendment.

20. 113 CONG. REC. 8617, 8618, 90th Cong. 1st Sess.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Wisconsin is manager of the bill. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Wisconsin.

§ 24.10 In the Committee of the Whole, the Member in charge of the bill may speak again on an amendment where debate under the five-minute rule is limited (and the remaining time is allocated by the Chair).

On June 25, 1952,⁽¹⁾ during consideration of amendments to a bill in the Committee of the Whole, a motion was agreed to to close debate on a pending amendment and all amendments thereto at a certain time. Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, of Arkansas, answered a parliamentary inquiry as to the right to be recognized, under the limitation, of the Member in charge of the bill:

MR. [CLARE E.] HOFFMAN of Michigan: Under this limitation is the chairman of the committee, who has already spoken once on this amendment, entitled to be heard again under the rule?

THE CHAIRMAN: The chairman of the committee could rise in opposition to a pro forma amendment and be recognized again.

MR. HOFFMAN of Michigan: Under the limitation?

THE CHAIRMAN: Yes; under the limitation.

Extension of Debate Time

§ 24.11 Although the manager of a bill has control of time for general debate in the Committee of the Whole, he may not consume more than one hour except by unanimous consent.

For example, on June 22, 1958,⁽²⁾ Mr. Clarence Cannon, of Missouri, was in control of time for debate on an appropriation bill. Chairman James J. Delaney, of New York, advised him that he had consumed one hour. When Mr. Cannon indicated he needed more time, the Chairman asked whether there was objection to Mr. Cannon's proceeding for one additional minute. Mr. Donald W. Nicholson, of Massachusetts, objected to the request.

Likewise, on Mar. 6, 1962,⁽³⁾ Mr. J. Vaughan Gary, of Virginia, was in control of time for general debate on an appropriation bill. When Chairman W. Homer Thornberry, of Texas, advised him that he had consumed one hour of his time, he asked and was given permission by unanimous consent to proceed for five additional minutes.⁽⁴⁾

Yielding Time to Self

§ 24.12 Under the five-minute rule in the Committee of the Whole the Member handling a bill has preference in recognition for debate but the power of recognition remains with the Chair and the Member cannot "yield" himself time for debate.

On Mar. 26, 1965,⁽⁵⁾ Adam C. Powell, of New York, was the Member in charge of debate on H.R. 2362, the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, which was being considered for amendment under the five-minute rule in the Committee of the Whole. Mr. Powell arose and stated "I yield myself 5 minutes." Chairman Richard Bolling, of Missouri, stated as follows:

The gentleman cannot yield himself 5 minutes. The Chair assumes he moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. Melvin R. Laird, of Wisconsin, objected that Mr. Powell had not moved to strike out the last word, and so moved himself. The Chairman first recognized Mr. Powell for the pro forma amendment, as manager of the bill and chairman on the Committee on Education and Labor.

Manager Allotting Time to Others; Effect on Allotted Time Where Manager Loses Floor

§ 24.13 A Member in control as manager of the time for debate under the hour rule may allot portions of his time to other Members; but if he loses the floor (by yielding for an amendment), Members who have been promised time by him also lose the right of recognition.

On Nov. 29, 1967,⁽⁶⁾ Mr. William R. Anderson, of Tennessee, called up by direction of the Committee on Rules House Resolution 960, authorizing travel by members of the Committee on Education and Labor for investigatory purposes. Mr. Anderson yielded to Mr. Durward G. Hall, of Missouri, to offer an amendment, thereby surrendering control of the resolution to Mr. Hall. When Speaker Pro Tempore Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, stated that the question was on the resolution, a parliamentary inquiry was raised:

MR. [H. ALLEN] SMITH of California: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state the parliamentary inquiry.

6. 113 CONG. REC. 34136-38, 90th Cong. 1st Sess.

MR. SMITH of California: I was yielded 30 minutes a while ago by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Anderson]. Do I not have that time?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: When the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Anderson] yielded to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Hall] for the purpose of offering an amendment, he surrendered all his time, and the Chair so informed the gentleman from Tennessee.

MR. SMITH of California: If the gentleman has agreed to yield 30 minutes to me, I lose it?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: When the gentleman yielded for the purpose of amendment.

Motion To Postpone

§ 24.14 A motion to postpone further consideration of a privileged resolution (to censure a Member) may be offered before the manager of the resolution has been recognized for debate, and is debatable for one hour controlled by the Member offering the motion.

On May 29, 1980,⁽⁷⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House:

MR. [CHARLES E.] BENNETT [of Florida]: Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, I call up a privileged resolution (H. Res. 660) in the matter of Rep-

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 660

Resolved,

(1) That Representative Charles H. Wilson be censured; . . .

(4) That the House of Representatives adopt the report of the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct dated May 8, 1980, in the matter of Representative Charles H. Wilson.

MR. [JOHN H.] ROUSSELOT [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion. The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Rousselot moves to postpone further consideration of House Resolution 660 until June 10, 1980.

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁸⁾ The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California (Mr. Rousselot) for 1 hour.

Manager's Discretion as to Motion To Rise

§ 24.15 The motion that the Committee of the Whole rise (thereby cutting off debate) is within the discretion of the Member handling the bill before the Committee.

On June 16, 1948,⁽⁹⁾ Mr. Walter G. Andrews, of New York, was handling the consideration of H.R. 6401 in the Committee of the Whole. He moved that the Committee rise, and Chairman Francis H. Case, of South Dakota, ruled that the motion was within Mr. Andrews' discretion:

MR. ANDREWS of New York: Mr. Chairman, in view of the fact that two or three Members who have time are not here, I move that the Committee do now rise.

THE CHAIRMAN: The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Andrews].

MR. [GEORGE A.] SMATHERS [of Florida]: Mr. Chairman, I would like to be heard on that.

THE CHAIRMAN: That is not a debatable motion. It is always within the discretion of the gentleman handling the bill to move that the Committee rise.

Manager's Discretion in Moving To Close Debate

§ 24.16 During five-minute debate in the Committee of the Whole, the Member managing the bill is entitled to prior recognition to move to close debate on a pending amendment, over other Members who desire to debate the amendment or to offer amendments thereto.

On Nov. 25, 1970,⁽¹⁰⁾ the Committee of the Whole was conducting five-minute debate on H.R. 19504, which was being handled by Mr. John C. Kluczynski, of Illinois. Mr. Kluczynski was recognized by Chairman Chet Holifield, of California, to move that all debate on the pending amendment immediately close. The motion was adopted; Mr. Jonathan B. Bingham, of New York, attempted to offer an amendment and Mr. Andrew Jacobs, Jr., of Indiana, attempted to debate the amendment on which debate had been closed. The Chairman stated:

10. 116 CONG. REC. 38990, 91st Cong. 2d Sess.

The Chair had not recognized the gentleman from New York or the gentleman from Indiana. The Chair had recognized the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Kluczynski). The gentleman from Indiana misunderstood the Chair had recognized him. The Chair had to recognize the gentleman from Illinois as the chairman of the subcommittee.

Closing Debate

§ 24.17 The proponents of a bill before the House have the right to conclude debate thereon.

On Nov. 13, 1941,⁽¹¹⁾ the House discussed the division of time for debate on a pending bill; Speaker Pro Tempore Jere Cooper, of Tennessee, stated in response to a parliamentary inquiry that the proponents of a bill had the right to close debate:

MR. [HAMILTON] FISH [Jr., of New York]: Mr. Speaker, we have two speakers on our side in opposition to this important measure. I am informed there are two speakers on the other side. I recognize, of course, that the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs has the right to close the debate, but I insist on the right of the minority that the opposition should be given the next to the last speech on this important measure.

My inquiry is, if I have not correctly stated the situation?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will state in response to the parliamentary inquiry that under the rules of the House the gentleman from New York [Mr. Bloom], chairman of the committee in charge of the bill, is entitled to close the debate. With reference to recognition of Members prior to close of debate, of course, that is under the control of the gentleman in charge of the time.

MR. [EARL C.] MICHENER [of Michigan]: Mr. Speaker, a further parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state it.

MR. MICHENER: With all due respect to the Speaker pro tempore, may I call his attention to the fact that if his ruling is construed literally it will permit the chairman of the committee controlling the time—

MR. [SOL] BLOOM [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, I shall yield to the gentleman from New York, and will put on a speaker, then he can put on a speaker.

MR. MICHENER: May I finish my parliamentary inquiry?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman is entitled to complete his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. MICHENER: Reverting to my question before I was interrupted by the gentleman from New York: If the chairman of the committee controlling the time is permitted to close the debate and is not limited to one speaker in closing the debate, would it not be possible for such a chairman to open the debate, for instance, and then compel the opposition to use all of its time before the proponent used any more time?

11. 87 CONG. REC. 8880, 8881, 77th Cong. 1st Sess.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman is correct.

MR. MICHENER: That right to close debate means one speech. If it meant two, it might mean three, and if it meant three it might mean four. It might be within the power of the proponents of any bill to compel the other side to put on all their speakers, then wind up with only the speeches of the proponents. Such a precedent should not be set. Am I correct?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman is correct in the statement that the proponents of the bill have the right to close debate. That has been the holding of the Chair and it is in line with an unbroken line of precedents of the House. The Chair has no way of knowing how many different Members the gentlemen in charge of the time on the two sides may desire to yield time to. The Chair holds that the proponents of the bill are entitled to close debate.⁽¹²⁾

§ 24.18 The manager of a bill in the Committee of the Whole,

12. See also §7.13, supra (while the Member who demands a second on a motion to suspend the rules is recognized for 20 minutes of debate, it is customary for the Speaker to recognize the Member making the motion to conclude the debate).

and not the proponent of the pending amendment, is entitled to close debate on the amendment.

On July 9, 1965,⁽¹³⁾ the Committee of the Whole was considering H.R. 6400, the Voting Rights Act of 1965, under the terms of a unanimous-consent agreement providing two hours' debate on an amendment, to be divided and controlled by Chairman Emanuel Celler, of New York, and the ranking minority member, Mr. William M. McCulloch, of Ohio, of the Committee on the Judiciary, which had reported the bill. Chairman Richard Bolling, of Missouri, ruled that Mr. Celler, as manager of the bill, and not Mr. McCulloch, the proponent of the pending amendment, had the right to close debate on the amendment:

MR. CELLER: Mr. Chairman, may I ask how much time remains on this side?

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from New York has 4 minutes remaining and the gentleman from Ohio 1 minute.

MR. CELLER: Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman from Ohio yield me 1 minute he has remaining so that we can close debate on this side?

MR. MCCULLOCH: Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

13. 111 CONG. REC. 16228, 89th Cong. 1st Sess.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state the parliamentary inquiry.

MR. McCULLOCH: Mr. Chairman, since the debate at this time is on the substitute amendment, pursuant to the rule, would not the privilege of closing debate come to this side of the aisle?

THE CHAIRMAN: The closing of debate, the Chair will inform the gentleman from Ohio, would be in the hands of the manager of the bill.

§ 24.19 The manager of a bill is entitled to close general debate, and the minority Member controlling one-half the time must consume it or yield it back prior to closing of debate.

On Mar. 2, 1976,⁽¹⁴⁾ the Committee of the Whole having under consideration H.R. 10760 (Black Lung Benefits Reform Act of 1976), the following exchange occurred:

MR. [JOHN H.] DENT [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Chairman, does the gentleman from Illinois have any further requests for time?

MR. [JOHN N.] ERLBORN [of Illinois]: Mr. Chairman, I have no further requests for time and reserve the balance of my time.

MR. DENT: Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of the time remaining, which is around 3 minutes, I think.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁵⁾ The gentleman from Pennsylvania

14. 122 CONG. REC. 4979, 94th Cong. 2d Sess.

15. Jim Lloyd (Calif.).

[manager of the bill] is recognized for 4 minutes.

The Chair will ask now whether the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Erlborn) yields back the balance of his time?

MR. ERLBORN: Is that required, Mr. Chairman? I said I would reserve the balance of my time.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Pennsylvania is entitled to close the debate.

MR. ERLBORN: Well, I do not intend to upstage the gentleman. I do not intend to use my time. If the gentleman is finished and has no further time, then I will yield back the balance of my time.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Pennsylvania has 4 minutes.

§ 24.20 The manager from the committee reporting a bill has the right to close debate on an amendment under the five-minute rule, and not the sponsor of the amendment.

On July 29, 1982,⁽¹⁶⁾ during consideration of H.R. 6030 (military procurement authorization for fiscal year 1983) in the Committee of the Whole, the Chair responded to a parliamentary inquiry regarding the conclusion of debate, as follows:

MR. [EDWARD J.] MARKEY [of Massachusetts]: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

16. 128 CONG. REC. 18582, 97th Cong. 2d Sess.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁷⁾ The gentleman will state it.

MR. MARKEY: Mr. Chairman, is it not my right as the maker of the amendment to make the concluding statement on the pending amendment?

THE CHAIRMAN: The Committee has the right to close.

Moving Previous Question

§ 24.21 The Member calling up a proposition in the House may move the previous question and cut off further debate.

On Jan. 4, 1965,⁽¹⁸⁾ at the convening of the 89th Congress and before the adoption of rules, Mr. Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, offered a resolution and, after some debate, moved the previous question:

MR. ALBERT: Mr. Speaker, I offer a resolution (H. Res. 2) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. RES. 2

Resolved, That the Speaker is hereby authorized and directed to administer the oath of office to the gentleman from New York, Mr. Richard L. Ottinger.

MR. ALBERT: Mr. Speaker, again this is a resolution involving a Member whose certificate of election in due form is on file in the Office of the Clerk. I ask for the adoption of the resolution.

MR. [JAMES C.] CLEVELAND [of New Hampshire]: Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a parliamentary inquiry?

MR. ALBERT: I yield for a parliamentary inquiry.

MR. CLEVELAND: If this resolution is adopted, will it be impossible for me to offer my own resolution pertaining to the same subject matter, either as an amendment or a substitute?

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁹⁾ If the resolution is agreed to, it will not be in order for the gentleman to offer a substitute resolution or an amendment, particularly if the previous question is ordered.

MR. CLEVELAND: Is it now in order, Mr. Speaker?

THE SPEAKER: Not unless the gentleman from Oklahoma yields to the gentleman for that purpose.

MR. CLEVELAND: Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

MR. ALBERT: The gentleman from Oklahoma does not yield for that purpose.

MR. CLEVELAND: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry. Will there be any opportunity to discuss the merits of this case prior to a vote on the resolution offered by the gentleman from Oklahoma?

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Oklahoma has control over the time. Not unless the gentleman from Oklahoma yields for that purpose.

MR. CLEVELAND: Will the gentleman from Oklahoma yield for that purpose?

MR. ALBERT: Mr. Speaker, I yield for a question and a very brief statement. I do not yield for a speech.

17. Les AuCoin (Oreg.).

18. 111 CONG. REC. 20, 89th Cong. 1st Sess.

19. John W. McCormack (Mass.).

MR. CLEVELAND: May I inquire if the gentleman will yield so that I may ask for unanimous consent that certain remarks of mine pertaining to this matter be incorporated in the Record?

MR. ALBERT: No. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

MR. [THOMAS G.] ABERNETHY [of Mississippi]: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: Does the gentleman from Oklahoma yield to the gentleman from Mississippi for the purpose of submitting a parliamentary inquiry?

MR. ALBERT: Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

THE SPEAKER: The question is on the motion.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

On Mar. 11, 1941,⁽²⁰⁾ the House was considering House Resolution 131 under the terms of a unanimous-consent request providing for two hours of debate and dividing control of debate between Mr. Sol Bloom, of New York, and Mr. Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York. Mr. Bloom moved the previous question prior to the expiration of the two hours' time, and Mr. Martin J. Kennedy, of New York, objected on the ground that the unanimous-consent agreement was not being complied with in that the previous question had been demanded prematurely.

20. 87 CONG. REC. 2177, 2178, 77th Cong. 1st Sess.

Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that the previous question could be moved at any time in the discretion of the Members controlling debate on the resolution.

§ 24.22 A Member calling up a bill or joint resolution in the House pursuant to a special order controls one hour of debate thereon and may offer an amendment thereto and move the previous question on the amendment and on the bill or joint resolution.

On Nov. 3, 1977,⁽¹⁾ the proceedings relating to consideration of House Joint Resolution 643 (continuing appropriations) in the House were as follows:

MR. [GEORGE H.] MAHON [of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the rule just adopted, I call up the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 643) making further continuing appropriations for the fiscal year 1978, and for other purposes. . . .

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

H.J. RES. 643

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums are appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and out of applicable corporate or other revenues, receipts, and funds, for the several departments, agencies, corporations, and other organizational units of the Government for the fiscal year 1978, namely:

1. 123 CONG. REC. 36970, 36971, 95th Cong. 1st Sess.

Sec. 101. Such amounts as may be necessary for continuing projects or activities which were conducted in the fiscal year 1977, and for which appropriations, funds, or other authority would be available in the District of Columbia Appropriations Act, 1978 (H.R. 9005) as passed the House of Representatives or the Senate. . . .

THE SPEAKER:⁽²⁾ The gentleman from Texas (Mr. Mahon) is recognized for 1 hour.

MR. MAHON: Mr. Speaker, Members need to understand what our problem is at the moment. In view of the fact that final action has not been taken on the District of Columbia appropriation bill and on the Labor-Health, Education, and Welfare bill, we have to have a continuing resolution. . . .

Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Mahon: On page 2, line 6, strike the period and insert the following: "Provided further, That the rate of operations for the Disaster Loan Fund of the Small Business Administration contained in said Act shall be the rate as passed the Senate. . . .

MR. MAHON: It is absolutely urgent that we find a way to get this continuing resolution acted upon by the Congress tomorrow, since we cannot do it tonight. It is imperative that we get through the Congress a continuing resolution on tomorrow and send it to the President. Otherwise, there will be some very serious problems.

2. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the amendment and the joint resolution to final passage.

The previous question was ordered.

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

—Previous Question as Terminating Debate Time Previously Yielded

§ 24.23 The Member recognized to control one hour of debate in the House may, by moving the previous question, terminate utilization of debate time he has previously yielded to the minority.

On Mar. 9, 1977,⁽³⁾ it was demonstrated that a Member calling up a privileged resolution in the House may move the previous question at any time, notwithstanding his prior allocation of debate time to another Member:

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁴⁾ The gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Bolling) is recognized for 1 hour.

MR. [RICHARD] BOLLING [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Anderson), for the minority, pending which I yield myself 5 minutes. . . .

3. 123 CONG. REC. 6816, 95th Cong. 1st Sess.

4. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

Mr. Speaker, the other amendment that the gentleman offers proposes to give the House the opportunity to vote up or down in a certain period of time regulations proposed by the select committee. What that does, and it really demonstrates an almost total lack of understanding of the rules, is to upgrade regulations into rules. The Members of the House will have the opportunity to deal with all laws and rules. That is provided in the resolution. . . .

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution. . . .

MR. [JOHN B.] ANDERSON of Illinois: I have time remaining. Do I not have a right to respond to the gentleman from Missouri?

THE SPEAKER: Not if the previous question has been moved, and it has been moved.

MR. ANDERSON of Illinois: Even though the gentleman mentioned my name and made numerous references to me for the last 10 minutes?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair is aware of that.

The question is on ordering the previous question.

Bill Called Up in House by Unanimous Consent

§ 24.24 Where the House has agreed to consider in the House a bill called up by unanimous consent, the Member calling up the bill is recognized for one hour, and amendments may not be offered by other Members unless the Member in charge yields for that purpose.

On Oct. 5, 1962,⁽⁵⁾ Mr. Francis E. Walter, of Pennsylvania, obtained unanimous consent for the consideration of a bill, but before he began speaking, Mr. Arch A. Moore, Jr., of West Virginia, a minority Member, offered an amendment. After Mr. Walter was recognized to control the time (one hour) on the bill, Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, asked Mr. Walter whether he was willing to accept the amendment, and Mr. Walter answered in the affirmative.

§ 24.25 When a bill is called up by unanimous consent for consideration in the House, the Member making the request is recognized for one hour.

On Mar. 12, 1963,⁽⁶⁾ Mr. Emanuel Celler, of New York, asked unanimous consent for the immediate consideration in the House of private bill H.R. 4374, to proclaim Sir Winston Churchill an honorary citizen of the United States. Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, answered parliamentary inquiries on the control and time for debate:

MR. [H. R.] GROSS [of Iowa]: Mr. Speaker, under what circumstances

5. 108 CONG. REC. 22606-09, 87th Cong. 2d Sess.

6. 109 CONG. REC. 3993, 88th Cong. 1st Sess.

will this resolution be considered? Will there be any time for discussion of the resolution, if unanimous consent is given?

THE SPEAKER: In response to the parliamentary inquiry of the gentleman from Iowa, if consent is granted for the present consideration of the bill, the gentleman from New York [Mr. Celler] will be recognized for 1 hour and the gentleman from New York may yield to such Members as he desires to yield to before moving the previous question.

MR. GROSS: Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, is some time to be allocated to this side of the aisle?

MR. CELLER: I intend to allocate half of the time to the other side.

MR. GROSS: Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

Member Calling Up Privileged Resolution

§ 24.26 A Member recognized to call up a privileged resolution by direction of the Committee on Rules controls one hour of debate thereon and may offer one or more amendments thereto, and unanimous consent is not required for such purpose.

The proceedings of July 29, 1977,⁽⁷⁾ relating to House consideration of House Resolution 727 (providing for consideration of

7. 123 CONG. REC. 25653-55, 25663, 25664, 95th Cong. 1st Sess.

H.R. 8444, the National Energy Act of 1977) were as follows:

MR. [RICHARD] BOLLING [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 727 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 727

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move . . . that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 8444) to establish a comprehensive national energy policy. . . .

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁸⁾ The gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Bolling) is recognized for 1 hour.

MR. BOLLING: Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Anderson), and pending that, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I am soon going to ask unanimous consent to correct some errors in language. . . .

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that on page 4, line 7, to strike "July 28" and insert "July 29".

THE SPEAKER: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

MR. [CLIFFORD R.] ALLEN [of Tennessee]: Mr. Speaker, I object. . . .

MR. BOLLING: Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

8. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

Amendment offered by Mr. Bolling: On page 4, line 7, strike out July 28 and insert July 29.

THE SPEAKER: The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Bolling).

The amendment was agreed to. . . .

MR. [GARRY] BROWN of Michigan: . . . Mr. Speaker, what was the order of business at the time the gentleman offered the amendment to the rule? . . .

I was not sure whether or not the Chair had decided to take up the rule at that time because the gentleman's unanimous-consent request was made after we started consideration of the rule. Is that correct?

THE SPEAKER: The rule is pending at the present time. The gentleman has asked unanimous consent for a couple of technical amendments, which the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. Allen) objected to.

The gentleman from Missouri then offered an amendment, which he has authority to do as manager of the resolution and the House has agreed to the first of those.

§ 24.27 The Member calling up a privileged resolution from the Committee on Rules controls one hour of debate in the House, and the resolution is not subject to amendment unless the Member in charge yields for that purpose.

On Feb. 26, 1976,⁽⁹⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House relative to calling up a resolution from the Committee on Rules:

MR. [CLAUDE] PEPPER [of Florida]: Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 868 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 868

Resolved, That Rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new clause:

"7. It shall not be in order to consider any report of a committee unless copies or reproductions of such report have been available to the Members on the floor for at least two hours before the beginning of such consideration. . . .

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁰⁾ The gentleman will state it.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, this resolution is to be considered in the House which would preclude an amendment from being offered by any Member.

THE SPEAKER: It is a rule that comes from the Committee on Rules. It is under the charge of the gentleman handling the resolution.

MR. BAUMAN: So unless the gentleman yields for the purpose of an amendment, none would be in order?

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman is correct.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, what unanimous-consent request might be entertained in order to allow amendments to be offered generally? Would it be a request to consider it in the House as in the Committee of the Whole?

10. Carl Albert (Okla.).

THE SPEAKER: No. The gentleman from Florida controls the floor under the 1-hour rule in the House because this is a change in the rules brought to the floor by the Committee on Rules as privileged. Rules changes can be considered in the House.

Member Offering Privileged Resolution Prior to Adoption of Rules

§ 24.28 Prior to the adoption of the rules, a Member offering a privileged resolution on the seating of a Member-elect is entitled to one hour of debate.

On Jan. 10, 1967, prior to the adoption of rules, Mr. Morris K. Udall, of Arizona, offered as privileged House Resolution 1, authorizing the Speaker to administer the oath of office to challenged Member-elect Adam C. Powell, of New York, and referring the question of his final right to a seat to a select committee. Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, ruled that Mr. Udall was entitled to recognition for one hour.⁽¹¹⁾

For the privilege and disposition of resolutions before the adoption of rules, see Ch. 1, supra.

Limitation on Amendment—Chair May Allocate Time Between Proponent and Opponent

§ 24.29 The Chair has discretion to allocate time under a limitation on an amendment between the proponent and an opponent thereof, to be yielded by them.

On Aug. 5, 1982,⁽¹²⁾ the Committee of the Whole had under consideration House Joint Resolution 521 (nuclear freeze amendment), when the following exchange occurred:

MR. [ALBERT A.] GORE [Jr., of Tennessee]: Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on all of the perfecting amendments to the resolution end at 6:30 p.m., and that debate on the Broomfield substitute be limited to 1 hour, a half hour allocated to each side. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹³⁾ The Chair will state the unanimous-consent request as understood by the Chair.

The gentleman from Tennessee has asked unanimous consent that all debate on perfecting amendments to the resolution cease at 6:30 and that thereafter there will be 1 hour of debate on the Broomfield substitute and all amendments thereto, the time to be equally divided.

Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

12. 128 CONG. REC. 17758, 97th Cong. 2d Sess.

13. Matthew F. McHugh (N.Y.).

There was no objection. . . .

The Chair will inquire if there are other perfecting amendments to the resolution.

If not, under the previous agreement, by unanimous consent, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Broomfield) will be afforded the opportunity to offer his amendment in the nature of a substitute.

There will be an hour of debate on that substitute and all amendments thereto. The time will be equally divided between the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Zablocki) and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Broomfield).

Five-minute Debate May Not Be Reserved

§ 24.30 The Member recognized for five minutes in support of her motion to recommit with instructions must use or yield back all of that time, and may not reserve a portion thereof.

On June 26, 1981,⁽¹⁴⁾ during consideration of H.R. 3982, the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act, in the House, the following exchange occurred:

MRS. [CLAUDINE] SCHNEIDER [of Rhode Island]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁵⁾ Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

14. 127 CONG. REC. 14740, 14792, 97th Cong. 1st Sess.

15. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

MRS. SCHNEIDER: I am, Mr. Speaker, in its present form.

THE SPEAKER: The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mrs. Schneider moves to recommit the bill, H.R. 3982, to the Committee on the Budget with instructions to report the bill back forthwith with the following amendments: . . .

THE SPEAKER: The gentlewoman from Rhode Island (Mrs. Schneider) is recognized for 5 minutes. . . .

MRS. SCHNEIDER: Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will state that the gentlewoman from Rhode Island (Mrs. Schneider) cannot reserve her time. She must use all of it now.

MRS. SCHNEIDER: Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

THE SPEAKER: The gentlewoman from Rhode Island (Mrs. Schneider) has yielded back her time.

Remaining Time Allocated Between Proponents of Two Amendments; Manager Closes

§ 24.31 Where debate in Committee of the Whole on a pending amendment and amendment thereto has been limited to a time certain, the Chair may in his discretion allocate the remaining time between the proponents of the two amendments, one of whom being the manager of the bill, has the right to close debate.

The following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole on Mar. 16, 1983,⁽¹⁶⁾ during consideration of House Joint Resolution 13 (nuclear freeze resolution):

MR. [CLEMENT J.] ZABLOCKI [of Wisconsin]: Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on the pending amendment and amendment thereto end at 9:15 p.m.⁽¹⁷⁾

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁸⁾ The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Zablocki). . . .

So the motion was agreed to. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: Under the motion just agreed to, debate has been limited to 9:15. The Chair will exercise discretion and apportion the remaining time.

The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Zablocki) for 3 minutes, and the gentleman from New York (Mr. Stratton) for 3 minutes. Each of those gentlemen may apportion their 3 minutes as they wish. . . .

The Chair will inquire, does the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Zablocki) wish to exercise his right to allot time?

MR. ZABLOCKI: The gentleman from Wisconsin reserves his time. I reserve the balance of my time.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Wisconsin has the right to terminate debate.

amendment in Committee of the Whole has been equally divided between the proponent and an opponent of the amendment, those Members control all the remaining time and the Chair does not divide the time among Members standing.

During consideration of the military procurement authorization for fiscal year 1983 (H.R. 6030) in the Committee of the Whole on July 21, 1982,⁽¹⁹⁾ the Chair responded to inquiries regarding recognition for debate time. The proceedings were as follows:

MR. [SAMUEL S.] STRATTON [of New York]: Mr. Chairman, I asked the gentleman to yield for a unanimous-consent request. After consultation with the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Dicks) and with Members on our side, I would like to ask unanimous consent that we agree to vote on the Dicks amendment and all amendments thereto at 7 o'clock, with 1 hour of debate to be controlled by the gentleman from Washington and 1 hour of debate to be controlled by the Member from New York representing the committee.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE:⁽²⁰⁾ The request is for 2 hours of debate time equally divided between the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Dicks) and the gentleman from New York (Mr. Stratton)?

MR. STRATTON: That is correct.

19. 128 CONG. REC. 17345, 97th Cong. 2d Sess.
20. Les AuCoin (Oreg.).

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

MR. STRATTON: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

[I]f time is to be controlled by the gentleman from Washington and by myself, is it required that those who wish to participate should stand at this time?

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The recognition of Members is totally at the discretion of the managers of the time.

MR. [ROBERT E.] BADHAM [of California]: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

Am I given to understand that on this side we have no time; we are not able to have any time? . . .

[T]he gentleman from Washington has 1 hour and the gentleman from New York has 1 hour. I was inquiring as to what time this side had.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: Under the unanimous-consent request the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Dicks) is recognized for 1 hour, and under the same unanimous-consent request the gentleman from New York (Mr. Stratton) is recognized for 1 hour.

Both managers of time may yield to members of the minority or members of the majority.

Amendment Offered for Which Time Was Not Allocated

§ 24.33 By unanimous consent, the Committee of the Whole agreed at the beginning of general debate to limit and divide control of time for debate on any amendments to be offered by designated Members to certain paragraphs (or to amendments thereto); and where total time for debate on any amendments to be offered by two Members had been limited and control in favor thereof given to one of those Members by unanimous consent, time consumed on the first amendment offered was deducted from the total time and a third Member offering an amendment was required to obtain debate time from the Member in control.

The following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole on July 23, 1981,⁽¹⁾ during consideration of the energy and water development appropriation bill (H.R. 4144):

MR. [TOM] BEVILL [of Alabama]: Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the debate on the amendments by the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Pritchard) and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Edgar) in title I to the paragraph entitled "Construction, General" on page 2, be limited to 2 hours, one-half of the time to be controlled equally by the gentleman from Washington and one-half by myself.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽²⁾ Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

1. 127 CONG. REC. 16983, 16997, 16998, 17014, 97th Cong. 1st Sess.
2. Anthony C. Beilenson (Calif.).

There was no objection. . . .

MR. [JOHN T.] MYERS [of Indiana]: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Myers: On page 3, line 1, strike out "$1,509,941,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$1,518,941,000". . . .

MR. [JOEL] PRITCHARD [of Washington]: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Pritchard to the amendment offered by Mr. Myers: In the proposed amendment strike the sum "$1,518,941,000" and insert "$1,320,941,000". . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair would remind the Members, if the gentleman would suspend, that the gentleman from Washington, under the unanimous-consent agreement, has 55 minutes remaining under his control of the time on this particular amendment or on any subsequent amendment he or the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Edgar) may offer to the pending paragraph.

The gentleman from Alabama has 60 minutes remaining under his control of time on this or such subsequent amendment.

The Chair now recognizes the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Pritchard) for such further time as he may consume. . . .

MR. [BOB] EDGAR [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Edgar to the amendment offered by Mr. Myers: In the Myers amendment, strike out "$1,518,941,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$1,429,941,000".

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair should point out that under the unanimous-consent agreement, there are 11 minutes remaining under the control of the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Pritchard), and there are 4 minutes remaining under the control of the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. Bevill).

The Chair now recognizes the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Pritchard) to yield such time as he desires.

MR. PRITCHARD: Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Edgar).

Division of Time on Disciplinary Resolution

§ 24.34 The manager of a disciplinary resolution divided his one hour of debate equally among himself, the ranking minority member of the committee, and the Member charged.

On Dec. 18, 1987,⁽³⁾ after calling up a privileged resolution (H. Res. 335) for consideration in the House, the manager of the resolution divided his one hour of debate time, as indicated below:

MR. [JULIAN C.] DIXON [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I call up a privileged resolution (H. Res. 335) in the matter of Representative Austin J. Murphy, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

3. 133 CONG. REC. 36266, 100th Cong. 1st Sess.

H. RES. 335

Resolved, That the House of Representatives adopt the report by the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct dated December 16, 1987, in the matter of Representative Austin J. Murphy of Pennsylvania.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁴⁾ The gentleman from California [Mr. Dixon] is recognized for 1 hour. . . .

MR. DIXON: Mr. Speaker, I yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Myers], 20 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. Austin J. Murphy, and I will retain 20 minutes for myself. I wish to state that the yielding of such time is for purposes of debate only.

Appropriation Bills—Control Where Time Not Fixed

§ 24.35 When the House resolves itself into the Committee of the Whole for the consideration of an appropriation bill without fixing the time for general debate by unanimous consent, the majority Member first recognized is entitled to an hour and may yield such portions of that time as he desires, and after that hour, a minority Member may be recognized for an hour.

On Mar. 24, 1947,⁽⁵⁾ Mr. Frank B. Keefe, of Wisconsin, moved

4. Dave McCurdy (Okla.).

5. 93 CONG. REC. 2464, 2465, 80th Cong. 1st Sess.

that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole for the consideration of H.R. 2700, an appropriation bill. He proposed a unanimous-consent agreement for time for general debate on the bill, and Mr. John J. Rooney, of New York, objected to the request.

Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, then answered a parliamentary inquiry on recognition and time for debate in the Committee of the Whole, where the time and control of debate had not been fixed:

MR. KEEFE: Mr. Speaker, do I understand that on the adoption of the motion to go into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union that there will be 1 hour for general debate for each side?

THE SPEAKER: Under the rule, whoever is first recognized is entitled to 1 hour and, of course, the Member can yield such portions of that time as he wishes. . . .

MR. ROONEY: Mr. Speaker, is it understood that the minority is to have an equal division of the time for debate this afternoon?

THE SPEAKER: After the first hour has been used by the majority, the minority then can have 1 hour under the rule.⁽⁶⁾

6. Since appropriation bills reported by the Committee on Appropriations are privileged for consideration (see Rule XI clause 4(a), House Rules and Manual §726 [1995]), they are normally considered without a special order from the Committee on Rules. See, generally, Ch. 25, supra.

—Debate Controlled by Three Members

§ 24.36 On one occasion, time in general debate on an appropriation bill in the Committee of the Whole was controlled by three Members: the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations and the chairman and ranking minority member of the Appropriations Subcommittee on the Department of the Interior and Related Agencies.

On Feb. 18, 1958,⁽⁷⁾ Mr. Michael J. Kirwan, of Ohio, made a unanimous-consent request on the control of time for debate on an appropriation bill:

Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 10746) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior and related agencies for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1959, and for other purposes; and pending that motion, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that general debate be limited to 2 hours, 1 hour to be controlled by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Cannon] and 1 hour to be equally divided and controlled by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. Jensen] and myself.

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁸⁾ Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

7. 104 CONG. REC. 2298, 85th Cong. 2d Sess.

8. Sam Rayburn (Tex.).

There was no objection.

Parliamentarian's Note: Mr. Kirwan was the chairman of the Subcommittee on Appropriations for the Department of the Interior and Related Agencies; Mr. Ben F. Jensen, of Iowa, was the ranking minority member of that subcommittee; and Clarence Cannon, of Missouri, was the chairman of the full Committee on Appropriations.

—Legislative Provisions

§ 24.37 The Chairman ruled that while members of the Committee on Appropriations are ordinarily entitled to recognition in debate on a general appropriation bill, where a rule was adopted waiving points of order against legislative provisions in the bill, recognition under the five-minute rule would be divided between members of the committee and other Members interested in the bill.

On Mar. 5 and 6, 1941,⁽⁹⁾ the Committee of the Whole was considering H.R. 3737, a general appropriation bill, pursuant to House Resolution 126, waiving all points of order against the bill.

9. 87 CONG. REC. 1846, 1921, 1922, 77th Cong. 1st Sess.

The Committee discussed and Chairman John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, ruled on the procedure for distribution of time, which departed from normal practice:

The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Pace] has been seeking recognition. The Chair realizes that this is an appropriation bill, and that ordinarily members of that committee would be entitled to preference, but under the rule adopted yesterday we made this part of it a legislative bill by making certain legislation in order. The Chair is going to divide the time between the members of the Appropriations Committee and the other Members of the House who are vitally interested in this proposition. . . .

The Chair may say to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Cannon] that there is no written rule on this subject, but within the last two or three decades appropriations have been taken away from other committees and concentrated in the hands of one committee. The Chair is not speaking any more with reference to the Committee on Appropriations than any other committee. It is perfectly fair for a committee to have charge of general debate and probably debate under the 5-minute rule to a large extent, but the Chair does not think it is fair—especially under conditions such as we have here, where a rule has been adopted making legislation that ordinarily comes from the Committee on Agriculture and from other committees of the House in order on the bill—the Chair does think it fair to the rest of the membership of the House to recognize members of the Committee on Appropriations under the 5-minute rule to the exclusion of the other Members of the House.

So far as the present occupant of the chair individually is concerned, if the time should come when that matter is presented, the Chair might go a step further and apply it to all measures coming before the House and considered under the 5-minute rule. If we are going to have legislation by the entire Congress we will have to come to that decision ultimately.

Parliamentarian's Note: The Chairman indicated that his ruling on recognition and distribution of time on the appropriation bill was not to be taken as a precedent, differing as it did from normal practice.

—Unanimous-consent Agreement

§ 24.38 In the consideration of a general appropriation bill, containing all the annual appropriations for the various agencies of the government, it was agreed by unanimous consent that: (1) general debate would run without limit to be equally divided between the chairman and the ranking minority member of the Committee on Appropriations; (2) following the reading of the first chapter of the bill for amendment, not to exceed two hours' general debate would be had before the reading of each subsequent chapter, one-half to be controlled by the chairman and one-half by the ranking minority member of the subcommittee in charge of the chapter (to be followed by operation of the five-minute rule on each chapter).

On Apr. 3, 1950,⁽¹⁰⁾ the House was considering H.R. 7786 (the general appropriation bill for 1951). Clarence Cannon, of Missouri, Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, made the following unanimous-consent request on the control of time for debate, which was agreed to by the House:

Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 7786) making appropriations for the support of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1951, and for other purposes; and pending that I ask unanimous consent that time for general debate be equally divided, one-half to be controlled by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Taber] and one-half by myself; that debate be confined to the bill; and that following the reading of the first chapter of the bill, not to exceed 2 hours general debate be had before the reading of each subsequent chapter, one-half to be controlled by the chairman and one-half by the ranking minority member of the subcommittee in charge of the chapter.

—Amendments to Appropriation Bill: General Priorities

§ 24.39 On one occasion, the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole announced that in recognizing Members under the five-minute rule for amendments to an appropriation bill, he would alternate recognition between the majority and minority sides of the aisle and would follow these priorities: first, members of the subcommittee handling the bill; second, members of the full Committee on Appropriations; and finally, other Members of the House.

On July 30, 1969,⁽¹¹⁾ Chairman Chet Holifield, of California, made an announcement on the order of recognition during consideration under the five-minute rule of H.R. 13111, appropriations for the Departments of Labor and Health, Education, and Welfare:

The Chair might state, under the procedures of the House, he is trying to recognize first members of the subcommittee on appropriations handling

10. 96 CONG. REC. 4614, 4615, 81st Cong. 2d Sess.

11. 115 CONG. REC. 21420, 91st Cong. 1st Sess.

the bill and second general members of the Committee on Appropriations. It is his intention to go back and forth to each side of the aisle to recognize Members who have been standing and seeking recognition the longest. The gentlewoman from Hawaii sought recognition all yesterday afternoon, and the Chair was unable to recognize her because of the procedures of the House, having to recognize Members on both sides of the aisle who are members of the committee. I wish the Members to know that the Chair will recognize them under the normal procedures.

Parliamentarian's Note: Normally subcommittee membership does not accord a priority in recognition, full committee seniority being the determining factor.

Motion To Instruct Conferees

§ 24.40 Under a former practice, a Member recognized to offer a motion to instruct conferees managed its consideration under the hour-rule and was not required to divide the hour or to yield time for debate.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on June 15, 1988,⁽¹²⁾ during consideration of a motion to instruct conferees on H.R. 3051, the Airline Passenger Protection Act:

MR. [E. CLAY] SHAW [Jr., of Florida]: Mr. Speaker, pursuant to rule XXVIII, clause 1(b), I offer a privileged motion.

12. 134 CONG. REC. 14621, 100th Cong. 2d Sess.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹³⁾ The Clerk will report the motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Shaw moves that the managers on the part of the House at the conference on H.R. 3051 and the Senate amendments thereto be instructed to agree to section 4 of the Senate amendment. . . .

MR. SHAW: Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time. I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the motion.

MR. [HENRY B.] GONZALEZ [of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Florida will withhold the motion for the previous question.

The gentleman from Texas will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. GONZALEZ: Mr. Speaker, at this point, is it not still the rule that an allotted time be permitted to this side of the House inasmuch as the privileged resolution entitles the author of the resolution to 1 hour? I understood the rules provide for some opportunity to discuss this.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would advise the gentleman from Texas that the gentleman from Florida may, if he wishes, yield time, but he is not required under the rule to divide the time or to yield.

Parliamentarian's Note: The debate on a motion to instruct is now divided according to Rule XXVIII clause (1)(b), House Rules and Manual § 909a (1995).

13. Thomas S. Foley (Wash.).

Control of Debate on Conference Report

§ 24.41 Pursuant to Rule XXVIII, clause 2(a) (as amended in the 92d Congress, 1st Session), one hour of debate, equally divided and controlled by the majority and minority parties, is permitted on a conference report.

On Jan. 19, 1972,⁽¹⁴⁾ Mr. Wayne L. Hays, of Ohio, called up the conference report on S. 382, Federal Elections Campaign Act of 1972. Speaker Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, stated in response to a parliamentary inquiry that the total time for debate on the report was limited to one hour, "30 minutes to each side" (the majority and minority). Mr. Hays controlled 30 minutes of debate and Mr. William Springer, of Illinois, controlled the 30 minutes of debate for the minority.

Parliamentarian's Note: Prior to the 1971 revision of clause 2 of Rule XXVIII, a conference report was debatable under the hour rule, with the entire time under the control of the Member calling up the report. See, for example, the statement of Speaker Sam Rayburn, on June 23, 1959,⁽¹⁵⁾

14. 118 CONG. REC. 319-24, 92d Cong. 2d Sess.

15. 105 CONG. REC. 11599, 86th Cong. 1st Sess. See also 115 CONG. REC.

that Mr. Albert Rains, of Alabama, would control one hour of debate on a conference report he had called up.

In the 99th Congress, the pertinent rule governing conference report debate [Rule XXVIII, clause (b)(1)] was amended to provide for a three-way division of the hour. If both the majority and minority are in favor of the report, a Member opposed is entitled to 20 minutes.

Amendments in Disagreement

§ 24.42 Following rejection of a conference report, debate on a motion to dispose of the Senate amendment in disagreement is equally divided between the majority and minority (under the rationale contained in Rule XXVIII clause 2(b) for division of time on a motion to dispose of an amendment reported from conference in disagreement); and, the Member recognized to offer the motion controls the floor and may move the previous question on his motion.

During consideration of the conference report on H.R. 5262 (relating to international financial institutions) in the House on Sept. 16, 1977,⁽¹⁶⁾ the following occurred:

So the conference report was rejected.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

MR. [TOM] HARKIN [of Iowa]: Madam Speaker, I offer a preferential motion. The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Harkin moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the text of the bill (H.R. 5262) to provide for increased participation by the United States in the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, the International Development Association, the International Finance Corporation, the Asian Development Bank and the Asian Development Funds, and for other purposes, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁷⁾ The gentleman from Iowa (Mr. Harkin) will be recognized for 30 minutes in support of his motion, and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Stanton) will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. Harkin). . . .

MR. HARKIN: Madam Speaker, I move the previous question on the preferential motion.

The previous question was ordered.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The question is on the preferential motion 17. Barbara Jordan (Tex.).

offered by the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. Harkin).

The preferential motion was agreed to.

§ 24.43 The stage of disagreement having been reached on a Senate amendment to a House amendment to a Senate amendment to a House bill, the motion to concur in the Senate amendment takes precedence over a motion to disagree and request a conference, but the Member offering the preferential motion does not thereby obtain control of the time which is controlled by the manager of the bill and is equally divided between the majority and minority.

On Oct. 13, 1977,⁽¹⁸⁾ the House had under consideration H.R. 7555 (Departments of Labor and Health, Education, and Welfare appropriation bill for fiscal 1978) when the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [DANIEL J.] FLOOD [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I move to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 7555) making appropriations for the Departments of Labor, and Health, Education, and Welfare, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1978, and for other purposes, with a Senate amendment to the House amendment to Senate amendment numbered 82, disagree to the amendment of the Senate, and request a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁹⁾ The Clerk will report the motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. FLOOD

Mr. Flood moves to take from the Speaker's table the bill H.R. 7555, making appropriations for the Departments of Labor, and Health, Education, and Welfare, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1978, and for other purposes, with a Senate amendment to the House amendment to Senate amendment numbered 82, disagree to the amendment of the Senate, and request a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses.

MR. [NEWTON I.] STEERS [Jr., of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Steers of Maryland moves that the House concur in the Senate Amendment to the House Amendment to the Senate Amendment No. 82.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Flood) is in control of the time, and the gentleman is recognized for 30 minutes.

MR. [JOHN J.] RHODES [of Arizona]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state it.

MR. RHODES: Mr. Speaker, since the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Steers) made the motion which is being considered by the House, does the gentleman from Maryland not have control of the time?

THE SPEAKER: In response to the parliamentary inquiry, the preferential motion made by the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Steers) does not take the time from the gentleman from Pennsylvania, the chairman of the committee, who previously had the time under his original motion. The motion was in order. The vote will come first on the preferential motion.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Flood).

§ 24.44 While the manager of a conference report controls the majority time on all motions with respect to an amendment in disagreement where he has offered an initial motion and sought recognition to control time for debate, he does not necessarily control the majority time on a motion to concur with an amendment offered after the House has voted to recede (a motion to recede and concur having been divided), if: (1) the manager's original motion was to insist, which has been preempted by adoption of the motion to recede, and (2) the manager did not seek recognition to control debate time on the motion to recede and concur when it was offered, but allowed the Chair to immediately put the question on receding; in such case, the proponent of the preferential motion to concur with an amendment may be recognized to control one-half the time and a Member of the other party one-half the time under the hour rule as required by Rule XXVIII, clause 2(b).

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Oct. 1, 1982,⁽²⁰⁾ during consideration of House Joint Resolution 599 (continuing appropriations for fiscal year 1983):

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁾ The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

The amendment reads as follows:

Sec. 151. (a) Section 4109 of title 5, United States Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

“(c) Notwithstanding subsection (a)(1) of this section, the Administrator, Federal Aviation Administration, may pay an individual training to be an air traffic controller . . . at the applicable rate of basic pay for the hours of training officially ordered or approved in excess of forty hours in an administrative work-week.”. . . .

MR. [JAMIE L.] WHITTEN [of Mississippi]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion. The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Whitten moves that the House insist on its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 83.

MR. [LAWRENCE] COUGHLIN [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Coughlin moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 83 and concur therein.

MR. [WILLIAM D.] FORD of Michigan: Mr. Speaker, I demand a division of the question.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The question will be divided.

The Chair will state that the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. Whitten) has the time. Does the gentleman wish to use his time for debate now?

MR. WHITTEN: Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Coughlin).

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: If the gentleman from Mississippi does not seek to control debate time, the Chair will put the question on receding.

The question is, will the House recede from its disagreement to Senate amendment No. 83?

The House receded from its disagreement to Senate amendment No. 83.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: For what purpose does the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Ford) seek recognition?

MR. FORD of Michigan: Mr. Speaker, I offer a preferential motion.

20. 128 CONG. REC. 27295-97, 97th Cong. 2d Sess.

1. Norman Y. Mineta (Calif.).

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Ford moves that the House concur in Senate amendment numbered 83 with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment, insert the following: . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Since the House has recessed, the gentleman from Mississippi's original motion has been preempted and he did not seek to control time therefore the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Ford) will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Coughlin) will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Ford).

Concur in Senate Amendment

§ 24.45 A Member making a unanimous-consent request to concur in Senate amendments is not entitled to recognition to control debate on the request; another Member who reserved the right to object to the request should be recognized.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Oct. 11, 1984,⁽²⁾ during consideration of H.R. 5386 (payment rates for routine home care and other services included in hospice rates). The chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means asked unanimous consent to take the House bill with the Senate amendment from the Speaker's table and concur in the amendment.

Mr. Conable, the ranking member, reserved the right to object, but before entertaining the reservation, the Speaker Pro Tempore⁽³⁾ directed the reading of the Senate amendment.

The Clerk proceeded to read as follows:

Amendment: Page 2, after line 14, insert:

"PUBLIC PENSION OFFSET PROVISIONS."

MR. [DAN] ROSTENKOWSKI [of Illinois] (during the reading): Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate amendment be considered as read and printed in the Record.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Rostenkowski) is recognized.

MR. ROSTENKOWSKI: Mr. Speaker, H.R. 5386 passed the House of Representatives unanimously on October 1, 1984. . . .

MR. [BARBER B.] CONABLE [Jr., of New York]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

Mr. Speaker, under what procedure is the chairman now proceeding? Has he been recognized for a specific period of time? . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Illinois asked unanimous consent to have the Senate amendment considered as read and printed in the Record. The Chair put the unanimous-consent request and at that point heard no reservation and in error recognized the gentleman from Illinois but the Chair should recognize the gentleman from New York under his reservation to the original request.

§ 24.46 A motion to concur in a Senate amendment to a House amendment to a Senate amendment to a House measure, the stage of disagreement having been reached, is debatable for one hour equally divided between the majority and minority parties.

The proceedings of Nov. 6, 1985,⁽⁴⁾ illustrate the principle that a motion to concur in a Senate amendment to a House amendment to a Senate amendment to a House measure, the stage of disagreement having been reached, is debatable for one hour equally divided between majority and minority parties (pursuant to rule XXVIII, clause 2).⁽⁵⁾ This precedent in effect overrules that of Jan. 27, 1976,⁽⁶⁾ which had indicated that the Member offering a preferential motion controls the entire hour where the amendment is not reported from conference in disagreement. The proceedings of Nov. 6, 1985, relating to House Joint Resolution 372, to increase the public debt limit, were as follows:

A message from the Senate by Mr. Sparrow, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 372) entitled "Joint resolution increasing the statutory limit on the public debt."

The message also announced that the Senate concurs in first House amendment to Senate amendment No. 1.

The message also announced that the Senate concurs in second House amendment to Senate amendment No. 1, with an amendment.

The message also announced that the Senate concurs in House amendment to Senate amendment No. 2, with an amendment.

MR. [RICHARD A.] GEPHARDT [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House considers the Senate amendments to the House amendments to the Senate amendments to House Joint Resolution 372, it first consider motions to dispose of the Senate amendment to the House amendment to Senate amendment No. 2.

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁷⁾ Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

7. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

There was no objection.

PREFERENTIAL MOTION OFFERED BY MR. MACK

MR. [CONNIE] MACK [III, of Florida]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Mack moves to take from the Speaker's table House Joint Resolution 372, with the Senate amendment to the House amendment to Senate amendment No. 2 and to concur in the Senate amendment as follows:

Senate amendment to House amendment to Senate amendment No. 2.

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the amendment of the House of Representatives, insert:

TITLE II—DEFICIT REDUCTION PROCEDURES

SEC. 201. SHORT TITLE AND TABLE OF CONTENTS.

(a) Short Title.—This title may be cited as the "Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985". . . .

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Florida (Mr. Mack) will be recognized for 30 minutes and the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Gephardt) will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Mack). . . .

MR. MACK: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. MACK: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of my question is to find out whether the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Gephardt) has 30 minutes, as I do, or do I control the hour?

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Florida (Mr. Mack) has 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Gephardt) has 30 minutes.

Parliamentarian's Note: The motion in this instance, to concur in a Senate amendment to a House amendment to a Senate amendment to a House measure, the stage of disagreement having been reached, is preferential to a motion to disagree and request a conference. When the above message was received from the Senate, the Speaker was obliged to recognize Mr. Mack, a minority member with the most preferential motion to dispose of the Senate amendment to the House amendment to the Senate amendment, although he could have first recognized Mr. Gephardt, to move to disagree and request a conference, subject to recognition of Mr. Mack with an immediate preferential motion to concur.

§ 24.47 Debate on a motion to dispose of an amendment reported from conference in disagreement is equally divided between the majority and minority parties under Rule XXVIII clause 2(b), and where the manager of the conference report making the motion does not immediately seek recognition for debate, the Chair nevertheless less allocates 30 minutes to him and may recognize a minority Member at that time for 30 minutes.

The House having under consideration the bill H.R. 7797 (relating to foreign assistance appropriations for fiscal year 1978) on Oct. 18, 1977,⁽⁸⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [CLARENCE D.] LONG of Maryland: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Long of Maryland moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 74 and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: Restore the matter stricken by said amendment, amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 503C. Of the funds appropriated or made available pursuant to this Act, not more than $18,100,000 shall be used for military assistance, not more than $1,850,000 shall be used for foreign military credit sales, and not more than $700,000 shall be used for international military education and training to the Government of the Philippines." . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁹⁾ . . . Does the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Long) seek recognition?

MR. LONG of Maryland: Mr. Speaker, I do not, at this time.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Does the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Young) desire to be recognized.

8. 123 CONG. REC. 34112, 95th Cong. 1st Sess.

9. William H. Natcher (Ky.).

MR. [C. W.] YOUNG of Florida: Mr. Speaker, I do.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Long) and the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Young) will be recognized for 30 minutes each.

§ 24.48 Prior to the amendment to Rule XXVIII, clause 2(b) in the 92d Congress (providing that debate on an amendment in disagreement be divided between the majority and minority parties), debate on an amendment reported from conference in disagreement was under the hour rule and the Member calling up the conference report was in control of the debate on motions disposing of each amendment.

On Aug. 1, 1962,⁽¹⁰⁾ Mr. John E. Fogarty, of Rhode Island, called up a conference report with Senate amendments in disagreement. During consideration of the amendment, Speaker Pro Tempore Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, answered a parliamentary inquiry put by Mr. H. R. Gross, of Iowa:

MR. GROSS: Is the gentleman from Rhode Island [Mr. Fogarty] going to explain any of these amendments?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: That is within the discretion of the gentleman.

10. 108 CONG. REC. 15294, 87th Cong. 2d Sess.

MR. GROSS: A further parliamentary inquiry. Does not the gentleman have an hour on each of these amendments?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman has if he desires to use it.⁽¹¹⁾

Parliamentarian's Note: House Resolution 1153, which was adopted on Oct. 13, 1972, 92d Cong. 2d Sess., to become effective at the end of the 92d Congress, amended Rule XXVIII by requiring that debate on amendments reported from conference in disagreement be equally divided and controlled by the majority and minority parties.

§ 24.49 As each amendment in disagreement between the House and Senate is reported, the Chair recognizes the Member handling the conference report to offer a motion relating to that amendment; and even though another Member offers a preferential motion relating to that amendment which is considered by the House, the Member offering the initial motion remains in control of the debate under the hour rule.

11. See also 108 CONG. REC. 23432-43, 87th Cong. 2d Sess., Oct. 12, 1962.

For a discussion of propositions and motions considered under the hour rule, see § 68, infra.

On Oct. 24, 1967,⁽¹²⁾ Mr. Joseph L. Evins, of Tennessee, was handling a conference report being considered by the House on H.R. 9960, the independent offices appropriation for fiscal 1968. As each amendment in disagreement was reported, Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, recognized Mr. Evins to make a motion in regard to that amendment. On amendments 58 and 59, Mr. Evins moved that the House insist on its disagreement. Mr. Robert N. Giaimo, of Connecticut, then made the preferential motion that the House recede and concur in those amendments. The House rejected Mr. Giaimo's motion and the Speaker again recognized Mr. Evins as the Member in control of the report.

Parliamentarian's Note: Pursuant to Rule XXVIII, clause 2(b), as amended in the 92d and 99th Congresses, the hour of debate would under current practice be divided and controlled by the majority (the Member calling up the report) and the minority, and, perhaps, by a Member opposed, if both the majority and minority are in agreement.

§ 24.50 Where the proponent of a motion to recede and concur in a Senate amendment failed to seek recognition to debate the motion, the Chair recognized the Member handling the conference report (no other motion being pending).

On May 14, 1963,⁽¹³⁾ the House was considering a conference report and Senate amendments in disagreement, called up and managed by Mr. Albert Thomas, of Texas. Mr. Robert R. Barry, of New York, offered a preferential motion that the House recede and concur in a certain amendment in disagreement. A division of the question was demanded and Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, stated that the question was on receding from disagreement.

Mr. Thomas then raised a parliamentary inquiry:

Mr. Speaker, is it in order for the chairman of the House conferees to make a short statement at this time on it?

The Speaker answered that the motion was debatable, and since Mr. Barry did not seek recognition, the Speaker recognized Mr. Thomas on the motion. In answer to a parliamentary inquiry by Mr. Barry, the proponent of the motion, the Speaker stated that Mr.

^{13.} 109 CONG. REC. 8506, 88th Cong. 1st Sess.

Thomas had control of time on the motion since he had been recognized.

Parliamentarian's Note: In this case, Mr. Thomas had offered an initial motion (to recede and concur with an amendment) which was ruled out of order. Usually, the manager will offer an initial motion which remains pending if a preferential motion is offered, and the manager controls the majority time on the preferential motion.

§ 25. Distribution and Alternation

The distribution and alternation of time for debate, where time is equally divided or where consideration is proceeding under the five-minute rule, is governed not only by certain rules but by the principles of comity and courtesy between the majority and minority.⁽¹⁴⁾

The Chair may alternate recognition between those favoring and opposing the pending proposition where sides are ascertainable;⁽¹⁵⁾ similarly, where a proposition is considered pursuant to the terms of a special rule, the rule equally divides control of debate between the majority and minority sides of the aisle.¹⁶ And when the special rule itself, reported by the Committee on Rules, is being considered, the Committee on Rules traditionally divides time for debate on the resolution between the majority and minority sides of the aisle by the manager of the resolution yielding half the time for debate.

In Committee of the Whole

§ 25.1 During general debate on District of Columbia business in Committee of the Whole after the manager of the bill has consumed his hour of debate and where debate has not been limited, the Chair alternates in recognizing between those for and against the pending legislation, giving preference to members of the Committee on the District of Columbia.

On Apr. 11, 1932,¹⁷ Chairman Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, answered a parliamentary inquiry on recognition in the Committee of the Whole during general debate on a District of Columbia bill:

MR. [WILLIAM H.] STAFFORD [of Wisconsin]: Mr. Chairman, when the Committee on the District of Columbia has the call and the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union is considering legislation, is it necessary, in gaining recognition, that a Member has to be in opposition to the bill or is any Member whatsoever entitled to one hour's time for general debate?

THE CHAIRMAN: From the Chair's experience, gained through having been a member of this committee for over 10 years, he will state that where a bill is called up for general debate on District day in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and the chairman of the committee has yielded the floor, a member of the committee opposed to the bill is entitled to recognition over any other member opposed to the bill, and it was the duty of the Chair to ascertain whether there were any members of the committee opposed to the bill who would be entitled to prior recognition. The Chair, having ascertained there were no members of the committee opposed to the bill, took pleasure, under the direction of the gentleman from Wisconsin, in recognizing the gentleman from Mississippi.

§ 25.2 On resolutions disapproving reorganization plans and on motions to discharge a committee from further consideration of such resolutions, debate was equally divided and controlled by those favoring and those opposing the resolution, pursuant to the Reorganization Act of 1949.

On July 19, 1961,⁽¹⁸⁾ Mr. Dante B. Fascell, of Florida, called up House Resolution 328, disapproving Reorganization Plan No. 5, transmitted to the Congress by the President. Unanimous consent was given that debate on the resolution in the Committee of the Whole be equally divided and controlled by Mr. Fascell, the proponent of the resolution, and Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, the ranking minority member of the Committee on Government Operations, the reporting committee.

On Aug. 3, 1961,⁽¹⁹⁾ Mr. H. R. Gross, of Iowa, moved to discharge the Committee on Government Operations from the further consideration of House Resolution 335, disapproving a reorganization plan. After Mr. Gross assured Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, that he qualified to make the motion since he was in favor of the resolution, the Speaker recognized him to open debate and to control 30 minutes, and recognized a Member in opposition to the motion to discharge to control the following 30 minutes. Mr. Gross was recognized to close debate on the motion.

Parliamentarian's Note: The Reorganization Act of 1949, Public Law No. 81-109, provided that debate on a resolution disapproving a reorganization plan and debate on a motion to discharge such a resolution be equally divided and controlled between those favoring the resolution and those opposing it.⁽²⁰⁾

20. 63 Stat. 207, §§204(b), 205(b). The statute was enacted as an exercise of the rule-making power of the House and Senate, with full recognition of the constitutional right of either House to change such rules at any time. Similar statutes divide debate between those favoring and those opposing approval or disapproval resolutions. For discussion of other statutes prescribing procedures as an exercise of the rule-making power of the House and Senate, see House Rules and Manual § 1013 (1995).

vided and controlled by two committees, the Chair may permit the chairman of the primary committee involved to reserve a portion of his allotted time to close general debate, while recognizing the chairman of the other committee to utilize his time.

During consideration of the Intergovernmental Emergency Assistance Act (H.R. 10481) in the Committee of the Whole on Dec. 2, 1975,⁽¹⁾ the proceedings described above occurred as follows:

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽²⁾ Pursuant to the rule, general debate will continue for not to exceed 3 hours, 2 hours to be equally divided and controlled between the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Banking, Currency and Housing, and 1 hour to be equally divided and controlled between the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Under the rule, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Ashley, chairman of the Committee on Banking, Currency, and Housing] will be recognized for 1 hour; the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. McKinney) will be recognized for 1 hour; the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. Ullman) will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Schneebeli) will be recognized for 30 minutes. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: Under the rule, the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. Ullman) is recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from New York (Mr. Conable) is recognized for 30 minutes.

[Mr. [Al] Ullman [of Oregon] addressed the Committee.]

MR. ASHLEY: Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 2 minutes to close debate.

lina (Mr. Spence) will be recognized for 1 hour.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. Flowers).

MR. [WALTER] FLOWERS [of Alabama]: Mr. Chairman, may I inquire of the Chair if it is the Chairman's intention to alternate among the Members who have control of the time or at least loosely alternate among the Members who have control of the time?

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair will inform the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. Flowers) that the Chair will attempt to alternate among all four of the gentlemen who have control of the time.

§ 25.5 Where a special rule provides separate control of general debate time among the chairmen and ranking minority members of two committees, but does not specify the order of recognition, the Chair may in his discretion either alternate recognition among the four Members or permit the primary committee to first utilize most of its time and then permit the manager of the bill to close general debate after the sequential committee uses its time.

5. 128 CONG. REC. 29982, 29984, 29985, 97th Cong. 2d Sess.

the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [JAMES J.] FLORIO [of New Jersey]: Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 5133) to establish domestic content requirements for motor vehicles sold in the United States, and for other purposes.

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁶⁾ The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Florio).

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 5133, with Mr. Panetta in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁷⁾ Pursuant to the rule, the first reading of the bill is dispensed with.

Under the rule, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Florio) will be recognized for 30 minutes, the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. Broyhill) will be recognized for 30 minutes, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Gibbons) will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. Frenzel) will be recognized for 30 minutes.

MR. [JAMES T.] BROYHILL [of North Carolina]: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

I wish to inquire as to whether the time will run concurrently or whether one committee goes first and the second committee follows.

6. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

7. Leon E. Panetta (Calif.).

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair would interpret the rule to allow each of the respective Members to allot their time respectively without any kind of a pattern, so it could be done interchangeably. . . .

The Chair would advise the Members that although the time could be used interchangeably that it is the will of those controlling the time that the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Florio) and the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. Broyhill) use their time first and then the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Gibbons) and the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. Frenzel).

MR. FLORIO: On that point, Mr. Chairman, it would be my hope to reserve some time to be in a position to take part in the concluding portion of the 2 hours' debate.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman is free to do that. . . .

MR. [JOHN D.] DINGELL [of Michigan]: Mr. Chairman, am I correct in my understanding that the rule provides that the time may be used alternately by the several persons who control this time?

THE CHAIRMAN: The rule does permit that, the Chair would advise the gentleman, but it does not provide for any necessary order.

MR. DINGELL: And as the Chair advises, there is no necessary order. It can be used interchangeably, and so forth.

THE CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

§ 25.6 Where a special rule limiting debate on an amendment under the five-minute rule requires the time thereon to be equally divided and controlled by the proponent of the amendment and a Member opposed thereto, the Chair has discretion in determining which Member to control the time in opposition, and may recognize the majority chairman of the subcommittee with jurisdiction over the subject matter of an amendment which has been offered by a member of the minority, over the ranking minority member of the full committee managing the bill, to control the time in opposition under the principle of alternation of recognition.

On Sept. 24, 1984,⁽⁸⁾ the Committee of the Whole had under consideration House Joint Resolution 648 (continuing appropriations) when an amendment was offered as indicated below:

MR. [HANK] BROWN of Colorado: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁹⁾ The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Brown of Colorado: Page 2, line 24, strike out the period at the end of section 101(b) and insert in lieu thereof the following: “: Provided, That 2 percent of the aggregate amount of new budget authority provided for in each of the first three titles of H.R. 6237 shall be withheld from obligation

THE CHAIRMAN: Pursuant to House Resolution 588, the amendment is considered as having been read.

The gentleman from Colorado (Mr. Brown) will be recognized for 15 minutes and a Member opposed will be recognized for 15 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. Brown). . . .

MR. [SILVIO O.] CONTE [of Massachusetts]: Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

MR. [CLARENCE D.] LONG of Maryland: Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair is required to choose between these two distinguished gentlemen and would prefer to alternate the parties in this case.

The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Long). The gentleman from Maryland is recognized for 15 minutes in opposition to the amendment.

Five-minute Rule

§ 25.7 In the Committee of the Whole, during consideration of an appropriation bill under the five-minute rule, the Chairman customarily alternates recognition between the majority and minority sides of the aisle and in so doing may extend prior recognition first to members of the relevant subcommittee then to members of the full committee and then to Members who have been on their feet seeking recognition.

On July 30, 1969,⁽¹⁰⁾ Chairman Chet Holifield, of California, made an announcement on the order of recognition during consideration under the five-minute rule of H.R. 13111, appropriations for the Health, Education, and Welfare and Labor Departments:

The Chair might state, under the procedures of the House, he is trying to recognize first members of the subcommittee on appropriations handling the bill and second general members of the Committee on Appropriations. It is his intention to go back and forth to each side of the aisle to recognize Members who have been standing and seeking recognition the longest. . . .

§ 25.8 Where the Committee of the Whole has, by motion, agreed to limit all debate on a section and all amendments thereto, the Chair generally divides the time equally among those who indicate, by standing when the motion is made, that they desire recognition; but the matter of recognition is largely within the discretion of the Chair and he may continue to recognize each Member who seeks recognition for five minutes until the time for debate has been exhausted.⁽¹¹⁾

§ 25.9 Where debate on a bill and all amendments thereto is limited to a time certain, the five-minute rule is abrogated, and the Chair may choose either to allocate the time among those Members standing and desiring to speak, or choose to recognize only Members wishing to offer amendments and to oppose amendments; such decisions are largely within the discretion of the Chair who may decline to recognize Members more than one time under the limitation and may refuse to permit Members to divide their allotted time so as to speak to several of the amendments which are to be offered.

On May 6, 1970,⁽¹²⁾ after the Committee of the Whole had agreed to close debate on a pending bill and amendments thereto at a certain hour, Chairman Daniel D. Rostenkowski, of Illinois, answered a parliamentary inquiry as to whether he would, in his discretion, allow certain Members to speak:

MR. [SAMUEL S.] STRATTON [of New York]: Under the limitation of debate imposed by the House a moment ago, is there any restriction on those Members who will be permitted to speak on amendments, either for or against, between now and 7 o'clock?

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair will endeavor to divide the time equally among the proponents and the opponents of those who have amendments. . . .

MR. STRATTON: Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state it.

MR. STRATTON: Under the limitation of debate, is it permissible for a Member to speak twice within his allotted time either for or against two specific amendments?

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair will recognize the gentleman for one time in support of or in opposition to an amendment.

MR. STRATTON: But not more than once?

THE CHAIRMAN: No; not more than once.

§ 25.10 Where the Committee of the Whole agrees to terminate all debate on an amendment at a certain time, the Chair divides the time remaining among those Members who indicate a desire to speak; and if free time remains after these Members have been recognized, the Chair may recognize Members who have not spoken to the amendment or Members who were recognized for less than five minutes under the limitation of time.

On Mar. 17, 1960,⁽¹³⁾ the Committee of the Whole agreed to a request that all debate on the pending amendment close at 3:50 p.m. Chairman Francis E. Walter, of Pennsylvania, recognized under the limitation Members who had indicated they wished to speak. When those Members had spoken, time still remained and the Chairman recognized for debate Members who were not standing seeking recognition when the limitation was agreed to. The Chair answered a parliamentary inquiry:

MR. [JAMES C.] DAVIS of Georgia: Was not the time fixed for this debate, and was not the time limited to those who were standing on their feet seeking recognition?

THE CHAIRMAN: The time was fixed at 3:50. The Chair made a list of the names of those Members who indicated they desired to speak. However, the thing that governs is the time that was fixed in the unanimous-consent request made by the gentleman from New York, but because the time has not arrived when debate will end, the Chair will recognize those Members who seek recognition.

MR. DAVIS of Georgia: Mr. Chairman, a further parliamentary inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state it.

MR. DAVIS of Georgia: Does that limitation then of 2 minutes apply to me, or could I have some of this additional time?

THE CHAIRMAN: Yes, the gentleman could be recognized again if he sought recognition.

§ 25.11 Where the Committee of the Whole has limited debate under the five-minute rule to a time certain and an equal division of the remaining time among all the Members seeking recognition would severely restrict each Member in his presentation, the Chair may in his discretion equally allocate the time between two Members on opposing sides of the question to be yielded by them.

On June 14, 1977,⁽¹⁴⁾ it was demonstrated that a limitation of debate on amendments in the Committee of the Whole to a time certain in effect abrogates the five-minute rule; and decisions regarding the division of the remaining time and the order of recognition are largely within the discretion of the Chair.

MR. [TOM] BEVILL [of Alabama]: Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on these amendments and all amendments thereto, cease at 4 o'clock and 45 minutes p.m.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁵⁾ The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. Bevill).

The motion was agreed to. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair has before him a list of more than 25 Members to occupy the next 10 minutes. It has been suggested that it would be possible for the Chair to recognize the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. Bevill) and the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Conte) to allocate those 10 minutes.

Accordingly, the Chair will recognize the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Conte) for 5 minutes, and the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. Bevill) for 5 minutes.

MR. JOHN T. MYERS [of Indiana]: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state it.

MR. JOHN T. MYERS: How did the Chair make that decision?

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair has the authority to allocate time under a limitation, and it is obvious to the Chair that this is the most rational way to handle the 10 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Conte).

§ 25.12 By unanimous consent, the Committee of the Whole agreed that, on a general appropriations bill considered as read and open to amendment at any point, debate under the five-minute rule should terminate at a time certain, with 30 minutes of the time remaining for debate to be allowed on a particular amendment and to be equally divided and controlled.

On Sept. 22, 1983,⁽¹⁶⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole during consideration of H.R. 3913 (the Departments of Labor and Health and Human Services appropriations for fiscal year 1984):

MR. [WILLIAM H.] NATCHER [of Kentucky]: Mr. Chairman, at this time I would ask unanimous consent that all debate on the bill and all amendments thereto conclude not later than 3:30. . . .

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, the motion does not, however, include the 30 minutes for the abortion debate that I thought the gentleman from Illinois was assured of? . . .

MR. NATCHER: The gentleman is correct.

Mr. Chairman, I would ask that debate conclude not later than 3:30 with 30 minutes of the time to be allocated to the amendment pertaining to abortion. . . .

MR. [LES] AU COIN [of Oregon]: Reserving the right to object, Mr. Chairman, I want to be sure I understand what the gentleman just said. My understanding is that in that 30 minutes the time will be divided equally between those who agree with Mr. Hyde and those who agree with the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. AuCoin)? . . .

16. 129 CONG. REC. 25407, 98th Cong. 1st Sess.

MR. NATCHER: . . . The gentleman (Mr. AuCoin) is correct. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁷⁾ Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

§ 25.13 Where debate under the five-minute rule on a bill and all amendments thereto has been limited by motion to a time certain (with approximately 90 minutes remaining) the Chair may in his discretion continue to recognize Members under the five-minute rule, according priority to members of the committee reporting the bill, instead of allocating time between proponents and opponents or among all Members standing, where it cannot be determined what amendments will be offered.

On July 29, 1983,⁽¹⁸⁾ during consideration of the International Monetary Fund authorization (H.R. 2957) in the Committee of the Whole, the Chair responded to several parliamentary inquiries regarding recognition following agreement to a motion to limit debate to a time certain:

MR. [FERNAND J.] ST GERMAIN [of Rhode Island]: Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the remainder of the bill, H.R. 2957, be considered as read, printed in the Record, and open to amendment at any point.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Rhode Island?

There was no objection.

The text of title IV and title V is as follows:

TITLE IV—INTERNATIONAL LENDING SUPERVISION

Sec. 401. This title may be cited as the "International Lending Supervision Act of 1983". . . .

MR. ST GERMAIN: I have a motion, Mr. Chairman. . . .

I now move that all debate on the bill, H.R. 2957, and all amendments thereto, cease at 12 o'clock noon. . . .

MR. [ED] BETHUNE [of Arkansas]: Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

Mr. Chairman, the parliamentary inquiry is for the Chair to please state the process by which we will do our business from now until the time is cut off. . . .

MR. [STEPHEN L.] NEAL [of North Carolina]: Mr. Chairman, would it not be in order at this time to ask that the time be divided between the proponents and the opponents of this measure, since there is a limitation on the time?

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁹⁾ The Chair believes not, because the time has been 19. Donald J. Pease (Ohio).

limited on the entire bill. It would be very difficult to allocate time to any one particular party or two parties when the Chair has no knowledge of the amendments that will be offered.

MR. NEAL: Mr. Chairman, a further parliamentary inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state it.

MR. NEAL: Mr. Chairman, is it not true that members of the committee should be given preference in terms of recognition?

THE CHAIRMAN: That is true. At the time the gentleman from Pennsylvania was recognized, he was the only one seeking recognition.

§ 25.14 In recognizing Members to move to strike the last word under the five-minute rule, the Chair attempts to alternate between majority and minority Members; but the Chair has no knowledge as to whether specific Members oppose or support the pending proposition and therefore cannot strictly alternate between both sides of the question.

On June 7, 1984,⁽²⁰⁾ during consideration of H.R. 5504 (Surface Transportation and Uniform Relocation Assistance Act of 1984) in the Committee of the Whole, the following exchange occurred:

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁾ The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Shannon).

MR. [BILL] FRENZEL [of Minnesota]: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state it.

MR. FRENZEL: Mr. Chairman, is it not customary to choose Members opposed and supporting the amendment in some kind of rough order?

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair is attempting to be fair. What the Chair is doing is alternating between the two sides.

MR. FRENZEL: I thank the Chair.

In House

§ 25.15 Where the previous question is ordered on a debatable motion without debate, a Member may demand the right to debate; and the 40 minutes permitted under the rule is divided between the person demanding the time and some Member who represents the opposing view of the question.

On Sept. 13, 1965,⁽²⁾ the previous question was ordered, without debate, on the motion to approve the Journal, as read. Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, stated, in response to a parliamentary inquiry by Mr. Durward G. Hall, of Missouri, that pursuant to Rule XXVII clause 3, any Member could demand the right to debate the motion since it was debatable and since the previous question had been ordered without debate. The Speaker recognized Mr. Hall for 20 minutes and then recognized for 20 minutes Mr. Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, representing the opposing view of the question.⁽³⁾

2. 111 CONG. REC. 23602, 23604-06, 89th Cong. 1st Sess.

§ 25.16 In recognizing a Member to control time for debate in opposition to a bill taken away from a committee through the operation of the discharge rule on a special order pending in the Committee on Rules, the Speaker recognizes the chairman of the committee having jurisdiction of the subject matter if he is opposed to the bill considered pursuant to the adopted resolution.

3. Rule XXVII clause 2, House Rules and Manual §907 (1995) also requires a division of time on the motion to suspend the rules. Other House rules similarly require a division of the time for debate between those favoring and those opposing the motion or question. See, for example, Rule XVI clause 4, House Rules and Manual §782 (1995) (motion to recommit with instructions); Rule XXVIII, clauses 4 and 5 House Rules and Manual §§913b and 913c (1995) (motion to reject nongermane matter agreed to by the Senate, if included in a conference report).

On Aug. 14, 1950, the House agreed to a motion to discharge the Committee on Rules from the further consideration of a resolution making in order the consideration of a bill within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service. The resolution, which was then adopted, provided that the bill be considered on the following day. On Aug. 15, 1950, Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled as follows on recognition to control time for debate in opposition to the bill:

Pursuant to the provisions of House Resolution 667, the Chair designates the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Murray], chairman of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, to control time for debate in opposition to the bill H.R. 8195.⁽⁴⁾

§ 25.17 House debate on the confirmation of Vice President-designate Rockefeller was limited to 6 hours and was equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary (both of whom favored the nomination), and Robert W. Kastenmeier, of Wisconsin (a majority member of the Judiciary Committee who opposed the nomination).

4. 96 CONG. REC. 12543, 81st Cong. 2d Sess.

The following resolution was reported on Dec. 19, 1974:⁽⁵⁾

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move, clause 28(d)(4) of rule XI to the contrary notwithstanding, that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the resolution (H. Res. 1511) confirming Nelson A. Rockefeller as Vice President of the United States. After general debate, which shall be confined to the resolution and shall continue not to exceed six hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and the ranking minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary, and Representative Robert W. Kastenmeier, of Wisconsin, the Committee shall rise and report the resolution to the House, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the resolution to final adoption or rejection.

House Resolution 1519, after the customary hour of debate, was agreed to.⁽⁶⁾ The House then resolved into the Committee of the Whole for consideration of House Resolution 1511, confirming Nelson A. Rockefeller as Vice President of the United States. After debate as provided for in House Resolution 1519, the Committee rose, and House Resolution 1511 was agreed to by a vote of 287 yeas, 128 nays.

On Dec. 6, 1973,⁽⁷⁾ House Resolution 738, providing for consideration of the resolution confirming the nomination of Mr. Gerald R. Ford as Vice President of the United States, contained the following provisions:

H. RES. 738

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move, clause 27(d)(4) of rule XI to the contrary notwithstanding, that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the resolution (H. Res. 735) confirming the nomination of Gerald R. Ford, of the State of Michigan, to be Vice President of the United States. After general debate, which shall be confined to the resolution and shall continue not to exceed six hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary, the Committee shall rise and report the resolution to the House, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the resolution to final passage.

After House Resolution 738 was agreed to,⁽⁸⁾ and debate proceeded in Committee of the Whole in accordance therewith, the Committee rose; and the House agreed to House Resolution 735 confirming Mr. Ford as Vice President of the United States.⁽⁹⁾

§ 25.18 By unanimous consent the House extended for an additional 30 minutes the time for debate on a special order from the Committee on Rules (with the understanding that such time would be equally divided and controlled).

The proceedings of July 29, 1977,⁽¹⁰⁾ relating to House consideration of House Resolution 727 (providing for consideration of H.R. 8444, the National Energy Act of 1977) were as follows:

MR. [RICHARD] BOLLING [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 727 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 727

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move . . . that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 8444) to establish a comprehensive national energy policy. . . .

9. See 119 CONG. REC. 39899, 93d Cong. 1st Sess., Dec. 6, 1973.

10. 123 CONG. REC. 25653-55, 95th Cong. 1st Sess.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹¹⁾ The gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Bolling) is recognized for 1 hour.

MR. BOLLING: Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Anderson), and pending that, I yield myself such time as I may consume. . . .

MR. [JOHN B.] ANDERSON of Illinois: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent at this time that in addition to the 1 hour of debate provided for in this resolution, House Resolution 727, the time for debate be extended for an additional 30 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, there is some precedent for this. Before the Chair puts the request, I would like to state very briefly that there is some precedent on very important resolutions for an extension of the normal amount of time that is used for debate. Just a couple of weeks ago the gentleman from New York (Mr. Weiss) made a similar request at the time we were considering a resolution for the Select Committee on Intelligence.

Very frankly, I have had more requests for time on this rule from my side of the aisle than I can accommodate within the 30 minutes that has been allotted to the minority. . . .

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the time for debate on this resolution be extended for 30 minutes.

THE SPEAKER: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois? . . .

There was no objection.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will state that an additional 15 minutes will be allotted to each side.

11. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

§ 25.19 While alternation of recognition between the majority and minority Members controlling debate in the House, or continued recognition of that Member having the most time remaining, are two customary factors governing recognition by the Chair, neither factor is binding on the Chair, who may exercise discretion in conferring recognition where control has been equally divided, and may entertain a motion for the previous question by the manager of the measure if neither side seeks to yield further time.

On June 23, 1983,⁽¹²⁾ Speaker Pro Tempore Jim Moody, of Wisconsin, responded to several parliamentary inquiries regarding procedures for recognition. The proceedings in the House during consideration of House Concurrent Resolution 91 (revising the fiscal 1983 congressional budget and setting forth the fiscal 1984 budget) were as follows:

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The time of the gentleman has expired.

Does the gentlewoman seek recognition?

MRS. [LYNN] MARTIN of Illinois: Mr. Speaker, could the Chair inform us how much time each side of the aisle has remaining?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Oklahoma has 35 minutes left and the gentleman from Ohio has 21½ minutes left.

MRS. MARTIN of Illinois: Then we will allow the other side of the aisle to catch up.

MR. [JAMES R.] JONES of Oklahoma: Does the gentlewoman want to yield back her time?

MRS. MARTIN of Illinois: Mr. Speaker, I am reserving the balance of my time.

MR. JONES of Oklahoma: Our side just spoke. If the gentlewoman does not want to use her time and have her side go forward, the gentlewoman can reserve her time and we can reserve ours and we can dispense with the rest of the debate.

MRS. MARTIN of Illinois: Mr. Speaker, may I ask the outstanding chairman, the gentleman from Oklahoma, will he then yield that time to us?

Well, we will reserve our time for now and await the gentleman's decision.

MR. JONES of Oklahoma: Mr. Speaker, I would like to state a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state it.

MR. JONES of Oklahoma: Mr. Speaker, if we reserve our time, is the previous question then in order?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Will the gentleman restate the question?

MR. JONES of Oklahoma: The gentlewoman has reserved her time. If we reserve our time, is the previous question then in order?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: If neither side yields time, the Chair will en-tain a motion for the previous question from the manager of the motion.

MR. [E. G.] SHUSTER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state it.

MR. SHUSTER: Mr. Speaker, if not the rules of the House, is it not the tradition of the House that the side with the most time remaining takes the floor?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: That is one variable. Alternating from side to side is another tradition of the House.

§ 25.20 The Speaker, in announcing a new policy for recognition for one-minute speeches and for special-order requests, indicated that he would: (1) alternate recognition between majority and minority Members in the order in which they seek recognition; (2) recognize Members for special-order speeches first who want to address the House for five minutes or less, alternating between majority and minority Members, otherwise in the order in which permission was granted; and (3) then recognize Members who wish to address the House for longer than five minutes and up to one hour, alternating between majority and minority Members in the order in which permission was granted by the House.

For discussion of the announcement by the Speaker on Aug. 8, 1984,⁽¹³⁾ and for other precedents relating to recognition for special-order requests and one-minute speeches, see, generally, § 10, supra.

—Calendar Wednesday

§ 25.21 On Calendar Wednesday, debate on bills considered in the Committee of the Whole is limited to two hours, one hour controlled by the Member in charge of the bill and one hour by the ranking minority member of the committee who is opposed to the bill.

On Apr. 14, 1937,⁽¹⁴⁾ Chairman J. Mark Wilcox, of Florida, stated in response to a parliamentary inquiry that debate on a bill (called up under the Calendar Wednesday procedure) in the Committee of the Whole would be limited to two hours, one hour to be controlled by the chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, and one hour to be controlled by the ranking minority committee member opposed to the bill. The Chairman indicated he would recognize in opposition Mr. Pehr G. Holmes, of Massachusetts, who assured the Chairman that he was the most senior minority member of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce who was opposed to the bill.⁽¹⁵⁾

Suspension

§ 25.22 Alternation of recognition is generally but not necessarily followed during the 40 minutes of debate on a motion to suspend the rules where the proponent of the motion and the Member demanding a second equally control the time.

On Sept. 20, 1961,⁽¹⁶⁾ Mr. William R. Poage, of Texas, moved to suspend the rules and pass a bill. After a second was ordered, Mr. H. R. Gross, of Iowa, stated:

I understand that under the rules it is not necessary to rotate time under a suspension of the rules.

The Speaker Pro Tempore, John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, responded "That is correct."

15. See also 92 CONG. REC. 8590, 79th Cong. 2d Sess., July 10, 1946.

Rule XXIV clause 7, House Rules and Manual §897 (1995) governs the consideration of bills called up by committees under the Calendar Wednesday procedures.

16. 107 CONG. REC. 20491, 87th Cong. 1st Sess.

On Apr. 16, 1962,⁽¹⁷⁾ Mr. James Roosevelt, of California, moved to suspend the rules and pass a bill. Speaker Pro Tempore Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, stated, in response to a parliamentary inquiry by Mr. Gross, that under suspension of the rules it was not necessary to rotate the time between opposing and favoring sides of the question.⁽¹⁸⁾

Parliamentarian's Note: A second is no longer required on a motion to suspend the rules.

§ 25.23 Where a Member controls the time for debate on a motion to suspend the rules, the manner in which he allocates his time is not within the province of the Chair.

On Dec. 15, 1969,⁽¹⁹⁾ Mr. Robert W. Kastenmeier, of Wisconsin, moved to suspend the rules and pass H.R. 14646, granting the consent of Congress to an interstate compact. Speaker John W.

17. 108 CONG. REC. 6682, 87th Cong. 2d Sess.

18. The practice of alternation is not necessarily followed where a limited time is controlled by Members, as in the 40 minutes' debate for suspension of the rules and after the previous question has been ordered without debate on a debatable motion (see 2 Hinds' Precedents §1442).

19. 115 CONG. REC. 39029, 39034, 91st Cong. 1st Sess.

McCormack, of Massachusetts, recognized Mr. Burt L. Talcott, of California, who stated that he was opposed to the bill, to demand a second and to control the 20 minutes of debate in opposition to the bill. When Mr. Kastenmeier and Mr. Talcott each had one minute of debate remaining, Mr. Lester L. Wolff, of New York, made a point of order against the allocation of time by Mr. Talcott; the Speaker overruled the point of order:

MR. WOLFF: Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state his point of order.

MR. WOLFF: The gentleman from California (Mr. Talcott) when he was asked whether or not he opposed the legislation, said that he did. However, he has not yielded any time whatsoever to any opponents of the bill.

THE SPEAKER: That is not within the province of the Chair.⁽²⁰⁾

Parliamentarian's Note: A second is no longer required on a motion to suspend the rules.

20. See also 109 CONG. REC. 19953, 88th Cong. 1st Sess., Oct. 21, 1963 (after recognition of seconder for 20 minutes of debate on motion to suspend the rules, the Chair refused to entertain unanimous-consent request for additional allotment of time to opposition); 105 CONG. REC. 10810, 86th Cong. 1st Sess., June 15, 1959 (a member may not speak to a motion to suspend the rules unless yielded time by mover or seconder of the motion).

§ 25.24 By unanimous consent, the 20 minutes debate allotted a Member demanding a second (under a former practice) on a motion to suspend the rules was transferred to another Member.

On Apr. 20, 1970,⁽¹⁾ Mr. Carl D. Perkins, of Kentucky, moved to suspend the rules and pass H.R. 10666, to establish a national commission on libraries and informational science. Mr. John R. Dellenback, of Oregon, demanded a second (thereby being entitled to control the 20 minutes of debate in opposition to the motion). Mr. Dellenback later requested that the debate time allotted him be transferred to another Member in opposition:

MR. DELLENBACK: Mr. Speaker, while I demanded the second, which was ordered, I ask unanimous consent that control of the time be transferred to the gentleman from New York (Mr. Reid).

THE SPEAKER:⁽²⁾ Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oregon?

There was no objection.

Parliamentarian's Note: A second is no longer required on a motion to suspend the rules.

§ 25.25 While the manager of a motion to suspend the rules

2. John W. McCormack (Mass.).

has the right to close debate thereon, the Chair attempts to evenly alternate recognition between the majority and minority in order that a comparable amount of time remains for closing speakers on both sides.

On Oct. 2, 1984,⁽³⁾ during consideration of the balanced budget bill (H.R. 6300) in the House, the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [JUDD] GREGG [of New Hampshire]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

I have 9 minutes remaining. The chairman of the Committee on the Budget has 13 more minutes remaining. After I yield this next point, I will have 7 minutes remaining.

I would request the Chair, in fairness, to proceed with the other side until the time is in more balance as we get closer to the closing of debate.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁴⁾ The Chair would announce that the Chair is not trying to have this debate conducted in an unfair manner. The Chair will allow the gentleman from Oklahoma to have the chance to yield to a speaker to close debate and, therefore, the Chair will try to keep the division of time as near even as possible, given the consideration that the gentleman from Oklahoma have the opportunity to end the debate.

Conference Reports

§ 25.26 One hour of debate, equally divided between the majority and minority parties, is permitted on a conference report; and where conferees have been appointed from two committees of the House, the Speaker recognizes one of the minority Members (not necessarily a member of the same committee as the Member controlling the majority time) to control 30 minutes of debate.

4. Richard A. Gephardt (Mo.).

On Jan. 19, 1972,⁽⁵⁾ Wayne L. Hays, of Ohio, Chairman of the Committee on House Administration, called up a conference report on S. 382, the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1972. Conferees on the part of the House had been appointed from two House committees with jurisdiction over the bill, the Committee on House Administration and the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Speaker Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, recognized Mr. Hays for 30 minutes of debate to control time for the majority. He recognized Mr. William L. Springer, of Illinois, ranking minority member of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to control 30 minutes of debate for the minority.

Parliamentarian's Note: Mr. Springer controlled the minority time although he had resigned as a conferee on the bill, and even though Mr. Samuel L. Devine, of Ohio, ranking minority member of the Committee on House Administration and a conferee on the bill, was on the floor and participated in debate. Under normal practice, the Members controlling the time for debate on a conference report are among those who served as House managers in conference.⁽⁶⁾

§ 25.27 Where a Member opposed to a section of a conference report (containing nongermane Senate language) demanded a separate vote on the section pursuant to a special order permitting such procedure, that Member and the Member calling up the conference report were each recognized for 20 minutes of debate on a motion to strike that section pursuant to Rule XX clause 1. After the House agreed to retain the section it then considered the entire conference report, with the Member calling up the report and a member of the minority party each being recognized for 30 minutes under Rule XXVIII clause 2.

6. For division of debate on a conference report, see Rule XXVIII clause 2(a), House Rules and Manual §912(a) (1995).

On Nov. 10, 1971,⁽⁷⁾ Mr. F. Edward Hébert, of Louisiana, called up a conference report. Speaker Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, stated that the special order under which the report was being considered, House Resolution 696, provided that a separate vote could be demanded on certain sections of the conference report. Mr. Donald M. Fraser, of Minnesota, demanded a separate vote on section 503 of the report pursuant to the special order and pursuant to Rule XX clause 1 of the House rules.

The Speaker then stated the order of recognition pending the separate vote:

Under clause 1 of Rule XX, 40 minutes of debate are permitted before a separate vote is taken on a nongermane Senate amendment, one-half of such time in favor of, and one-half in opposition to the amendment.

Pursuant to that rule, the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. Hébert] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Fraser] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The House agreed to the section after 40 minutes of debate.

The House then considered the entire conference report, and the Speaker stated that one hour of debate would be had, the Member calling up the report, Mr. Hébert, to be recognized for 30 minutes, and a Member of the minority party, Mr. Leslie C. Arends, of Illinois, to be recognized for 30 minutes.

7. 117 CONG. REC. 40483, 40489, 40490, 92d Cong. 1st Sess.

§ 25.28 The time for debate on an amendment reported from conference in disagreement is equally divided between the majority and minority parties under Rule XXVIII clause 2(b), and a Member offering a preferential motion does not thereby gain control of time for debate; nor can the Member who has offered the preferential motion move the previous question during time yielded to him for debate, since that would deprive the Members in charge of control of the time for debate.

On Dec. 4, 1975,⁽⁸⁾ an example of the proposition described above occurred in the House during consideration of the conference report on H.R. 8069 (the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare and related agencies appropriation bill):

MR. [DANIEL J.] FLOOD [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Flood moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 72 and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment, insert the following:

8. 121 CONG. REC. 38714, 38716, 38717, 94th Cong. 1st Sess.

"Sec. 209. None of the funds contained in this Act shall be used to require, directly or indirectly, the transportation of any student to a school other than the school which is nearest or next nearest the student's home

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Bauman moves that the House recede from its disagreement to Senate amendment No. 72 and concur therein.

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁹⁾ The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Flood).

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, may I inquire, who has the right to the time under the motion?

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Flood) has 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel) has 30 minutes. The time is controlled by the committee leadership on each side, and they are not taken from the floor by a preferential motion. . . .

MR. [ROBERT H.] MICHEL [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Bauman).

MR. BAUMAN: The gentleman from Maryland has made his case and if the gentleman would like to concur in the stand taken by the majority party in favor of busing he can do that. I do not concur.

9. Carl Albert (Okla.).

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion.

MR. FLOOD: Mr. Speaker, I demand the question be divided.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Flood) has the floor and the Chair is trying to let the gentleman be heard.

MR. FLOOD: Mr. Speaker, I demand a division.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, I have not yielded. My time has not expired.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman has time for debate only.

MR. BAUMAN: No; Mr. Speaker, it was not yielded for debate only.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Maryland has 15 seconds.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman was yielded to for debate only. The gentleman from Illinois had no authority under clause 2, rule XXVIII to yield for any other purpose but debate.

Parliamentarian's Note: Debate on a motion that the House recede from its disagreement to a Senate amendment and concur is under the hour rule. In the above instance, the motion to recede and concur was divided.⁽¹⁰⁾ If the motion is so divided, the hour rule applies to each motion separately.⁽¹¹⁾ Thus, technically, the Bau-man motion to concur could have been debated under the hour rule, since the request for division of the question was made prior to the ordering of the previous question. Control of the time, however, would have remained with the majority and minority under the rule.

Whether or not the division demand was made before or after the ordering of the previous question on the motion to recede and concur, the preferential motion offered by Mr. Flood to concur with an amendment could have been debated under the hour rule equally divided, since it was a separate motion not affected by ordering the previous question on the motion to recede and concur.

Had the Bauman motion to concur been rejected, the motion to concur with another amendment would have been in order, and preferential to a motion to insist on disagreement.

§ 25.29 Time for debate on motions to dispose of amendments in disagreement is equally divided, under Rule XXVIII clause 2(b), between the majority and minority party; and if a minority Member has been designated by his party to control time, another minority Member who offers a preferential motion does not thereby gain control of the time given to the minority.

On May 14, 1975,⁽¹²⁾ during consideration of the conference report on H.R. 4881⁽¹³⁾ in the House, the following proceedings occurred:

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁴⁾ The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 61: Page 41, line 9, insert:

“FEDERAL RAILROAD ADMINISTRATION
“RAIL TRANSPORTATION IMPROVEMENT
AND EMPLOYMENT

“For payment of financial assistance to assist railroads by providing funds for repairing, rehabilitating, and improving railroad roadbeds and facilities, $700,000,000

MR. [GEORGE H.] MAHON [of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Mahon moves that the House insist on its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 61.

PREFERENTIAL MOTION OFFERED BY MR. CONTE

MR. [SILVIO O.] CONTE [of Massachusetts]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

- 12. 121 CONG. REC. 14385, 14386, 94th Cong. 1st Sess.
- 13. The Emergency Employment Appropriations for fiscal year 1975.
- 14. Carl Albert (Okla.).

Mr. Conte moves that the House recede from its disagreement to Senate amendment Number 61 and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate, insert the following:

“CHAPTER VIII

“DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION

“For payment of financial assistance to assist railroads by providing funds for repairing, rehabilitating, and improving railroad roadbeds and facilities, $200,000,000

MR. [E. G.] SHUSTER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state it.

MR. SHUSTER: Mr. Speaker, how is the time divided?

THE SPEAKER: The time is divided equally between the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Mahon), who has 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel) who has 30 minutes or such small fraction thereof as he may decide to use.

§ 26. Management by Reporting Committee; One-third of Debate Time on Certain Propositions Allotted to One Opposed

Most business considered by the House is reported by standing committees of the House, and each measure is managed for consideration by the relevant committee.⁽¹⁵⁾ The chairman of a committee has the special responsibility, under the rules, to bring to the floor or to take measures to bring to the floor any measure approved by his committee.⁽¹⁶⁾

First the committee managers, and then the other members of the committee in order of seniority, have priority of recognition at all stages of consideration.⁽¹⁷⁾ The member of a committee who calls up a committee-approved proposition for consideration must be so authorized by his committee.⁽¹⁸⁾ The manager for the committee has prior rights to recognition in debate and prior rights to offer motions expediting the consideration and passage of the bill.⁽¹⁹⁾

15. Control may be taken away from the committee by a motion to discharge (see Ch. 18, supra) or by a special order (see § 2, supra).

If the committee manager loses control of the proposition on the floor, control usually passes to an opposing member of the committee, although it may pass to any Member of the House in opposition. For control passing to the opposition, see § 34, infra.

16. See §§ 26.8, 26.9, infra.

17. See §§ 26.1–26.5, infra, for recognition generally, and §§ 26.19–26.23, infra, for recognition under the five-minute rule.

18. See §§ 27.1, 27.2, infra.

19. For the role of the manager, see § 24, supra.

The manager may yield time which he controls as he sees fit,⁽²⁰⁾ and he may delegate his authority to another Member, such as the chairman of the subcommittee concerned with the legislation.⁽¹⁾

Where a special order does not designate the managers on behalf of a committee, or where the designated manager is unavoidably absent, the Chair may recognize a committee member in his discretion.⁽²⁾

Committee management extends to the consideration of a conference report on the bill in question; the senior manager on the part of the House is often the chairman of the legislative committee (or subcommittee) with jurisdiction over the subject matter of the original bill.⁽³⁾

Recent changes in the rules provide for debate time for a Member opposed to certain propositions, where Members recognized on the majority and minority party sides both support the proposition. Rule XXVIII, clause 1(b) provides:⁽⁴⁾

20. See § 26.29, infra.

1. Any delegation must be communicated to the Chair; see § 26.32, infra.

2. See §§ 27.6, 27.7, 28.8, infra. As to power and discretion of Chair generally, see § 9, supra.

3. See §§ 26.10–26.12, infra.

4. House Rules and Manual § 909a (1995).

The time allotted for debate on any motion to instruct House conferees shall be equally divided between the majority and minority parties, except that if the proponent of the motion and the Member from the other party are both supporters of the motion, one-third of such debate time shall be allotted to a Member who is opposed to said motion.

Similarly, the time allotted for debate in the consideration of a conference report is equally divided between the majority party and the minority party, except that if the floor manager for the majority and the floor manager for the minority are both supporters of the conference report, one third of such debate time is allotted to a Member who is opposed to said conference report.⁽⁵⁾ Recognition of a Member in opposition does not depend upon party affiliation and is within the discretion of the Speaker⁽⁶⁾ who accords priority in recognition to a member of the conference committee.⁽⁷⁾ Where the time is divided three ways, the right to close debate falls to the majority manager calling up the conference report, preceded by the minority manager, preceded in turn by the Member in opposition.⁽⁸⁾

5. Rule XXVIII, clause 2(a), House Rules and Manual §912a (1995).

6. See §§ 26.51, 26.52, 26.62, infra.

7. See § 26.54, infra.

8. See § 26.57, infra.

Rule XXVIII, clause 2(b)(1) provides:⁽⁹⁾

The time allotted for debate on [an amendment in disagreement] shall be equally divided between the majority party and the minority party, except that if the floor manager for the majority and the floor manager for the minority are both supporters of the original motion offered by the floor manager for the majority to dispose of the amendment, one third of such debate time shall be allotted to a Member who is opposed to said motion.⁽¹⁰⁾

Prior Recognition of Committee Members

§ 26.1 As a practice of long standing and in the absence of any other considerations, members of a committee reporting a bill are entitled to prior recognition thereon.

On Feb. 10, 1941,⁽¹¹⁾ Chairman Clarence Cannon, of Missouri, responded to a parliamentary inquiry on the nature of the practice of extending priority for recognition to members of the committee reporting a bill:

MR. [LYLE H.] BOREN [of Oklahoma]: Mr. Chairman, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry. I want it thoroughly understood that I recognize fully the custom of members of the committee being recognized ahead of any other Member on the floor, not a member of the committee. I am quite willing to withdraw my amendment for that purpose, but as I understood it the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Cooper] rose to make the point of order that my recognition at that time was not in order. I understood the Chair sustained the point of order and recognized the gentleman from New York [Mr. Crowther]. I should like to be enlightened as to under what rule of the House that point of order is sustained after the Chair had recognized me for the purpose of offering an amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from New York [Mr. Crowther] is a member of the committee reporting the bill and, therefore, entitled to prior recognition.

MR. [JACK] NICHOLS [of Oklahoma]: Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state it.

MR. NICHOLS: Is there a rule of the House that gives the members of the committee the right to recognition ahead of other Members of the House? Is that a rule of the House?

THE CHAIRMAN: It is a procedure of long standing.

MR. NICHOLS: It is not a rule of the House.

THE CHAIRMAN: In the absence of other considerations, members of the committee in charge of the bill are entitled to prior recognition. The rule is essential to expedition in legislation and its importance is too obvious to require justification.

§ 26.2 Where more than one Member seeks recognition, the Speaker recognizes the Member in charge or a member of the reporting committee, if he seeks recognition.

On Nov. 15, 1967,⁽¹²⁾ the Committee of the Whole was considering under the five-minute rule a bill reported from the Committee on Education and Labor, chaired by Mr. Carl D. Perkins, of Kentucky. Mr. Edward J. Gurney, of Florida, sought recognition and when Chairman John J. Rooney, of New York, asked for what purpose, he (Mr. Gurney) stated he sought recognition to offer an amendment. The Chairman then recognized Mr. Perkins to submit a unanimous-consent request on closing debate before recognizing Mr. Gurney to offer his amendment.⁽¹³⁾

§ 26.3 Although members of the committee reporting a bill under consideration usually have preference of recognition, the power of recognition remains in the discretion of the Chair.

On July 19, 1967,⁽¹⁴⁾ Chairman Joseph L. Evins, of Tennessee, recognized in the Committee of the Whole Mr. Edmond Edmondson, of Oklahoma, for a parliamentary inquiry and then recognized him to offer an amendment to the pending bill. Mr. William C. Cramer, of Florida, made the point of order that William M. McCulloch, of Ohio, the ranking minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary, which had reported the bill, had been on his feet seeking recognition to offer an amendment at the time and that members of the committee reporting the bill had the prior right to be recognized. The Chairman overruled the point of order and stated:

The Chair is trying to be fair and trying to recognize Members on both sides. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. McCulloch).

§ 26.4 Members of the committee reporting a bill are entitled to prior recognition over the Member who has introduced the bill.

On July 8, 1937,⁽¹⁵⁾ Chairman Marvin Jones, of Texas, answered a parliamentary inquiry on the order of recognition on the pending bill:

MR. [EMANUEL] CELLER [of New York]: Mr. Chairman, what is the order of priority on the bill? Does the author of the bill precede a member who is not a member of the committee?

THE CHAIRMAN: If the Chair understands the rule correctly, the members of the committee which report the bill have preference. After that all members of the Committee of the Whole are on equal standing.

§ 26.5 In giving preference of recognition to members of a committee reporting a bill, the Chair does not usually distinguish between members of the full committee and members of the subcommittee.

On Apr. 7, 1943,⁽¹⁶⁾ Chairman Luther A. Johnson, of Texas, recognized Mr. Frank B. Keefe, of Wisconsin, in opposition to a pro forma amendment. Mr. Keefe was a member of the Committee on Appropriations, which had reported the pending bill. Mr. John H. Kerr, of North Carolina, objected that he asked to be recognized, as a member of the subcommittee which had handled the bill. The Chairman stated as follows on the priority of recognition:

As the Chair understands it, a member of the Committee on Appropriations has the same right as those who are members of that committee who happen to be members of a subcommittee. That is the parliamentary procedure, as the Chair understands it. The Chair has recognized the gentleman from Wisconsin. Had he not done so, he certainly would have recognized the gentleman from North Carolina.

Control of Privileged Resolution rule and the committee member recognized to call it up has control of the time.

On Feb. 27, 1963,⁽¹⁷⁾ Mr. Samuel N. Friedel, of Maryland, called up by direction of the Committee on House Administration House Resolution 164, a privileged resolution providing funds for the Committee on Armed Services. Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, answered a parliamentary inquiry as to control of the time for debate:

MR. [CHARLES A.] HALLECK [of Indiana]: As I understand it, the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Friedel] has said that he would yield time to Members on the minority side, and that is what we want. If there is another minority Member who wants to be recognized at this time, it would be in order under the rules for that Member to be granted time in order that he might make such statement as he might want to make.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will state that under the rules of the House and pursuant to custom that has existed from time immemorial, on a resolution of this kind the Member in charge of the resolution has control of the time and he, in turn, yields time. The gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Friedel] in charge of the resolution has yielded 10 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio.

Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, the Majority Leader, then made the following statement on distribution of time to the minority:

Following the statement of the distinguished Speaker of the House, the gentleman from Ohio made the statement that he is in favor of the principle involved here. Of course, the principle is well established under the rules of the House and has been observed by both parties from time immemorial, that the Member recognized to call up the resolution has control of the time under the 1-hour rule. But, I would like to advise the gentleman, as the gentleman from Maryland has, I am sure the gentleman from Maryland will yield at least half of the time to the minority.

On Feb. 25, 1954,⁽¹⁸⁾ Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, answered parliamentary inquiries on the control of debate on a privileged resolution called up by the chairman of the Committee on House Administration:

MR. [KARL M.] LECOMPTE [of Iowa]: Under the rules the Chairman has control of the time.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman has 1 hour to yield to whomsoever he desires.

MR. LECOMPTE: And he has control of the matter of offering amendments.

THE SPEAKER: A committee amendment is now pending. No other amendment can be offered unless the gentleman yields the floor for that purpose.

MR. LECOMPTE: A motion to recommit, of course, belongs to some member of the minority opposed to the resolution. Would any motion except a motion to recommit be in order except by the gentleman in charge of the bill?

THE SPEAKER: Not unless the gentleman yields for that purpose.

The gentleman from Iowa is recognized for 1 hour.

Responsibility of the Committee Chairman

§ 26.7 On one occasion, the chairman of a committee, acting at the President's request, introduced a bill, presided over the hearings in committee, reported the bill, applied to the Committee on Rules for a special order, and moved that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole; when recognized to control one-half of the debate in the committee, he then announced his opposition to the measure and turned over management of the bill to the ranking majority member of the committee.

On June 14, 1967,⁽¹⁹⁾ Harley O. Staggers, of West Virginia, Chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, moved that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole for the consideration of House Joint Resolution 559, providing for the settlement of a railroad labor dispute. The House had adopted House Resolution 511, making in order the consideration of the bill and providing that general debate be controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

In the Committee of the Whole, Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, of Arkansas, recognized Mr. Staggers to control one-half the time on the bill. Mr. Staggers made the following statement:

Mr. Chairman, I am here today in a most unusual position. I was requested by the President to introduce the bill we have before us today, and because of my responsibilities as chairman of the committee, I introduced the bill. If the House was to be given an opportunity to work its will on this legislation, it was necessary that hearings begin promptly and continue as expeditiously as possible, and I think the record will bear me out, that the hearings before our committee have been prompt, they have not been delayed in any respect.

In fact we interrupted consideration of a very important piece of health legislation in order to take up this bill. We have heard every witness who wanted to be heard on the legislation. I did this because I felt it to be my responsibility to the House as chairman of the committee.

Following the conclusion of our hearings I promptly scheduled executive sessions for consideration of the bill and we met as promptly as possible both morning and afternoon and the committee reported the bill to the House.

Yesterday I went before the Rules Committee as chairman of the committee to present the facts to the Rules Committee and attempt to obtain a rule so that the bill would be considered by the House. I have done these things because I felt it is my responsibility to do so as chairman of the committee.

Unfortunately, Mr. Chairman, I was opposed to this bill when I introduced it, and having heard all the witnesses and all the testimony, I am still opposed to it. For that reason I have asked the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Friedel] to handle the bill in Committee of the Whole, so that I would be free to express my opposition to it. . . .

Mr. Chairman, this concludes the presentation I desire to make on the bill. At this time I request the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Friedel], the ranking majority member on the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, to take charge of managing the bill on the floor.

Parliamentarian's Note: The chairman of each committee has responsibility of reporting or causing to be reported any measure approved by his committee and taking or causing to be taken steps to have the matter considered and voted upon in the House, regardless of his personal opposition to the measure.⁽²⁰⁾

20. See Rule XI clause 2(l)(1)(A), House Rules and Manual §713a (1995).

Effect of Opposition of Committee Chairman

§ 26.8 The Committee of the Whole having adopted certain amendments to a bill, the chairman of the committee from which the measure was reported expressed his objections, relinquished control of the bill and subsequently offered a motion that the Committee rise with the recommendation to strike the enacting clause.

On July 5, 1956,⁽¹⁾ the Committee of the Whole had adopted certain amendments to H.R. 7535, to authorize federal assistance to states and local communities in financing an expanded program of school construction. Graham A. Barden, of North Carolina, who was controlling consideration of the bill as the chairman of the reporting committee—the Committee on Education and Labor—made the following statement:

Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I have a brief statement I should like to make to the House.

For an occasion where the chairman of a committee, also the senior manager at conference, called up and managed the conference report, to which he was opposed, see §24.4, supra.

1. 102 CONG. REC. 11849, 84th Cong. 2d Sess.

For 22 years I have done my best to be sincere and frank with the membership of this House. I propose to continue that, both in attitude and in practice.

I have very definitely reached the conclusion that the American people do not want this legislation in its present form. Certain things have happened to the bill that made it very, very obnoxious and objectionable to the people I represent.

I never have claimed to be an expert when advocating something that I was sincerely and conscientiously for. I have always felt I would be a complete flop in trying to advocate something I did not believe in and did not advocate. This bill is objectionable to me. It has so many bad features and so many things have been given priority over the consideration of the objective that we set out to accomplish that I must say, in all frankness, to the House I cannot continue in the position here of directing this bill. I feel that someone who can be fairer to the bill in its present shape than I, should handle the bill. I would have to be a much better actor than I now am to proceed in the position of handling this piece of legislation which I cannot support and do not want to pass. For that reason, I want the House to understand my very definite position in the matter. So, with that, I think the House will understand my position and those in a position on the committee to handle the bill will have my cooperation to a certain extent, but no one need to expect any assistance from me or any encouragement for the bill.

Mr. Barden later offered a motion that the Committee of the Whole rise and report the bill back to the House with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken, which was defeated (the bill itself was later defeated).⁽²⁾

Duty of Committee Chairman To Report Bill

§ 26.9 The provision of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946 (later adopted as part of the rules of the House) providing that it shall be the duty of the chairman of each committee to report or cause to be reported promptly any measure approved by his committee or to take or cause to be taken necessary steps to bring a matter to a vote, is sufficient authority to call up a bill on Calendar Wednesday.

On Feb. 22, 1950,⁽³⁾ John Lesinski, of Michigan, Chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor, called up a bill under the Calendar Wednesday procedure. Mr. Tom Pickett, of Texas,

2. Id. at pp. 11868, 11869.

For an occasion where a senior conference manager, also chairman of a committee, managed a conference report to which he was opposed, see § 24.4, supra.

3. 96 CONG. REC. 2161, 2162, 81st Cong. 2d Sess.

made the point of order that Mr. Lesinski was not entitled to recognition for that purpose, not having been expressly authorized by the committee to call up the bill under that procedure.

Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, overruled the point of order, saying:

The Chair is prepared to rule.

The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Lesinski] has already stated that the committee did give him this authority. The present occupant of the chair has read the minutes of the committee and thinks the gentleman from Michigan is correct.

Also the latest rule on this matter is section 133, paragraph (c), of the Legislative Reorganization Act, and there is very good reason for this rule because in times past the chairmen of committees have been known to carry bills around in their pockets for quite a while and not present them.

The rule is as follows:

It shall be the duty of the chairman of each such committee to report or cause to be reported promptly to the Senate or House of Representatives, as the case may be, any measure approved by his committee and to take or cause to be taken steps to bring the matter to a vote.⁽⁴⁾

Conference Reports

§ 26.10 Under a former practice, a conference report was called up by the chairman of one committee, who controlled one-half hour on one title of the bill, and then yielded to the chairman of another committee to control one-half hour on the other title and to move the previous question.

4. The statute cited was later adopted as part of the standing rules; see Rule XI clause 2(l)(1)(A), House Rules and Manual § 713a (1995).

On May 13, 1970,⁽⁵⁾ Mr. Harley O. Staggers, of West Virginia, called up a conference report on H.R. 14465, the Airport and Airway Development and Revenue Acts of 1970. The managers on the part of the House had been appointed from two House committees, since title 1 of the bill dealt with airport authorizations, within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, and title 2 dealt with raising revenue for airport construction, within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Ways and Means.

The Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce had reported the bill in the House, and Mr. Staggers, Chairman of that committee, therefore called up the conference report for consideration. He controlled one-half hour of debate on title 1, within the jurisdiction of his committee. He then yielded to Wilbur D. Mills, of Arkansas, Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, to control one-half hour of debate on title 2 of the bill. Mr. Mills moved the previous question on the report.

Parliamentarian's Note: Under the present Rule XXVIII, clause 2(a), debate on a conference report is equally divided between the majority and the minority parties (see § 26.12, infra).

§ 26.11 A conference report was filed and called up by a junior member of the conference committee, where the senior manager at the conference (who was also the chairman of the legislative committee involved) was temporarily absent and unable to be present on the floor.

On Dec. 23, 1969,⁽⁶⁾ Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, recognized Mr. Thomas L. Ashley, of Ohio, a junior member of the conference committee on H.R. 4293, to provide for continuation of authority for regulation of exports, to file the conference report and to call it up. The senior member of the conference committee, Wright Patman, of Texas, also Chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency, which had jurisdiction over the subject matter of the bill, was unavoidably absent from the floor.

§ 26.12 One hour of debate, equally divided between the majority and minority parties, is permitted on a conference report; and where conferees have been appointed from two committees of the House, the Speaker recognizes one of the minority members (not necessarily a member of the same committee as the Member controlling the majority time) to control 30 minutes of debate.

On Jan. 19, 1972,⁽⁷⁾ Wayne L. Hays, of Ohio, Chairman of the Committee on House Administration, called up a conference report on S. 382, the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1972. Conferees on the part of the House had been appointed from two House committees with jurisdiction over the bill, the Committee on House Administration and the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

for the majority. He recognized William L. Springer, of Illinois, ranking minority member of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to control 30 minutes of debate for the minority.

Parliamentarian's Note: Mr. Springer controlled the minority time although he had resigned as a conferee on the bill, and even though Mr. Samuel L. Devine, of Ohio, ranking minority member of the Committee on House Administration and a conferee on the bill was on the floor and participated in debate. Under normal practice, the Members controlling the time for debate on a conference report are among those who served as House managers in conference.⁽⁸⁾

District of Columbia Business

§ 26.13 During consideration of District of Columbia business in Committee of the Whole, the Chair alternates in recognizing between those for and against the pending legislation, giving preference to members of the Committee on the District of Columbia.

On Apr. 11, 1932,⁽⁹⁾ Chairman Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, answered a parliamentary inquiry on recognition in the Committee of the Whole during general debate on a District of Columbia bill:

MR. [WILLIAM H.] STAFFORD [of Wisconsin]: Mr. Chairman, when the Committee on the District of Columbia has the call and the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union is considering legislation, is it necessary, in gaining recognition, that a Member has to be in opposition to the bill or is any Member whatsoever entitled to one hour's time for general debate?

THE CHAIRMAN: From the Chair's experience, gained through having been a member of this committee for over 10 years, he will state that where a bill is called up for general debate on District day in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and the chairman of the committee has yielded the floor, a member of the committee opposed to the bill is entitled to recognition over any other member opposed to the bill, and it was the duty of the Chair to ascertain whether there were any members of the committee opposed to the bill who would be entitled to prior recognition. The Chair, having ascertained there were no members of the committee opposed to the bill, took pleasure, under the direction of the gentleman from Wisconsin, in recognizing the gentleman from Mississippi.

Committee Amendments

§ 26.14 In recognizing members of the committee reporting a bill, the Chair generally recognizes a member in favor of a committee amendment prior to recognizing a member thereof who is opposed.

On Jan. 30, 1957,⁽¹⁰⁾ House Joint Resolution 1311, to authorize the President to cooperate with nations of the Middle East, was being considered in the Committee of the Whole pursuant to a resolution permitting only committee amendments (Committee on Foreign Affairs). A committee amendment was offered, and Mr. Wayne L. Hays, of Ohio, a member of the committee, rose to seek recognition for debate in opposition to the amendment. A point of order having been made against that procedure, Chairman Jere Cooper, of Tennessee, extended recognition to Mr. Frank M. Coffin, of Maine, a member of the committee who authorized and supported the amendment.

§ 26.15 Where a privileged resolution is reported by the Committee on Rules, with committee amendments, the amendments are reported and may be acted upon before the Member managing the resolution is recognized for debate thereon.

10. 103 CONG. REC. 1311, 85th Cong. 1st Sess.

On Aug. 19, 1964,⁽¹¹⁾ the Committee on Rules reported House Resolution 845, providing for the consideration of H.R. 11926, limiting the jurisdiction of federal courts in apportionment cases, which bill had not been reported by the committee to which referred. Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, directed the Clerk, after the reading of the resolution, to read the committee amendments. The amendments were then agreed to and the Speaker recognized Mr. Howard W. Smith, of Virginia, the manager of the resolution, for one hour of debate.

Parliamentarian's Note: This is the normal procedure in the case of technical or perfecting amendments to a resolution considered under the hour rule. Alternatively, the proponent of the resolution may proceed in debate while an amendment thereto is pending. This procedure is followed where the amendment is controversial or is in the nature of a substitute.

§ 26.16 When a bill is being considered under a closed rule permitting only committee amendments, only two five-minute speeches are in order, one in support of the committee amendment and one in opposition, and the Chair gives preference in recognition to members of the committee reporting the bill.

On May 18, 1960,⁽¹²⁾ the Committee of the Whole was considering H.R. 5, the Foreign Investment Tax Act of 1960, reported by the Committee on Ways and Means, pursuant to the provisions of House Resolution 468, permitting only amendments offered at the direction of said committee. Chairman William H. Natcher, of Kentucky, stated in response to a parliamentary inquiry that only five minutes for and five minutes against the bill were in order, and that committee members had prior rights to debate:

MR. [CLEVELAND M.] BAILEY [of West Virginia]: I rise in opposition to the amendment, and I oppose the legislation in general.

Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state it.

MR. BAILEY: On what ground may I get recognition for the purpose of opposing the legislation?

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair recognized the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. Boggs] for 5 minutes in support of the committee amendment, so the gentleman from Louisiana would have to yield to the distinguished gentleman from West Virginia.

12. 106 CONG. REC. 10576, 86th Cong. 2d Sess.

MR. BAILEY: At the expiration of the 5 minutes allowed the gentleman from Louisiana, may I be recognized to discuss the amendment?

THE CHAIRMAN: If no other member of the committee rises in opposition to the amendment, the Chair will recognize the gentleman.

§ 26.17 The time for debate having been fixed by motion on amendments to a committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, the Chair may by unanimous consent recognize the same committee member in opposition to each amendment offered where no other member of the committee seeks such recognition.

On Feb. 8, 1950,⁽¹³⁾ Chairman Chet Holifield, of California, answered a parliamentary inquiry after the Committee of the Whole had agreed to a motion limiting debate on amendments to a committee amendment in the nature of a substitute:

MR. [FRANCIS H.] CASE of South Dakota: Under what precedent or ruling is the Chair recognizing a certain member of the committee for 1 minute in opposition to each amendment being offered? That was not included in the motion. Had it been included in the motion, it would have been subject to a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair is trying to be fair in the conduct of the committee, and the only gentleman that has arisen on the opposite side has been the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Murray]. There was no point of order raised at the time that I announced that I would recognize the committee for 1 minute in rebuttal to each amendment.

MR. CASE of South Dakota: But the gentleman from South Dakota got up at the time the Chair proposed to recognize the gentleman from Tennessee a second time. Obviously, when the committee avails itself of the opportunity to make a motion to limit debate it, in a sense, is closing debate, and unless it does seek to limit time and is successful in so doing, in principle it forfeits that courtesy. The Members who have proposed amendments here have been waiting all afternoon to be heard, and if the committee adopted the procedure of seeking to close debate on 20 minutes' notice, with 10 amendments pending, it would seem as a matter of courtesy that the committee should restrain itself to one member of the committee who might have been on his feet, but to recognize one gentleman a succession of times seems entirely out of keeping with the spirit of closing debate.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chairman, in the list of names, also read the name of the committee. If the Chair was so inclined, the Chair could recognize two Members for 5 minutes each on amendments, on each side, and that would preclude the others from having any voice in the amendments that are pending, or in the debate.

MR. CASE of South Dakota: That, of course, is true, the Chair could do that. But, ordinarily, under the precedents always followed in the House, when time is closed on amendments, the time is divided among those who are seeking to offer amendments, and unless the motion specifically reserves time to the committee, it has been the precedent to divide the time among those who are seeking to offer amendments.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair feels that the committee is entitled to a rebuttal on any amendment that is offered, and has so announced, and there was no point of order made at the time. The Chair sustains its present position.

Priorities Under the Five-minute Rule

§ 26.18 Recognition of Members to offer amendments under the five-minute rule in the Committee of the Whole is within the discretion of the Chair, and he may extend preference to members of the committee which reported the bill according to seniority.

On July 21, 1949,⁽¹⁴⁾ Chairman Eugene J. Keogh, of New York, answered a parliamentary inquiry on the order of recognition for amendments under the five-minute rule:

14. 95 CONG. REC. 9936, 81st Cong. 1st Sess.

MR. [JAMES P.] SUTTON [of Tennessee]: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

MR. H. CARL ANDERSEN [of Minnesota]: Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state it.

MR. H. CARL ANDERSEN: Mr. Chairman, is it not the custom during debate under the 5-minute rule for the Chair in recognizing Members to alternate from side to side? At least I suggest to the Chair that that would be the fair procedure. The Chair has recognized three Democrats in a row.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair will say to the gentleman that the matter of recognition of members of the committee is within the discretion of the Chair. The Chair has undertaken to follow as closely as possible the seniority of those Members.

MR. [CLIFFORD R.] HOPE [of Kansas]: Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state it.

MR. HOPE: For the information of the Chair, the gentleman from Wisconsin, who has been seeking recognition, has been a Member of the House for 10 years, and the gentleman from Tennessee is a Member whose service began only this year.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair would refer the gentleman to the official list of the members of the committee, which the Chair has before him.

The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Tennessee.

§ 26.19 Recognition under the five-minute rule in the Committee of the Whole is within the discretion of the Chair, and the Chair is not required in every instance to recognize members of the legislative committee reporting the bill in order of their seniority.

On Oct. 2, 1969,⁽¹⁵⁾ the Committee of the Whole was considering under the five-minute rule H.R. 14000, military procurement authorization. Chairman Daniel D. Rostenkowski, of Illinois, recognized Mr. Charles H. Wilson, of California, a member of the Committee on Armed Services which had reported the bill, to offer an amendment. Mr. Lucien N. Nedzi, of Michigan, inquired whether members of the committee were not supposed to be recognized in the order of their seniority. The Chairman responded "That is a matter for the Chair's discretion" and proceeded to recognize Mr. Wilson for his amendment.

§ 26.20 During amendment of a bill in Committee of the Whole, the Chairman first recognizes members of the committee reporting the bill, if on their feet seeking recognition.

15. 115 CONG. REC. 28101, 28102, 91st Cong. 1st Sess.

On June 29, 1939,⁽¹⁶⁾ Chairman Jere Cooper, of Tennessee, ruled that although a Member had been recognized to offer an amendment, the Chairman would in his discretion first recognize members of the committee reporting the bill, if on their feet seeking recognition:

MR. [HAROLD] KNUTSON [of Minnesota]: Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the Clerk's desk which I would like to offer at this time.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Knutson: Strike out all of section 1 and insert the following—

MR. [HAMILTON] FISH [Jr., of New York] (interrupting the reading of the amendment): Mr. Chairman, would it be in order for the committee members to be recognized first to offer amendments?

MR. KNUTSON: I have already been recognized.

THE CHAIRMAN: If there is any member of the committee seeking recognition, he is entitled to recognition.

MR. FISH: Mr. Chairman, I would like to be recognized.

MR. KNUTSON: I already have the floor, and have been recognized.

MR. H. CARL ANDERSEN [of Minnesota]: Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Knutson] has already been recognized.

THE CHAIRMAN: Recognition is in the discretion of the Chair, and the Chair will recognize members of the committee first. Does the acting chairman of the committee seek recognition?

16. 84 CONG. REC. 8311, 76th Cong. 1st Sess.

MR. [SOL] BLOOM [of New York]: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask whether the committee amendments to section 1 have been agreed to?

THE CHAIRMAN: The only one the Chair knows about is the one appearing in the print of the bill, and that has been agreed to.

MR. BLOOM: In line 16, there is a committee amendment.

MR. KNUTSON: Mr. Chairman, I was recognized by the Chair.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair feels that inasmuch as members of the committee were not on their feet and the gentleman from Minnesota had been recognized, the gentleman is entitled to recognition.

§ 26.21 In recognizing members of the committee reporting a bill to offer amendments in the Committee of the Whole, the Chairman has discretion whether to first recognize a minority or majority member.

On June 4, 1948,⁽¹⁷⁾ while the Committee of the Whole was considering H.R. 6801, the foreign aid appropriation bill, for amendment, Chairman W. Sterling Cole, of New York, recognized Everett M. Dirksen, of Illinois (a majority member) to offer an amendment. Mr. Clarence Cannon, of Missouri, objected that the minority was entitled to recognition to move to amend the bill. The Chairman responded:

17. 94 CONG. REC. 7189, 80th Cong. 2d Sess.

Under the rules of the House, any member of the committee may offer an amendment, and it is in the discretion of the Chair as to which member shall be recognized.

§ 26.22 A member of the committee in charge of a bill is entitled to close debate on an amendment under consideration in the Committee of the Whole where the debate has been limited and equally divided among that Member and other Members.

On May 22, 1956,⁽¹⁸⁾ Chairman Jere Cooper, of Tennessee, ruled that the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, manager of the pending bill, H.R. 11319, was entitled to close debate on a pending amendment (where a request had been agreed to to limit debate on the amendment to 20 minutes, divided and controlled by that Member and three others):

THE CHAIRMAN: Under the unanimous-consent agreement, the Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York [Mr. Cole].

MR. [W. STERLING] COLE: Mr. Chairman, I understood that I was to have 5 minutes to close the debate on this amendment.

18. 102 CONG. REC. 8741, 84th Cong. 2d Sess.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair was not of that understanding. It is the understanding of the Chair that the gentleman from New York [Mr. Taber] would have 5 minutes to close the debate.

MR. COLE: The request was that the gentleman from New York will close the debate. I also qualify under that characterization, being in support of the amendment; and, under the rules of the House, it is my understanding that I would be recognized to close the debate.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair will advise the gentleman from New York that a member of the committee is entitled to close the debate if he so desires.

Does the gentleman from New York [Mr. Taber] desire to be recognized to close the debate?

MR. [JOHN] TABER: I desire to close.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York [Mr. Cole].

Reservation of Time for Committee

§ 26.23 Where the Committee of the Whole fixes the time for debate on all amendments to a pending amendment in the nature of a substitute, the Chair in counting those seeking recognition may without objection allot a portion of the time on each amendment to the committee reporting the bill.

On Feb. 8, 1950,⁽¹⁹⁾ the Committee of the Whole fixed time for debate on amendments to a committee amendment in the nature of a substitute. Chairman Chet Holifield, of California, then indicated, in response to a parliamentary inquiry, that the Chair would recognize a committee member in opposition to each amendment offered.

Control of Time by Unanimous Consent

§ 26.24 Under the five-minute rule, control of the time for debate may be allotted by unanimous consent but not by motion.

On May 11, 1949,⁽²⁰⁾ during five-minute debate in the Committee of the Whole, Mr. Brent Spence, of Kentucky, moved to limit five-minute debate on a pending section and amendments thereto, and to allocate the remaining time. Chairman Albert A. Gore, of Tennessee, sustained a point of order against the motion, as follows:

MR. SPENCE: Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on section 1 and all amendments thereto conclude at 3:30 and that the time be equally divided among those Members who asked for time and that the last 5 minutes be assigned to the committee.

19. 96 CONG. REC. 1691, 81st Cong. 2d Sess.

20. 95 CONG. REC. 6055, 6056, 81st Cong. 1st Sess.

MR. [FRANCIS H.] CASE of South Dakota: Mr. Chairman . . . the Committee of the Whole cannot allot time that way. That is in the discretion of the House of Representatives and not the committee. It must be by unanimous consent.

THE CHAIRMAN: The point of order is sustained.

§ 26.25 By unanimous consent, the Committee of the Whole provided for two hours of debate on a pending amendment (thereby abrogating the five-minute rule) and vested control of such time in the chairman and ranking minority member of the committee that had reported the bill.

On July 8, 1965,⁽¹⁾ the Committee of the Whole was considering the Civil Rights Act of 1965, H.R. 6400. Mr. William M. McCulloch, of Ohio, offered an amendment, and the Committee agreed to the following unanimous-consent request allocating the time for debate on the amendment:

MR. [EMANUEL] CELLER [of New York]: Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on the so-called

1. 111 CONG. REC. 16036-38, 89th Cong. 1st Sess.

McCulloch substitute and all amendments thereto be limited to 2 hours, and that such time be equally divided and controlled by myself and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. McCulloch].

Parliamentarian's Note: Where a unanimous-consent agreement for control of time for debate on an amendment has been fixed, the proponent is first recognized for debate.⁽²⁾

§ 26.26 The Committee of the Whole, by unanimous consent, limited debate to 30 minutes on a pending motion to strike and provided that the time should be divided equally between the managers of the bill, who would in turn yield time to both

2. Where the time for and control of debate on an amendment has been fixed by unanimous consent, the motion that the Committee rise with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken is in order and privileged, and the Member so moving and the Members rising in opposition are entitled to recognition for five minutes. Time on the motion is not taken from the time remaining under the unanimous-consent limitation unless the limitation is to a time certain or unless the limitation has the effect of closing further debate on the bill (as with an amendment in the nature of a substitute being considered as an original bill). See 111 CONG. REC. 16227, 16228, 89th Cong. 1st Sess., July 9, 1965.

proponents and opponents of the motion.

On Aug. 4, 1966,⁽³⁾ while the Committee of the Whole was considering H.R. 14765, the Civil Rights Act of 1966, the Committee agreed to a unanimous-consent request on the time and control of debate on motion to strike:

MR. [CARL] ALBERT [of Oklahoma]: The unanimous-consent request is that when the Committee resumes consideration of the bill, H.R. 14765, after the recess tonight the first order of business shall be after 30 minutes of debate a vote on the Moore amendment to strike out title IV and, in the event that amendment is defeated, the Committee shall then continue the consideration of title IV.

MR. [JOHN BELL] WILLIAMS [of Mississippi]: Do I understand that the gentleman dropped that portion in which he provided for a division of time equally between the proponents and opponents?

MR. ALBERT: No. That is included. Fifteen minutes shall be under the control of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Rodino] and 15 minutes under the control of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. McCulloch]. I think it is well understood that they will yield the time to both proponents and opponents of the Moore amendment.

MR. WILLIAMS: By gentleman's agreement?

MR. ALBERT: Yes.

MR. WILLIAMS: Mr. Chairman, I withdraw my reservation.

3. 112 CONG. REC. 18207, 18208, 89th Cong. 2d Sess.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁴⁾ Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

Hour Rule Limitations

§ 26.27 Although the chairman and ranking minority member of a committee or subcommittee may be given control of more than one hour of the time for general debate, they are still limited in their own presentations by the hour rule and may proceed for a longer time only by unanimous consent.

On July 29, 1969,⁽⁵⁾ the House agreed to a unanimous-consent request by Mr. Daniel J. Flood, of Pennsylvania, that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole for the consideration of H.R. 13111, Labor and HEW appropriations, and that general debate be limited to three hours, to be equally divided and controlled by Mr. Flood, Chairman of the Subcommittee on HEW of the Committee on Appropriations and by Mr. Robert H. Michel, of Illinois, the ranking minority member of that subcommittee.

Mr. Flood commenced debate, and Chairman Chet Holifield, of

4. Richard Bolling (Mo.).

5. 115 CONG. REC. 21174-78, 91st Cong. 1st Sess.

California, later advised him that he himself had consumed one hour.

By unanimous consent, at the request of Mr. William H. Natcher, of Kentucky, Mr. Flood was allowed to continue for 10 additional minutes.

Yielding Time by Committee Managers

§ 26.28 Where debate on a bill is under control of the chairman and ranking minority member of a committee, they may yield as many times as they desire to whomever they desire.

On July 11, 1946,⁽⁶⁾ Chairman William M. Whittington, of Mississippi, answered a parliamentary inquiry:

MISS [JESSIE] SUMNER of Illinois: Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry?

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentlewoman will state it.

MISS SUMNER of Illinois: The gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Hays] and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Patman] have spoken two or three times on this bill during general debate. Is that permissible under the rules of the House?

THE CHAIRMAN: The time is within the control of the chairman and the ranking minority member of the committee.

6. 92 CONG. REC. 8694, 79th Cong. 2d Sess.

MISS SUMNER of Illinois: May the same person speak two or three times in general debate on the same bill?

THE CHAIRMAN: General debate on this bill has been fixed at 16 hours, the time equally divided between the chairman and the ranking minority member of the committee. They may yield once, twice, or as many times as they desire to whom they desire.

General Debate Time

§ 26.29 The chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, in control of one-half the time for general debate on a civil rights bill, yielded one-half of that time to another majority member of his committee.

On Jan. 21, 1964,⁽⁷⁾ the House adopted House Resolution 616, providing for consideration of H.R. 7152, the Civil Rights Act of 1963, and providing that 10 hours of general debate thereon be divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary. When the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole for the consideration of the bill, Emanuel Celler, of New York, the Chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary, made the following statement:

Mr. Chairman, at the outset may I say that I shall yield one-half of my time, namely, 2½ hours, to the distinguished gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. Willis].

7. 110 CONG. REC. 1516, 88th Cong. 2d Sess.

§ 26.30 Where a bill is considered pursuant to a resolution which gives control of part of the general debate to the chairman of the committee reporting the bill, he may delegate control of that time to another; but such delegation is not effective unless communicated to the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole.

On Jan. 31, 1964,⁽⁸⁾ the Committee of the Whole was conducting general debate on H.R. 7152, the Civil Rights Act of 1963. The resolution providing for the consideration of the bill provided that general debate be divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary. Emanuel Celler, of New York, the Chairman of the committee, was absent, and the following colloquy and point of order transpired:

MR. [PETER W.] RODINO [Jr., of New Jersey]: Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

MR. [BASIL L.] WHITENER [of North Carolina]: If the gentleman will get me more time, I will be glad to yield to the gentleman.

MR. RODINO: I will give the gentleman 1 extra minute.

MR. WHITENER: I yield to the gentleman, but please do not take more than 1 minute.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁹⁾ The Chair has to inform the gentleman from North Carolina that the gentleman from New Jersey does not have control of the time.

MR. WHITENER: Then, Mr. Chairman, I must respectfully decline to yield to the gentleman. . . .

MR. [BYRON G.] ROGERS of Colorado: Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state the point of order.

MR. ROGERS of Colorado: Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from New Jersey is now in charge of the time in the absence of the chairman, the gentleman from New York [Mr. Celler].

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair was not informed that the gentleman from New York is absent nor is the Chair informed that the gentleman from New Jersey is now in charge of the time.

The gentleman from North Carolina is recognized.

MR. WHITENER: I thank the Chairman. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: The time of the gentleman has expired.

MR. RODINO: Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 minutes, and I wish to state I am acting for the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary who asked me to take charge of the time for him in his absence.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from New Jersey is recognized.

a bill being considered under a special rule providing that the time be controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the committee reporting the bill, additional time must be yielded by the members controlling the time and may not be obtained by unanimous consent.

On June 2, 1975,⁽¹⁰⁾ during consideration of the Voting Rights Act extension (H.R. 6219) in the Committee of the Whole, the following proceedings occurred:

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The time of the gentleman has expired.

MR. [HENRY B.] GONZALEZ [of Texas]: Mr. Chairman, I would ask unanimous consent to continue for an additional 5 minutes.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will state that the gentleman from California (Mr. Edwards) has control of the time. Does the gentleman from California wish to yield additional time to the gentleman from Texas? . . .

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The time of the gentleman has expired.

MR. GONZALEZ: Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will suspend. The Chair must advise the gentleman that under the rule that request is not in order.

—Reserving Time To Close

§ 26.32 Where, under a special rule, general debate is divided and controlled by two committees, the Chair may permit the chairman of the primary committee involved to reserve a portion of his allotted time to close general debate, while recognizing the chairman of the other committee to utilize his time.

During consideration of the Intergovernmental Emergency Assistance Act (H.R. 10481) in the Committee of the Whole on Dec. 2, 1975,⁽¹¹⁾ the proceedings described above occurred as follows:

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹²⁾ Pursuant to the rule, general debate will continue for not to exceed 3 hours, 2 hours to be equally divided and controlled between the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Banking, Currency and Housing, and 1 hour to be equally divided and controlled between the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Under the rule, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Ashley, chairman of the Committee on Banking, Currency, and Housing] will be recognized for 1 hour; the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. McKinney) will be recognized for 1 hour; the gentleman from Oregon (Mr.

Ullman) will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Schneebeli) will be recognized for 30 minutes. . . .

MR. [THOMAS L.] ASHLEY [of Ohio]: Mr. Chairman, I have no further requests for time and I reserve the balance of my time.

THE CHAIRMAN: Under the rule, the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. Ullman) is recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from New York (Mr. Conable) is recognized for 30 minutes.

[Mr. [Al] Ullman [of Oregon] addressed the Committee.]

MR. ASHLEY: Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 2 minutes to close debate.

Disciplinary Resolution

§ 26.33 After the chairman of a special committee to investigate the right of a Member-elect to be sworn was recognized for one hour on a resolution relating thereto, he obtained an additional hour by unanimous consent, and then yielded one-half of his time, for debate only, to the ranking minority member of the special committee; the Speaker declared that both the chairman and the ranking minority member controlled the further allocation of time.

On Mar. 1, 1967,⁽¹³⁾ Emanuel Celler, of New York, Chairman of the select committee, appointed pursuant to House Resolution 1 of the 90th Congress to investigate the right of Member-elect Adam C. Powell, of New York, to be sworn, called up House Resolution 278 relating thereto. Mr. Celler, after being recognized by Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, for one hour, requested that the time be extended for one additional hour, which was agreed to.

Mr. Celler then yielded one-half of his time, for debate only, to Mr. Arch A. Moore, Jr., of West Virginia, the ranking minority member of the special committee. Both were declared by the Speaker to be in control of the allocation of time.

Under Suspension—Management of House Bill With Senate Amendments

§ 26.34 The Speaker normally recognizes the chairman of the committee or subcommittee with jurisdiction over the subject matter of a House bill to move to suspend the rules and agree to a resolution taking the bill with Senate amendments from the Speaker's table and agreeing to the Senate amendments.

On Aug. 27, 1962,⁽¹⁴⁾ Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, recognized Oren Harris, of Arkansas, Chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to move to suspend the rules and agree to House Resolution 769:

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution the bill H.R. 11040, with the Senate amendments thereto, be, and the same is hereby taken from the Speaker's table, to the end that the Senate amendment be, and the same is hereby, agreed to.

Parliamentarian's Note: H.R. 11040, the Communications Satellite Act of 1962, was within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

§ 26.35 The Speaker normally recognizes the chairman of the committee or subcommittee with jurisdiction to move to suspend the rules and agree to a resolution taking a House bill with Senate amendments from the Speaker's table, disagreeing to Senate amendments, and requesting a conference.

On Oct. 1, 1962,⁽¹⁵⁾ Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, recognized Thomas J. Murray, of Tennessee, Chairman of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service, to suspend the rules and agree to House Resolution 818:

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution the bill H.R. 7927, with the Senate amendment thereto, be, and the same hereby is, taken from the Speaker's table, to the end that the Senate amendment be, and the same hereby is, disagreed to and a conference is requested with the Senate upon the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Parliamentarian's Note: H.R. 7927, the Postal Rate and Postal Pay Act of 1962, was within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service.

16. House Rules and Manual §907 (1995). The provision providing for forty minutes of debate on a motion to suspend the rules was formerly contained in clause 3. Former clause 2 of Rule XXVII, requiring certain motions to suspend the rules to be seconded by a majority of tellers if demand was made, was repealed by H. tion to the motion; ordinarily, the ranking minority member of the reporting committee controls the 20 minutes of debate unless he is challenged at the time the allocation is made and does not qualify as being opposed to the motion.

During consideration of the Equal Access Act (H.R. 5345) in the House on May 15, 1984,⁽¹⁷⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [CARL D.] PERKINS [of Kentucky]: Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 5345) to provide that no Federal educational funds may be obligated or expended to any State or local educational agency which discriminates against any meetings of students in public secondary schools who wish to meet voluntarily for religious purposes.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 5345

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That this Act may be cited as the "Equal Access Act". . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁸⁾ . . . The gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. Perkins) will be recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. William F. Goodling, ranking minority member of Committee on Education and Labor] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. Perkins).

MR. [HAMILTON] FISH [Jr., of New York]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state it.

MR. FISH: Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to this bill. Do I have a right to the full 20 minutes on our side?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will advise the gentleman from New York that his objection is not timely. The gentleman is too late. The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Goodling) controls the time.

MR. [GARY L.] ACKERMAN [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, does the gentleman from Pennsylvania oppose this bill? . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will state that any gentleman had the opportunity at the appropriate time to make the appropriate challenge. The Chair has ruled that the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Goodling) controls the time and is recognized for 20 minutes.

Unanimous-consent Requests To Dispose of Senate Amendments

§ 26.37 The Speaker, in response to a parliamentary inquiry, indicated that only the chairman of the committee having jurisdiction of the subject matter of a bill, amended by the Senate and on the Speaker's table, would be recognized to ask unanimous consent to take it from the table, disagree to the amendment and ask for a conference.

On Sept. 1, 1960,⁽¹⁹⁾ Mr. Charles A. Halleck, of Indiana, raised a parliamentary inquiry on the disposition of a House bill with a Senate amendment which had been returned to the House and was on the Speaker's table. Mr. Halleck inquired whether it would be in order to submit a unanimous-consent request to take the bill from the table, disagree to the Senate amendment, and send the bill to conference. Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, responded that such a request could only be made by the chairman of the committee with jurisdiction over the bill [Harold D. Cooley, of North Carolina].

§ 26.38 The Speaker may decline to recognize a Member for a unanimous-consent request to take a bill from the Speaker's table and concur in certain Senate amendments, where such a request is made without the authorization of the chairman of the reporting committee.

On July 31, 1969,⁽²⁰⁾ Mr. Hale Boggs, of Louisiana, asked unanimous consent to take the bill H.R. 9951 from the Speaker's table and to concur in the Senate amendments thereto. Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, refused recognition for that purpose:

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will state that at this time the Chair does not recognize the gentleman from Louisiana for that purpose.

The chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means is at present appearing before the Committee on Rules seeking a rule and Members have been told that there would be no further business tonight.

The Chair does not want to enter into an argument with any Member, particularly the distinguished gentleman from Louisiana whom I admire very much. But the Chair has stated that the Chair does not recognize the gentleman for that purpose.

Calendar Wednesday

§ 26.39 A Member managing a bill on Calendar Wednesday must be authorized and directed to call it up by the committee with jurisdiction.

On Feb. 24, 1937,⁽¹⁾ Speaker Pro Tempore William J. Driver, of Arkansas, responded to a parliamentary inquiry during the Calendar Wednesday call of committees:

MR. [EARL C.] MICHENER [of Michigan]: Mr. Speaker, where a bill has been reported favorably by a committee, and the chairman of the committee is authorized to call the bill up on Calendar Wednesday, when the chairman absents himself from the floor, and when other members of the committee are present, is it proper for one of the other members to call up the bill?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will state to the gentleman that under the rules only the chairman or the member designated by the committee is authorized to call up a bill.⁽²⁾

§ 26.40 On Calendar Wednesday, debate on bills considered in the Committee of the Whole is limited to two hours, one hour controlled by the Member in charge of the bill and one hour by the ranking minority member of the committee who is opposed to the bill.

On Apr. 14, 1937,⁽³⁾ Chairman J. Mark Wilcox, of Florida, stated in response to a parliamentary inquiry that debate on a bill (called up under the Calendar Wednesday procedure) in the Committee of the Whole would be limited to two hours, one hour to be controlled by the chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, and one hour to be controlled by the ranking minority committee member opposed to the bill. The Chairman indicated he would recognize in opposition Mr. Pehr G. Holmes, of Massachusetts, who assured the Chairman that he was the most senior minority member of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce who was opposed to the bill.⁽⁴⁾

Veto

§ 26.41 Debate on the question of overriding a Presidential veto is normally controlled by the chairman of the committee which had reported the bill to the House.

On Sept. 7, 1978,⁽⁵⁾ the Speaker announced the unfinished business of the House, as follows:

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁶⁾ The unfinished business is the further consideration of the veto message of the President on the bill H.R. 10929, to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 1979 for procurement of aircraft, missiles, naval vessels, tracked combat vehicles, torpedoes, and other weapons and for research, development, test and evaluation for the Armed Forces, to prescribe the authorized personnel strength for each active duty component and the Selected Reserve of each Reserve component of the Armed Forces and for civilian personnel of the Department of Defense, to authorize the military training student loads, to authorize appropriations for civil defense, and for other purposes.

The question is: Will the House on reconsideration pass the bill, the objections of the President to the contrary notwithstanding?

The gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Price) is recognized for 1 hour.

MR. [MELVIN] PRICE [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may require.

Parliamentarian's Note: Although the Speaker and Majority Leader supported the veto, Chairman Price who opposed the veto was recognized to control the debate, as is the normal practice. For an instance where the Majority Leader was recognized to control the debate on overriding the President's veto of an appropriations bill, see § 26.42, infra.

§ 26.42 While the Speaker normally recognizes the chairman of the committee or subcommittee which reported the bill to control the debate on a veto message on that bill, the Speaker on one occasion recognized the Majority Leader to control debate on the question of overriding the President's veto of an appropriation bill.

On Aug. 16, 1972,⁽⁷⁾ the Speaker brought up for consideration a veto message from the President, as follows:

The Speaker laid before the House the following veto message from the President of the United States:

To the House of Representatives:

Today, I must return without my approval H.R. 15417, the appropriations bill for the Department of Labor, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and certain related agencies. . . .

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁸⁾ The question is, Will the House, on reconsideration, pass the bill, the objections of the President to the contrary notwithstanding?

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Louisiana [the majority leader].

MR. [HALE] BOGGS [of Louisiana]: Mr. Speaker, I shall say only a few words and then move the previous question.

Amendments

§ 26.43 The proponent of an amendment may be recognized to control the time in opposition to a substitute offered therefor, but a member of the committee reporting the bill has priority of recognition to control such time.

On May 4, 1983,⁽⁹⁾ during consideration of House Joint Resolution 13 (nuclear weapons freeze) in the Committee of the Whole, the Chair responded to a parliamentary inquiry regarding priority of recognition for debate:

MR. [NORMAN D.] DICKS [of Washington]: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment as a substitute for the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Dicks as a substitute for the amendment offered by Mr. Levitas: In view of the matter proposed to be inserted, insert the following: "with negotiators proceeding immediately to pursuing reductions." . . .

MR. [ELLIOTT H.] LEVITAS [of Georgia]: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

My parliamentary inquiry is twofold, Mr. Chairman.

The first is that under the rule if I am opposed to the amendment being offered as a substitute for my amendment, can I be recognized in opposition thereto?

My second inquiry is: Is the substitute open for amendment?

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁰⁾ The answer to the second question is the substitute is open for amendment.

9. 129 CONG. REC. 11074, 98th Cong. 1st Sess.
10. Matthew F. McHugh (N.Y.).

It is appropriate under the rules to offer an amendment. In terms of whom the Chair recognizes in opposition, the Chair would be inclined to recognize a member of the committee, if a member of the committee seeks recognition in opposition to the amendment.

If a committee member does not seek recognition for that purpose the Chair would be inclined to recognize the gentleman.

§ 26.44 Where a special rule governing consideration of a bill in Committee of the Whole provides that debate on each amendment be equally divided between the proponent and a Member opposed thereto, the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole will recognize the chairman of the committee managing the bill to control the time in opposition if he states he is opposed, and the Chair cannot at a later time question his qualifications to speak in opposition.

On May 4, 1983,⁽¹¹⁾ the Committee of the Whole had under consideration House Joint Resolution 13, calling for a freeze and reduction in nuclear weapons, pursuant to a special rule agreed to on Mar. 16⁽¹²⁾ and a special rule providing for additional procedures for consideration (including the equal division of debate time) agreed to on May 4.⁽¹³⁾ Mr. Clement J. Zablocki, of Wisconsin, Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, was recognized in opposition to an amendment. Mr. Zablocki discussed the amendment as it had been modified by unanimous consent:

MR. ZABLOCKI: Mr. Chairman, in order that we can continue the debate in proper order, and with an understanding of the amendment, as modified by unanimous consent, I ask that the Clerk re-read the amendment to the amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN: The clerk will report the amendment, as modified.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 5, line 8, immediately before the period, insert “, with such reductions to be achieved within a reasonable period of time as determined by negotiations.”

MR. ZABLOCKI: . . . I must say at the very outset, as the amendment has been offered, I have no problems with the amendment. But I am concerned [that] in the explanation of your amendment you go further and it does cause some concern whether you intend your amendment to be so interpreted.

So, Mr. Chairman, I would hope that in the remaining 13 minutes of my time in opposition, technically in opposition, to the amendment we could have a clarifying dialog with the gentleman from Georgia.

MR. [JAMES A.] COURTER [of New Jersey]: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁴⁾ The gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Zablocki) has the time.

MR. COURTER: Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me for the purpose of making a parliamentary inquiry?

MR. ZABLOCKI: I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey for the purpose of making a parliamentary inquiry.

MR. COURTER: My parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Chairman, is as follows:

It is my understanding that the proponent of the amendment, the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Levitas) is recognized for 15 minutes, and then someone could be recognized if they, in fact, oppose it.

The gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Zablocki) rose initially indicating that he was against the amendment, was recognized for 15 minutes, and during his monolog has indicated that, in fact, he is not opposed to it. Should he be recognized for the balance of his time?

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The Chair cannot question the gentleman's qualifications. The Chair did ask the question if he rose in opposition to the amendment, and the Chairman so stated. Therefore, he controls the time.

Unreported Joint Resolution

§ 26.45 Where an unreported joint resolution was being considered under a special “modified closed” rule in Committee of the Whole permitting no general debate and the consideration of only two amendments in the nature of a substitute with debate thereon divided between a proponent and an opponent, the proponents (or the designee of a proponent) of the amendments were permitted to open and close debate pursuant to clause 6 of Rule XIV, since there was no “manager” of the joint resolution.

The following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole on Apr. 24, 1985,⁽¹⁵⁾ during consideration of House Joint Resolution 247 (to promote U.S. assistance in Central America):

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁶⁾ No amendments are in order except the following amendments, which shall be considered as having been read, shall be considered only in the following order, and shall not be subject to amendment: First, the amendment in the nature of a substitute printed in the Congressional Record of April 22, 1985, by, and if offered by, Representative Hamilton of Indiana; and said amendment shall be debatable for not to exceed 2 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by Representative Hamilton and a member opposed thereto; and second, the amendment in the nature of a substitute printed in the Congressional Record of April 22, 1985, by, and if offered by, Representative Michel or his designee, and said amendment shall be debatable for not to exceed 2 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by Representative Michel or his designee and a Member opposed thereto. . . .

MR. [ROBERT H.] MICHEL [of Illinois]: Mr. Chairman, pursuant to the rule, I offer an amendment in the nature of a substitute. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: Pursuant to House Resolution 136, the amendment is considered as having been read.

The gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel) will be recognized for 1 hour, and a Member opposed will be recognized for 1 hour. . . .

MR. MICHEL: Mr. Chairman, I should like to designate the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Broomfield) to make the allocation of time on our side of the aisle.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Broomfield) is designated to control the time for the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel). . . .

The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Broomfield) has 7 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Barnes) has 6¼ minutes remaining.

MR. [MICHAEL D.] BARNES [of Maryland]: Mr. Chairman, we have three very brief speakers.

MR. [WILLIAM S.] BROOMFIELD [of Michigan]: If the gentleman would go ahead with those, we will wind up with one, our final speaker, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel). . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: The time of the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Barnes) has expired. . . .

MR. BROOMFIELD: Mr. Chairman, I would like at this time now to yield the balance of our time to the minority leader, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel).

Parliamentarian's Note: Ordinarily in Committee of the Whole under the five-minute rule notwithstanding clause 6 of Rule XIV (which permits the proposer of a proposition to close debate), the manager of the bill under the precedents is given the right to close debate on an amendment. But in the above instance, there was no manager of the bill under the special rule.

§ 26.46 Where a special rule adopted by the House limits debate on an amendment to be controlled by the proponent and an opponent, and prohibits amendments thereto, the Chair may in his discretion recognize the manager of the bill if opposed and there is no requirement for recognition of the minority party.

The following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole on June 18, 1986,⁽¹⁷⁾ during consideration of H.R. 4868 (Anti-Apartheid Act of 1986):

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁸⁾ Under the rule, the gentleman from California (Mr.

Dellums) will be recognized for 30 minutes, and a Member opposed to the amendment will be recognized for 30 minutes.

Will those gentlemen who are opposed to the Dellums amendment kindly stand so the Chair can designate?

Is the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Bonker) opposed to the amendment?

MR. [DON] BONKER [of Washington]: I advise the Chair that I oppose the amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN: Then the Chair will recognize the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Bonker) for 30 minutes in opposition to the Dellums amendment.

Does the gentleman from Washington wish to yield any of his time or share any of his time?

MR. BONKER: Mr. Chairman, I would yield half the allotted time, 15 minutes, to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Siljander).

THE CHAIRMAN: The time in opposition will be equally divided between the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Bonker) and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Siljander). . . .

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Chairman, do I understand that the process that has just taken place has given the minority side one-quarter of the time.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair would counsel the gentleman from Pennsylvania in regard to his inquiry that the rule provides that a Member will be recognized in opposition. The gentleman from Washington (Mr. Bonker) was recognized in opposition, and he shared his time with your side.

MR. WALKER: In other words, the minority, though, was not recognized for the purposes of opposition. Is that correct?

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair would state that the procedures of the House are governed by its rules, but more importantly in this instance, by the rule adopted by the House as reported from the Committee.

Motions To Instruct

§ 26.47 Under Rule XXVIII, clause 1(b), debate on any motion to instruct conferees is equally divided between majority and minority parties or among them and an opponent; but where the previous question is rejected on a motion to instruct, a separate hour of debate on any amendment to the motion is fully controlled by the proponent of the amendment under the hour rule (Rule XIV, clause 2), as the manager of the original motion loses the floor.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Oct. 3, 1989,⁽¹⁹⁾ during consideration of H.R. 3026 (District of Columbia appropriations for fiscal year 1990):

MR. [JULIAN C.] DIXON [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's

19. 135 CONG. REC. 22859, 22862, 22863, 101st Cong. 1st Sess.

table the bill (H.R. 3026) making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of said District for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments thereto, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽²⁰⁾ Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

MR. [BILL] GREEN [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to instruct.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Green moves that the managers on the part of the House, at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill H.R. 3026, be instructed to agree to the amendment of the Senate numbered 3.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from New York [Mr. Green] is recognized for 30 minutes in support his motion. . . .

MR. GREEN: Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion to instruct. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The question is on ordering the previous question.

[The previous question was rejected.]

MR. DIXON: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

I understand now that the gentleman from California [Mr. Danne-meyer] intends to offer an amendment to the motion offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Green].

20. William J. Hughes (N.J.).

My question is: Under the offering will I receive part of the time?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would state to the gentleman from California [Mr. Dixon] that 1 hour would be allotted to the gentleman from California [Mr. Danne-meyer]. He would have to yield time to the gentleman from California [Mr. Dixon]. . . .

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Danne-meyer to the motion to instruct: At the end of the pending motion, strike the period, insert a semicolon, and add the following language: “; Pro-vided further that the conferees be instructed to agree to the provisions contained in Senate amendment numbered 22.”

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from California [Mr. Danne-meyer] is recognized for 1 hour.

MR. [WILLIAM E.] DANNEMEYER [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I yield one-half of the time to the gentleman from California [Mr. Dixon], for purposes of debate only.

Parliamentarian's Note: The control of debate in the above instance is to be distinguished from debate on motions in the House to dispose of amendments in disagreement. In the latter case, although the manager of the original motion might lose the floor upon defeat of his motion, debate on a subsequent motion is nevertheless divided under Rule XXVIII, clause 2(b). It is only debate on amendments to such motions, when pending, that is not divided.

Time Divided Three Ways

§ 26.48 Pursuant to clause 2(b) of Rule XXVIII, debate on a motion to dispose of an amendment reported from conference in disagreement is equally divided between the majority and minority parties, unless the minority Member favors the motion, in which event one third of the time is allocated to a Member opposed.

The following exchange occurred in the House on Aug. 1, 1985,⁽¹⁾ during consideration of the conference report on Senate Concurrent Resolution 32 (the first concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 1986):

THE SPEAKER:⁽²⁾ Under the rules, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Gray) will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Latta) will be recognized for 30 minutes.

MR. [BARNEY] FRANK [of Massachusetts]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. FRANK: Mr. Speaker, is the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Latta) opposed to the bill?

MR. [DELBERT L.] LATTA [of Ohio]: Mr. Speaker, I am not opposed to the bill.

1. 131 CONG. REC. 22638, 99th Cong. 1st Sess.
2. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

MR. FRANK: Mr. Speaker, I believe then that under rule XXVIII, a Member in opposition to the bill is entitled to 20 minutes.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman is correct. Under the rule, the gentleman is entitled to one-third of the time.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Gray) will be recognized for 20 minutes, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Latta) will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Frank) will be recognized for 20 minutes.

§ 26.49 Pursuant to clause 2(a) of Rule XXVIII, where the floor managers for the majority and minority parties on a conference report are both supporters thereof, a Member opposed may be recognized for one third of the debate time and it is within the discretion of the Chair as to which Member is recognized in opposition; such recognition does not depend upon party affiliation, and the time in opposition may be divided by unanimous consent or yielded by the Member recognized.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Dec. 11, 1985,⁽³⁾ during consideration of the conference report on House

3. 131 CONG. REC. 36069, 99th Cong. 1st Sess.

Joint Resolution 372 (the public debt limit increase):

MR. [DAN] ROSTENKOWSKI [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the order of the House of Tuesday, December 10, 1985, I call up the conference report on the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 372), increasing the statutory limit on the public debt.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁴⁾ Pursuant to the order of the House of Tuesday, December 10, 1985, the conference report is considered as having been read. . . .

The gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Rostenkowski) will be recognized for 30 minutes and the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. Duncan) will be recognized for 30 minutes.

MR. [DAVID R.] OBEY [of Wisconsin]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. OBEY: Mr. Speaker, did I hear the Speaker say that the time would be divided between the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Rostenkowski) and the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. Duncan)?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman heard correctly.

MR. OBEY: Mr. Speaker, [is the gentleman] from Tennessee opposed to the legislation?

MR. [JOHN J.] DUNCAN [of Tennessee]: Mr. Speaker, I am not opposed to the legislation.

4. Lawrence J. Smith (Fla.).

MR. OBEY: Mr. Speaker, that being the case, I ask under rule XXVIII, since the rules provide that those in opposition be entitled to 20 minutes, I would ask that I be assigned that 20-minute time block.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair advises that the gentleman is correct, and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Rostenkowski) will be recognized for 20 minutes, the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. Duncan) will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Obey) will be recognized for 20 minutes.

MR. DUNCAN: I have a parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state his inquiry.

MR. DUNCAN: Mr. Speaker, did I understand there is to be additional time assigned to those who oppose the conference report? If I understand correctly, we have some people on our side.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Obey) is opposed, and he will control the 20 minutes time.

MR. DUNCAN: Mr. Speaker, Mr. Crane is also opposed. We would expect equal time, Mr. Speaker. Mr. Crane is on the committee, and he would expect equal time.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would advise that the gentleman from Wisconsin is also on the conference committee.

MR. DUNCAN: No, Mr. Speaker, he is not on the Committee on Ways and Means. Mr. Crane is.

We would expect, and I am for the proposal, and he is in opposition.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Under the rule, 60 minutes is allotted: 20 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois, 20 minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. Duncan), and 20 minutes to one Member opposed, in this case the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Obey).

MR. [PHILIP M.] CRANE [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state it.

MR. CRANE: Mr. Speaker, I am on the committee; I rose, registered my objection, and I do not know whether that was heard in the din of the crowd here tonight, but I would at least ask the Speaker to permit a division of that time. I am opposed to the bill.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will advise that the gentleman from Wisconsin was on his feet and was recognized, in the Chair's discretion and was granted the 20 minutes of the 60.

MR. DUNCAN: Mr. Speaker, under the rules of the House, I think that the gentleman would be entitled to half of that; otherwise, I think everyone wants to be fair; that I would ask unanimous consent that he be granted that.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would advise that the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Obey) can yield whatever time that he may desire.

MR. DUNCAN: Would Mr. Obey yield half of that to our side?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Tennessee poses a question to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

The gentleman from Wisconsin has the 20 minutes; the gentleman from Tennessee wishes to know if he would grant half of that to the minority.

MR. OBEY: Mr. Speaker, I do not think the rule requires that those who are opposed grant the time to the opposition party. I will certainly make certain that people are recognized, but I would appreciate it if they could come to me and let me know that they want to speak.

MR. DUNCAN: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that Mr. Crane have the same amount of time that the majority has and that he may control that time.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

MR. OBEY: I object, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Objection is heard.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Rostenkowski).

§ 26.50 Pursuant to clause 2(a) of Rule XXVIII, it is within the discretion of the Speaker as to which Member is recognized to control 20 minutes of debate in opposition to a conference report (where the minority manager is not opposed), and such recognition does not depend on party affiliation.

On Dec. 16, 1985,⁽⁵⁾ after the conference report on House Joint Resolution 456 (making further continuing appropriations for fiscal 1986) was called up in the House, the Speaker Pro Tempore allocated time for debate in support and in opposition, as indicated below:

MR. [JAMIE L.] WHITTEN [of Mississippi]: Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the order of the House of today, I call up the conference report on the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 456) making further continuing appropriations for the fiscal year 1986, and for other purposes, and ask for its immediate consideration. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁶⁾ This conference report is being considered pursuant to the unanimous consent request granted earlier today, which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Whitten asked unanimous consent that it shall be in order, any rule of the House to the contrary notwithstanding, at any time on Monday, December 16, or any day thereafter, to consider the conference report and amendments in disagreement and motions to dispose of said amendments on House Joint Resolution 456 subject to the availability of said conference report and motions to dispose of amendments in disagreement for at least 1 hour, that all points of order be waived against the conference report and amendments in disagreement and motions to dispose of said amendments, and that said conference report and amendments in disagreement be considered as having been read when called up for consideration. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. Whitten) will be recognized for 30 minutes and the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Conte) will be recognized for 30 minutes.

6. Dale E. Kildee (Mich.).

MR. [BARNEY] FRANK [of Massachusetts]: Mr. Speaker, I ask for 20 minutes recognition in opposition because the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Conte) is for the bill. . . .

Mr. Speaker, since the gentleman from Massachusetts is for the bill, under the rule I ask for the 20 minutes to be allotted to a Member in opposition, when both the chairman and the ranking minority Member are in support of the bill.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman has that right.

The time will be divided in this fashion: The gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. Whitten) will be recognized for 20 minutes; the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Conte) will be recognized for 20 minutes; and the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Frank) will be recognized for 20 minutes.

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state it.

MR. WALKER: Mr. Speaker, the minority has just been effectively frozen out of controlling any of the time, when I was seeking recognition to take the 20 minutes. The Chair has denied, then, the minority the opportunity to control our portion of the time.

Can the Chair explain why Members on this side were not recognized? I, too, am opposed to the bill and should have been entitled to the 20 minutes.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will state that recognition of one Member who is opposed is in the Speaker's discretion, and the Speaker tries always to be fair.

The gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Frank) may yield time as he wishes. . . .

The gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Conte), the minority side, will be recognized for 20 minutes; the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Frank), who is opposed, will be recognized for 20 minutes; and the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. Whitten) will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The procedure under which we are proceeding was agreed upon earlier today, and the Chair will be guided by the will of the House, which was stated earlier today.

§ 26.51 Recognition of one Member to control twenty minutes of debate in opposition to a conference report under Rule XXVIII, clause 2(a), does not depend upon party affiliation and is within the discretion of the Chair, and the time in opposition may be divided by unanimous consent or yielded by the Member recognized.

On Dec. 11, 1985,⁽⁷⁾ it was demonstrated that, where the floor managers for the majority and minority parties on a conference report are both supporters thereof, a Member opposed may be recognized for one third of the debate time, and it is within the discretion of the Chair as to which Member is recognized in opposition. The proceedings were as follows:

MR. [DAN] ROSTENKOWSKI [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the order of the House of Tuesday, December 10, 1985, I call up the conference report on the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 372), increasing the statutory limit on the public debt.

The Clerk read the title of the joint resolution.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁸⁾ Pursuant to the order of the House of Tuesday, December 10, 1985, the conference report is considered as having been read. . . .

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Rostenkowski] will be recognized for 30 minutes and the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Duncan] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

MR. [DAVID R.] OBEY [of Wisconsin]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

Mr. Speaker, is the gentleman from Tennessee opposed to the legislation?

MR. [JOHN J.] DUNCAN [of Tennessee]: Mr. Speaker, I am not opposed to the legislation.

MR. OBEY: Mr. Speaker, that being the case, I ask under rule XXVIII, since the rules provide that those in opposition be entitled to 20 minutes, I would ask that I be assigned that 20-minute time block.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair advises that the gentleman is correct, and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Rostenkowski] will be recognized for 20 minutes, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Duncan] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Obey] will be recognized for 20 minutes. . . .

MR. DUNCAN: Mr. Speaker, did I understand there is to be additional time assigned to those who oppose the conference report? If I understand correctly, we have some people on our side.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Obey] is opposed, and he will control the 20 minutes time.

MR. DUNCAN: Mr. Speaker, Mr. Crane is also opposed. We would expect equal time, Mr. Speaker. Mr. Crane is on the [Committee on Ways and Means] and he would expect equal time. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Under the rule, 60 minutes is allotted: 20 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois, 20 minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Duncan], and 20 minutes to one Member opposed, in this case the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Obey]. . . .

MR. [PHILIP M.] CRANE [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, I am on the committee . . . I would at least ask the Speaker to permit a division of that time. I am opposed to the bill.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will advise that the gentleman from Wisconsin was on his feet and was recognized, in the Chair's discretion and was granted the 20 minutes of the 60.

MR. DUNCAN: Mr. Speaker, under the rules of the House, I think that the gentleman would be entitled to half of that; otherwise, I think everyone wants to be fair; that I would ask unanimous consent that he be granted that.

8. Lawrence J. Smith (Fla.).

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would advise that the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Obey] can yield whatever time that he may desire.

MR. DUNCAN: Would Mr. Obey yield half of that to our side?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: . . . The gentleman from Wisconsin has the 20 minutes; the gentleman from Tennessee wishes to know if he would grant half of that to the minority.

MR. OBEY: Mr. Speaker, I do not think the rule requires that those who are opposed grant the time to the opposition party. I will certainly make certain that people are recognized, but I would appreciate it if they could come to me and let me know that they want to speak.

MR. DUNCAN: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that Mr. Crane have the same amount of time that the majority has and that he may control that time.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

MR. OBEY: I object, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Objection is heard.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Rostenkowski].

§ 26.52 Pursuant to Rule XXVIII, clause 2(a), it is within the discretion of the Speaker as to which Member is recognized to control 20 minutes of debate in opposition to a conference report (where the minority manager is not opposed to the report), and such recognition does not depend on party affiliation.

On Dec. 16, 1985,⁽⁹⁾ after the conference report on House Joint Resolution 456 (continuing appropriations for fiscal year 1986) was called up for consideration in the House, the Chair exercised his discretion in announcing the Members to be recognized to control debate:

MR. [JAMIE] L. WHITTEN [of Mississippi]: Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the order of the House of today, I call up the conference report on the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 456) making further continuing appropriations for the fiscal year 1986, and for other purposes, and ask for its immediate consideration. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁰⁾ The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Whitten] will be recognized for 30 minutes and the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Conte] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

MR. [BARNEY] FRANK [of Massachusetts]: Mr. Speaker, is the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Conte] opposed to the bill?

MR. [SILVIO O.] CONTE [of Massachusetts]: No. I signed the conference report.

MR. FRANK: Mr. Speaker, I ask for 20 minutes recognition in opposition because the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Conte] is for the bill. . . .

9. 131 CONG. REC. 26716, 36717, 99th Cong. 1st Sess.

10. Dale E. Kildee (Mich.).

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman has that right.

The time will be divided in this fashion: The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Whitten] will be recognized for 20 minutes; the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Conte] will be recognized for 20 minutes; and the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Frank] will be recognized for 20 minutes. . . .

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: . . . Can the Chair explain why Members on this side were not recognized? I, too, am opposed to the bill and should have been entitled to the 20 minutes.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will state that recognition of one Member who is opposed is in the Speaker's discretion, and the Speaker tries always to be fair.

The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Frank] may yield time as he wishes.

§ 26.53 Pursuant to Rule XXVIII, clause 2(a), a Member who is opposed to a conference report may obtain one-third of the debate thereon if both the majority and minority managers oppose the conference report, but not if the minority manager states he or she is opposed to the conference report.

On Oct. 15, 1986,⁽¹¹⁾ preceding consideration of the conference report on S. 2638 (Department of Defense authorization for fiscal 1987) in the House, the Chair announced the division of time for debate thereon:

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹²⁾ Pursuant to House Resolution 591, the conference report is considered as having been read. . . .

MRS. [PATRICIA] SCHROEDER [of Colorado]: Mr. Speaker, I rise to make a point of order.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentlewoman from Colorado will state her point of order.

MRS. SCHROEDER: Mr. Speaker, under the rule my understanding is that if neither of the gentlemen are opposed to the bill, and as I am opposed to the bill, I am entitled to one-third of the time.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to demand 20 minutes of the time.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is the gentleman from Alabama opposed to the bill?

MR. [WILLIAM L.] DICKINSON [of Alabama]: Mr. Speaker, I reluctantly oppose it. I do oppose it.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman opposes the bill; therefore the gentleman is entitled to the time.

The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Aspin] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. Dickinson] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

report pursuant to Rule XXVIII, clause 2(a), does not depend on party affiliation and is within the discretion of the Speaker, the Speaker will give priority in recognition to a conferee seeking to control that time.

On Dec. 21, 1987,⁽¹³⁾ prior to the filing of the conference report on House Joint Resolution 395 (making continuing appropriations) in the House, the Speaker responded to a parliamentary inquiry regarding division of debate time on the report:

MR. [BILL] FRENZEL [of Minnesota]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

[D]oes the rule provide that 20 minutes will be allotted to an opponent to the conference report?

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁴⁾ If someone is opposed, and the managers are not opposed, then that member could be entitled to 20 minutes.

MR. FRENZEL: Mr. Speaker, I am opposed and I make such a demand. . . .

MR. [MIKE] LOWRY of Washington: On that right under the House rules for a third of the time, a member of the committee, the gentleman from New York [Mr. Mrazek] was going to request the opposition time, [while] the distinguished gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Frenzel] is not a member of the committee. We would hope that the gentleman from New York [Mr. Mrazek], a member of the committee, would be awarded under the rules of the House that right for a third of the time. . . .

After the conference report was called up for consideration, the following exchange occurred:

MR. FRENZEL: Mr. Speaker, I renew my previous request.

MR. [ROBERT J.] MRAZEK [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, I am in opposition to the resolution, and I would also request 20 minutes of time in opposition to the resolution. . . .

THE SPEAKER: Then the two gentlemen seeking recognition, the gentleman from New York [Mr. Mrazek] and the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Frenzel], both are opposed to the conference report?

MR. MRAZEK: That is correct.

MR. FRENZEL: I am opposed.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from New York [Mr. Mrazek] as a conferee on the conference report would have priority and the Chair will declare that the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Whitten] will be recognized for 20 minutes, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Conte] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from New York [Mr. Mrazek] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

§ 26.55 The Chair will not allocate control of debate time on a conference report until the report has been, first, filed and called up for consideration.

Prior to the filing of the conference report on House Joint Res-

MR. [BILL] FRENZEL [of Minnesota]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

[D]oes the rule provide that 20 minutes will be allotted to an opponent to the conference report?

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁶⁾ If someone is opposed, and the managers are not opposed, then that Member could be entitled to 20 minutes.

MR. FRENZEL: Mr. Speaker, I am opposed and I make such a demand.

THE SPEAKER: The conference report, the Chair would advise the gentleman, has not yet been filed. If the gentleman will withhold his request, the conference report will be filed and called up first and the gentleman's rights will be protected.

§ 26.56 Control of debate time on a conference report can be re-allocated by unanimous consent.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Dec. 21, 1987,⁽¹⁷⁾ subsequent to the filing of the conference report on House Joint Resolution 395 (continuing appropriations for fiscal year 1988):

Mr. [Jamie L.] Whitten [of Mississippi] submitted the . . . conference report on the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 395) making further continuing appropriations for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1988, and for other purposes. . . .

MR. [BILL] FRENZEL [of Minnesota]: Mr. Speaker, I renew my previous request [for 20 minutes of time].

MR. [ROBERT J.] MRAZEK [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, I am in opposition to the resolution, and I would also request 20 minutes of time in opposition to the resolution. . . .

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁸⁾ The gentleman from New York [Mr. Mrazek] as a conferee on the conference report would have priority and the Chair will declare that the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Whitten] will be recognized for 20 minutes, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Conte] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from New York [Mr. Mrazek] will be recognized for 20 minutes. . . .

MR. [WILLIAM E.] DANNEMEYER [of California]: Mr. Speaker, there are two sides, one for, and one against. Under the ruling of the Chair, those who are for it have 30 minutes and those opposed have 20 minutes.

My question is, Is that fair?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will respond that this is what the rule provides. . . .

There will be 20 minutes on the part of the majority, 20 minutes on the part of the minority, and 20 minutes on the part of the designated individual Member who has qualified on the ground that he opposes the conference report.

MR. DANNEMEYER: Mr. Speaker, may I make a unanimous-consent request?

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman may state it.

MR. DANNEMEYER: Mr. Speaker, I make a unanimous-consent request that the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Whitten] be given 15 minutes, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Conte] be given 15 minutes, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Frenzel] be given 15 minutes, and the gentleman from New York [Mr. Mrazek] be given 15 minutes.

THE SPEAKER: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

MR. [SAM M.] GIBBONS [of Florida]: I object, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: Objection is heard.

§ 26.57 Where debate on a conference report is controlled by three Members pursuant to Rule XXVIII, clause 2(a), the right to close debate belongs to the majority manager calling up the conference report, preceded by the minority manager; thus, under Rule XXVIII, clause 2, the right to close debate is accorded in the reverse order of recognition for opening that debate, and does not depend upon the amount of time reserved by any of those Members for their concluding remarks.

On Aug. 4, 1989,⁽¹⁹⁾ during consideration of the conference report on H.R. 1278 (Financial Institutions Reform Act of 1989) in the House, the Speaker announced the remaining time for debate on the report and also stated the order of recognition to close debate:

THE SPEAKER:⁽²⁰⁾ The gentleman from Texas [Mr. Gonzalez] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Wylie] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

MR. [DAN] ROSTENKOWSKI [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the report and seek time, pursuant to House rule XXVIII.

MR. [CHALMERS P.] WYLIE [of Ohio]: Mr. Speaker, I am not opposed to the conference report.

MR. [HENRY B.] GONZALEZ [of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, I do not oppose the conference report.

THE SPEAKER: Neither manager is opposed to the conference report. Therefore, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Gonzalez] will be recognized for 20 minutes, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Wylie] will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Rostenkowski] will be recognized for 20 minutes. . . .

The gentleman from Texas [Mr. Gonzalez] has 10½ minutes remaining, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Wylie] has 9½ minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Rostenkowski] has 13 minutes remaining.

20. Thomas S. Foley (Wash.).

MR. ROSTENKOWSKI: Mr. Speaker, if my arithmetic is correct, the opponents have as much time as we do.

I reserve the balance of my time.

THE SPEAKER: The order in which the Members may close will be the gentleman from Illinois first, the gentleman from Ohio second, and the gentleman from Texas last. . . .

The Chair will inform the Members and the managers that each has the right to reserve one speech each for the closing.

The gentleman from Texas, if he wishes, can reserve all that time at this time and make one speech of 10½ minutes, or he can reserve any part of it until the end of the debate.

If the gentleman from Ohio wishes to do that, he may reserve all of his time to immediately precede the gentleman from Texas. At that point, the gentleman from Illinois would have to expend all of his time in one statement.

The right of the gentleman from Texas will be preserved to end the debate with any amount of time the gentleman wishes.

§ 26.58 Where pursuant to Rule XXVIII, clause 2(b), time for debate on a motion to dispose of an amendment in disagreement is divided equally among the majority and minority managers (both of whom favor its adoption) and a Member opposed, the manager of the motion may not move the previous question until the other Members have consumed or yielded back all of their time.

On Oct. 3, 1989,⁽¹⁾ the House had under consideration a motion to dispose of an amendment in disagreement. Time for debate on the motion was divided equally among the majority and minority managers, and a Member opposed.

MR. [SIDNEY R.] YATES [of Illinois]: Madam Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Yates moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 153 and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed by said amendment, insert the following: “: Provided, That—

A. None of the funds authorized to be appropriated for the National Endowment for the Arts or the National Endowment for the Humanities may be used to promote . . . materials which in the judgment of the National Endowment for the Arts or the National Endowment for the Humanities may be considered obscene”

MR. [DANA] ROHRABACHER [of California]: Madam Speaker, I would ask to be recognized in opposition to the motion for 20 minutes.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽²⁾ The Chair will inquire is the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Regula] opposed to the motion?

MR. [RALPH] REGULA [of Ohio]: No, I am not, Madam Speaker.

2. Patricia Schroeder (Colo.).

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Then the gentleman from California [Mr. Rohrabacher], who is opposed to the motion, would be entitled to 20 minutes.

The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Regula], then, would have 20 minutes, the gentleman from California [Mr. Rohrabacher] would have 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Yates] would have 20 minutes on the motion offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Yates]. . . .

MR. YATES: . . . Madam Speaker, I move the previous question.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Illinois moves the previous question on this motion. Without objection, the previous question is ordered.

All those in favor of the gentleman's motion will say "aye," those opposed say "no." The gentleman's amendment is hereby agreed to.

The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement. . . .

MR. ROHRABACHER: Madam Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

Did I not have 1 minute of debate left?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman's motion for the previous question was not in order unless the gentleman from California yielded back his time.

[The Chair vacated the order for the previous question and the adoption of the motion.]

§ 26.59 Pursuant to Rule XXVIII, clause 2, a Member opposed to a conference report may control one-third of the debate time thereon where both the majority and minority party managers are in favor of the conference report, but a Member opposed may control one-half the time only by unanimous consent.

On Sept. 25, 1986,⁽³⁾ during consideration of the conference report on H.R. 3838 (the Tax Reform Act of 1986), the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [DAN] ROSTENKOWSKI [of Illinois]: Madam Speaker, pursuant to the order of the House of September 9, 1986, I call up the conference report on the bill (H.R. 3838), to reform the Internal Revenue laws of the United States. . . .

MR. [WILLIAM R.] ARCHER [Jr., of Texas]: Madam Speaker, under clause 2, rule XXVIII, I demand one-third of the debate time as the leader of the opposition to the bill.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁴⁾ The gentleman from Texas [Mr. Archer] will be recognized for 1 hour, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Duncan] will be recognized for 1 hour and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Rostenkowski] will be recognized for 1 hour.

MR. ARCHER: Madam Speaker, I have a unanimous-consent request. Inasmuch as I understand all of the time that is going to be used by both the majority and minority, their 2 hours, will be assigned only to those Members who are for the bill, and inasmuch as it is a far simpler task timewise to make the arguments for the bill than to make the arguments against the bill, I ask unanimous consent that the opposition be granted an additional hour so as to equalize the time for and against the bill, in the name of fairness.

MR. [GERALD D.] KLECZKA [of Wisconsin]: Madam Speaker, I object.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Objection is heard.

MR. ARCHER: Madam Speaker, I have another unanimous-consent request. That request is that if the time allotted today on the agenda is not extended, both the majority and the minority code 15 minutes to the opposition of their time so that once again the time would be equalized within the 3-hour period.

MR. KLECZKA: Madam Speaker, I object.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Objection is heard.

§ 26.60 Where control of time for debate on a motion to dispose of disagreement on a Senate amendment is allotted among more than two Members, the Chair recognizes each to close his time in the reverse order of the original allocation.

See the proceedings of Nov. 21, 1989,⁽⁵⁾ relating to a motion to dispose of disagreement on a Senate amendment to the Medicare § 26.61 While a Member by offering a preferential motion to dispose of a Senate amendment in disagreement cannot thereby gain separate debate time thereon, he may by rising in opposition to the original motion control one-third of the debate thereon under Rule XXVIII, clause 2(b), where both the majority and minority party floor managers are in favor of the original motion.

During consideration of the conference report on House Joint Resolution 738 (continuing appropriations) in the House on Oct. 15, 1986,⁽⁶⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁷⁾ The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Senate amendment No. 60: Page 61, line 19, strike the following language:

under section 205(e) of the Federal Alcohol Administration Act, unless each application is accompanied by appropriate documentation.

MR. [JAMIE L.] WHITTEN [of Mississippi]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion. The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Whitten moves that the House insist on its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 60.

MR. [MIKE] LOWRY of Washington: Mr. Speaker, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Lowry of Washington moves that the House recede from its disagreement to Senate amendment No. 60 and concur therein.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Whitten] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Regula] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

MR. LOWRY of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. LOWRY of Washington: Mr. Speaker, my point of parliamentary inquiry would be on the division of time, on which point I would request the customary one-third if both managers of the bill are of the opposite position from mine.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Regula] in favor of the motion?

MR. [RALPH] REGULA [of Ohio]: Yes, I am, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Washington [Mr.

Lowry] qualifies and is entitled to 20 minutes.

The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Whitten] will be recognized for 20 minutes; the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Regula] will be recognized for 20 minutes; and the gentleman from Washington [Mr. Lowry] will be recognized for 20 minutes.

§ 26.62 Pursuant to Rule XXVIII, clause 2, recognition to control one-third of debate time in opposition to a conference report where both the majority and minority managers are in favor of the report does not depend upon party affiliation, but is accorded to the senior member of the reporting committee in opposition regardless of party affiliation.

On Oct. 15, 1986,⁽⁸⁾ after the conference report on S. 1200 (Immigration Reform and Control Act) was called up for consideration in the House, the following exchange occurred regarding division of the time for debate:

MR. [PETER W.] RODINO [Jr., of New Jersey]: Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the Senate bill (S. 1200) to amend the Immigration and Nationality Act to effectively control unauthorized immigration to the United States and for other purposes. . . .

8. 132 CONG. REC. 31630, 31631, 99th Cong. 2d Sess.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁹⁾ The gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Rodino] will be recognized for 30 minutes, the gentleman from California [Mr. Lungren] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

MR. [DON] EDWARDS of California: Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the bill.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is the gentleman from California [Mr. Edwards] opposed to the conference report?

MR. EDWARDS of California: I am opposed to the conference report, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Rodino] opposed to the conference report?

MR. RODINO: No, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Under the rules, the gentleman from California [Mr. Edwards], the senior member of the originally reporting committee, is entitled to 20 minutes.

MR. [F. JAMES] SENSENBRENNER [Jr., of Wisconsin]: Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order. I believe that the member of the minority would have preference to control the 20 minutes in opposition to the conference report under the precedents of the House and rule XXVIII, clause 2(b).

I am opposed to the conference report, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would state to the distinguished gentleman from Wisconsin under a ruling this year recognition goes to the opposition on the issue but not necessarily the minority party in the House; and under the rules the Chair is constrained to recognize the senior member of the Judiciary Committee.

§ 27. Designation of Managers

The Members designated to control debate on a bill are normally chosen (formally or informally) by the committee reporting it.⁽¹⁰⁾ However, managers are sometimes designated by special rule from the Committee on Rules,⁽¹¹⁾ or by the Chair if the proposition is not being considered pursuant to special rule, although the Chair seeks assurance that the matter has been cleared with the committee.⁽¹²⁾ If the special rule does not specifically designate the Members in control, or if the designated managers are absent and have not designated other Members to manage the measure, the Chair may in his discretion recognize a committee member to control debate.⁽¹³⁾ Management of a bill may also be fixed by unanimous consent.⁽¹⁴⁾

Designation of Member by Committee

§ 27.1 Where the chairman or member of a committee has been designated and authorized by the committee to call up a bill, no other Member may take such action.

On Feb. 24, 1937,⁽¹⁶⁾ Speaker Pro Tempore William J. Driver, of Arkansas, answered a parliamentary inquiry preceding the call of committees on Calendar Wednesday:

MR. [EARL C.] MICHENER [of Michigan]: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state it.

MR. MICHENER: Mr. Speaker, where a bill has been reported favorably by a committee, and the chairman of the committee is authorized to call the bill up on Calendar Wednesday, when the chairman absents himself from the floor, and when other members of the committee are present, is it proper for one of the other members to call up the bill?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will state to the gentleman that under the rules only the chairman or the member designated by the Committee is authorized to call up a bill.⁽¹⁷⁾

§ 27.2 Only a member of the Committee on Rules designated by it to call up a special rule from the committee may be recognized for that purpose, unless the rule has been on the calendar for seven legislative days without action.

On June 6, 1940,⁽¹⁸⁾ Mr. Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, sought recognition to call up for consideration a resolution from the Committee on Rules providing for the consideration of a bill. Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, inquired whether Mr. Fish had been authorized to call up the resolution and Mr. Fish stated he had not. He asserted that calling up such a resolution was "the privilege of any member of the Rules Committee." The Speaker declined to recognize Mr. Fish for that purpose.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair cannot recognize the gentleman from New York to call up the resolution unless the record shows he was authorized to do so by the Rules Committee. The Chair would be authorized to recognize the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Colmer] to call up the rule in the event the resolution offered by the gentleman from New York, which was the unfinished business, is not called up.

MR. FISH: Will the Chair permit me to read this rule?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair would be glad to hear the gentleman.

MR. FISH: Rule XI reads as follows:

It shall always be in order to call up for consideration a report from the Committee on Rules (except it shall not be called up for consideration on the same day it is presented to the House, unless so determined by a vote of not less than two-thirds of the Members voting).

I submit, according to that rule and the reading of that rule, Mr. Speaker, that any member of the Rules Committee can call up the rule, but it would require the membership of the House to act upon it by a two-thirds vote in order to obtain consideration.

THE SPEAKER: The precedents are all to the effect that only a Member authorized by the Rules Committee can call up a rule, unless the rule has been on the calendar for 7 legislative days without action.

MR. FISH: Of course, there is nothing to that effect in the reading of the rule.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair is relying upon the precedents in such instances.

Designation by Unanimous Consent

§ 27.3 The Committee of the Whole may agree by unanimous consent that debate on an amendment be limited to a certain amount of time, to be divided and controlled by certain majority and minority Members.

On May 26, 1966,⁽¹⁹⁾ the Committee of the Whole agreed to a unanimous-consent request for the limit and control of time on an amendment to H.R. 13712, the Fair Labor Standards Amendments of 1966:

MR. [ADAM C.] POWELL [of New York]: I renew my request so that there will be no misunderstanding. I ask unanimous consent that the debate on this amendment be limited to 60 minutes, 30 minutes on each side. The gentleman now in the well has control of the time on his side. If the unanimous-consent request is approved, the gentleman from Pennsylvania will have control of the time on this side.

Parliamentarian's Note: The agreement proposed by Mr. Powell divided control between the proponent of the amendment and the subcommittee chairman handling the bill.

On May 10, 1966,⁽²⁰⁾ the Committee of the Whole agreed to

19. 112 CONG. REC. 11608, 89th Cong. 2d Sess.

20. Id. at p. 10232.

a unanimous-consent request regarding the time for and control of debate on an amendment:

MR. [CARL] ALBERT [of Oklahoma]: Mr. Chairman, for the purpose of clarification, would it be in order for the gentleman from Tennessee to ask unanimous consent that debate on this amendment be confined to 20 minutes on each side, the 20 minutes on this side to be controlled by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Evins] and the 20 minutes on the Republican side by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Jonas]?

MR. [JOSEPH L.] EVINS: Mr. Chairman, I thank the distinguished majority leader for the suggestion and now make the unanimous-consent request accordingly.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁾ Without objection, it is so ordered.

There was no objection.

MR. EVINS of Tennessee: Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. Cohelan].

§ 27.4 Where all time for debate on an amendment and all amendments thereto is limited and, by unanimous consent, placed in control of the proponent of the amendment and of the chairman of the committee (in opposition), the Chair first recognizes the proponent of the amendment.

On July 9, 1965,⁽²⁾ the unfinished business in the Committee of the Whole was H.R. 6400, the Voting Rights Act of 1965. Chairman Richard Bolling, of Missouri, made the following statement on the order of recognition, the committee having limited and divided, on the prior day, time for debate on a pending amendment:

1. Richard Bolling (Mo.).

2. 111 CONG. REC. 16207, 89th Cong. 1st Sess.

When the Committee rose on yesterday, there was pending the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. McCulloch] as a substitute for the committee amendment.

It was agreed that all time for debate on the so-called McCulloch substitute and all amendments thereto would be limited to 2 hours, such time to be equally divided and controlled by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Celler] and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. McCulloch]. Under the unanimous-consent agreement, the Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. McCulloch] in support of his amendment.

Parliamentarian's Note: The time limitation and the agreement on control of time abrogated the five-minute rule. Under the agreement, the two Members controlling debate could yield for debate or for amendments.

Manager of Discharged Bill

§ 27.5 Where a motion to discharge a committee has been agreed to, the proponents of that motion are entitled to prior recognition for the purpose of managing the bill.

On June 14, 1932,⁽³⁾ Speaker Pro Tempore Henry T. Rainey, of Illinois, answered a parliamentary inquiry on the order of recognition on a bill discharged from committee. The proceedings were as follows:

MR. [CHARLES R.] CRISP [of Georgia]: The House yesterday discharged the Committee on Rules from the consideration of a resolution making it a special order to consider the adjuster-service compensation bill. The House then adopted the resolution which makes it today in order as a special order to consider that bill. The House having voted in favor of the proponents of the legislation and the Ways and Means Committee having made an adverse report on it, the effect of the vote of the House is to turn down the Ways and Means Committee and place control of that legislation in the hands of its friends. Under these circumstances and under the parliamentary rules and procedure of the House, are not the friends of the legislation entitled to have charge of the bill when we go into Committee of the Whole to consider it and to have the management of the measure on the floor?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The proponents and the friends of the bill will, of course, have charge of it from now on.⁽⁴⁾

3. 75 CONG. REC. 12911, 72d Cong. 1st Sess.
4. Consideration of bills on which a motion to discharge has prevailed is governed by Rule XXVII clause 3, House Rules and Manual §908 (1995).

Parliamentarian's Note: The discharged and adopted special rule read as follows:

HOUSE RESOLUTION 220

Resolved, That upon the day succeeding the adoption of this resolution a special order be, and is hereby, created by the House of Representatives for the consideration of H.R. 7726, notwithstanding the adverse report on said bill. That on said day the Speaker shall recognize the Representative from the first district of Texas, Wright Patman, to call up H.R. 7726, a bill to provide for the immediate payment to veterans of the face value of their adjusted-service certificates, as a special order of business, and to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of the said H.R. 7726. After general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and shall continue not to exceed four hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the Member of the House requesting a rule for the considering of the said H.R. 7726 and a Member of the House who is opposed to the said H.R. 7726, to be designated by the Speaker, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the reading of the bill for amendment the committee

The Speaker may recognize any Member who signed a discharge petition to offer the discharge motion (see §9.51, supra), and points of order as to who should control the discharged bill should be made when the question of consideration is moved.

shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and the amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit. The special order shall be a continuing order until the bill is finally disposed of.

Manager of Conference Report

§ 27.6 Recognition for calling up a conference report is within the discretion of the Chair, and the Speaker may recognize a junior member of the conference committee to manage a report when the senior House conferee is unable to be present on the floor.

On Dec. 23, 1969,⁽⁵⁾ Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, recognized Mr. Thomas L. Ashley, of Ohio, a junior member of the conference committee on H.R. 4293, to provide for continuation of authority for regulation of exports, to file the conference report and to call it up. The senior member of the conference committee, Wright Patman, of Texas, also Chairman of the Committee on Banking and Currency with jurisdiction over the subject matter of the bill, was unavoidably absent from the floor.⁽⁶⁾

5. 115 CONG. REC. 40982-84, 91st Cong. 1st Sess.

§ 27.7 The Speaker recognized the ranking majority member of a committee, and not the chairman thereof, also a conferee, to call up a conference report, when the chairman was opposed to the measure under consideration.

On July 17, 1967,⁽⁷⁾ Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, recognized Mr. Samuel N. Friedel, of Maryland, ranking majority member of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, to call up a conference report on Senate Joint Resolution 81, providing for the settlement of a railway labor dispute.

Parliamentarian's Note: Harley O. Staggars, of West Virginia, Chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce and a conferee on the bill, was not recognized to call up the report because he was opposed to the bill. Mr. Staggars did not manage consideration of the joint resolution in the House but had turned control over to Mr. Friedel.⁽⁸⁾

§ 28. Effect of Special Rule

Special rules or resolutions reported by the Committee on Rules making in order the consideration of a measure, frequently designate the Members to control debate. A typical special rule provides that debate be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the reporting committee. If the special rule does not so provide, the Chair may in his discretion recognize a Member to control the time.⁽⁹⁾

Special rules may divide control among two or more committees⁽¹⁰⁾ and may provide that only committee amendments may be offered, thereby limiting opportunity for five-minute debate.⁽¹¹⁾

By special rule, general debate may be equally divided between two committees jointly reporting the bill.⁽¹²⁾

Special Rule as Governing Control of Time for General Debate—Time for Debate Is Obtained From Member Controlling Time

§ 28.1 The House, through its adoption of a special rule, and not the Committee of the Whole, controls the distribution of time for general debate in Committee of the Whole; thus, during general debate in Committee of the Whole of a bill being considered under a special rule providing that the time be controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the committee reporting the bill, additional time must be yielded by the members controlling the time and may not be obtained by unanimous consent.

On June 2, 1975,⁽¹⁹⁾ during consideration of the Voting Rights Act extension (H.R. 6219) in the Committee of the Whole, the following proceedings occurred:

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The time of the gentleman has expired.

MR. [HENRY B.] GONZALEZ [of Texas]: Mr. Chairman, I would ask unanimous consent to continue for an additional 5 minutes.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will state that the gentleman from California (Mr. Edwards) has control of the time. Does the gentleman from California wish to yield additional time to the gentleman from Texas? . . .

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The time of the gentleman has expired.

MR. GONZALEZ: Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will suspend. The Chair must advise the gentleman that under the rule that request is not in order.

§ 28.2 When debate is pursuant to a special order controlled by designated Members, another Member may speak only if yielded to, and may not request unanimous consent for time for debate.

On Oct. 14, 1978,⁽²⁰⁾ the following exchange occurred in the Committee of the Whole:

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁾ The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

MR. CHARLES WILSON of Texas: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for additional seconds.

MR. PHILLIP BURTON [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I object.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Ashley) has control of the time.

MR. [THOMAS L.] ASHLEY [of Ohio]: Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 additional seconds to the gentleman from Texas.

Designated Member (Chairman) Opens Debate

the consideration of a bill in the Committee of the Whole:

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 5645) to authorize the Atomic Energy Commission to construct a modern office building in or near the District of Columbia to serve as its principal office, and all points of order against said bill are hereby waived. After general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and continue not to exceed 1 hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the vice chairman and ranking House minority member of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, the bill shall be read for amendment under the 5-minute rule. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment, the committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

Carl T. Durham, of North Carolina, the committee vice chairman designated in the resolution, moved that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole to consider the bill. When the Committee of the Whole commenced sitting, Mr. Durham was immediately recognized to open debate.

Bill Made in Order Is Not Necessarily Unfinished Business

§ 28.4 Where the House adjourns for the day after having adopted a resolution making in order the consideration of a bill and designating its manager, that bill is not automatically the unfinished business the next day, but must be called up by the designated Member.

On July 19, 1939,⁽³⁾ after the House had adopted a resolution from the Committee on Rules making in order the consideration of a bill, Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, answered a parliamentary inquiry:

MR. [CLAUDE V.] PARSONS [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state it.

MR. PARSONS: Mr. Speaker, the House having adopted the rule, is not this bill the unfinished business of the House on tomorrow?

THE SPEAKER: Not necessarily. The rule adopted by the House makes the bill in order for consideration, but it is not necessarily the unfinished business. It can only come up, after the adoption of the rule, by being called up by the gentleman in charge of the bill.

Control Where Special Rule Does Not Identify Manager

§ 28.5 Where a resolution provides that general debate on a bill be "equally divided and controlled by the majority and minority members" of a committee, instead of specifying, as is usual practice, that control of debate be exercised by designated members of the committee, the Speaker may recognize any member of the committee to call up the bill and control the time.

On Sept. 26, 1966,⁽⁴⁾ the House adopted House Resolution 923, making in order the consideration of H.R. 1511, the Economic Opportunity Amendments for 1966. The resolution provided that eight hours of general debate would be "equally divided and controlled by the majority and minority members of the Committee on Education and Labor," without specifying, as such resolutions usually do, that debate be controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the committee.

Following the adoption of the resolution, Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, recognized Adam C. Powell, of New

4. 112 CONG. REC. 23762, 89th Cong. 2d Sess.

York, Chairman of the Committee on Education and Labor, to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole for the consideration of the bill.

In the Committee of the Whole, Chairman Jack Brooks, of Texas, made the following decision on recognition for control of general debate:

Under the rule, the gentleman from New York [Mr. Powell] will be recognized for 4 hours to control the time for the majority, and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Ayres] is recognized for 4 hours to control the time for the minority.

No Manager Under Special Rule—Proponents of Amendments Opened and Closed Debate

§ 28.6 Where an unreported joint resolution was being considered under a special “modified closed” rule in Committee of the Whole permitting no general debate and the consideration of only two amendments in the nature of a substitute with debate thereon divided between a proponent and an opponent, the proponents (or the designee of a proponent) of the amendments were permitted to open and close debate pursuant to clause 6 of Rule XIV, since there was no “manager” of the joint resolution.

The following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole on Apr. 24, 1985,⁽⁵⁾ during consideration of House Joint Resolution 247 (to promote U.S. assistance in Central America):

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁶⁾ No amendments are in order except the following amendments, which shall be considered as having been read, shall be considered only in the following order, and shall not be subject to amendment: First, the amendment in the nature of a substitute printed in the Congressional Record of April 22, 1985, by, and if offered by, Representative Hamilton of Indiana; and said amendment shall be debatable for not to exceed 2 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by Representative Hamilton and a member opposed thereto; and second, the amendment in the nature of a substitute printed in the Congressional Record of April 22, 1985, by, and if offered by, Representative Michel or his designee, and said amendment shall be debatable for not to exceed 2 hours, to be equally divided and controlled by Representative Michel or his designee and a Member opposed thereto. . . .

MR. [ROBERT H.] MICHEL [of Illinois]: Mr. Chairman, pursuant to the rule, I offer an amendment in the nature of a substitute. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: Pursuant to House Resolution 136, the amendment is considered as having been read.

5. 131 CONG. REC. 9206, 9231, 9232, 9253, 9254, 99th Cong. 1st Sess.
6. George E. Brown, Jr. (Calif.).

The gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel) will be recognized for 1 hour, and a Member opposed will be recognized for 1 hour. . . .

MR. MICHEL: Mr. Chairman, I should like to designate the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Broomfield) to make the allocation of time on our side of the aisle.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Broomfield) is designated to control the time for the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel). . . .

The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Broomfield) has 7 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Barnes) has 6¼ minutes remaining.

MR. [MICHAEL D.] BARNES [of Maryland]: Mr. Chairman, we have three very brief speakers.

MR. [WILLIAM S.] BROOMFIELD [of Michigan]: If the gentleman would go ahead with those, we will wind up with one, our final speaker, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel). . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: The time of the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Barnes) has expired. . . .

MR. BROOMFIELD: Mr. Chairman, I would like at this time now to yield the balance of our time to the minority leader, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel).

Parliamentarian's Note: Ordinarily in Committee of the Whole under the five-minute rule notwithstanding clause 6 of Rule XIV (which permits the proposer of a proposition to close debate), the manager of the bill under the precedents is given the right to close debate on an amendment.

But in the above instance, there was no manager of the bill under the special rule.

Effect of Absence or Death of Designated Manager

§ 28.7 Where the chairman of a committee and its ranking minority member, named in a resolution to control debate on a bill, are absent and have failed to designate other Members to control the time, the Speaker or Chairman may recognize the next ranking majority and minority members for control of such debate.

On July 23, 1942,⁽⁷⁾ the House adopted a resolution from the Committee on Rules providing for debate on a bill to be divided between the chairman and the ranking minority member of the reporting committee, the Committee on Election of the President, Vice President, and Representatives in Congress. The chairman and ranking minority member both being absent, Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled, in response to a parliamentary inquiry, that the Chair would recognize the next ranking majority member and the next ranking minority member to control debate:

MR. [JOHN E.] RANKIN of Mississippi: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state it.

MR. RANKIN of Mississippi: Mr. Speaker, we have been unable to find a man in the House on either side who was present when this bill was voted out. A majority of the members of the committee who are here are opposed to the bill. We feel that the time ought to be divided not between the Members who are for the bill but know nothing about it any more than the rest of us, but between the members of the committee who are for the bill and the members of the committee who are opposed to the bill. I would like to have the Chair's ruling on that proposition.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair thinks the Chair has a rather wide range of latitude here. The Chair could hold and some future Speaker might hold that since the chairman and ranking minority member of the committee are not here there could be no general debate because there was nobody here to control it, but the present occupant of the chair is not going to rule in such a restricted way.

The Chair is going to recognize the next ranking majority member and the next ranking minority member when the House goes into the Committee of the Whole.

When the House had resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole, Chairman Jere Cooper, of Tennessee, responded as follows to a similar inquiry:

MR. RANKIN of Mississippi: Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state it.

MR. RANKIN of Mississippi: Mr. Chairman, there is not a member of the committee present who was present when this bill was voted out. A majority of the members of the committee who are present are opposed to this bill.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair will say in response to the parliamentary inquiry, that the Speaker held only a few moments ago that the ranking majority Member, acting as chairman of the committee, and the ranking minority Member present, would have control of the time under the rule that has been adopted for the consideration of the bill.

§ 28.8 Where a Member designated in a resolution to call up a bill was deceased, the Speaker recognized another Member in favor of the bill.

On Oct. 13, 1942,⁽⁸⁾ Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled on a point of order that he had improperly recognized a Member to call up a bill:

THE SPEAKER: If no Member wishes to be heard on the point of order the Chair is ready to rule.

A matter not exactly on all fours with this, but similar to it, was ruled on a few weeks ago. On that occasion both the chairman and the ranking minority member of the committee were absent. A point of order was made against consideration of the bill because of that fact.

⁸ 88 CONG. REC. 8080, 77th Cong. 2d Sess.

In ruling on the point of order at that time the Chair made the following statement:

The Chair thinks the Chair has rather a wide range of latitude here. The Chair could hold, and some future Speaker might hold, that since the chairman and the ranking minority member of the committee are not here there could be no general debate because there was nobody here to control it; but the present occupant of the Chair is not going to rule in such a restricted way.

The Chair is going to recognize the next ranking majority member and the next ranking minority member when the House goes into the Committee of the Whole.

We have here even a stronger case than that. The absence of a living Member may be his or her fault; the absence of a dead signer of this petition is not his fault.

There is a rule followed by the chancery courts which might well be followed here. It is that equity never allows a trust to fail for want of a trustee. Applying that rule to the instant case, the Chair holds that the consideration of this legislation will not be permitted to fail for want of a manager. After all, an act of God ought not, in all good conscience, deprive this House of the right to consider legislation; especially so, since this House has by its vote on the motion to discharge expressed its intent.

The Chair will recognize some Member other than Mr. Geyer to call up the bill on tomorrow; for, if the Chair were to hold that only Mr. Geyer could have called up this motion, Mr. Geyer being absent not through any act of his own but through an act of God, the Chair would be making such a restricted ruling that now and in the future it might prevent the House of Representatives from working its will.

The Chair overrules the point of order made by the gentleman from Alabama.⁽⁹⁾

Delegation of Authority by Designated Manager

§ 28.9 Where the Member, designated by special rule to be in control of the time for general debate in the Committee of the Whole, is absent from the Chamber, he may designate another Member to control the time in his absence, but the Chair must be informed of this delegation of authority.

On Jan. 31, 1964,⁽¹⁰⁾ the Committee of the Whole was considering H.R. 7152, the Civil Rights Act of 1963, and conducting general debate thereon. The resolution providing for the consideration of the bill provided that general debate be divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary. Emanuel Celler, of New York, the Chairman of that committee, was absent, prompting the following colloquy:

MR. [PETER W.] RODINO [Jr., of New Jersey]: Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

MR. [BASIL L.] WHITENER [of North Carolina]: If the gentleman will get me more time, I will be glad to yield to the gentleman.

MR. RODINO: I will give the gentleman 1 extra minute.

MR. WHITENER: I yield to the gentleman, but please do not take more than 1 minute.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹¹⁾ The Chair has to inform the gentleman from North Carolina that the gentleman from New Jersey does not have control of the time.

MR. WHITENER: Then, Mr. Chairman, I must respectfully decline to yield to the gentleman. . . .

MR. [BYRON G.] ROGERS of Colorado: Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state the point of order.

MR. ROGERS of Colorado: Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from New Jersey is now in charge of the time in the absence of the chairman, the gentleman from New York [Mr. Celler].

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair was not informed that the gentleman from New York is absent nor is the Chair informed that the gentleman from New Jersey is now in charge of the time.

The gentleman from North Carolina is recognized.

MR. WHITENER: I thank the Chairman. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: The time of the gentleman has expired.

MR. RODINO: Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 10 minutes, and I wish to state I am acting for the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary who asked me to take charge of the time for him in his absence.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from New Jersey is recognized.

Committee Chairman To Designate Members To Control Two Extra Hours of General Debate; Scope of Debate

§ 28.10 Where a special rule provided for the chairman of the Committee on International Relations to designate Members to equally divide and control two extra hours of general debate on a bill in Committee of the Whole, the chairman of said committee informed the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole of his designation of himself, another Member of the majority party and two Members of the minority party to control one-half hour each; and the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole advised that such debate was not required by the rule to be confined to any particular issue, but to the bill as a whole.

11. Eugene J. Keogh (N.Y.).

On July 31, 1978,⁽¹²⁾ Mr. Clement J. Zablocki, of Wisconsin, the Chairman of the Committee on International Relations, made a statement as to the division of control of time for debate pursuant to a special rule providing for two extra hours of debate on H.R. 12514, foreign aid authorizations for fiscal 1979. The intent behind requesting the extra hours had been to afford debate directed at the Turkish arms embargo issue, but the rule properly omitted any reference to the scope of debate, other than the requirement that all general debate be confined to the bill.

MR. ZABLOCKI: Mr. Chairman, under the rule, it is my understanding that the 1 hour for general debate on the entire bill, that that hour is equally divided between myself and the ranking minority member, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Broomfield).

Then the 2 hours that the rule provides for the Greek-Turkey-Cyprus issue, that there be 1 hour in support of lifting the embargo and 1 hour in opposition, and that the hour in support would be divided between myself and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Broomfield), and those in opposition to lifting the embargo would be managed by the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Fascell) and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Derwinski).

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹³⁾ The Chair will respond to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Zablocki) that the Chair has been informed that the gentleman from Wisconsin has designated the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Fascell) for 1 hour, and also the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Derwinski) for 1 hour. The rule, of course, does not confine any such debate to the embargo issue alone.

Extending Control to Additional Members Not Designated in Special Rule

§ 28.11 Where a resolution provided for the time for and control of debate on a bill, the Members in control obtained unanimous consent that a part of the time be controlled by a third Member.

On May 14, 1948,⁽¹⁴⁾ the House was about to resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole for the consideration of a bill to be considered pursuant to the provisions of House Resolution 582, fixing five hours of debate to be divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Un-American Activities. Charles A. Halleck, of Indiana, the Chairman of the committee, and Mr. John S. Wood, of Georgia, the ranking minority member of the committee, made unanimous-consent requests to permit control of part of the time by a third Member:

MR. HALLECK: Mr. Speaker, after consultation with the members of the Committee on Un-American Activities, I ask unanimous consent that of the 2½ hours to be allocated on this side of the aisle, a total of 45 minutes may be allocated by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Marcantonio] with the last 30 minutes of the over-all time reserved to the committee.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁵⁾ Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

MR. WOOD: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to yield 45 minutes of the time allotted to me to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Marcantonio] in behalf of the opposition to this measure, reserving the last 20 minutes of the time allotted to me.

THE SPEAKER: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Georgia?

There was no objection.

§ 28.12 Where a resolution provided that debate should be controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of a committee, unanimous consent was granted the minority member to yield one-half his time to the control of a third Member.

On Nov. 12, 1941,⁽¹⁶⁾ the House adopted House Resolution 334, 15. Joseph W. Martin, Jr. (Mass.).

16. 87 CONG. REC. 8763-70, 77th Cong. 1st Sess.

providing for the consideration in the House of Senate amendments to a House bill, and providing that debate be limited to eight hours, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs. Following the conclusion of the debate controlled by the chairman of the committee, Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, recognized Mr. Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, the ranking minority member, for four hours on the motion.

Mr. Fish made the following unanimous-consent request, which was agreed to by the House:

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that one-half the time allotted to me, or 2 hours, be placed under the control of the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. Richards].

Bill Within Jurisdiction of Two or More Committees

§ 28.13 Special rules often provide for control of debate time; as an example, a resolution provided for an open rule for consideration of the authorization (civilian) for the Energy Research and Development Administration, for fiscal 1978, reported from three committees (the initial and two sequential committees), with general debate to be divided and controlled by those three committees.

House Resolution 657, in the 95th Congress,⁽¹⁷⁾ provided for consideration of H.R. 6796, the authorization for fiscal 1978 for the Energy Research and Development Administration nonnuclear programs. The resolution provided in part that general debate be divided and controlled by three reporting committees; that the amendment in the nature of a substitute recommended by the Committee on Science and Technology be read as an original bill for amendment by titles instead of by sections; and that certain points of order be waived against such amendment.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 657

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 6796) to authorize appropriations to the Energy Research and Development Administration in accordance with section 261 of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, section 305 of the Energy Reorganization Act of 1974, and section 16 of the Federal Non-nuclear Energy Research and Development Act of 1974, and for other purposes. After general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and shall continue not to exceed three hours, two hours to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Science and Technology, one-half hour to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Armed Services, and one-half hour to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on International Relations, the bill shall be read for amendment under the five-minute rule. It shall be in order to consider the amendment in the nature of a substitute recommended by the Committee on Science and Technology now printed in italic in the bill as an original bill for the purpose of amendment under the five-minute rule, said substitute shall be read for amendment by titles instead of by sections, and all points of order against said substitute for failure to comply with the provisions of clause 7, rule XVI, clause 5, rule XXI, and section 401 of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 (Public Law 93-344) are hereby waived. It shall be in order to consider en bloc the amendments recommended by the Committee on Armed Services to title I of said substitute. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and any Member may demand a separate vote in the House on any amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole to the bill or to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

17. 123 CONG. REC. 28365, 28366, 95th Cong. 1st Sess., Sept. 9, 1977.

§ 28.14 Where a bill falls within the jurisdiction of two committees, the bill may be considered pursuant to a special rule providing for general debate to be divided between and controlled by those committees.

On Nov. 6, 1969,⁽¹⁸⁾ Mr. Ray J. Madden, of Indiana, called up by the direction of the Committee on Rules and the House adopted House Resolution 610, providing for consideration of a bill with general debate divided between two House committees:

H. RES. 610

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 14465) to provide for the expansion and improvement of the Nation's airport and airway system, for the imposition of airport and airway user charges, and for other purposes. After general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and shall continue not to exceed four hours, two hours to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, and two hours to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Ways and Means, title I of the bill shall be read for amendment under the five-minute rule.

After the House had resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole to consider the bill, Chairman Omar T. Burleson, of Texas, made a statement on control of the time for general debate:

Pursuant to the rule, general debate shall continue not to exceed 4 hours, 2 hours to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and the ranking minority member of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce and 2 hours to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member on the Committee on Ways and Means.

Under the rule, the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. Staggers) will be recognized for 1 hour and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Springer) will be recognized for 1 hour, controlling the time for general debate on behalf of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. Staggers).

After the conclusion of the two hours of debate controlled by the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, the Chairman made the following statement on control of the remaining debate:

There being no further requests for time on title I, under the rule, the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. Mills) will be recognized for 1 hour, and the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Byrnes) will be recognized for 1 hour, controlling the time for general debate for the Committee on Ways and Means.

¹⁸ 115 CONG. REC. 33260-62, 91st Cong. 1st Sess.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. Mills).⁽¹⁹⁾

Parliamentarian's Note: H.R. 14465 was reported by the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, title I of the bill concerning aviation facilities. The hearings and mark-up of title II, the Airport and Airway Revenue Act, were the work product of the Committee on Ways and Means. Title I was open to amendment, but title II was subject only to amendment by the Committee on Ways and Means.

—Rotating Recognition

§ 28.15 Where a special rule divided the control of time for general debate four ways among the chairmen and ranking minority members of two committees, the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole indicated that she would rotate recognition to permit each Member to utilize a portion of his time and then to yield remaining portions to other Members.

During consideration of H.R. 11656 (to provide that meetings of government agencies shall be open to the public) in the Committee of the Whole on July 28, 1976,⁽²⁰⁾ Chairman Yvonne B.

Burke, of California, made the following statement:

THE CHAIRMAN: Pursuant to the rule, general debate will continue not to exceed 2 hours, 1 hour to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Government Operations, and 1 hour to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary.

Under the rule, the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. Abzug), the gentleman from New York (Mr. Horton), the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. Flowers), and the gentleman from California (Mr. Moorhead), will each be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. Abzug).

MS. [BELLA S.] ABZUG [of New York]: Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume. . . .

MR. [FRANK] HORTON [of New York]: Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume. . . .

Madam Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. McCloskey).

THE CHAIRMAN: If there is no objection, the Chair would like to recognize the gentleman from California (Mr. Moorhead) . . . and then come back to the gentleman from New York (Mr. Horton).

The Chair now recognizes the gentleman from California (Mr. Moorhead) for 30 minutes.

MR. [CARLOS J.] MOORHEAD of California: Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

MR. HORTON: Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

MR. MOORHEAD of California: I yield to the gentleman from New York.

MR. HORTON: Madam Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state the parliamentary inquiry.

MR. HORTON: Madam Chairman, is it the intention of the Chair to rotate?

THE CHAIRMAN: Yes, that is the intention of the Chair.

MR. HORTON: Would the gentleman from California (Mr. Moorhead) then have 30 minutes before I come back to my time?

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will probably use a portion of that 30 minutes himself. We will then come back to the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. Abzug) and to the gentleman from New York (Mr. Horton).

MR. HORTON: Madam Chairman, I thank the Chair.

—Sequentially Reporting Committees

§ 28.16 Where a special rule divides control of debate among a primary reporting committee and six sequentially reporting committees in a designated order, the Chair allocated time only between the chairman and ranking minority member of each committee in the order listed if and when present on the floor, and permitted only the primary committee to reserve a portion of time to close general debate.

During consideration of the Small Business Innovation Development Act (H.R. 4326) in the Committee of the Whole on June 17, 1982,⁽¹⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽²⁾ Pursuant to the rule, the first reading of the bill is dispensed with.

The gentleman from New York, Mr. LaFalce, will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. McDade, will be recognized for 30 minutes [both representing the primary committee, the Committee on Small Business], and the following Members [representing six committees which had reported the bill sequentially] for 15 minutes each:

The gentleman from Georgia, Mr. McDonald;

The gentleman from Alabama, Mr. Dickinson;

The gentleman from Michigan, Mr. Dingell; . . .

The gentleman from Virginia, Mr. Robinson.

The Chair will attempt to reach the committees engaging in general debate in the order listed, but will at the same time attempt to accommodate Members who cannot be present when called. . . .

MR. [EDWARD F.] WEBER of Ohio: Mr. Chairman, I have an inquiry. In the absence of the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. Dickinson), will the Chair recognize me to control the time which would have been allocated to the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. Dickinson)?

1. 128 CONG. REC. 13991, 14011, 14015, 97th Cong, 2d Sess.
2. William M. Brodhead (Mich.).

THE CHAIRMAN: No; the time belongs to the Armed Services Committee minority.

The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. Dickinson) if and when the gentleman is able to be here; but the Chair will recognize Members as indicated in the order in which they are on the list, the order which the Chair read. . . .

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Dingell) for 15 minutes on behalf of the Committee on Energy and Commerce. . . .

All time allocated to the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Dingell) has 2½ minutes remaining.

MR. [JOHN D.] DINGELL [of Michigan]: Mr. Chairman, I would like to reserve my time.

THE CHAIRMAN: Under the precedents the gentleman will have to use his time at this point or yield it back.

MR. DINGELL: Mr. Chairman, I will yield to my dear friend from California for 1 minute, and then I will use the balance.

Before I do so, may I inquire of our good friends on the Small Business Committee—

THE CHAIRMAN: As the primary managers of the bill, that committee was able to reserve time and has reserved time under the precedents.

MR. DINGELL: To continue my inquiry, am I not able to reserve time also?

THE CHAIRMAN: The Small Business Committee is the primary manager of the bill, and for that reason the Chair has accorded them the privilege of reserving their time and has not agreed to accord that privilege to any of the other committees.

MR. DINGELL: Is that in the rule, that forecloses the other committees?

THE CHAIRMAN: Under the precedents they have the right to close debate.

§ 28.17 The Chairman has allocated time for general debate in Committee of the Whole pursuant to a special rule dividing time among chairmen and ranking minority members of six committees, with the Members recognized in the order listed in the special rule.

On May 15, 1986,⁽³⁾ the House agreed to a special rule, as follows, for consideration of H.R. 4800, the Omnibus Trade Bill of 1986:

H. RES. 456

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 1(b) of Rule XXIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 4800) to enhance the competitiveness of American industry; and for other purposes, and the first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with. All points of order against the consideration of the bill are hereby waived. After general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and shall continue not to exceed three and one-half hours, with one hour to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Ways and Means, with 30 minutes to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, with 30 minutes to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs, with 30 minutes to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Education and Labor, with 30 minutes to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Agriculture, and with 30 minutes to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Energy and Commerce, the bill shall be considered as having been read for amendment under the five-minute rule. . . .

The Chairman⁽⁴⁾ on May 20, 1986,⁽⁵⁾ allocated time for general debate:

THE CHAIRMAN: Pursuant to the rule, the first reading of the bill is dispensed with.

Under the rule, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Rostenkowski) will be recognized for 30 minutes; the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. Duncan) will be recognized for 30 minutes; the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Bonker) will be recognized for 15 minutes; the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Roth) will be recognized for 15 minutes; the gentleman from Rhode Island (Mr. St Germain) will be recognized for 15 minutes; the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Wylie) will be recognized for 15 minutes; the gentleman from California (Mr. Hawkins) will be recognized for 15 minutes; the gentleman from Vermont (Mr. Jeffords) will be recognized for 15 minutes, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. de la Garza) will be recognized for 15 minutes; the gentleman from Kansas (Mr. Roberts) will be recognized for 15 minutes; the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Dingell) will be recognized for 15 minutes; and the gentleman from New York (Mr. Lent) will be recognized for 15 minutes.

The Chairman recognizes the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Gibbons) on behalf of the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Rostenkowski).

—Where Special Rule Does Not Specify Order of Recognition

§ 28.18 Where a special rule provides separate control of general debate time among the chairmen and ranking minority members of two committees, but does not specify the order of recognition, the Chair may in his discretion either alternate recognition among the four Members or permit the primary committee to first utilize most of its time and then permit the manager of the bill to close general debate after the sequential committee uses its time.

During consideration of the Fair Practices in Automotive Products Act (H.R. 5133) in the Committee of the Whole on Dec. 10, 1982,⁽⁶⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [JAMES J.] FLORIO [of New Jersey]: Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 5133) to establish domestic content requirements for motor vehicles sold in the United States, and for other purposes.

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁷⁾ The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Florio).

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 5133, with Mr. Panetta in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁸⁾ Pursuant to the rule, the first reading of the bill is dispensed with.

Under the rule, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Florio) will be recognized for 30 minutes, the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. Broyhill) will be recognized for 30 minutes, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Gibbons) will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. Frenzel) will be recognized for 30 minutes.

MR. [JAMES T.] BROYHILL [of North Carolina]: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

I wish to inquire as to whether the time will run concurrently or whether one committee goes first and the second committee follows.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair would interpret the rule to allow each of the respective Members to allot their time respectively without any kind of a pattern, so it could be done interchangeably. . . .

The Chair would advise the Members that although the time could be used interchangeably that it is the will of those controlling the time that the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Florio) and the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. Broyhill) use their time first and then the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Gibbons) and the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. Frenzel).

MR. FLORIO: On that point, Mr. Chairman, it would be my hope to reserve some time to be in a position to take part in the concluding portion of the 2 hours' debate.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman is free to do that. . . .

MR. [JOHN D.] DINGELL [of Michigan]: Mr. Chairman, am I correct in my understanding that the rule provides that the time may be used alternatively by the several persons who control this time?

THE CHAIRMAN: The rule does permit that, the Chair would advise the gentleman, but it does not provide for any necessary order.

MR. DINGELL: And as the Chair advises, there is no necessary order. It can be used interchangeably, and so forth.

THE CHAIRMAN: That is correct.

—Time for General Debate Allocated to Primary Committee Was Reallocated by Unanimous Consent

§ 28.19 By unanimous consent in the Committee of the Whole, general debate which had been allocated only to the primary committee pursuant to a special rule adopted by the House was reallocated to the chairmen and ranking minority members of three committees to which the bill had been sequentially referred, to permit them to yield portions of time.

During consideration of the Water Resources Conservation Act (H.R. 6) in the Committee of the Whole on Nov. 5, 1985,⁽⁹⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁰⁾ Pursuant to the rule, the first reading of the bill is dispensed with.

Under the rule, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Howard) will be recognized for 1 hour and 45 minutes and the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. Stangland) will be recognized for 1 hour and 45 minutes.

MR. [JAMES J.] HOWARD [of New Jersey]: Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 minutes of my time to the chairman of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. Jones) or his designee, and I ask unanimous consent that he be allowed to yield that time as he wishes.

THE CHAIRMAN: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

MR. HOWARD: Mr. Chairman, I yield 15 minutes of my time to the chairman of the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs, the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. Udall) or his designee, and I ask unanimous consent that he be allowed to yield that time as he wishes.

THE CHAIRMAN: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

MR. HOWARD: Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 minutes to the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Rostenkowski) or his designee, and I ask unanimous consent that he be allowed to yield that time as he wishes.

THE CHAIRMAN: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Effect of Modified Closed Rule Permitting Amendment in Nature of Substitute and Substitute Therefor, With Separate Hour of Debate on Each Substitute

§ 28.20 Where a "modified closed" rule permitted only one amendment in the nature of a substitute and one substitute therefor, and divided a separate hour of debate on each substitute between the same two Members, the Chair permitted the total time to be accumulated and consumed before putting the question on the substitute.

The following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole on June 10, 1982,⁽¹¹⁾ during consideration of the first concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 1983 (H. Con. Res. 352):

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹²⁾ All time for general debate has expired.

Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XXIII, the concurrent resolution is considered as having been read for amendment and open for amendment at any point.

The concurrent resolution is as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That—

MR. [JAMES R.] JONES of Oklahoma: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment as a substitute for the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

THE CHAIRMAN: Pursuant to the provision of House Resolution 496, the amendment in the nature of a substitute is considered as having been read. . . .

Pursuant to the provisions of House Resolution 496, the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. Jones) will be recognized for 30 minutes and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Latta) will be recognized for 30 minutes. . . .

MR. JONES of Oklahoma: Mr. Chairman, in order to resolve the technicalities, I will use 30 minutes on the Jones substitute first, and the remaining 30 minutes on the Latta substitute. I think we have agreed to alternate back and forth the total hour we have. . . .

MR. [RALPH] REGULA [of Ohio]: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state it.

MR. REGULA: What is the situation at the moment? Have we completed with the first hour, that is, in effect, the debate on the Jones substitute?

THE CHAIRMAN: In effect, the Chair has. The Chair believes, and it has been treating the time as a fungible commodity. The total time has been allocated as to both amendments. In effect, the gentleman from Ohio has remaining to himself to yield, 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Oklahoma has 29 minutes remaining.

Parliamentarian's Note: Mr. Jones, Chairman of the Budget Committee, was permitted to close debate.

Special Rule Prohibiting Amendments to Amendment—Time Consumed Under Reservation of Objection to Unanimous-consent Request To Offer Amendment

§ 28.21 Where the Committee of the Whole is considering an amendment under a “modified closed” rule permitting only one amendment and no amendments thereto, and equally dividing the debate time on the amendment, time consumed under a reservation of objection to a unanimous-consent request to offer an amendment to the pending amendment comes out of the time controlled by the Member yielding for that request.

During consideration of House Joint Resolution 413 (further continuing appropriations for fiscal 1984) in the Committee of the Whole on Nov. 10, 1983,⁽¹³⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [SILVIO O.] CONTE [of Massachusetts]: Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. Solomon).

MR. [GERALD B.] SOLOMON [of New York]: . . . Mr. Chairman, in just a moment I will be asking unanimous consent to offer an amendment which will reduce the amount of economic aid that we give to Zimbabwe by $30 million. . . .

MR. [THOMAS J.] HUCKABY [of Louisiana]: Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, is it my understanding that there is $75 million that is earmarked for Zimbabwe in the Wright amendment, and that Zimbabwe is also the country that has consistently supported the Cuban troops in Angola?

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁴⁾ The Chair would inform the Members that the debate on the reservation will have to come out of allotted time which is controlled by the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Expiration of Time on Amendment Did Not Preclude Amendment to Amendment and Debate Thereon

§ 28.22 Where a special rule governing consideration of a bill in Committee of the Whole limits debate on each amendment or on each amendment thereto to a specific amount of time, equally divided and controlled, the expiration of time on an amendment does not preclude the offering of an amendment thereto, debatable under such time limitation.

On May 4, 1983,⁽¹⁵⁾ the Committee of the Whole had under consideration House Joint Resolution 13, calling for a freeze and reduction in nuclear weapons. House Joint Resolution 13 was being considered pursuant to a special rule agreed to on Mar. 16,⁽¹⁶⁾ and a special rule providing for additional procedures for consideration, agreed to on May 4.⁽¹⁷⁾

MR. [STEPHEN J.] SOLARZ [of New York]: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the amendment. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁸⁾ The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Solarz to the amendment offered by Mr. Hunter: In the section proposed to be added to the resolution by the Hunter amendment, strike out all that follows "prevent" through "crews" and insert in lieu thereof "safety-related improvements in strategic bombers".

MR. [ROBERT E.] BADHAM [of California]: Mr. Chairman, I have a point of order.

Mr. Chairman, it occurs to me that all time for the proponents and all time for the opponents of the amendment offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. Hunter), has been used up.

Is it not true, under the rule, that we must now vote on that amendment?

THE CHAIRMAN: No. The Chair will advise the gentleman from California (Mr. Badham), that it is true that all time relative to the amendment offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. Hunter), for and against, has expired, but under the rule another amendment can be offered, and is being offered, and 15 minutes are allocated to the proponent of the amendment and 15 minutes are allocated to an opponent of the amendment.

Speaker and Minority Leader Permitted To Speak by Unanimous Consent Where Special Rule Prohibited Pro Forma Amendments

§ 28.23 Where a special rule prohibited the offering of pro forma amendments for the purpose of debate in Committee of the Whole, the Speaker and Minority Leader were nevertheless permitted, by unanimous consent, to speak for five minutes each near the conclusion of the amendment process in Committee of the Whole.

On May 4, 1983,⁽¹⁹⁾ the Committee of the Whole had under consideration House Joint Resolution 13, calling for a freeze and reduction in nuclear weapons. House Joint Resolution 13 was being considered pursuant to a special rule agreed to on Mar. 16,⁽²⁰⁾ and a special rule providing for additional procedures for consideration, including a prohibition on pro forma amendments offered for the purpose of debate, agreed to on May 4.⁽¹⁾ The following proceedings took place:

MR. [WILLIAM S.] BROOMFIELD [of Michigan]: Mr. Chairman, after consultation with the leadership on both sides, and with my friend, the gentleman from Wisconsin, Chairman Zablocki, we have agreed upon a procedure in a spirit of bipartisanship to expedite consideration of this legislation to which we have devoted more than 45 hours of debate, and I would say historic debate. . . .

The agreement is that we will go directly to final passage. I will not offer a substitute. I will offer a straight motion to recommit. Then we can go to final passage. . . .

1. H. Res. 179, 129 CONG. REC. 11037, 98th Cong. 1st Sess.

MR. [JAMES C.] WRIGHT [Jr., of Texas]: . . . It is my understanding that the mutual agreement encompasses the proposition that those committee amendments of a technical nature will be accepted, and that there will be no debate on those or any other substance, and since a motion to recommit without instructions is not debatable in the full House, we must have an agreement that encompasses permitting 10 minutes, 5 minutes to each side, 5 minutes for the minority leader, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel), and the concluding 5 minutes for the Speaker. Those would be the only speeches remaining. . . .

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the minority leader, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel), may be permitted, after the adoption of the committee amendments, 5 minutes, and that then the Speaker may be permitted 5 minutes to conclude the entire debate.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽²⁾ Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: The Clerk will report the remaining committee amendment to the preamble.

The Clerk read as follows: . . .

The committee amendment to the preamble was agreed to.

THE CHAIRMAN: Under the previous unanimous-consent agreement, the Chair will now recognize the distinguished minority leader for 5 minutes.

Parliamentarian's Note: Mr. Broomfield had indicated that he would not offer his amendment in the nature of a substitute for the preamble and resolution, which was subject to two hours of consideration for amendment after disposition of amendments to the preamble under a two-hour limit.

Priority of Recognition in Opposition to Amendment Accorded to Minority Member of Reporting Committee

§ 28.24 Where a special rule limited debate time on amendments to be controlled by a proponent and opponent, the Chair accorded priority of recognition in opposition to an amendment to a minority Member of one of the reporting committees over a majority Member not on any reporting committee.

The following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole on Apr. 29, 1987,⁽³⁾ during consideration of the Trade Reform Act of 1987 (H.R. 3):

MR. [CLAUDE] PEPPER [of Florida]: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁴⁾ The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Pepper:
On page 278, after line 23, add the following section:

3. 133 CONG. REC. 10488, 100th Cong. 1st Sess.
4. Anthony C. Beilenson (Calif.).

Sec. 199. The USTR shall request that all relevant agencies prepare appropriate recommendations for improving the enforcement of restrictions on importation of articles from Cuba. . . .

MR. [WILLIAM V.] ALEXANDER [of Arkansas]: Mr. Chairman, would the Chair state how the time will be divided on the amendment that has been read?

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Florida [Mr. Pepper] will be entitled to 15 minutes and a Member in opposition will be entitled to 15 minutes.

MR. ALEXANDER: Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to the amendment, and I would request that that time be assigned to me, if some Member of the committee is not opposed.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair will advise the gentleman from Arkansas if there is someone else on the committee who seeks time in opposition, the Chair would designate that person in opposition.

Does the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Frenzel] seek time in opposition?

MR. [BILL] FRENZEL [of Minnesota]: Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to the amendment, and I also seek time in opposition.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Frenzel] will have 15 minutes in opposition.

Manager of Bill Recognized in Opposition to Amendment

§ 28.25 Where a special rule limits debate on designated amendments and allocates time between the proponent and an opponent, the manager of the bill will be recognized to control debate in opposition to the amendment if he qualifies as opposed.

On Dec. 1, 1982,⁽⁵⁾ during consideration of H.R. 6995 (Federal Trade Commission Authorization Act) in the Committee of the Whole, the Chair responded to an inquiry regarding debate, as indicated below:

MR. [JAMES T.] BROYHILL [of North Carolina]: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry with respect to the procedure followed here.

It is my understanding that the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Florio) [the manager of the bill] will control the time in opposition to the Luken amendment; is that correct?

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁶⁾ If the gentleman is opposed to the amendment.

MR. [JAMES J.] FLORIO [of New Jersey]: I am, Mr. Chairman.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Florio) will therefore be recognized to control the time in opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio.

§ 28.26 Where a special rule adopted by the House limits debate on an amendment to be controlled by the proponent and an opponent, and prohibits amendments thereto, the Chair may in his discretion recognize the manager of the bill if opposed and there is no requirement for recognition of the minority party.

The following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole on June 18, 1986,⁽⁷⁾ during consideration of H.R. 4868 (Anti-Apartheid Act of 1986):

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁸⁾ Under the rule, the gentleman from California (Mr. Dellums) will be recognized for 30 minutes, and a Member opposed to the amendment will be recognized for 30 minutes.

Will those gentlemen who are opposed to the Dellums amendment kindly stand so the Chair can designate?

Is the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Bonker) opposed to the amendment?

MR. [DON] BONKER [of Washington]: I advise the Chair that I oppose the amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN: Then the Chair will recognize the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Bonker) for 30 minutes in opposition to the Dellums amendment.

Does the gentleman from Washington wish to yield any of his time or share any of his time?

MR. BONKER: Mr. Chairman, I would yield half the allotted time, 15 minutes, to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Siljander).

THE CHAIRMAN: The time in opposition will be equally divided between the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Bonker) and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Siljander). . . .

8. Bob Traxler (Mich.).

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Chairman, do I understand that the process that has just taken place has given the minority side one-quarter of the time.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair would counsel the gentleman from Pennsylvania in regard to his inquiry that the rule provides that a Member will be recognized in opposition. The gentleman from Washington (Mr. Bonker) was recognized in opposition, and he shared his time with your side.

MR. WALKER: In other words, the minority, though, was not recognized for the purposes of opposition. Is that correct?

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair would state that the procedures of the House are governed by its rules, but more importantly in this instance, by the rule adopted by the House as reported from the Committee.

—If Manager States Opposition, Chair Does Not Later Question Qualification To Speak in Opposition

§ 28.27 Where a special rule governing consideration of a bill in Committee of the Whole provides that debate on each amendment be equally divided between the proponent and a Member opposed thereto, the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole will recognize the chairman of the committee managing the bill to control the time in opposition if he states he is opposed, and the Chair cannot at a later time question his qualifications to speak in opposition.

On May 4, 1983,⁽⁹⁾ the Committee of the Whole had under consideration House Joint Resolution 13, calling for a freeze and reduction in nuclear weapons, pursuant to a special rule agreed to on Mar. 16⁽¹⁰⁾ and a special rule providing for additional procedures for consideration (including the equal division of debate time) agreed to on May 4.⁽¹¹⁾ Mr. Clement J. Zablocki, of Wisconsin, Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, was recognized in opposition to an amendment. Mr. Zablocki discussed the amendment as it had been modified by unanimous consent:

MR. ZABLOCKI: Mr. Chairman, in order that we can continue the debate in proper order, and with an understanding of the amendment, as modified by unanimous consent, I ask that the Clerk re-read the amendment to the amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Clerk will report the amendment, as modified.

9. 129 CONG. REC. 11066, 98th Cong. 1st Sess.

10. H. Res. 138, 129 CONG. REC. 5666, 98th Cong. 1st Sess.

11. H. Res. 179, 129 CONG. REC. 11037, 98th Cong. 1st Sess.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 5, line 8, immediately before the period, insert “, with such reductions to be achieved within a reasonable period of time as determined by negotiations.”

MR. ZABLOCKI: . . . I must say at the very outset, as the amendment has been offered, I have no problems with the amendment. But I am concerned [that] in the explanation of your amendment you go further and it does cause some concern whether you intend your amendment to be so interpreted.

So, Mr. Chairman, I would hope that in the remaining 13 minutes of my time in opposition, technically in opposition, to the amendment we could have a clarifying dialog with the gentleman from Georgia.

MR. [JAMES A.] COURTER [of New Jersey]: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹²⁾ The gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Zablocki) has the time.

MR. COURTER: Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me for the purpose of making a parliamentary inquiry?

MR. ZABLOCKI: I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey for the purpose of making a parliamentary inquiry.

MR. COURTER: My parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Chairman, is as follows:

It is my understanding that the proponent of the amendment, the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Levitas) is recognized for 15 minutes, and then someone could be recognized if they, in fact, oppose it.

The gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Zablocki) rose initially indicating that he was against the amendment, was recognized for 15 minutes, and during his monolog has indicated that, in fact, he is not opposed to it. Should he be recognized for the balance of his time?

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The Chair cannot question the gentleman's qualifications. The Chair did ask the question if he rose in opposition to the amendment, and the Chairman so stated. Therefore, he controls the time.

Effect Where Member Recognized in Opposition Yields Back All Time

§ 28.28 Where debate on an amendment has been limited and equally divided between the proponent and a Member opposed, and the Chair has recognized the only Member seeking recognition in opposition to the amendment, no objection lies against that Member subsequently yielding back all the time in opposition.

On May 4, 1983,⁽¹³⁾ the Committee of the Whole had under consideration House Joint Resolution 13, calling for a freeze and reduction in nuclear weapons. House Joint Resolution 13 was being considered pursuant to a special rule agreed to on Mar.

12. Leon E. Panetta (Calif.).

16,⁽¹⁴⁾ and a special rule providing for additional procedures for consideration, agreed to on May 4.⁽¹⁵⁾ Mr. William S. Broomfield, of Michigan, rose in opposition⁽¹⁶⁾ to an amendment⁽¹⁷⁾ offered by Mr. Henry J. Hyde, of Illinois, to a substitute amendment:

MR. BROOMFIELD: Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁸⁾ The gentleman is recognized for 15 minutes in opposition to the amendment, for purposes of debate only.

MR. BROOMFIELD: Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

MR. HYDE: Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time and request a vote.

MR. [CLEMENT J.] ZABLOCKI [of Wisconsin]: Mr. Chairman, we have 15 minutes in order to oppose the amendment?

THE CHAIRMAN: No one stood up on that side of the aisle, and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Broomfield) represented to the Chair that he opposed the amendment and was recognized for 15 minutes in opposition, and he yielded back the balance of his time, as did the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Hyde). . . .

MR. [LES] AU COIN [of Oregon]: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

17. Id. at p. 11077.

18. Matthew F. McHugh (N.Y.).

Mr. Chairman, my inquiry is this: This side, which opposes the amendment, has been foreclosed an opportunity, not on this amendment but on the previous amendment, to have 15 minutes in opposition to the amendment because a Member on that side who voted against an amendment that was hostile to the exact amendment said he was opposed to it.

My parliamentary inquiry is, Mr. Chairman, is that in order?

THE CHAIRMAN: As the Chair previously explained, no one on the majority side of the aisle rose in opposition to that amendment. The Chair looked to the other side of the aisle and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Broomfield) rose, represented that he was in opposition to the amendment and was recognized.

Parliamentarian's Note: Had another Member also been seeking to control time in opposition at the time the first Member was recognized and yielded back, the Chair would have allocated the time to that Member so that it could have been utilized.

Yielding Repeatedly to Same Member

§ 28.29 Where a special rule provides for the control of time in debate on a bill, the Member in charge may yield time to the same Member on two or more occasions notwithstanding Rule XIV, clause 6.

On Mar. 23, 1933,⁽¹⁹⁾ the Committee of the Whole was considering H.R. 3342, the District of Columbia beer bill, pursuant to the terms of a special rule dividing control of time for general debate between the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the District of Columbia. Chairman Marvin Jones, of Texas, ruled as follows on the application of the prohibition against speaking twice to a bill being considered under a special order:

MR. [EDWARD W.] GOSS [of Connecticut]: Mr. Chairman, I am making a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state it.

MR. GOSS: Section 6, Rule XIV, states that no Member shall speak more than once to the same question without leave of the House. Does this apply to debate under a special rule where the time is in the control of both sides?

THE CHAIRMAN: The rule under which this bill is considered states that the time shall be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and the ranking minority member of the Committee on the District of Columbia. This, being a special rule, would, in so far as it is in conflict with, suspend the other rules of the House, and the gentleman can be recognized if he is yielded time in the regular way.

Time Yielded Is Utilized or Yielded Back—Reservation of Yielded Time as Requiring Unanimous Consent

§ 28.30 Where a special rule adopted by the House divides control of general debate in Committee of the Whole between the chairman and ranking minority member of the committee reporting the bill, time yielded to third Members must be utilized or yielded back and may only be reserved for allocation by such third Member by unanimous consent.

During consideration of the Olympic Coin Act (S. 1230) in the Committee of the Whole on May 20, 1982,⁽²⁰⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁾ Pursuant to the rule, the first reading of the bill is dispensed with.

Under the rule, the gentleman from Rhode Island (Mr. St Germain) will be recognized for 1 hour, and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Wylie) will be recognized for 1 hour.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Rhode Island (Mr. St Germain).

MR. [FERNAND J.] ST GERMAIN [of Rhode Island]: Mr. Chairman, I yield one-half hour to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Annunzio). . . .

20. 128 CONG. REC. 10766, 10767, 97th Cong. 2d Sess.

1. Elliott H. Levitas (Ga.).

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Annunzio) has consumed 12 minutes.

The Chair would inquire of the gentleman from Rhode Island, would he be amenable to yielding further at a later time to the gentleman from Illinois?

MR. ST GERMAIN: I yielded the gentleman 30 minutes under our agreement.

The gentleman from Illinois may proceed and have his other speakers speak. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair would observe from a procedural point of view that the gentleman has been yielded 30 minutes which he may use now or yield back as he so desires.

MR. [FRANK] ANNUNZIO [of Illinois]: Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman is not able to reserve the balance of the time yielded to him by the gentleman from Rhode Island unless the gentleman from Rhode Island agrees to yield further at a later time.

MR. [CHALMERS P.] WYLIE [of Ohio]: Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

What I had intended to do was yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Paul), who takes a similar position as the gentleman from Illinois. I understand the gentleman from Illinois' position and my parliamentary inquiry is, may I yield 30 minutes of my time, which I had agreed to do, to the gentleman from Texas at this time and allow the gentleman from Illinois to use his 30 minutes in exchange with the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Paul)?

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair in response would advise the gentleman from Ohio that while he may yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Paul), the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Paul) may use that time but may not reserve portions of that time for subsequent yielding except by unanimous consent. . . .

Does the gentleman from Illinois ask unanimous consent to be able to yield portions of the remaining 18 minutes he has available to him at subsequent times during the course of the general debate?

MR. ANNUNZIO: Yes.

THE CHAIRMAN: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Motions Permitted by Special Rule

§ 28.31 A special rule agreed to by the House for consideration of a bill permitted motions by the chairman of the committee reporting the bill to limit debate, including allocation of time under the limitation, and to consider the remainder of the bill or any titles thereof read and open to amendment.

On Dec. 9, 1981,⁽²⁾ Mr. Anthony C. Beilenson, of California, called up House Resolution 291 (providing for consideration of H.R. 3566, international security and development assistance authorizations for fiscal 1982 and 1983) in the House:

MR. BEILENSEN: Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 291 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 291

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 3566) to authorize appropriations for the fiscal years 1982 and 1983 for international security and development assistance and for the Peace Corps, and for other purposes, the first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with After general debate, which shall be confined to the bill and shall continue not to exceed one hour, to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, the bill shall be considered for amendment under the five-minute rule by titles instead of by sections, and each title shall be considered as having been read. It shall be in order at any time while the bill is being considered for amendment under the five-minute rule for the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs to move to limit debate on the pending portion of the bill and to provide in said motion for the allocation of time under the limitation on the pending portion of the bill, or on amendments, or on amendments to amendments, thereto. It shall also be in order at any time while the bill is being considered for amendment under the five-minute rule for the chairman of the Committee on For-ign Affairs to move that the remainder of the bill, or any title thereof, be considered as having been read and open to amendment. At the conclusion of the consideration of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted, and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

Control of Debate on Resolutions Relating to Committee Structure

§ 28.32 On one occasion, debate on a resolution reported from the Committee on Rules amending the rules of the House to make permanent the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct was placed in the control of the latter committee pursuant to a special rule.

On Apr. 3, 1968,⁽³⁾ Mr. Richard Bolling, of Missouri, called up in the House by direction of the Committee on Rules House Resolution 1119, making in order in the Committee of the Whole the consideration of House Resolution 1099, also reported from the Committee on Rules, which resolution amended the Rules of the House to make permanent the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct. House Resolution 1119 provided that there be two hours of debate on House Resolution 1099 to be equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct.

3. 114 CONG. REC. 8776, 8777, 90th Cong. 2d Sess.

Mr. H. Allen Smith, of California, a member of the Committee on Rules, explained the resolution as follows:

The resolution could have come to the floor of the House without a rule, which would have limited debate to 1 hour, 30 minutes on each side, and a vote would then be taken up or down on the resolution.

But the Rules Committee felt the members of the committee should have an opportunity to be heard, with the result that we have reported a separate resolution providing for 2 hours of general debate, 1 hour on each side, and the resolution will be open for amendment. Had we just reported the resolution, it would be tantamount to a closed rule under which amendments could not be offered. The Rules Committee does not like to report closed rules as a general practice, and does so only in a few instances, usually on tax bills.

Amendments will probably be offered. . . .

Debate on Confirmation of Vice President-designate Divided Three Ways

§ 28.33 House debate on the confirmation of Vice President-designate Rockefeller was limited to 6 hours and was equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary (both of whom favored the nomination), and Robert W. Kastenmeier, of Wisconsin (a majority member of the Judiciary Committee who opposed the nomination).

For discussion of House Resolution 1519, providing for the consideration of the resolution confirming Nelson A. Rockefeller as Vice President, see §25.17, supra.

Five Conference Reports Considered En Bloc

§ 28.34 Pursuant to a special rule providing for four hours of debate on five conference reports considered en bloc in the House, equally divided between the majority and minority, with one hour to be confined to debate on one of the five reports (Natural Gas Policy), the Speaker recognized the chairman and ranking minority member of the Ad Hoc Committee on Energy for one-half hour each for the first hour, to be confined to debate on the natural gas conference report, and then recognized them for one and one-half hour each on the remaining reports.

On Oct. 14, 1978,⁽⁴⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House:

MR. [THOMAS L.] ASHLEY [of Ohio]: Mr. Speaker, pursuant to House Resolution 1434, I call up the conference reports on the bills [H.R. 4018, Public Utility Rates; H.R. 5037, Energy Conservation; H.R. 5146, Coal Conversion; H.R. 5289, Natural Gas Policy; and H.R. 5263, Energy Tax]. . . .

The Clerk read the titles of the bills.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁵⁾ Pursuant to House Resolution 1434, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Ashley) will be recognized for 2 hours and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Anderson) will be recognized for 2 hours.

The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Ashley) and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Anderson) for 30 minutes to debate the conference report on H.R. 5289. . . .

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: May I . . . inquire of the Chair whether the first hour of debate is to be directed to the natural gas conference report and not to the other four conference reports?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman is correct.

MR. BAUMAN: Only to the natural gas conference report?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman is correct.

4. 124 CONG. REC. 38349, 38350, 95th Cong. 2d Sess.

5. William H. Natcher (Ky.).

MR. BAUMAN: Would it be out of order to discuss the other parts during that time?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would like to advise the gentleman that the Chair would have to rule as points along that line are brought to the attention of the Chair.

MR. BAUMAN: I thank the Speaker.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would like to advise the gentleman that the resolution provides the first hour of which shall be confined solely to the conference report on the bill H.R. 5289.

§ 29. Yielding Time

Where the Member with the floor desires to allow another Member to speak during the former's own time, he yields, and the time yielded is taken out of his time.⁽⁶⁾ Yielding is discretionary with the Member in control. And a Member yielded time may speak as many times as yielded to, despite the prohibition against speaking more than once to the same subject.⁽⁷⁾ The Mem-

6. See §§ 29.5–29.7, infra.

Where a Member who is yielded time does not consume it, the remaining time reverts to the Member who yielded it (see § 29.16, infra).

If the Member with the floor yields the "balance" of his time in the House without moving the previous question, he loses the floor (see §§ 29.9, 29.10, infra).

7. See § 29.4, infra.

ber yielding time should stand to protect his right to the floor,⁽⁸⁾ and the Member who seeks yielded time should address the Chair and request the permission of the Member speaking.⁽⁹⁾

A Member with the floor generally yields for debate only, since in yielding for a motion or amendment he may lose the floor.⁽¹⁰⁾

The principle that a Member may not, in time yielded for debate, make a motion or offer an amendment is based on the reasoning that if amendments or motions were allowed in time yielded for debate, control would shift and the Chair would be deprived of his power of recognition.

A Member yielded time in debate cannot allocate and control that time, except by unanimous consent.⁽¹¹⁾ A Member yielded a specific amount of time for debate may not in turn yield a specific amount of time for debate to another Member, although he may yield for questions and statements.⁽¹²⁾ A Member recognized under the five-minute rule may not yield to another to offer an amendment, although he may yield to another for debate while remaining on his feet.⁽¹³⁾

Although not required to do so by standing rule, majority Members controlling all the time under the hour rule, frequently yield one-half the time to the minority in order that full debate may occur.⁽¹⁴⁾ Under that special procedure, the minority manager may yield specific amounts of time to other Members without remaining on his feet.

Seeking Yielded Time

§ 29.1 A Member desiring the Member with the floor to yield to him should address the Chair for the permission of the Member speaking.

On June 29, 1956,⁽¹⁵⁾ Chairman Francis E. Walter, of Pennsylvania, sustained a point of order that a Member desiring to interrupt another in debate, by asking him to yield, should properly address the Chair for the permission of the Member speaking:

MR. [RALPH W.] GWINN [of New York]: We had no exact testimony on the point before our committee.

MR. [CLEVELAND M.] BAILEY [of West Virginia]: Will the gentleman yield?

MR. GWINN: I would like to answer the question of the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania first.

MR. [CLARE E.] HOFFMAN of Michigan: Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

15. 102 CONG. REC. 11455, 84th Cong. 2d Sess.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state it.

MR. HOFFMAN of Michigan: The point of order is that a Member who seeks recognition must first address the Chair rather than inquire of the Member whether he will yield or not.

THE CHAIRMAN: The point of order is sustained. The practice which has grown up here is not a good one. When a request is made for a Member to yield, the request should be made to the Chair, and the Chair in turn submits the request to the speaker having the floor.

—Recognition by Chair

§ 29.2 Members are not entitled to the floor until recognized by the Chair even though they may have been yielded time by the Member in charge of the time.

On Feb. 28, 1931,⁽¹⁶⁾ Speaker Nicholas Longworth, of Ohio, recognized Mr. Thomas A. Jenkins, of Ohio, to move to suspend the rules and pass a bill. Mr. John J. O'Connor, of New York, objected that he had already been recognized for 30 minutes on a special rule which had been called up and read but not debated. The Speaker stated that Mr. O'Connor had not been recognized by the Chair for debate and had no right to the floor. (Mr. O'Connor had been yielded time by the Member in charge of the special rule who had not been recognized for debate by the Speaker.)

Parliamentarian's Note: It is no longer the practice to entertain motions to suspend the rules while other business is pending before the House.

Speaking From Floor During Yielded Time

§ 29.3 In propounding a question in debate to a Member speaking from the well of the House, a Member should speak from a microphone at the majority or minority tables.

On Mar. 7, 1957,⁽¹⁷⁾ Chairman Brooks Hays, of Arkansas, sustained a point of order that a Member seeking to ask a question of a Member with the floor and in the well should not seek to propound his question from the well:

MR. AUGUST H. ANDERSEN [of Minnesota]: I will yield for a question, but I refuse to yield for a speech.

MR. [GEORGE N.] CHRISTOPHER [of Missouri]: I would like to ask a question.

MR. [CLARE E.] HOFFMAN [of Michigan]: Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state it.

MR. HOFFMAN: I ask that the well be cleared.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Michigan makes a point of order that the well should be cleared. The gentleman will step back to the seats to ask his question.

MR. CHRISTOPHER: I want to ask a question about the 51 million acre base.

MR. HOFFMAN: Mr. Chairman, I insist on my point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Missouri will suspend. We want to comply strictly with the rules. The gentleman will stand back out of the well, please, while the question is propounded.

Yielding Repeatedly to Same Members

§ 29.4 Members may speak in debate on a bill as many times as they are yielded time by those in control of the debate.

On July 11, 1946,⁽¹⁸⁾ Chairman William M. Whittington, of Mississippi, answered a parliamentary inquiry as follows:

MISS [JESSIE] SUMNER of Illinois: Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry?

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentlewoman will state it.

MISS SUMNER of Illinois: The gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Hays] and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Patman] have spoken two or three times

17. 103 CONG. REC. 3268, 85th Cong. 1st Sess.

18. 92 CONG. REC. 8694, 79th Cong. 2d Sess.

on this bill during general debate. Is that permissible under the rules of the House?

THE CHAIRMAN: The time is within the control of the chairman and the ranking minority member of the committee.

MISS SUMNER of Illinois: May the same person speak two or three times in general debate on the same bill?

THE CHAIRMAN: General debate on this bill has been fixed at 16 hours, the time equally divided between the chairman and the ranking minority member of the committee. They may yield, once, twice, or as many times as they desire to whom they desire.

Yielded Time Charged to Member With Floor

§ 29.5 Yielded time is taken out of the time of the Member with the floor, except for points of order.

On Apr. 8, 1937,⁽¹⁹⁾ Mr. Arthur H. Greenwood, of Indiana, had the floor, having called up by direction of the Committee on Rules a privileged resolution. Mr. Carl E. Mapes, of Michigan, asked Mr. Greenwood to yield for the propounding of a parliamentary inquiry, thereby raising a question as to how such time should be charged:

MR. MAPES: Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield so that I may submit a parliamentary inquiry, not to be taken out of the gentleman's time?

19. 81 CONG. REC. 3283, 75th Cong. 1st Sess.

MR. GREENWOOD: I yield for that purpose.

THE SPEAKER:⁽²⁰⁾ If the gentleman yields, it comes out of his time.

MR. GREENWOOD: Then I prefer to make my statement. I will not yield for that purpose at this time.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will state to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Mapes] that the only exception where interruptions are not taken out of the time of the speaker is on points of order.⁽¹⁾

§ 29.6 During consideration of a bill under the five-minute rule, a Member who has the floor may yield to another for a unanimous-consent request or a motion to limit debate, but the time consumed thereby comes out of the time of the Member holding the floor.

On June 11, 1968,⁽²⁾ Mr. Daniel J. Flood, of Pennsylvania, was recognized on a pro forma amendment under the five-minute rule in the Committee of the Whole. He then yielded to Mr. George H. Mahon, of Texas, who asked unanimous consent that all debate on the pending amendment and the substitute amendments there-to close at 5:30. Chairman James G. O'Hara, of Michigan, stated, in response to a parliamentary inquiry by Mr. Flood, that the time consumed by the unanimous-consent request came out of his (Mr. Flood's) time, since he had yielded for the purpose.

On June 1, 1972,⁽³⁾ Chairman Robert N. Giaimo, of Connecticut, stated that time for interruptions, for which a Member with the floor under the five-minute rule had yielded, would be taken out of his time:

MR. [WILLIAM V.] CHAPPELL [Jr., of Florida]: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. . . .

MR. [HARLEY O.] STAGGERS [of West Virginia]: Mr. Chairman, would the gentleman yield to me?

MR. CHAPPELL: I yield to the gentleman from West Virginia.

MR. STAGGERS: I have asked the gentleman from Florida to yield to me in order to ascertain if we could set a limit of debate on this amendment.

Having heard the amendment read, it is a very simple amendment, and it can be read again if needed.

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

THE CHAIRMAN: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

MR. [DURWARD G.] HALL [of Missouri]: Mr. Chairman, I object.

THE CHAIRMAN: Objection is heard.

MR. STAGGERS: Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto close in 15 minutes.

THE CHAIRMAN: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from West Virginia?

MR. [H. R.] GROSS [of Iowa]: Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. GROSS: Mr. Chairman, is this coming out of the gentleman's time?

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair will state that that is correct.

§ 29.7 If a Member yields for a parliamentary inquiry, the time consumed by the inquiry and the reply is taken out of his time.

On May 26, 1960,⁽⁴⁾ while Mr. Donald R. Matthews, of Florida, had the floor, the following proceedings occurred:

MR. MATTHEWS: Mr. Chairman, the poet, Robert Frost, in his poem "Road Not Taken," starts out with these lines—

MR. [CLEVELAND M.] BAILEY [of West Virginia]: Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁵⁾ Does the gentleman from Florida yield for a parliamentary inquiry?

4. 106 CONG. REC. 11267, 11268, 86th Cong. 2d Sess.

5. Aime J. Forand (R.I.).

MR. MATTHEWS: Will it be taken out of my time?

THE CHAIRMAN: It will be taken out of the gentleman's time.

MR. MATTHEWS: I regret I cannot yield to my beloved colleague.⁽⁶⁾

Member Yielding Time Should Stand

§ 29.8 A Member recognized in support of an amendment may yield to another for a question or statement, but he must remain standing in order to protect his rights to the floor.

On Mar. 12, 1964,⁽⁷⁾ Chairman Chet Holifield, of California, stated a Member recognized on an amendment who yields to another should remain standing:

MR. [THOMAS J.] MURRAY [of Tennessee]: Mr. Chairman, I will explain the amendment, I hope to the satisfaction of all.

MR. [THOMAS B.] CURTIS [of Missouri]: I wish to say, if the gentleman will yield further, that this is about 30 pages. Without copies available I believe possibly a recess will be in order.

MR. [WAYNE L.] HAYS [of Ohio]: Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order.

7. 110 CONG. REC. 5100, 88th Cong. 2d Sess.

The gentleman from Tennessee had the floor, and I have not heard him yield to any Member lately. He is not standing.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Murray] has been recognized by the Chair. We hope the gentleman from Tennessee will maintain his position standing, if he wishes to obtain the attention of the Chamber.

MR. MURRAY: I thank the Chairman. I shall do so.

Effect of Yielding Back Balance of Time on Motion Without Moving Previous Question

§ 29.9 If a Member recognized to control one hour on a motion yields back the balance thereof without moving the previous question, another Member may be recognized for one hour.

On Oct. 10, 1940,⁽⁸⁾ Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, laid before the House a veto message from the President. Mr. Samuel Dickstein, of New York, moved that the message and the bill be referred to a House committee. He was recognized for one hour by the Speaker, delivered some remarks, and then stated "I yield back the balance of my time." Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, asked for recognition in opposition to the motion, and the Speaker inquired of Mr. Dickstein whether he yielded. When Mr. Dickstein stated that he had yielded the floor, Mr. Rankin was recognized for one hour. Mr. Dickstein then objected that he had not meant to surrender the floor, but the Speaker stated that he had affirmatively done so.

8. 86 CONG. REC. 13522-24, 76th Cong. 3d Sess.

§ 29.10 A Member having yielded the floor without moving the previous question after making a motion, another Member seeking recognition is recognized for one hour.

On July 5, 1945,⁽⁹⁾ Mr. Malcolm C. Tarver, of Georgia, offered a motion to correct the permanent Record, in order to accurately reflect a colloquy between himself and Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi. Mr. Tarver discussed his motion and then yielded the floor without moving the previous question. Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, recognized Mr. Rankin for one hour.

Effect on Time Already Yielded Where Member in Control Loses Floor

§ 29.11 A Member in control of the time under the hour rule may yield a portion of his time to another Member, but if he loses the floor (by yielding for an amendment), the time yielded to the other Member is also lost.

On Nov. 29, 1967,⁽¹⁰⁾ Mr. William R. Anderson, of Tennessee, called up by direction of the Committee on Rules House Resolution 960, a privileged resolution authorizing travel by members of the Committee on Education and Labor, for investigatory purposes; as is customary on a Rules Committee resolution, he yielded 30 minutes to the minority (Mr. H. Allen Smith, of California). Mr. Anderson then yielded to Mr. Durward G. Hall, of Missouri, to offer an amendment, thereby surrendering control of the resolution to Mr. Hall. When Speaker Pro Tempore Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, stated that the question was on the resolution, a parliamentary inquiry was raised:

MR. [H. ALLEN] SMITH of California: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state the parliamentary inquiry.

MR. SMITH of California: I was yielded 30 minutes a while ago by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Anderson]. Do I not have that time?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: When the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr.

10. 113 CONG. REC. 34136-38, 90th Cong. 1st Sess.

Anderson] yielded to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Hall] for the purpose of offering an amendment, he surrendered all his time, and the Chair so informed the gentleman from Tennessee.

MR. SMITH of California: If the gentleman has agreed to yield 30 minutes to me, I lose it?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: When the gentleman yielded for the purpose of amendment.

Yielding Is Discretionary

§ 29.12 Where debate on a bill is under control of the chairman and ranking minority member of a committee, they may yield as many times as they desire to whomever they desire.

On July 11, 1946,⁽¹¹⁾ Chairman William M. Whittington, of Mississippi, answered a parliamentary inquiry:

MISS [JESSIE] SUMNER of Illinois: Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry?

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentlewoman will state it.

MISS SUMNER of Illinois: The gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Hays] and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Patman] have spoken two or three times on this bill during general debate. Is that permissible under the rules of the House?

THE CHAIRMAN: The time is within the control of the chairman and the ranking minority member of the committee.

MISS SUMNER of Illinois: May the same person speak two or three times in general debate on the same bill?

THE CHAIRMAN: General debate on this bill has been fixed at 16 hours, the time equally divided between the chairman and the ranking minority member of the committee. They may yield, once, twice, or as many times as they desire to whom they desire.

§ 29.13 Where the House by unanimous consent fixed the time for and control of debate, it was held that the Members in control were not required to use or to yield all their available time.

On Mar. 11, 1941,⁽¹²⁾ the House was considering House Resolution 131 under the terms of a unanimous-consent request providing two hours of debate in the House, dividing control of debate between Mr. Sol Bloom, of New York, and Mr. Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, and providing that at the conclusion of such debate the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the adoption of the resolution. After debate, Mr. Bloom asked for a vote on the resolution prior to the expiration of the two hours' time, and Mr. Martin J. Kennedy, of New York, objected on the ground that the unanimous-consent agreement was not being complied with in that two hours of debate had not been consumed and Mr. Bloom had refused to yield further time. Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled as follows:

11. 92 CONG. REC. 8694, 79th Cong. 2d Sess.

12. 87 CONG. REC. 2177, 2178, 77th Cong. 1st Sess.

THE SPEAKER: The unanimous-consent request agreed to yesterday left control of the time in the hands of the gentleman from New York [Mr. Bloom] and the gentleman from New York [Mr. Fish]. At any time those gentlemen do not desire to yield further time, compliance with the request has been had.

§ 29.14 A Member calling up a resolution providing for the order of business under the "21-day rule," in effect in the 89th Congress, was recognized for one hour and could yield time as he saw fit, and was not bound by the custom of the Committee on Rules to yield one-half the time to the opposition.

On Sept. 13, 1965,⁽¹³⁾ Mr. Adam C. Powell, of New York, called up, pursuant to the provisions of Rule XI clause 23, House Resolution 478, providing for the consideration of H.R. 9460, which had been pending before the Committee on Rules for more than 21 calendar days without having been reported by the committee. Mr. Howard W. Smith, of Virginia, made a point of order against the manner in which debate was being conducted on the resolution, claiming that under the usual procedure one hour of debate in the House was in order, to be equally divided between the majority and minority.

Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, ruled as follows:

The Chair will state that the control of time in the present parliamentary situation rests with the gentleman from New York [Mr. Powell].

The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Smith] has referred to the action taken on the last resolution. That was a matter within the judgment of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Patman]. The gentleman from New York [Mr. Powell] has control of the 1 hour and he can dispose of that time as his judgment dictates.⁽¹⁴⁾

Motion To Instruct Conferees: Former Practice

§ 29.15 A Member offering a motion to instruct conferees, and in control of the one hour for debate, yielded control of one-half his time to the opposition.

14. See also 111 CONG. REC. 18076, 89th Cong. 1st Sess., July 26, 1965.

The 21-day rule was deleted from the rules by H. Res. 7, 90th Cong. 1st Sess. (1967).

On Aug. 8, 1961,⁽¹⁵⁾ the House agreed to a resolution taking from the Speaker's table a House bill with a Senate amendment, disagreeing to the amendment and requesting a conference with the Senate.

Mr. James E. Van Zandt, of Pennsylvania, offered a motion to instruct conferees, and Speaker Pro Tempore Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, advised him that he was entitled to one hour of debate on his motion. Mr. Van Zandt then stated:

Under these circumstances, Mr. Speaker, I yield to my colleague the gentleman from California [Mr. Hollifield] 30 minutes and yield myself 13 minutes.⁽¹⁶⁾

Parliamentarian's Note: Debate time on any motion to instruct conferees is now divided between the majority and minority parties. If both are supporters of the motion, one-third of the hour can be demanded by a Member opposed to the motion. See H. Res. 5, 101st

Reversion of Unused Yielded Time

§ 29.16 Where a Member in control of a specific amount of time for debate in the House yields part or all of his remaining time to another Member, and the latter does not consume such time, the unused time reverts to the Member who yielded.

On Sept. 19, 1966,⁽¹⁷⁾ Mr. Adam C. Powell, of New York, moved to suspend the rules and pass a bill. He used part of the 20 minutes available to him under the rules and then yielded the "balance" of his time to Mr. James G. O'Hara, of Michigan. Mr. O'Hara delivered a short address and Mr. Powell then yielded time to Mr. John H. Dent, of Pennsylvania. Mr. H. R. Gross, of Iowa, made a point of order that Mr. Powell had lost control of the floor and Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, overruled the point of order:

MR. GROSS: Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the gentleman from New York [Mr. Powell] yielded his remaining time to the gentleman from

17. 112 CONG. REC. 22933, 22934, 89th Cong. 2d Sess.

Michigan [Mr. O'Hara] and that he therefore cannot yield time.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Michigan consumed 3 minutes.

MR. GROSS: Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from New York yielded the remainder of his time to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. O'Hara].

MR. POWELL: Mr. Speaker, may I be heard?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will state, when that is done on either side, when a Member does not consume the remainder of the time, control of the remaining time reverts to the Member who has charge of the time.

MR. GROSS: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. GROSS: When the Member in charge of time yields the remainder of his time to another Member, Mr. Speaker, I would not know how he would then be able to yield time to any other Member.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will rule that when the gentleman in control of time yields the remainder of his time to another Member, and the other Member does not use up all the time, then the remainder of the time comes back under the control of the Member who originally had control of the time.

On Feb. 8, 1972,⁽¹⁸⁾ the House was considering House Resolution 164, creating a select committee. Mr. Ray J. Madden, of Indiana, was in control of the time under the hour rule. He yielded 10 minutes to Mr. Cornelius E. Gallagher, of New Jersey; Speaker Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, ruled that Mr. Gallagher could not reserve any part of that time, and that any part of the 10 minutes not used by him reverted to Mr. Madden:

MR. MADDEN: Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Gallagher).

MR. GALLAGHER: Mr. Speaker, may I take 5 minutes now and reserve 5 minutes to the end of the debate since it is my bill?

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman may do that. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MR. [DURWARD G.] HALL [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, and I hate to object, but is it in order to have a unanimous-consent request at a time like this when the time is controlled by the members of the Committee on Rules to bring the bill on the floor?

MR. GALLAGHER: I asked for the time to close the debate since there will be objections, and I would like to respond to those objections. It was my understanding that I would have the time at the conclusion of debate.

MR. HALL: Mr. Speaker, I submit this is between the gentleman and the man handling the rule, and therefore I must object.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will notify the gentleman when 5 minutes are up. . . .

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from New Jersey has consumed 5 minutes.

MR. GALLAGHER: Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

18. 118 CONG. REC. 3181-3200, 92d Cong. 2d Sess.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair must advise the gentleman that the time is under the control of the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. Madden) and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Latta).

MR. GALLAGHER: Mr. Speaker, I was granted 10 minutes and I reserve the balance of my time.

MR. GROSS: Mr. Speaker, the gentleman cannot reserve the balance of 5 minutes.

MR. GALLAGHER: I am not speaking under the 5-minute rule.

MR. GROSS: It does not make any difference. . . .

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Indiana has control of the time and the Chair has so advised the gentleman from New Jersey of that fact.

If the gentleman from Indiana desires to yield further time at this time he can do so.

Yielding for Reading of Paper

§ 29.17 A Member having the floor may yield to another to read a paper without losing the right to the floor.

On Apr. 25, 1947,⁽¹⁹⁾ Mr. John J. Rooney, of New York, had the floor under the five-minute rule in the Committee of the Whole. Mr. Rooney yielded to Mrs. Helen Gahagan Douglas, of California, to read a statement made by the Secretary of the Interior. Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, made the point of order that Mr.

19. 93 CONG. REC. 4086, 80th Cong. 1st Sess.

Rooney had yielded and lost the floor. Chairman Earl C. Michener, of Michigan, overruled the point of order and stated that Mr. Rooney still had the floor.

Member Having Special Order Yielded to Member Having Next Special Order

§ 29.18 A Member having a special order was permitted, by unanimous consent, to relinquish part of his time to the Member having the next special order.

On July 11, 1966,⁽¹⁾ Mr. Wright Patman, of Texas, had scheduled a special order to address the House, with a special order to follow by Mr. Thomas B. Curtis, of Missouri. By unanimous consent, Mr. Patman relinquished the floor for five minutes to Mr. Curtis.

Use of Time Yielded for Debate Only

§ 29.19 A Member may not be recognized to offer an amendment in time yielded for debate only.

On Feb. 2, 1955,⁽²⁾ Mr. Ray J. Madden, of Indiana, called up at the direction of the Committee on

1. 112 CONG. REC. 14988, 89th Cong. 2d Sess.

2. 101 CONG. REC. 1076-79, 84th Cong. 1st Sess.

Rules House Resolution 63, authorizing the Committee on Veterans' Affairs to inspect the Veterans' Administration. Mr. Madden yielded three minutes' time for debate to Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts. Mrs. Rogers indicated she wished to offer an amendment to prohibit the Committee on Veterans' Affairs from investigating any matter under investigation by another committee of the House. Mr. Madden stated that he did not yield for the purpose of having such an amendment offered. Speaker Pro Tempore Robert C. Byrd, of West Virginia, ruled that Mrs. Rogers did not have the right to offer an amendment in time yielded her for debate only.

§ 29.20 When a motion to recede from and concur in a Senate amendment is pending, an amendment to the motion may not be offered in time yielded for debate.

On July 11, 1968,⁽³⁾ Mrs. Julia Butler Hansen, of Washington, offered a motion to recede and concur in a Senate amendment following adoption of a conference report on H.R. 17354, the Department of the Interior appropriations for fiscal 1969. At his request, Mrs. Hansen yielded for debate to Mr. Charles R. Jonas, of North Carolina, who then attempted to offer an amendment to the motion. However, Mrs. Hansen refused to yield for that motion saying she had yielded only for the purpose of debate.

§ 29.21 A Member may not in time yielded him for general debate move that the Committee of the Whole rise, nor may he yield to another for such motion.

On Feb. 22, 1950,⁽⁴⁾ Mr. Howard W. Smith, of Virginia, moved, in time yielded him in the Committee of the Whole by Mr. Adam C. Powell, of New York, for general debate, that the Committee rise. Chairman Francis E. Walter, of Pennsylvania, ruled that that motion was not in order, since Mr. Powell had control of the time and since he had not yielded time to Mr. Smith for the making of the motion. Subsequently, Mr. Hugo S. Sims, Jr., of South Carolina, in time yielded for debate by Mr. Powell, yielded to Mr. Smith who again moved that the Committee rise, stating he had "some time of my own." The Chairman ruled that the motion was not in order, since Mr. Sims was yielded time for general debate and could not yield to Mr. Smith for the making of the motion.

On appeal, the Chairman's ruling was sustained.⁽⁵⁾

Parliamentarian's Note: When the House has vested control of general debate in the Committee of the Whole in the chairman and ranking minority member of the committee reporting a bill, their control of general debate may not be abrogated by another Member moving that the Committee rise—unless they yield for that purpose.

—Parliamentary Inquiries in Time Yielded for Debate

§ 29.22 Where a Member controlling the time for debate yields to another for debate, the latter may, during the time so yielded, propound a parliamentary inquiry.

On July 17, 1967,⁽⁶⁾ Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, ruled that a Member yielded time for debate could within that time propound a parliamentary inquiry:

MR. [SAMUEL N.] FRIEDEL [of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. Adams].

5. See also 113 CONG. REC. 14121, 90th Cong. 1st Sess., May 25, 1967.

6. 113 CONG. REC. 19033, 90th Cong. 1st Sess.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Washington is recognized.

MR. [BROCK] ADAMS: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

MR. FRIEDEL: Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman for the purpose of debate.

MR. ADAMS: Mr. Speaker, may I inquire of the gentleman controlling the time whether I may also make a parliamentary inquiry?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will state that if the gentleman wants to make a parliamentary inquiry, it is within his time. A parliamentary inquiry will take up the time of the gentleman.

Yielding for Parliamentary Inquiry

§ 29.23 A Member may not be taken from the floor by a parliamentary inquiry, but he may yield for that purpose.

On Oct. 8, 1968,⁽⁷⁾ Mr. Ray J. Madden, of Indiana, called up by direction of the Committee on Rules a resolution providing an order of business. Mr. Madden was recognized for one hour, and Mr. Gerald R. Ford, of Michigan, attempted to raise a parliamentary inquiry. Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, indicated that Mr. Madden could not be taken off the floor by an inquiry made without his consent, but that he could yield for that purpose:

7. 114 CONG. REC. 30217, 90th Cong. 2d Sess.

MR. GERALD R. FORD: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: Does the gentleman from Indiana yield to the gentleman from Michigan?

MR. GERALD R. FORD: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

MR. MADDEN: I do not yield.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair is asking the gentleman from Indiana if he yields to the gentleman from Michigan for the purpose of making a parliamentary inquiry.

MR. MADDEN: No.

MR. GERALD R. FORD: Mr. Speaker, I demand the right to make a parliamentary inquiry.

MR. MADDEN: I yield.

MR. GERALD R. FORD: Mr. Speaker, I make a demand of personal privilege.

THE SPEAKER: Just a minute. The gentleman from Indiana has yielded to the gentleman from Michigan for the purpose of making a parliamentary inquiry.

MR. GERALD R. FORD: I appreciate the delayed recognition by the gentleman from Indiana.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.⁽⁸⁾

§ 29.24 A Member may not be interrupted by another Mem-

Where a Member yields to another for a parliamentary inquiry, the time consumed by the inquiry is charged against the yielding Member (see §§ 29.5, 29.7, supra).

ber for a parliamentary inquiry without his consent and if the Member who has the floor refuses to yield and demands regular order the Chair will not recognize another Member to propound a parliamentary inquiry.

On July 8, 1975,⁽⁹⁾ the proceedings described above occurred in the Committee of the Whole, as follows:

MR. [JOHN D.] DINGELL [of Michigan]: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Dingell to the amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by Mr. Hébert: . . .

MR. DINGELL: Mr. Chairman, this is an amendment about which my colleagues have received communications in the last few days from the Sierra Club and from other nationwide conservation organizations. . . .

MR. [DON] YOUNG of Alaska: Mr. Chairman, I have a point of order to the germaneness of this amendment.

MR. DINGELL: Mr. Chairman, I do not yield for the point of order. The point of order is too late.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁰⁾ The Chair rules that the point of order is too late.

MR. YOUNG of Alaska: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

9. 121 CONG. REC. 21628, 94th Cong. 1st Sess.

10. Neal Smith (Iowa).

MR. DINGELL: Mr. Chairman, may we have the regular order. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Dingell) refuses to yield.

MR. YOUNG of Alaska: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN: That could only be made before the gentleman from Michigan was recognized with respect to his amendment. . . .

MR. DINGELL: Mr. Chairman, I ask for the regular order.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Dingell) refuses to yield.

Under regular order, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Dingell) is recognized.

Time Yielded for Unanimous-consent Request; Debate Under Reservation of Objection

§ 29.25 Where the Committee of the Whole is considering an amendment under a "modified closed" rule permitting only one amendment and no amendments thereto, and equally dividing the debate time on the amendment, time consumed under a reservation of objection to a unanimous-consent request to offer an amendment to the pending amendment comes out of the time controlled by the Member yielding for that request.

During consideration of House Joint Resolution 413 (further continuing appropriations for fiscal 1984) in the Committee of the Whole on Nov. 10, 1983,⁽¹¹⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [SILVIO O.] CONTE [of Massachusetts]: Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. Solomon).

MR. [GERALD B.] SOLOMON [of New York]: . . . Mr. Chairman, in just a moment I will be asking unanimous consent to offer an amendment which will reduce the amount of economic aid that we give to Zimbabwe by $30 million. . . .

MR. [THOMAS J.] HUCKABY [of Louisiana]: Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, is it my understanding that there is $75 million that is earmarked for Zimbabwe in the Wright amendment, and that Zimbabwe is also the country that has consistently supported the Cuban troops in Angola?

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹²⁾ The Chair would inform the Members that the debate on the reservation will have to come out of allotted time which is controlled by the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Interruption for Point of Order

§ 29.26 A Member having the floor may not be interrupted by another Member raising a parliamentary inquiry unless he yields for that purpose, but the Chair must permit an interruption to rule on any point of order raised during debate.

12. Wyche Fowler, Jr. (Ga.).

On Dec. 18, 1987,⁽¹³⁾ during consideration of a privileged resolution (H. Res. 335, disciplining a Member) in the House, the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [JULIAN C.] DIXON [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I call up a privileged resolution (H. Res. 335) in the matter of Representative Austin J. Murphy, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 335

Resolved, That the House of Representatives adopt the report by the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct dated December 16, 1987, in the matter of Representative Austin J. Murphy of Pennsylvania. . . .

MR. [NEWT] GINGRICH [of Georgia]: Mr. Speaker, I commend the committee for its report and its recommendation. . . .

This committee's earlier report on the gentleman from Rhode Island should be reexamined with this new yardstick. The committee's letter on the gentlewoman from Ohio should be scrutinized with this new yardstick. The admission of $24,000 in election law violations by the gentleman from California should be held up to this new yardstick.

Finally, the numerous allegations about the Speaker must be——

MR. [TOMMY F.] ROBINSON [of Arkansas]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁴⁾ The gentleman will state it.

MR. ROBINSON: Mr. Speaker, I thought we were here today to hear a very serious charge against one of our colleagues from Pennsylvania, not from California or other States.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Will the gentleman suspend? Does the gentleman from Georgia yield?

MR. GINGRICH: No, I do not yield, Mr. Speaker.

MR. ROBINSON: Mr. Speaker, I raise a point of order.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state his point of order.

MR. ROBINSON: Mr. Speaker, my point of order is that we are here to consider the committee's report against our colleague Austin Murphy and not against other Members today that the charges have not been substantiated or presented to the committee.

MR. GINGRICH: Would the Chair——

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Will the gentleman suspend?

The [gentleman] will yield on the point of order.

On the debate currently ongoing, there can be references made to other cases reported by the committee, not by individual or by name. The gentleman from Georgia, as the Chair understands, has not mentioned other individuals and the gentleman from Arkansas——

MR. ROBINSON: Mr. Speaker, he has, too.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman may compare disciplinary actions reported by the committee and should confine his remarks to the matters before the House.

One Recognized for Parliamentary Inquiry May Not Yield

§ 29.27 Recognition for a parliamentary inquiry is within the discretion of the Chair, and a Member so recognized may not yield to other Members.

On Mar. 16, 1988,⁽¹⁵⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House:

MR. [JUDD] GREGG [of New Hampshire]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

Mr. Speaker, I was just in my office viewing the proceedings here, and during one of the proceedings, when the gentleman from California [Mr. Dornan] was addressing the House, it was drawn to my attention that the Speaker requested that Mr. Dornan's microphone be turned off, upon which Mr. Dornan's microphone was turned off.

Mr. Speaker, my inquiry of the Chair is: Under what rule does the Speaker decide to gag opposite Members of the House? . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁶⁾ The Chair is referring to Mr. Dornan. He requested permission of the Chair to proceed for 1 minute, and that permission was granted by the House. Mr. Dornan grossly exceeded the limits and abused the privilege far in excess of 1 minute, and the Chair proceeded to restore order and decorum to the House. . . .

MR. GREGG: . . . I have not heard the Chair respond to my inquiry which is what ruling is the Chair referring to which allows him to turn off the microphone of a Member who has the floor?

15. 134 CONG. REC. 4084, 4085, 100th Cong. 2d Sess.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Clause 2 of rule I.

MR. GREGG: Mr. Speaker, I would ask that that rule be read. I would ask that that rule be read, Mr. Speaker. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: It reads, 2. He shall preserve order and decorum, and, in case of disturbance or disorderly conduct in the galleries, or in the lobby, may cause the same to be cleared. . . .

MR. GREGG: My parliamentary inquiry is that I want to know how the Chair can specifically turn off the microphone and what rule the Chair does it under, because the Chair has not answered that question.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair has responded to the parliamentary inquiry of the gentleman from New Hampshire.

MR. GREGG: Mr. Speaker, I reserve my time, and yield to the gentlewoman from Illinois [Mrs. Martin]. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair advises that a Member may not yield time to another Member under a parliamentary inquiry.

Yielding Blocks of Time—Further Yielding by Member to Whom Time Yielded § 29.28 A Member yielded time by the manager of a proposition in the House may yield a block of time to another Member by unanimous consent only.

During consideration of the conference report on the Energy Security Act (S. 932) in the House on June 26, 1980,⁽¹⁷⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁸⁾ Pursuant to House Resolution 728 and the rules of the House, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Moorhead) will be recognized for 2 hours, and the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. McKinney) will be recognized for 2 hours.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Moorhead). . . .

MR. [THOMAS S.] FOLEY [of Washington]: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may be permitted to yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. Perkins).

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington?

MR. [WILLIAM S.] MOORHEAD of Pennsylvania: Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, at this time I intended to yield a block of 20 minutes to the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Foley) for the purpose of yielding, debating, reserving his time, and yielding back his time.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Foley)?

There was no objection.

Parliamentarian's Note: An exception to this principle is during debate on special orders from the Committee on Rules, where the manager normally yields 30 minutes to the minority member, who in turn is permitted to yield blocks of time to other Members without remaining on his feet. And where time is divided by the House rules, each Member can yield blocks of time.

§ 29.29 A Member recognized in opposition to a motion to discharge a committee may not yield his time for debate to another to be yielded by the other Member.

On June 11, 1945,⁽¹⁹⁾ Mr. Vito Marcantonio, of New York, called up the motion to discharge the Committee on Rules from the further consideration of House Resolution 139, providing for the consideration of H.R. 7, the antipoll tax bill. Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, stated that Mr. Marcantonio would be recognized for 10 minutes in favor of the motion and that Mr. Edward E. Cox, of Georgia, would be recognized for 10 minutes in opposition.

Mr. Cox yielded to Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, who inquired whether he could be yielded the balance of Mr. Cox's time, with the privilege of yielding to others. Mr. Cox yielded Mr. Rankin the balance of his time, but Speaker Rayburn stated that Mr. Cox and not Mr. Rankin would control the distribution of the time.

19. 91 CONG. REC. 5892-96, 79th Cong. 1st Sess.

§ 29.30 The Member in charge of time for debate yielded one-half the time to a minority Member who was permitted, by unanimous consent, to further yield that time.

On Mar. 12, 1963,⁽²⁰⁾ Mr. Emanuel Celler, of New York, asked unanimous consent for the consideration of H.R. 4374, to bestow citizenship on Sir Winston Churchill. Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, stated, in response to a parliamentary inquiry by Mr. H. R. Gross, of Iowa, that Mr. Celler was entitled to one hour of debate, to be yielded as he desired. The House then agreed to the following unanimous-consent request stated by Mr. Celler:

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Poff], and that he may yield such time as he desires.

Parliamentarian's Note: Richard H. Poff was a minority Member of the House.

Five-minute Debate—Yielding Time Allocated Under Limitation on Debate

§ 29.31 A limitation on time for debate on a pending amendment and all amendments thereto in effect abrogates the five-minute rule and the Chair, at his discretion, may allocate time to all Members desiring to speak, whether or not they have previously spoken on the amendment; Members to whom time has been allocated may by unanimous consent yield their time to another Member.

On Oct. 1, 1975,⁽¹⁾ during consideration of the Department of Defense appropriation bill (H.R. 9861) in the Committee of the Whole, the proceedings described above occurred as follows:

MR. [GEORGE H.] MAHON [of Texas]: Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I had misjudged before the desire of the House at an earlier time to try to limit debate to 30 minutes. I want to be sure that no one is denied the opportunity to speak. I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto conclude in 15 minutes.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽²⁾ Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

1. 121 CONG. REC. 31074, 31075, 94th Cong. 1st Sess.
2. Dan Rostenkowski (Ill.).

There was no objection. . . .

MR. [BURT L.] TALCOTT [of California]: Mr. Chairman, may I inquire whether or not the Members who have already spoken on this amendment may speak again during limited time?

THE CHAIRMAN: When time is limited, Members are permitted to speak again under the allocation of time.

MR. TALCOTT: And they can yield their time to other Members?

THE CHAIRMAN: That is a unanimous-consent request. . . .

MR. [BARRY] GOLDWATER [Jr., of California]: . . . I ask unanimous consent that the time be extended another 15 minutes.

THE CHAIRMAN: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

MR. [ANDREW J.] HINSHAW [of California]: Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, if we were to accede to the unanimous-consent request, would that open the door for additional Members to stand up to seek additional time?

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair has already announced his allocation of time.

In House: Yielding for Amendment

§ 30.1 A pending motion being considered in the House is not subject to amendment unless the Member in control specifically yields for that purpose or unless the previous question is rejected.

On Oct. 31, 1983,⁽³⁾ during consideration of a motion to instruct conferees on H.R. 3222 (Departments of Commerce, State, and Justice appropriations for fiscal 1984) in the House, the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [GEORGE M.] O'BRIEN [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. O'Brien moves that the managers on the part of the House in the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill, H.R. 3222, be instructed to insist on the House position on the amendment of the Senate numbered 93.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁴⁾ The gentleman from Illinois (Mr. O'Brien) is recognized for 1 hour.

MR. O'BRIEN: Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

3. 129 CONG. REC. 29963, 29964, 98th Cong. 1st Sess.

4. Robert A. Roe (N.J.).

Mr. Speaker, this motion instructs the House conferees to insist on the House position on Senate amendment 93, which earmarks $70,155,000 in the bill for the juvenile justice program. . . .

MR. [HANK] BROWN of Colorado: Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

MR. O'BRIEN: I am happy to yield to the gentleman from Colorado.

MR. BROWN of Colorado: Mr. Speaker, I have a motion at the desk that I would like to offer in order to amend the motion.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Does the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. O'Brien) yield for that purpose?

MR. O'BRIEN: I yield not for the purposes of amendment.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Does the gentleman yield for debate only?

MR. O'BRIEN: For debate only, Mr. Speaker.

MR. BROWN of Colorado: Mr. Speaker, I believe I was yielded to without that limitation, and I would like to offer my amendment No. 1 as an amendment to the motion to instruct.

MR. O'BRIEN: In my naivete, I did not anticipate the amendment, Mr. Speaker. However my statement still prevails. I yielded only for comment.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair recognizes that the gentleman yielded only for comment, so the Chair is going to sustain the position of the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. O'Brien). . . .

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state his inquiry.

MR. WALKER: Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman from Colorado wishes to offer his amendment as an amendment to the instructions offered by the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. O'Brien), could that be done by defeating the previous question on the motion, thereby giving the gentleman from Colorado an opportunity to offer an amendment?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: If the previous question is voted down, an amendment would be in order. . . .

MR. O'BRIEN: Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion.

[The previous question was defeated and Mr. Brown offered an amendment.]

§ 30.2 Bills requiring consideration in the Committee of the Whole are considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole under the five-minute rule when unanimous consent is granted for their immediate consideration, but when consent is granted for their immediate consideration in the House, debate is under the hour rule and amendments are only in order if the Member controlling the time yields for that purpose.

On Apr. 11, 1974,⁽⁵⁾ Speaker Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, responded to an inquiry regarding the consideration of amendments in the House as in Committee of the Whole:

MR. [JOHN A.] BLATNIK [of Minnesota]: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration in the House of the Senate bill (S. 3062) the Disaster Relief Act Amendments of 1974.

5. 120 CONG. REC. 10769, 10770, 10771, 93d Cong. 2d Sess.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

THE SPEAKER: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota? . . .

MR. [RICHARD W.] MALLARY [of Vermont]: Mr. Speaker, if a bill is brought up under a unanimous-consent request and considered in the House at this time, would any amendment be in order?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will state that since the gentleman is asking that it be considered in the House, the gentleman will then have control of the time.

—Amendment to Committee Amendment

§ 30.3 Where there was pending in the House under the hour rule a resolution and a committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, the Chair indicated that an amendment to the committee amendment could be offered only if the manager yielded for that purpose or if the previous question were rejected, and that a motion to recommit with instructions containing a direct amendment could not be offered if the committee substitute were adopted (since it is not in order to further amend a measure already amended in its entirety).

On Mar. 22, 1983,⁽⁶⁾ after House Resolution 127 was called up for consideration in the House, Speaker Pro Tempore John F. Seiberling, of Ohio, responded to several parliamentary inquiries, as indicated below:

MR. [FRANK] ANNUNZIO [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on House Administration, I call up a privileged resolution (H. Res. 127), providing amounts from the contingent fund of the House for expenses of investigations and studies by standing and select committees of the House in the 1st session of the 98th Congress.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 127

Resolved, That there shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House in accordance with this primary expense resolution not more than the amount specified in section 2 for investigations and studies by each committee named in such section. . . .

Committee amendment in the nature of a substitute: Strike out all after the resolving clause and insert:

6. 129 CONG. REC. 6447, 6448, 6455, 98th Cong. 1st Sess.

That there shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House in accordance with this primary expense resolution not more than the amount specified in section 2 for investigations and studies by each committee named in such section. . . .

Sec. 2. The committees and amounts referred to in the first section are: Select Committee on Aging, $1,316,057; Committee on Agriculture, $1,322,669; Committee on Armed Services, $1,212,273. . . .

MR. [WILLIAM E.] DANNEMEYER [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

If this Member from California would now offer an amendment to the total in this resolution . . . would that amendment now be in order?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would rule that the amendment would be in order if the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Annunzio) would yield to the gentleman from California. . . .

MR. DANNEMEYER: . . . What if we were successful in defeating the previous question with respect to this issue? If we did, would an amendment to reduce spending consistent with what I stated previously then be in order?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would advise the gentleman if the previous question were defeated a germane amendment to the committee amendment would be in order at that time. . . .

MR. DANNEMEYER: I have a further parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

We have a motion to commit which is available at the conclusion of a matter of this type. Is the procedure under which this process is now considered by the floor such that the motion to commit can be used with instructions to reduce spending by a certain amount or is it a motion to recommit without instructions?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: If the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute is agreed to no further direct amendment could be made by a motion to recommit.

—Resolution Raising Privileges of House

§ 30.4 A Member recognized to debate a resolution raising a question of the privileges of the House controls one hour of debate, and the resolution is not amendable unless he yields for that purpose or unless the previous question is voted down.

On Feb. 13, 1980,⁽⁷⁾ during consideration of House Resolution 578 (directing the Committee on Rules to make certain inquiries), the following proceedings occurred in the House:

MR. [RICHARD] BOLLING [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, I send to the desk a privileged resolution (H. Res. 578) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 578

Resolved, Whereas it was reported in the public press on February 9,

7. 126 CONG. REC. 2768, 2769, 96th Cong. 2d Sess.

1980, that, "The House of Representatives this week lost a secret effort in court to obtain a ruling that congressmen do not have to respond to federal grand jury subpoenas for House records;" and . . .

Whereas such alleged House action involves the conduct of officers and employees of the House, newspaper charges affecting the honor and dignity of the House, and the protection of the constitutional prerogatives of the House when directly questioned in the courts. . . .

Therefore be it resolved, That the Committee on Rules be instructed to inquire into the truth or falsity of the newspaper account and promptly report back to the House its findings and any recommendations thereon. . . .

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁸⁾ The Chair has examined the resolution and finds that under rule IX and the precedents of the House, the resolution presents the question of the privilege of the House.

The gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Bolling) will be recognized for 1 hour.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Bolling). . . .

MR. BOLLING: Mr. Speaker, I am happy to yield to my distinguished friend from Arizona 5 minutes for debate only. . . .

THE SPEAKER: . . . The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. Rhodes).

—Privileged Resolution

§ 30.5 The Member calling up a privileged resolution from the Committee on Rules controls one hour of debate in the House, and the resolution is not subject to amendment unless the Member in charge yields for that purpose.

8. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

On Feb. 26, 1976,⁽⁹⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House relative to calling up a resolution from the Committee on Rules:

MR. [CLAUDE] PEPPER [of Florida]: Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 868 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 868

Resolved, That Rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new clause:

"7. It shall not be in order to consider any report of a committee unless copies or reproductions of such report have been available to the Members on the floor for at least two hours before the beginning of such consideration. . . .

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁰⁾ The gentleman will state it.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, this resolution is to be considered in the House

9. 122 CONG. REC. 4625, 4626, 94th Cong. 2d Sess. Since the 103d Congress, debate on questions of privilege is divided between the proponent and the Majority or Minority Leader. (Rule IX clause 2, as amended Jan. 5, 1993.)

10. Carl Albert (Okla.).

which would preclude an amendment from being offered by any Member.

THE SPEAKER: It is a rule that comes from the Committee on Rules. It is under the charge of the gentleman handling the resolution.

MR. BAUMAN: So unless the gentleman yields for the purpose of an amendment, none would be in order?

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman is correct.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, what unanimous-consent request might be entertained in order to allow amendments to be offered generally? Would it be a request to consider it in the House as in the Committee of the Whole?

THE SPEAKER: No. The gentleman from Florida controls the floor under the 1-hour rule in the House because this is a change in the rules brought to the floor by the Committee on Rules as privileged. Rules changes can be considered in the House.

—Amendments to Motion To Recommit

§ 30.6 A Member offering a motion to recommit with instructions controls the floor at the conclusion of the five minutes of debate in opposition to the motion and may yield for an amendment to his motion until such time as the previous question on the motion is moved; the Member speaking in opposition cannot yield for that purpose.

On July 19, 1973,⁽¹¹⁾ after the previous question was ordered on H.R. 8860, to amend and extend the Agricultural Act of 1970, to final passage, Mr. Charles M. Teague, of California, offered a motion to recommit with instructions. Pursuant to Rule XVI clause 4, Mr. Teague was recognized for five minutes in favor of the motion and Mr. William R. Poage, of Texas, was recognized for five minutes in opposition to the motion. Speaker Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, ruled that Mr. Teague, not Mr. Poage, was in control of the motion for the purpose of yielding to another Member to offer an amendment to the motion:

MR. GERALD R. FORD [of Michigan]: Mr. Speaker, will the distinguished chairman of the committee yield for an amendment to the motion to recommit?

MR. POAGE: Certainly, I will yield, but I would like to hear the amendment.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman is not in order. The gentleman from California (Mr. Teague) has control of the motion to recommit and can yield for that purpose if he desires to do so.

The gentleman from Texas now has the floor.

MR. POAGE: Mr. Speaker, I will not yield for a pig in a poke. I want to know what the gentleman is proposing.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman cannot yield for that purpose. The gentleman from California can yield for that purpose. . . .

11. 119 CONG. REC. 24967, 93d Cong. 1st Sess.

THE SPEAKER: The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

MR. [WAYNE L.] HAYS [of Ohio]: Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state it.

MR. HAYS: Mr. Speaker, my point of order is that I do not believe the gentleman from California can yield for this purpose without getting unanimous consent.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman can yield for the purpose of an amendment, since he has the floor.

MR. TEAGUE of California: Mr. Speaker, I yield to the distinguished minority leader for the purpose of offering an amendment.

MR. GERALD R. FORD: Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment to the motion to recommit.

MR. [JOHN E.] MOSS [Jr., of California]: Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state it.

MR. MOSS: Mr. Speaker, my point of order is that the time of the gentleman from California has expired.

THE SPEAKER: That does not keep him from yielding.

MR. MOSS: He has not got the floor.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from California has the right to yield for an amendment, since he still has the floor as the previous question has not been ordered on the motion to recommit.

—Control of Floor Affected by Yielding for Amendment

§ 30.7 Where the Member in charge of a resolution in the House yields to another for the purpose of offering an amendment, he loses control of the floor, and the sponsor of the amendment gains control for an hour.

On Mar. 27, 1945,⁽¹²⁾ the House was considering, as unfinished business, House Resolution 195, creating a select committee. Mr. Edward E. Cox, of Georgia, the manager of the resolution, was recognized and moved the previous question, which was ordered. Discussion then ensued on an agreement made by Mr. Cox with Mr. Clinton P. Anderson, of New Mexico, that before the resolution was voted on an amendment to the resolution would be considered. Mr. Cox therefore moved to reconsider the vote on the previous question; on reconsideration, the previous question was rejected. Mr. Cox then yielded to Mr. Anderson to offer an amendment to the resolution, with control of the floor passing to Mr. Anderson.

MR. [EARL E.] MICHENER [of Michigan]: Mr. Speaker, the acting chairman of the Committee on Rules having yielded for the offering of an amendment, as I understand the rule, the gentleman from New Mexico now has 1 hour, and the gentleman from Georgia has lost the floor.

12. 91 CONG. REC. 2861, 2862, 79th Cong. 1st Sess.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹³⁾ The gentleman is correct.⁽¹⁴⁾

§ 30.8 A Member calling up a privileged resolution reported from the Committee on House Administration and in control of the time under the hour rule yielded to the Majority Leader to offer an amendment, the latter thereby gaining control of the floor.

On Sept. 17, 1965,⁽¹⁵⁾ Mr. Omar T. Burleson, of Texas, called up, as privileged by direction of the Committee on House Administration, House Resolution 585, dismissing election contests against certain Members-elect. Mr. Burleson yielded to the Majority Leader, Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, to offer an amendment to the resolution. Mr. Albert, having gained control of the time for debate, moved the previous question on the resolution. Mr. James G. Fulton, of Pennsylvania, then asked for time for debate in opposition to the amendment and was advised by Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, that he could not be recognized since he was not yielded time by Mr. Albert.

§ 30.9 Where a Member calling up a bill in the House and in control of the time under the hour rule yields to a minority Member to offer an amendment, he loses control of the floor.

On Oct. 5, 1962,⁽¹⁶⁾ Mr. Francis E. Walter, of Pennsylvania, called up by unanimous consent S. 3361, on the entry of aliens with special skills. He was recognized by Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, to control one hour of debate. He then yielded to Arch A. Moore, Jr., of West Virginia (a minority Member) to offer an amendment, thereby losing control of the floor.

§ 30.10 Where a Member in control of the time in opposition to a measure yields to another Member to offer an amendment, he loses control of the floor.

On Mar. 13, 1939,⁽¹⁷⁾ Mr. Howard W. Smith, of Virginia, called up at the direction of the Committee on Rules House Resolution

16. 108 CONG. REC. 22606-09, 87th Cong. 2d Sess.

17. 84 CONG. REC. 2663-73, 76th Cong. 1st Sess.

113, authorizing the Committee on the District of Columbia to investigate the milk industry. The previous question was rejected on the resolution, and Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, stated that the right to be recognized passed to Carl E. Mapes, of Michigan, a Member opposed to the resolution. Mr. Mapes then yielded to Mr. Charles A. Halleck, of Indiana, to offer an amendment, Mr. Mapes thereby losing control of the floor.

In response to a number of parliamentary inquiries, the Speaker explained that a Member, having offered an amendment, could not yield to another Member to offer an amendment to his amendment without losing the floor.

§ 30.11 The manager of a conference report controlling the floor on a motion to dispose of an amendment in disagreement, by yielding to another Member to offer an amendment to his motion, loses the floor and the Member to whom he has yielded controls one hour of debate on his amendment and may move the previous question on his amendment and on the original motion.

During consideration of the conference report on H.R. 7933 (the Defense Department appropriation bill for fiscal year 1978) in the House on Sept. 8, 1977,⁽¹⁸⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [GEORGE H.] MAHON [of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, I hope we have had a fair debate on the issues. My motion provides for the continuation of the B-1 program, and I rise in further support of my motion and in opposition to the Addabbo amendment.

By previous arrangement, in order to be absolutely fair with the House and give the House an opportunity to work its will, I yield to the gentleman from New York (Mr. Addabbo) for the purpose of offering an amendment.

MR. [JOSEPH P.] ADDABBO [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment to the motion offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Mahon).

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Addabbo to the motion offered by Mr. Mahon: In lieu of the sum proposed to be inserted by said motion insert: "$6,262,000,000".

MR. ADDABBO: Mr. Speaker, I will not take the hour. By previous arrangement and agreement with the chairman of the full committee, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Mahon), who has been kind enough to recognize me at this time for the purpose of offering this amendment, the agreement was that I would after offering the substitute move the previous question so that we would have a clear vote on the question of whether or not to fund the B-1. . . .

18. 123 CONG. REC. 28130-32, 95th Cong. 1st Sess.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the amendment to the motion.

The previous question was ordered.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁹⁾ The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York (Mr. Addabbo) to the motion offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Mahon).

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

MR. ADDABBO: Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 202, nays 199, not voting 33. . . .

So the amendment to the motion was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Mahon), as amended.

The motion, as amended, was agreed to.

§ 30.12 Where the manager of a resolution under consideration in the House yields to another Member to offer an amendment, the manager loses control of the floor and the Member offering the amendment is recognized for one hour.

19. George E. Brown, Jr. (Calif.).

The following proceedings occurred in the House on June 10, 1980:⁽²⁰⁾

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁾ The unfinished business is the further consideration of the resolution (H. Res. 660) in the matter of Representative Charles H. Wilson. . . .

Pursuant to the rules of the House and the unanimous-consent agreement, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Bennett) has 12 minutes remaining; the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. Spence), has 8 minutes remaining; the gentleman from California (Mr. Charles H. Wilson), or his designee has 1 hour remaining. . . .

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Bennett).

MR. [CHARLES E.] BENNETT [of Florida]: Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Foley) for an amendment.

MR. [THOMAS S.] FOLEY [of Washington]: Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Foley: Strike out the second clause of House Resolution 660 and renumber the subsequent clauses accordingly.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Foley) for 1 hour.

Parliamentarian's Note: Mr. Bennett moved the previous question on the resolution as amended, although he had lost the floor when yielding to Mr. Foley for amendment, when no other Member sought the floor.

§ 30.13 Where a Member calling up a measure in the House offers an amendment and then yields to another Member to offer an amendment to his amendment, he loses the floor and the Member to whom he yielded is recognized for one hour and may move the previous question on the amendments and on the measure itself.

On Dec. 6, 1977,⁽²⁾ the House had under consideration House Joint Resolution 662 (continuing appropriations for fiscal 1978) when the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [GEORGE H.] MAHON [of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the rule just adopted by the House, I call up the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 662) making further continuing appropriations for the fiscal year 1978, and for other purposes. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽³⁾ The gentleman from Texas (Mr. Mahon) is recognized for 1 hour.

MR. MAHON: Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume and, Mr. Speaker, during the consideration of House Joint Resolution 662, I shall yield only for the purposes of debate and not for amendment unless I specifically so indicate. . . .

Second, immediately after I offer my amendment, I will yield to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel), the ranking minority member of the Labor-HEW Subcommittee and the ranking minority conferee on that appropriation bill for an amendment on the abortion issue. . . .

Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Mahon: On page 2, after line 9, insert the following:

Such amounts as may be necessary for projects or activities provided for in the Departments of Labor, and Health, Education, and Welfare, and Related Agencies Appropriation Act, 1978 (H.R. 7555), at a rate of operations, and to the extent and in the manner, provided for in such Act as modified by the House of Representatives on August 2, 1977, notwithstanding the provisions of section 106 of this joint resolution.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. MICHEL TO THE AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. MAHON

MR. [ROBERT H.] MICHEL [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment to the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Michel to the amendment offered by Mr. Mahon: At the end of the amendment of the gentleman from Texas strike the period, insert a semicolon, and add the following: "Provided, That none of the funds provided for in this paragraph shall be used to perform abortions except where the life of the mother would be endangered if the fetus were carried to term; or except for such medical procedures necessary for the victims of forced rape or incest. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel) is recognized for 1 hour.

MR. MICHEL: Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Mahon), the chairman of our committee, pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. . . .

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the amendments and the joint resolution.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Without objection, the previous question is ordered.

There was no objection.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel) to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Mahon). . . .

[The] amendment to the amendment was rejected. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Mahon).

The amendment was agreed to.

—Offeror of Preferential Motion May Not Move Previous Question in Time Yielded for Debate

§ 30.14 A Member who has offered a pending preferential motion to dispose of a Senate amendment in disagreement may not, during time yielded to him for debate only, move the previous question on his motion, thereby depriving the Members in charge of control of the time.

The proceedings of Dec. 4, 1975, during consideration of the conference report on H.R. 8069, the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare and related agencies appropriation bill for fiscal 1976, are discussed in § 33.12, infra.

Deferring Recognition to Another To Offer Motion To Dispose of Senate Amendment in Disagreement

§ 30.15 The manager of a conference report and amendments reported from conference in disagreement may defer to another member of the committee to offer the initial motion to dispose of an amendment reported in disagreement.

On May 24, 1984,⁽⁴⁾ during consideration of the conference report on House Joint Resolution 492 (urgent supplemental appropriations for the Department of Agriculture) in the House, the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [JAMIE L.] WHITTEN [of Mississippi]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Whitten moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 34 and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁵⁾ The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. Whitten).

The motion was agreed to.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Clerk will designate amendment No. 14.

The amendment reads as follows:

Senate amendment No. 14: Page 2, after line 17, insert:

CENTRAL INTELLIGENCE AGENCY

For activities of the Central Intelligence Agency . . . not to exceed $21,000,000. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. Whitten).

MR. WHITTEN: Mr. Speaker, on this amendment I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Boland).

MR. [EDWARD P.] BOLAND [of Massachusetts]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Boland moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 14 and concur therein with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment, insert the following:

No funds are appropriated herein for the Central Intelligence Agency in fiscal year 1984 for the purpose . . . of supporting, directly or indirectly, military or paramilitary operations in Nicaragua. . . .

MR. [SILVIO O.] CONTE [of Massachusetts]: Mr. Speaker, I yield our time to my good friend from Virginia (Mr. Robinson).

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Boland) will be recognized for 30 minutes and the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Robinson) will be recognized for 30 minutes.

Parliamentarian's Note: Mr. Whitten technically could not "yield" to Mr. Boland in this instance, since he did not have the floor between motions, but simply defer and not seek recognition.

Yielding for Motion To Adjourn

§ 30.16 Unless the Member who has control of the floor yields for that purpose, a motion to adjourn is not in order.

On Oct. 19, 1966,⁽⁶⁾ Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, ruled that unless Mr. Wayne L. Hays, of Ohio, who had the floor in debate on a resolution from the Committee on Rules,

6. 112 CONG. REC. 27725-27, 89th Cong. 2d Sess.

5. George E. Brown, Jr. (Calif.).

yielded for that purpose, a motion to adjourn would not be in order.⁽⁷⁾

§ 30.17 A Member holding the floor under a reservation of the right to object to a unanimous-consent request yielded to another Member to move to adjourn.

On Sept. 22, 1965,⁽⁸⁾ Mr. Abraham J. Multer, of New York, had been recognized to address the House under a special order. Mr. Joe D. Waggoner, Jr., of Louisiana, made a point of order that a quorum was not present and a call of the House was ordered. After 307 Members had answered to their names, Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, stated that without objection further proceedings under the call would be dispensed with. Mr. John D. Dingell, of Michigan, reserved the right to object and then yielded to Mr. Leslie C. Arends, of Illinois, who moved that the House adjourn. The Speaker inquired whether Mr. Dingell yielded for that purpose, and Mr. Din-

Under Five-minute Rule: Cannot Yield for Amendment

§ 30.18 A Member desiring to offer an amendment under the five-minute rule in Committee of the Whole must seek recognition from the Chair, and a Member recognized under the five-minute rule may not yield to another Member to offer an amendment.

On Sept. 8, 1976,⁽¹⁰⁾ the Committee of the Whole had under consideration the Clean Air Act Amendments of 1976 (H.R. 10498) when the following exchange occurred:

MR. [PAUL G.] ROGERS [of Florida]: Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

MR. [ELLIOTT] LEVITAS [of Georgia]: Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

MR. ROGERS: I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

MR. LEVITAS: Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment that I would like to offer at this point.

9. When during debate the Member with the floor yields for the motion that the House adjourn, he does not lose the right to resume when debate is again continued (see 5 Hinds' Precedents §§ 5009-5013).

10. 122 CONG. REC. 29243, 94th Cong. 2d Sess.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹¹⁾ The Chair will advise the gentleman from Georgia that the gentleman will have to seek recognition on his own time and in due order.

MR. LEVITAS: I thank the Chairman.

MR. ROGERS: I yield back the balance of my time.

§ 30.19 A Member who has the floor under the five-minute rule in Committee of the Whole may not yield to another Member to offer an amendment, as it is within the sole power of the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole to recognize Members to offer amendments.

During consideration of the Education Amendments of 1978 (H.R. 15) in the Committee of the Whole on July 13, 1978,⁽¹²⁾ the following exchange occurred:

MR. [CARL D.] PERKINS [of Kentucky]: Let me say to the distinguished gentleman from Texas (Mr. Gonzalez) that we have spent about 24 hours on this amendment in the committee. Also we have a substitute amendment here that is agreed to and it will be offered either by the gentleman from Puerto Rico (Mr. Corrada) or the gentleman from California (Mr. Miller) so that right now I will yield to the gentleman from California (Mr. Miller) for the purpose of offering the substitute amendment.

11. J. Edward Roush (Ind.).

12. 124 CONG. REC. 20653, 95th Cong. 2d Sess.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹³⁾ The Chair will state that the gentleman cannot yield to another Member for the purpose of offering an amendment.

§ 30.20 The proponent of an amendment in Committee of the Whole is entitled to five minutes of debate in favor of the amendment before a perfecting amendment may be offered thereto, and he may not yield to another to offer an amendment.

During consideration of the Department of Defense authorization for fiscal year 1985 (H.R. 5167) in the Committee of the Whole on May 31, 1984,⁽¹⁴⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [WILLIAM L.] DICKINSON [of Alabama]: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Dickinson: At the end of this bill insert the following new section:

Sec. (a). (1) Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the amount authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 1985 for the Air Force for missiles is $7,756,600,000. . . .

MR. DICKINSON (during the reading): Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the Record. . . .

13. Robert B. Duncan (Oreg.).

14. 130 CONG. REC. 14648, 98th Cong. 2d Sess.

There was no objection.

MR. [MELVIN] PRICE [of Illinois]: Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me?

MR. DICKINSON: I am very pleased to yield to the chairman of the committee.

MR. PRICE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to offer a perfecting amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Alabama. The amendment is at the desk.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁵⁾ The Chair will make the observation that the gentleman has not yet discussed his amendment. At the conclusion of that discussion, it will then be in order for the gentleman to offer an amendment.

§ 30.21 A Member recognized under the five-minute rule in Committee of the Whole may not yield to another Member to offer an amendment, as recognition to offer amendments rests in the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole.

On Apr. 9, 1979, during consideration of H.R. 3324, the International Development Cooperation Act of 1979, an amendment was under consideration which stated in part as follows:⁽¹⁶⁾

Amendment offered by Mr. [Robert E.] Bauman [of Maryland]: On page 23, line 10, strike all of Section

303(a) and insert in lieu thereof the following new Section 303:

“Sec. 303. (a) Section 533 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 is amended to read as follows:

“Sec. 533—Southern Africa Program

“(a) Of the amount authorized to be appropriated to carry out this chapter for the fiscal year 1980, $68,000,000 shall be available (only) for the countries of southern Africa and for—

“(1) a southern Africa regional refugee support, training, and economic planning program. . . .

“(c) Of the amounts authorized to be appropriated to carry out the purposes of this section, $20,000,000 shall be made available to the government of Zimbabwe/Rhodesia which is installed in that nation as a result of the election held in April 1979, which election may be evaluated and reported upon by observers as provided for in this section.’”

After inquiries as to the precise language intended to be used in the amendment, and the effect thereof, Mr. Paul Findley, of Illinois, sought to change certain language:⁽¹⁷⁾

MR. FINDLEY: Mr. Chairman, just to bring this to a head, I ask unanimous consent that the word “shall” which appears in two places in the last paragraph of the amendment be changed to “may.”

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁸⁾ Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

MR. [STEPHEN J.] SOLARZ [of New York]: Mr. Chairman, I object.

17. 125 CONG. REC. 7761, 96th Cong. 1st Sess.

18. Elliott H. Levitas (Ga.).

THE CHAIRMAN: Objection is heard.

The gentleman will have to submit an amendment in writing if the Chair is to consider it.

MR. [JOHN H.] ROUSSELOT [of California]: Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words. . . .

MR. FINDLEY: Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for the purpose of offering an amendment?

MR. ROUSSELOT: Yes.

MR. FINDLEY: Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair will advise the gentleman from Illinois that he will have to seek his own time for the purposes of offering his amendment.

§ 30.22 A Member recognized under the five-minute rule in Committee of the Whole may not yield to another Member to offer an amendment, as recognition for amendments is in the Chair.

During consideration of the Department of Energy Authorization Act (H.R. 3000) in the Committee of the Whole on Oct. 18, 1979,⁽¹⁹⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [DON] FUQUA [of Florida]: Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from California (Mr. Lagomarsino), for the purpose of offering his amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE:⁽²⁰⁾ The Chair will advise the gentleman from Florida that the gentleman from California must seek his own time for the purpose of offering an amendment.

Does the gentleman from Florida yield back his time?

§ 30.23 A Member who has offered an amendment against which a point of order has been reserved may not during his time for debate yield to another Member to offer an amendment to the amendment.

The following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole on Mar. 21, 1979:⁽¹⁾

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽²⁾ When the Committee rose on Tuesday, March 20, 1979, the gentleman from New York (Mr. Weiss) had been recognized to offer an amendment.

The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Weiss: Page 3, insert after line 5 the following:

Sec. 5. (a) Section 3(b) of the Council on Wage and Price Stability Act is amended by striking out "Nothing in this Act" and inserting in lieu thereof "Except as provided in section 8, nothing in this Act". . . .

MR. [WILLIAM S.] MOORHEAD [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order against the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York (Mr. Weiss).

1. 125 CONG. REC. 5779-81, 96th Cong. 1st Sess.

2. Butler Derrick (S.C.).

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Moorhead) will be protected on his reservation of the point of order.

MR. [TED] WEISS [of New York]: Mr. Chairman, I rise to speak on the amendment. . . .

Mr. Chairman, I am today offering an amendment to H.R. 2283, the Council on Wage and Price Stability Reauthorization Act.

My amendment would give the President standby authority to impose wage, price, and related economic controls. . . .

MR. [MARC LINCOLN] MARKS [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

MR. WEISS: I am pleased to yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

MR. MARKS: Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York (Mr. Weiss).

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair will remind the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Marks) that his amendment is not in order at this point. . . .

The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Moorhead) has reserved a point of order against the pending amendment. . . .

MR. WEISS: Mr. Chairman, I would be pleased to accept that language [proposed by Mr. Marks] and make it part of my amendment, if that is satisfactory to the Chair. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair will state that a point of order has been reserved, and the time of the gentleman from New York (Mr. Weiss) has not expired. It would be improper for the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr.

Marks) to offer his amendment to the amendment at this time.

MR. WEISS: . . . I understood that what we had was a reservation of the point of order, and pending that, it is my understanding that the debate could proceed as if in fact there had been no intervention. I would ask if that is accurate.

THE CHAIRMAN: But the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York (Mr. Weiss) is the amendment that is pending before the Committee, and that is the subject at this moment.

MR. WEISS: That is right, Mr. Chairman.

THE CHAIRMAN: When the Chair disposes of the point of order, then the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Marks) may offer his amendment to the amendment, if it remains pending.

MR. WEISS: Mr. Chairman, I think what the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Marks) is asking, if the Chair would permit, is whether I would accept that language, not take it in the form of an amendment but accept it as part of my amendment. I would be pleased to do that.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair has no jurisdiction over that matter. That is between the gentleman from New York (Mr. Weiss) and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Marks). The modification must be in writing and must be by unanimous consent.

—Member Offering Pro Forma Amendment May Not Yield for Amendment

§ 30.24 A Member offering a pro forma amendment under the five-minute rule may not yield to another Member during that time to offer an amendment.

The following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole during consideration of H.R. 6030 (military procurement authorization for fiscal year 1983) on July 29, 1982:⁽³⁾

MR. [CHARLES E.] BENNETT [of Florida]: Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

MR. [NORMAN D.] DICKS [of Washington]: Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield? . . .

MR. BENNETT: The gentlewoman from Rhode Island (Mrs. Schneider).

MRS. [CLAUDINE] SCHNEIDER [of Rhode Island]: Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment at the desk.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁴⁾ The gentlewoman will suspend. The gentleman from Florida has the time.

MR. BENNETT: I have the time, Mr. Chairman. I yield to the gentlewoman.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman is yielding to the gentlewoman from Rhode Island for debate only. . . .

The gentlewoman is not recognized to offer that amendment at this time. The gentleman from Florida has the time.

—Effect of Allocation of Debate Time Under Limitation; Time Fixed and Control Divided therefor and all amendments thereto had been limited and equally divided between proponents of the original amendment and substitute and an opponent prior to the offering of those amendments, the proponent of the substitute was not permitted to offer it during time yielded to him for debate on the original amendment, but the proponent of an amendment to the substitute was permitted to offer it during time yielded by the opponent of the substitute, since amendments were in order at any time during the allocated time and all debate time had been otherwise allocated to other Members.

On June 18, 1981,⁽⁵⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole during consideration of H.R. 3480, the Legal Services Corporation Act Amendments of 1981:

MR. [ABRAHAM] KAZEN [Jr., of Texas]: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Kazen: Page 12, strike out lines 10 through 16 and insert in lieu thereof the following:

“(11) to provide legal assistance for or on behalf of any alien who has not been lawfully admitted for permanent residence in the United States unless the residence of the alien in the United States is authorized by the Attorney General; or

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁶⁾ In accordance with the prior agreement, under the unanimous-consent agreement, the gentleman from Texas is allocated 15 minutes in support of his amendment. . . .

Under the prior agreement . . . the Chair allocates 15 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Rodino) in opposition to this amendment. . . .

MR. [BILL] MCCOLLUM [of Florida]: Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

MR. [PETER W.] RODINO [Jr., of New Jersey]: I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

MR. MCCOLLUM: I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to speak in opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Kazen) if I might, please. . . .

I have before the desk a substitute amendment, and I would like to offer that substitute at this time.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman has been recognized under time controlled by the gentleman from New Jersey.

MR. RODINO: I yield to the gentleman for purposes of debate only, and I think the gentleman can offer his amendment on his own time.

MR. MCCOLLUM: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment as a substitute for the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. McCollum as a substitute for the amendment offered by Mr. Kazen: . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: Under prior agreement, by unanimous consent, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. McCollum) is allocated 15 minutes in support of his amendment. . . .

Does the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Rodino) rise in opposition to the substitute?

MR. RODINO: Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition. . . .

Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. Fish).

MR. [HAMILTON] FISH [Jr., of New York]: I thank the chairman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the amendment offered as a substitute for the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Fish to the amendment offered by Mr. McCollum as a substitute for the amendment offered by Mr. Kazen: . . .

§ 30.26 Where the Committee of the Whole has by unanimous consent fixed the time for debate on an amendment and divided control of the time, the two Members controlling debate may yield time as in general debate, and Members may offer and debate amendments in the time yielded them for that purpose.

ering H.R. 6400, the Voting Rights Act of 1965, pursuant to a unanimous-consent agreement fixing debate on the pending amendment at two hours and dividing control of the time between Mr. William M. McCulloch, of Ohio, the proponent of the amendment, and Emanuel Celler, of New York, Chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary. Mr. McCulloch, who had the floor, yielded to Mr. Robert McClory, of Illinois, who offered an amendment and was recognized by Chairman Richard Bolling, of Missouri, for five minutes.

The Chairman stated, in response to a parliamentary inquiry by Mr. Celler that the two Members in control could, under the unanimous-consent agreement, yield time to other Members and that Members yielded to could offer amendments.

—Offering Amendment Where Balance of Time Was Yielded by Unanimous Consent

§ 30.27 A Member recognized under the five-minute rule may not yield to another Member to offer an amendment (thereby depriving the Chair of his power of recognition), but he may by unanimous consent yield the balance of his time to another Member who may thereafter offer an amendment.

The proposition described above was demonstrated in the Committee of the Whole on Oct. 30, 1975,⁽⁸⁾ during consideration of H.R. 8603, the Postal Reorganization Act Amendments of 1975:

(Mr. Cohen asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

MR. [PIERRE S.] DU PONT [IV, of Delaware]: Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

MR. [WILLIAM S.] COHEN [of Maine]: I yield to the gentleman from Delaware.

MR. DU PONT: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁹⁾ The Chair will state that the gentleman from Maine cannot yield for the purpose of the gentleman from Delaware offering an amendment.

MR. COHEN: Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Delaware (Mr. du Pont).

THE CHAIRMAN: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maine?

There was no objection.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Delaware is recognized for 2 minutes.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. DU PONT

MR. DU PONT: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

9. Walter Flowers (Ala.).

The Clerk read the amendment as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. du Pont: Page 32, immediately after line 26, add the following new section:

Sec. 16. (a) Chapter 6 of title 39, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new section: . . .

Member in Control Does Not Yield to Another To Offer Preferential Motion

§ 30.28 A Member controlling the floor under the five-minute rule may not yield to another Member to offer a preferential motion, but must relinquish the floor by yielding back his time or withdrawing his amendment by unanimous consent; the Member offering the preferential motion must then seek recognition in his own right.

During consideration of H.R. 6942 (International Security and Development Cooperation Act of 1980) in the Committee of the Whole on May 28, 1980,⁽¹⁰⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹¹⁾ Are there further amendments to title I?

MR. [WILLIAM S.] BROOMFIELD [of Michigan]: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment. . . .

10. 126 CONG. REC. 12558, 12559, 96th Cong. 2d Sess.

11. Elliott H. Levitas (Ga.).

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Broomfield) is recognized for 5 minutes in support of his amendment.

MR. [CLEMENT J.] ZABLOCKI [of Wisconsin]: Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

MR. BROOMFIELD: I am glad to yield to the chairman of the committee.

MR. ZABLOCKI: Mr. Chairman, I note that the hour of 7:30 has arrived.

I have advised all of the members of the committee who have inquired that we would rise at 7:30. I am sure the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Broomfield) will not be offended if he will be the first Member recognized when the committee reconvenes for the purpose of considering his amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair will state that the gentleman is out of order until the gentleman from Michigan yields back his time or the amendment is withdrawn.

Does the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Broomfield) ask unanimous consent to withdraw his amendment, without prejudice, and with the right to offer it again?

MR. BROOMFIELD: Yes, Mr. Chairman. I ask unanimous consent, with that understanding, to withdraw my amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

MR. [JOHN H.] ROUSSELOT [of California]: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. ROUSSELOT: Mr. Chairman, why does the gentleman have to withdraw his amendment? It can be before us for consideration tomorrow.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair had already recognized the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Broomfield) for 5 minutes and the motion to rise could not take him from the floor.

MR. ROUSSELOT: Mr. Chairman, then the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Broomfield) will be first in order tomorrow, is that right?

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair will rule that the amendment is still pending. The gentleman's amendment will be pending tomorrow; if the gentleman now yields back his time and the motion to rise is then offered.

MR. ROUSSELOT: I thank the Chair. So the gentleman does not have to withdraw his amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN: That is correct. The gentleman from Michigan has yielded back his time. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Zablocki).

MR. ZABLOCKI: Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise. The motion was agreed to.

Yielding Time for Motion That Committee of the Whole Rise

§ 30.29 For a motion to be made in yielded time, the time must have been yielded for that purpose; thus, a Member may not in time yielded him for general debate move that the Committee of the Whole rise, nor may he yield to another for such motion.

On Feb. 22, 1950,⁽¹²⁾ Mr. Howard W. Smith, of Virginia, moved that the Committee of the Whole rise; this motion was made in time yielded him in the Committee by Mr. Adam C. Powell, of New York, for general debate. Chairman Francis E. Walter, of Pennsylvania, ruled that the motion was not in order, since Mr. Powell had control of the time and since he had not yielded time to Mr. Smith for the making of the motion.⁽¹³⁾

Member Recognized for One-minute Speech Could Not Yield for Request To Restore Bill to Private Calendar

§ 30.30 The Speaker declined to permit a Member recognized for a one-minute speech to yield to another Member to make a request to restore a bill to the Private Calendar (which the House had previously agreed, by unanimous consent, should be passed over).

On July 15, 1968,⁽¹⁴⁾ Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, recognized Mr. William L. Hungate, of Missouri, to make a one-minute speech. Mr. Hungate then asked unanimous consent that a bill previously stricken from the Private Calendar be restored thereto, and the Speaker ruled that he could not entertain that request. Mr. Hungate then proceeded for one minute and yielded to Mr. Thomas J. Meskill, of Connecticut, who moved that the same bill be restored to the Private Calendar. The Speaker ruled that he had not recognized Mr. Hungate for the purpose of yielding to Mr. Meskill for the motion, and that the motion was not in order.

Yielding for Debate Is Discretionary

§ 31.1 Yielding time for general debate is discretionary with the Members having control thereof.

On Aug. 12, 1959,⁽¹⁵⁾ the Committee of the Whole was considering H.R. 8342, the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act, pursuant to the provisions of House Resolution 338, placing control of general debate with the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Education and Labor. Chairman Francis E. Walter, of Pennsylvania, answered a parliamentary inquiry on the yielding of time:

MR. [ROMAN C.] PUCINSKI [of Illinois]: Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state it.

MR. PUCINSKI: Mr. Chairman, in view of the disparity of time, whereby the proponents of the Landrum-Griffin bill have 4 hours while the proponents of the committee bill and the Shelley bill have 1 hour each, is it possible under the rules for the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Kearns] who controls the time on the other side to share some of that time with some of us here who would like to ask some questions about the Landrum-Griffin bill?

THE CHAIRMAN: Of course, that is entirely possible, but that is in the discretion of the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

§ 31.2 A Member having the floor for debate may exercise discretion in yielding to other Members; and there is no rule of the House requiring a Member having the floor in debate to yield to another Member to whom he has referred during debate.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Aug. 2, 1984:⁽¹⁶⁾

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. Is it not within the traditions of the House that when gentlemen on the floor are engaging in debate, and engaging in debate in a way in which they make constant references to particular individuals that they would then yield to those individuals in order to be able to reply to the charges and statements that are being made?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁷⁾ There is no rule requiring that a Member yield to another Member when that Member has the floor.

MR. WALKER: Further parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

MR. [WILLIAM B.] RICHARDSON [of New Mexico]: Reclaiming my time, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The parliamentary inquiry has been responded to.

MR. WALKER: Further parliamentary inquiry.

MR. RICHARDSON: I believe we should follow the rules of the House. I believe I had explained my position for not yielding, and it is based on similar treatment that I have received on the floor of the House when in this kind of special order with I believe one of the three gentlemen present I asked to be recognized and I do not recall that I was recognized. In fact, I was not recognized.

Member Recognized To Debate Amendment May Yield

§ 31.3 A Member recognized under the five-minute rule in the Committee of the Whole to debate an amendment may yield to another if he so desires.

On June 22, 1945,⁽¹⁸⁾ the Committee of the Whole was considering a House joint resolution under the five-minute rule. Chairman Jere Cooper, of Tennessee, recognized for five minutes Mr.

Forest A. Harness, of Indiana, who then yielded his time to Mr. Fred L. Crawford, of Michigan, who had just consumed five minutes in debate. Mr. Wright Patman, of Texas, made a point of order on the ground that one Member could not yield another Member his time under the five-minute rule. The Chairman overruled the point of order and stated:

Any Member can yield to another Member, or decline to yield, as he desires.

Parliamentarian's Note: Mr. Crawford had just consumed five minutes and Mr. Harness yielded to him to complete his remarks. Mr. Harness remained standing while Mr. Crawford completed his speech.

§ 31.4 A Member recognized to strike out the last word under the five-minute rule may yield to another Member, even if the latter has just spoken.

On Mar. 21, 1960,⁽¹⁹⁾ Chairman Francis E. Walter, of Pennsylvania, ruled that a Member recognized on a pro forma amendment under the five-minute rule could yield to another Member:

THE CHAIRMAN: The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

MR. [EMANUEL] CELLER [of New York]: Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 additional minutes.

MR. [CLARE E.] HOFFMAN of Michigan: I object, Mr. Chairman.

MR. [SIDNEY R.] YATES [of Illinois]: Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Celler].

MR. CELLER: I thank the gentleman.

MR. HOFFMAN of Michigan: Just a minute. I make a point of order on this.

MR. CELLER: Mr. Chairman, deprivation of the State's ballot is wrong.

MR. YATES: Mr. Chairman, I am entitled to yield to the gentleman from New York.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Illinois was recognized, and he yielded to the gentleman from New York. The gentleman from New York is continuing in order.

Control of Time Where Time for Debate in Committee of the Whole Has Not Been Fixed

§ 31.5 When the House resolves itself into the Committee of the Whole for consideration of a bill without fixing time for debate, the Member first recognized is entitled to one hour and may yield such portions of that time as he desires (and after that hour another Member is recognized for an hour).

On Mar. 24, 1947,⁽²⁰⁾ Mr. Frank B. Keefe, of Wisconsin, moved that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole for the consideration of H.R. 2700, making appropriations for the Department of Labor and other agencies. He proposed a unanimous-consent request for the duration of general debate on the bill and the request was objected to. Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, then answered a parliamentary inquiry:

MR. KEEFE: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state it.

MR. KEEFE: Mr. Speaker, do I understand that on the adoption of the motion to go into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union that there will be 1 hour for general debate for each side?

THE SPEAKER: Under the rule, whoever is first recognized is entitled to 1 hour and, of course, the Member can yield such portions of that time as he wishes. . . .

MR. [JOHN J.] ROONEY [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, is it understood that the minority is to have an equal division of the time for debate this afternoon?

THE SPEAKER: After the first hour has been used by the majority, the minority then can have 1 hour under the rule.

Time Yielded for Debate Only—No Amendment Without Unanimous Consent

§ 31.6 A Member to whom time is yielded for debate only in the House on a resolution reported from the Committee on Rules and who seeks unanimous consent to offer an amendment is not entitled to have the amendment read by the Clerk where another Member objects to the offering of the amendment.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on May 14, 1985,⁽¹⁾ during consideration of House Resolution 157 (providing for consideration of H.R. 1157, maritime authorization for fiscal 1986):

MR. [JOHN JOSEPH] MOAKLEY [of Massachusetts]: Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 157, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution as follows:

H. RES. 157

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 1(b) of rule XXIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 1157) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 1986 for certain maritime programs of the Department of Transportation and the Federal Maritime Commission. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽²⁾ The gentleman from Massachusetts is recognized for 1 hour.

MR. MOAKLEY: Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. Lott), and pending that, I yield myself such time as I may consume. . . .

MR. [TRENT] LOTT [of Mississippi]: Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. . . .

Mr. Speaker, I send an amendment to the desk and ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Moakley) did not yield for that purpose. . . .

MR. LOTT: This is a unanimous-consent request.

MR. MOAKLEY: I object to the unanimous-consent request. . . .

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker. . . .

What has the gentleman from Massachusetts objected to? The amendment has not been read at this point.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: He is objecting to the offering and consideration of the amendment, including the reading.

MR. WALKER: It was my understanding that the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. Lott) simply asked unanimous consent that he be allowed to offer an amendment. The Clerk was about to read the amendment. Could not the gentleman withhold until the amendment at least was read? . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair has very clearly stated that the Clerk does not have to read the amendment. The gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Moakley) objected to the offering of the amendment. The Clerk is under no obligation to read the amendment.

Parliamentarian's Note: In this instance, the minority Member controlling debate time on the special rule sought unanimous consent to offer a (nongermane) amendment to require all Budget Act waivers recommended by that committee to be explained in the accompanying reports for the remainder of the 99th Congress.

Control of Time Where Time Under Five-minute Rule Has Been Limited and Divided

§ 31.7 Where the time for debate under the five-minute rule in the Committee of the Whole has been limited and divided by the Chair among those seeking recognition, a Member who has been recognized may retain the floor and yield to whomever he pleases.

On July 22, 1965,⁽³⁾ during consideration under the five-minute rule of H.R. 8283, the economic opportunity amendments, Mr. Adam C. Powell, of New York, moved that all debate on the pending amendment and on amendments thereto close at a certain time, which was agreed to by the Committee. Chairman John J. Rooney, of New York, recognized Mr. John H. Dent, of Pennsylvania, under the limitation and Mr. Dent yielded to Mr. Arnold Olsen, of Montana. Mr. H. R. Gross, of Iowa, objected and the Chairman stated "The gentleman from Pennsylvania has the floor and he may yield to whomever he pleases."

§ 31.8 Where debate has been limited on a pending amendment to a time certain and the Chair has divided the remaining time among those Members desiring to speak, a Member may, by unanimous consent, yield all his allotted time to another Member who may while remaining on his feet yield back to that Member for debate.

On June 24, 1971,⁽⁴⁾ the Committee of the Whole was proceeding under a limitation on five-minute debate, and Chairman Thomas G. Abernethy, of Mis-issippi, had divided the remaining time among those Members desiring to speak. A point of order was made against use of such time by yielding:

MR. [JOHN B.] ANDERSON of Illinois: Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from New York for yielding me his time. . . .

MR. [JAMES H.] SCHEUER [of New York]: Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

MR. ANDERSON of Illinois: I yield to the gentleman from New York (Mr. Scheuer).

MR. SCHEUER: Mr. Chairman, I think it is beneath the dignity of our great Nation to renege and welsch on its dues. There are many gentlemen in this Chamber who have had more experience with international organizations than I, but I have had some. Before I was a Congressman, I attended international organization meetings as a delegate on housing and planning—

MR. [H. R.] GROSS [of Iowa]: Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the gentleman from New York (Mr. Scheuer) is out of order at this time.

The gentleman from New York (Mr. Scheuer) yielded his time to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Anderson).

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair will state that what happened was that the gentleman from New York (Mr. Scheuer) yielded his time to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Anderson). Therefore the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Anderson) has control of the time.

§ 31.9 Where debate under the five-minute rule has been limited to 10 minutes by unanimous consent, with the final five minutes reserved to the committee, the Chair divides the first five minutes among those Members indicating a desire to speak, and a Member recognized during that time may yield to other Members for debate.

On May 18, 1972,⁽⁵⁾ the Committee of the Whole agreed to a unanimous-consent request by Mr. John J. Rooney, of New York, that debate under the five-minute rule be limited to 10 minutes, with the last five minutes reserved to the reporting committee (Committee on Appropriations). Chairman Richard Bolling, of Missouri, ruled that a Member recognized during the first five minutes could yield to others for debate:

THE CHAIRMAN: As one of the two Members standing when the unanimous-consent request was agreed to the Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Yates).

MR. [ROBERT L. F.] SIKES [of Florida]: Mr. Chairman, I had hoped to get recognition.

THE CHAIRMAN: Time for debate has been fixed. Under the unanimous-consent agreement, the Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Yates) for 5 minutes.

MR. [SIDNEY R.] YATES: Does the gentleman from Florida desire to share my time?

5. 118 CONG. REC. 18025, 18026, 92d Cong. 2d Sess.

MR. SIKES: Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. It was my understanding that the time was fixed with the last 5 minutes reserved to the committee.

THE CHAIRMAN: Does the gentleman from Illinois yield for a parliamentary inquiry?

MR. YATES: I yield for a parliamentary inquiry.

MR. SIKES: Mr. Chairman, it was my understanding the time had been fixed, with the last 5 minutes to be reserved for the committee. Presumably that time would be controlled by the chairman of the subcommittee.

THE CHAIRMAN: There will be 5 minutes remaining after the time of the gentleman from Illinois.

MR. ROONEY of New York: Mr. Chairman, may I say it is my understanding there would be 10 minutes.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from New York propounded a unanimous-consent request that at the conclusion of the remarks by the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Fascell) the time be limited to 10 minutes and that 5 minutes be reserved to the committee. The unanimous-consent request was granted. There were two Members standing, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Yates) and the gentleman from New York (Mr. Rooney).

The Chair has recognized the gentleman from Illinois, and the time is now running. If the gentleman cares to yield to any Member, that is his privilege.

§ 31.10 Where by unanimous consent debate on a pending amendment in Committee of the Whole has been equally divided between the proponent and an opponent of the amendment, those Members control all the remaining time and the Chair does not divide the time among Members standing.

During consideration of the military procurement authorization for fiscal year 1983 (H.R. 6030) in the Committee of the Whole on July 21, 1982,⁽⁶⁾ the Chair responded to inquiries regarding recognition for debate time. The proceedings were as follows:

MR. [SAMUEL S.] STRATTON [of New York]: Mr. Chairman, I asked the gentleman to yield for a unanimous-consent request. After consultation with the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Dicks) and with Members on our side, I would like to ask unanimous consent that we agree to vote on the Dicks amendment and all amendments thereto at 7 o'clock, with 1 hour of debate to be controlled by the gentleman from Washington and 1 hour of debate to be controlled by the Member from New York representing the committee.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁷⁾ The request is for 2 hours of debate time equally divided between the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Dicks) and the gentleman from New York (Mr. Stratton)?

MR. STRATTON: That is correct.

6. 128 CONG. REC. 17345, 97th Cong. 2d Sess.

7. Les AuCoin (Oreg.).

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

MR. STRATTON: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

[I]f time is to be controlled by the gentleman from Washington and by myself, is it required that those who wish to participate should stand at this time?

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The recognition of Members is totally at the discretion of the managers of the time.

MR. [ROBERT E.] BADHAM [of California]: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

Am I given to understand that on this side we have no time; we are not able to have any time? . . .

[T]he gentleman from Washington has 1 hour and the gentleman from New York has 1 hour. I was inquiring as to what time this side had.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: Under the unanimous-consent request the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Dicks) is recognized for 1 hour, and under the same unanimous-consent request the gentleman from New York (Mr. Stratton) is recognized for 1 hour.

Both managers of time may yield to members of the minority or members of the majority.

—Yielding Time Allocated Is by Unanimous Consent

§ 31.11 Where time for debate on an amendment and all amendments thereto has been limited and the time remaining has been allocated by the Chairman to Members seeking recognition, a Member may, by unanimous consent yield his time to another Member but a motion to that effect is not in order.

On June 25, 1975,⁽⁸⁾ during consideration of the Departments of Labor and Health, Education, and Welfare appropriations for fiscal year 1976 (H.R. 8069) in the Committee of the Whole, Mr. Daniel J. Flood, of Pennsylvania, made a motion as follows:

MR. FLOOD: Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto close . . . in 10 minutes.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁹⁾ The gentleman from Pennsylvania moves that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes.

The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania. . . .

So the motion was agreed to.

THE CHAIRMAN: Members standing at the time the motion was made will be recognized for approximately one-half minute each.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York (Mr. Downey).

MR. [THOMAS J.] DOWNEY of New York: Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to yield my time to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Obey)....

8. 121 CONG. REC. 20839, 94th Cong. 1st Sess.

9. James C. Wright, Jr. (Tex.).

MR. [JOHN M.] ASHBROOK [of Ohio]: Mr. Chairman, I object to any yielding.

THE CHAIRMAN: Objection is heard.

The gentleman from New York will be given the opportunity to speak for 30 seconds.

MR. DOWNEY of New York: Mr. Chairman, I move that my time be given to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Obey).

THE CHAIRMAN: That is an improper motion. The Chair would suggest that the gentleman from New York might yield for a question to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

MR. [DAVID R.] OBEY [of Wisconsin]: Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

MR. DOWNEY of New York: I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Unanimous Consent Required if Member Yielded to Speaks on Matter Not Relevant

§ 31.12 A Member who has been recognized under the five-minute rule may yield all or a portion of his time to another Member for the purpose of debate, but a Member yielded to may speak out of order, on a matter not relevant to the pending measure or amendment, by unanimous consent only.

On Apr. 28, 1983,⁽¹⁰⁾ during consideration of House Joint Resolution 13 (nuclear weapons freeze)

10. 129 CONG. REC. 10432, 10433, 98th Cong. 1st Sess.

in the Committee of the Whole, the following exchange occurred:

MR. [JAMES G.] MARTIN of North Carolina: Will the gentleman yield?

MR. [CLEMENT J.] ZABLOCKI [of Wisconsin]: Mr. Chairman, I already promised to yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Gonzalez) to speak out of order.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹¹⁾ Without objection, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Gonzalez) is recognized for the balance of the time of the gentleman from Wisconsin.

MR. [NEWT] GINGRICH [of Georgia]: Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. GINGRICH: Does the gentleman have the power to yield that time out of order for that purpose?

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair would advise that the gentleman may by unanimous consent yield to another Member to speak out of order.

MR. GINGRICH: I object, Mr. Chairman.

THE CHAIRMAN: Objection is heard.

The gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Zablocki) has 4½ minutes remaining. . . .

MR. [HENRY B.] GONZALEZ [of Texas]: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. GONZALEZ: Mr. Chairman, this request does not require unanimous consent, does it?

THE CHAIRMAN: If the gentleman from Wisconsin yielded to the gentleman from Texas, no unanimous consent is required, as long as the debate relates to the pending amendment.

Two Members Shared Time Yielded

§ 31.13 On one occasion in the Committee of the Whole, two Members were recognized jointly for general debate and shared the time yielded them by the Members controlling the time, the acting chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

On May 12, 1958,⁽¹²⁾ John M. Vorys, of Ohio, Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and Mr. Thomas E. Morgan, of Pennsylvania, the ranking minority member, yielded time as follows in general debate on a bill under their control:

MR. VORYS: Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as may be necessary to announce the next part of general debate.

Our colleagues from the committee, the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Carnahan] and the gentleman from New Hampshire [Mr. Merrow], have gone all over the United States talking to thousands of people, explaining with charts what this program is about. We asked them to do it before our committee and we were so impressed that we have asked them to do it for the Committee of the Whole today; and it is for that purpose I now yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from New Hampshire [Mr. Merrow]. I understand a similar amount of time will be yielded to the gentleman from Missouri, so that they may give us this explanation from the charts that has been so useful.

11. Matthew F. McHugh (N.Y.).

12. 104 CONG. REC. 8429, 85th Cong. 2d Sess.

MR. MORGAN: Mr. Chairman, I yield 25 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹³⁾ The gentleman from New Hampshire is recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Missouri for 25 minutes.

The gentleman from Missouri may proceed.

MR. [ALBERT S. J.] CARNAHAN: Mr. Chairman, of the 25 minutes allotted to me I now allot to the gentleman from New Hampshire [Mr. Merrow], such part of it as he may use, and I ask that he now come to the floor.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from New Hampshire has 20 minutes time in his own right.

MR. CARNAHAN: Mr. Chairman, neither of us is going to use the entire time allotted to us in one continuous speech. We are going to talk back and forth and it is his intention to yield a portion of his time to me.

With the assistance of several charts we have here the gentleman from New Hampshire and I will attempt to explain some of the issues involved in the mutual-security program as we have been attempting to explain the program in several sections of the country. We are not going to speak simultaneously, although that might be doing you a favor, for we would get through a little sooner. At this time I yield to the gentleman from New Hampshire.

Yielding Time on Motion To Discharge

§ 31.14 A Member recognized for debate in opposition to a motion to discharge a committee may yield a portion of his time to other Members.

On Dec. 13, 1937,⁽¹⁴⁾ Mr. Edward E. Cox, of Georgia, recognized for 10 minutes of debate in opposition to a motion to discharge, yielded his full 10 minutes to another Member after Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, stated that he could yield all or part of his time, the proponents of the motion having the right to open and close debate.

§ 31.15 A Member recognized to control half of the 20 minutes' debate on a motion to discharge may yield any part of it.

On June 15, 1960,⁽¹⁵⁾ the House was considering a motion to discharge called up by Mr. T. Ashton Thompson, of Louisiana. Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, stated he would, pursuant to Rule XXVII providing for 10 minutes for and 10 minutes against the motion, recognize Mr. Thompson and Mr. Edward H. Rees, of Kansas, for that purpose.

15. 106 CONG. REC. 12691-93, 86th Cong. 2d Sess.

13. Hale Boggs (La.).

In response to parliamentary inquiries, the Speaker stated that Mr. Thompson and Mr. Rees could yield any part of their 10 minutes that they desired.

§ 31.16 A Member recognized in opposition to a motion to discharge a committee may not yield his time for debate to another to be yielded by the other Member.

On June 11, 1945,⁽¹⁶⁾ Mr. Edward E. Cox, of Georgia, was recognized by Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, for 10 minutes in opposition to a motion to discharge a committee. Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, asked Mr. Cox to yield him the balance of his time and Mr. Cox stated he would so yield if no other members of the reporting committee desired time. Mr. Rankin then inquired of the Speaker whether he would be permitted to yield the time yielded him as he saw fit. The Speaker responded that Mr. Cox and not Mr. Rankin had control of the time.

Previous Question Terminates Time Yielded to Minority

§ 31.17 The Member recognized to control one hour of debate in the House may, by moving the previous question, terminate utilization of debate time he has previously yielded to the minority.

On Mar. 9, 1977,⁽¹⁷⁾ it was demonstrated that a Member calling up a privileged resolution in the House may move the previous question at any time, notwithstanding his prior allocation of debate time to another Member:

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁸⁾ The gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Bolling) is recognized for 1 hour.

MR. [RICHARD] BOLLING [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Anderson), for the minority, pending which I yield myself 5 minutes. . . .

Mr. Speaker, the other amendment that the gentleman offers proposes to give the House the opportunity to vote up or down in a certain period of time regulations proposed by the select committee. What that does, and it really demonstrates an almost total lack of understanding of the rules, is to upgrade regulations into rules. The Members of the House will have the opportunity to deal with all laws and rules. That is provided in the resolution. . . .

17. 123 CONG. REC. 6816, 95th Cong. 1st Sess.

18. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution. . . .

MR. [JOHN B.] ANDERSON of Illinois: I have time remaining. Do I not have a right to respond to the gentleman from Missouri?

THE SPEAKER: Not if the previous question has been moved, and it has been moved.

MR. ANDERSON of Illinois: Even though the gentleman mentioned my name and made numerous references to me for the last 10 minutes?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair is aware of that.

The question is on ordering the previous question.

Member Who Offered Preferential Motion To Dispose of Senate Amendment Does Not Move Previous Question

§ 31.18 A Member who has offered a pending preferential motion to dispose of a Senate amendment in disagreement may not, during time yielded to him for debate only, move the previous question on his motion, thereby depriving the Members in charge of control of the time.

The proceedings of Dec. 4, 1975, during consideration of the conference report on H.R. 8069, the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare and related agencies appropriation bill for fiscal 1976, are discussed in §33.12, infra.

Yielding Yielded Time

§ 31.19 Where a Member is yielded time in the House for debate only, he may not yield to a third Member for purposes other than debate.

On Aug. 10, 1970,⁽¹⁹⁾ Speaker Pro Tempore Chet Holifield, of California, answered a parliamentary inquiry on the yielding of time for debate:

MR. GERALD R. FORD [of Michigan]: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. GERALD R. FORD: As I recollect, Mr. Speaker, the gentlewoman from Michigan [Mrs. Griffiths] yielded to the gentleman from New York only for the purpose of debate.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: That is right.

MRS. [MARTHA W.] GRIFFITHS: That is right.

MR. GERALD R. FORD: Now, if the gentleman from New York yields time to any one or more Members, is he yielding solely on that basis as well?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will state that would be the situation.

MR. GERALD R. FORD: In other words, the gentleman cannot yield for any other purpose except debate?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will state that that is a correct interpretation of the situation.

¹⁹ 116 CONG. REC. 28005, 28006, 91st Cong. 2d Sess.

§ 31.20 The Member who controls the time under the hour rule may yield a specific amount of time to another Member, and, although the latter may yield for debate, he may not (except by unanimous consent) yield a specific amount of time.

On Feb. 27, 1963,⁽²⁰⁾ Mr. Samuel N. Friedel, of Maryland, called up at the direction of the Committee on House Administration a privileged resolution providing funds for another House committee. Mr. Friedel was recognized for one hour.

Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, answered a parliamentary inquiry on the control of time:

MR. [CHARLES A.] HALLECK [of Indiana]: As I understand it, the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Friedel] has said that he would yield time to Members on the minority side, and that is what we want. If there is another minority Member who wants to be recognized at this time, it would be in order under the rules for that Member to be granted time in order that he might make such statement as he might want to make.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will state that under the rules of the House and pursuant to custom that has existed from time immemorial, on a resolution of this kind the Member in charge of the resolution has control of the time and he, in turn, yields time. The gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Friedel] in charge of the resolution has yielded 10 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio. If the gentleman from Ohio desires to yield to some other Member, he may do so but he may not yield a specific amount of time.⁽¹⁾

—Unanimous Consent Required

§ 31.21 A Member to whom a specific amount of time is yielded for debate under the hour rule may, in turn, yield a portion of that allotted time to a third Member, but only by unanimous consent.

On Aug. 10, 1970,⁽²⁾ Mrs. Martha W. Griffiths, of Michigan, recognized under the hour rule, yielded to Mr. Emanuel Celler, of New York, for 15 minutes, who yielded for seven minutes to Mr. William M. McCulloch, of Ohio, who yielded for five minutes to Mr. Charles E. Wiggins, of California.

Speaker Pro Tempore Chet Holifield, of California, ruled, in response to a point of order by Mr. H. R. Gross, of Iowa, that Mr. Celler was in control of the 15 minutes and that specific times could be yielded to other Members.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentlewoman from Michigan has yielded 15 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. Celler). The gentleman from New York has control of his 15 minutes. He may yield to the gentleman from Ohio, and the Chair will notify the gentleman from New York when the gentleman from Ohio has consumed 7 minutes.

The gentleman from New York must remain on his feet, and he may yield to whomever he wishes.

MR. CELLER: That I will do, Mr. Speaker.

MR. McCULLOCH: That I will do also, Mr. Speaker.

I now yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. Wiggins).

MR. GROSS: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. GROSS: Mr. Speaker, my parliamentary inquiry is this: May the gentleman yield to a third party?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will state that he may do so only by unanimous consent.⁽³⁾

§ 31.22 The Member in charge of a bill yielded one-half the time to a minority Member and the latter was permitted by unanimous consent to allocate that time.

3. See also 86 CONG. REC. 4861-63, 76th Cong. 3d Sess., Apr. 22, 1940.

On Mar. 12, 1963,⁽⁴⁾ Mr. Emanuel Celler, of New York, asked unanimous consent for the consideration in the House of H.R. 4374, bestowing honorary citizenship on Sir Winston Churchill. Mr. H. R. Gross, of Iowa, inquired under a reservation of objection whether some time for debate would be extended to the minority, and Mr. Celler assured him it would.

The House then agreed to the following unanimous-consent request by Mr. Celler:

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. Poff], and that he may yield such time as he desires.

Parliamentarian's Note: Richard H. Poff was a Member of the minority.

§ 31.23 While the minority member of the Committee on Rules to whom one-half the debate time is yielded may customarily yield portions of that time to other Members without remaining on his feet, another Member to whom a portion of time is yielded may in turn yield blocks of that time only by unanimous consent.

On Jan. 29, 1976,⁽⁵⁾ during consideration of House Resolution 982 (authorizing the Select Committee on Intelligence to file its final report) the following proceedings occurred:

H. RES. 982

Resolved, That the Select Committee on Intelligence have until midnight Friday, January 30, 1976, to file its report pursuant to section 8 of House Resolution 591, and that the Select Committee on Intelligence have until midnight, Wednesday, February 11, 1976, to file a supplemental report containing the select committee's recommendations.

With the following committee amendment:

Committee amendment: On page 1, after the first sentence, add the following:

Resolved further, That the Select Committee on Intelligence shall not release any report containing materials, information, data, or subjects that presently bear security classification, unless and until such reports are published with appropriate security markings and distributed only to persons authorized to receive such classified information. . . .

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁶⁾ The gentleman from Texas (Mr. Young) is recognized for 1 hour.

MR. [JOHN] YOUNG of Texas: . . . Mr. Speaker, I have agreed to yield 15 minutes en bloc to my distinguished friend, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Bolling), on the Committee on Rules. Again I say, I yield for the purpose of debate only.

MR. [RICHARD] BOLLING [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, I understood the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Young) to yield me 15 minutes.

I ask unanimous consent that I may be permitted to yield, for debate, to other Members a portion of that 15 minutes without remaining on my feet.

THE SPEAKER: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Missouri?

There was no objection.

§ 31.24 A Member in control of time for general debate in Committee of the Whole may yield a block of time up to one hour to another Member, but that Member in turn may yield a block of time to a third Member without remaining on his feet only by unanimous consent.

The following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole on May 4, 1981,⁽⁷⁾ during consideration of House Concurrent Resolution 115 (pertaining to the Congressional budget):

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁸⁾ When the Committee of the Whole rose on Friday, May 1, 1981, the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. Jones) had 2 hours and 59 minutes of general debate remaining, and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Latta) had 4 hours and 13 minutes remaining.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. Jones).

6. Carl Albert (Okla.).

7. 127 CONG. REC. 8331, 97th Cong. 1st Sess.

8. Martin Frost (Tex.).

MR. [JAMES R.] JONES of Oklahoma: Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 hour to the gentleman from California (Mr. Panetta).

MR. [LEON E.] PANETTA [of California]: Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 3 minutes. . . .

Mr. Chairman, I yield 9 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. de la Garza), chairman of the Agriculture Committee.

THE CHAIRMAN: Without objection, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. de la Garza) is recognized for 9 minutes.

There was no objection.

Parliamentarian's Note: The exception to this rule is in the case of general debate on economic goals and policies during debate on the first budget resolution, where the manager may yield for more than an hour to another Member, who may yield blocks of time to Members without remaining standing.

§ 31.25 Where all time for general debate in Committee of the Whole is equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the committee reporting a bill, a Member to whom a block of time is yielded may not in turn yield a portion of that time to a third Member but must remain on his feet when yielding (except by unanimous consent).

During consideration of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981 (H.R. 3982) in the Committee of the Whole on June 25, 1981,⁽⁹⁾ the following exchange occurred:

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁰⁾ Does the gentleman from Florida wish to retain the floor?

MR. [CHARLES E.] BENNETT [of Florida]: Yes, I retain the floor, and I yield back as much time as I can to the Agriculture Committee.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will advise the gentleman that if that is the case, the gentleman must remain standing. . . .

The Chair will inquire of the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Simon): How much time has the gentleman granted to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. de la Garza)?

MR. [PAUL] SIMON [of Illinois]: My understanding is that the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Bennett) yielded his time to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. de la Garza).

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: Under the amended rule, all the time is controlled by the gentleman from Illinois as a member of the Budget Committee.

§ 31.26 Where a special rule adopted by the House divides control of general debate in Committee of the Whole between the chairman and ranking minority member of the committee reporting the bill, time yielded to third Members must be utilized or yielded back and may only be reserved for allocation by such third Members by unanimous consent.

During consideration of the Olympic Coin Act (S. 1230) in the Committee of the Whole on May 20, 1982,⁽¹¹⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹²⁾ Pursuant to the rule, the first reading of the bill is dispensed with.

Under the rule, the gentleman from Rhode Island (Mr. St Germain) will be recognized for 1 hour, and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Wylie) will be recognized for 1 hour.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Rhode Island (Mr. St Germain).

MR. [FERNAND J.] ST GERMAIN [of Rhode Island]: Mr. Chairman, I yield one-half hour to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Annunzio). . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Annunzio) has consumed 12 minutes.

The Chair would inquire of the gentleman from Rhode Island, would he be amenable to yielding further at a later time to the gentleman from Illinois?

MR. ST GERMAIN: I yielded the gentleman 30 minutes under our agreement.

The gentleman from Illinois may proceed and have his other speakers speak. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair would observe from a procedural point of view that the gentleman has been yielded 30 minutes which he may use now or yield back as he so desires.

MR. [FRANK] ANNUNZIO [of Illinois]: Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman is not able to reserve the balance of the time yielded to him by the gentleman from Rhode Island unless the gentleman from Rhode Island agrees to yield further at a later time.

MR. [CHALMERS P.] WYLIE [of Ohio]: Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

What I had intended to do was yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Paul), who takes a similar position as the gentleman from Illinois. I understand the gentleman from Illinois' position and my parliamentary inquiry is, may I yield 30 minutes of my time, which I had agreed to do, to the gentleman from Texas at this time and allow the gentleman from Illinois to use his 30 minutes in exchange with the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Paul)?

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair in response would advise the gentleman from Ohio that while he may yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Paul), the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Paul) may use that time but may not reserve portions of that time for subsequent yielding except by unanimous consent. . . .

Does the gentleman from Illinois ask unanimous consent to be able to yield portions of the remaining 18 minutes he has available to him at subsequent times during the course of the general debate?

11. 128 CONG. REC. 10766, 10767, 97th Cong. 2d Sess.

12. Elliott H. Levitas (Ga.).

MR. ANNUNZIO: Yes.

THE CHAIRMAN: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

—Debate on Conference Report

§ 31.27 It is contrary to the usual practice for a Member in charge of a conference report to yield time to other Members to be in turn yielded by them.

On July 27, 1939,⁽¹³⁾ Mr. Compton I. White, of Idaho, in charge of the hour of debate on a conference report, attempted to yield to Mr. Charles Hawks, Jr., of Wisconsin, for 20 minutes, to be allocated “on his side.” Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, stated:

It is contrary to the usual practice for the chairman of a conference to yield time to other Members to be in turn yielded by them. The gentleman may yield such time as he desires to individual Members.

Mr. White withdrew his yielding of time and yielded to Mr. Hawks for five minutes.

13. 84 CONG. REC. 10220, 76th Cong. 1st Sess. The current rule governing division of debate time on a conference report is found in Rule XXVIII, cl. 2(a), House Rules and Manual §912a (1995).

Offeror of Motion To Instruct Conferees

§ 31.28 Under a former practice, the Member moving to instruct House managers at a conference had one hour of debate at his disposal and could yield time as he desired.

On Aug. 9, 1949,⁽¹⁴⁾ the House adopted a resolution taking from the Speaker’s table a House bill with Senate amendments, disagreeing to the amendments, and agreeing to a conference requested by the Senate. Mr. Clarence Cannon, of Missouri, then offered a motion to instruct the House managers to insist on disagreement to a certain Senate amendment. In response to a parliamentary inquiry, Speaker Pro Tempore J. Percy Priest, of Tennessee, stated that Mr. Cannon was entitled to one hour on his motion with the right to yield time as he desired.

§ 31.29 The offeror of a motion to instruct conferees controls one hour of debate and may yield half of that time to an opponent.

14. 95 CONG. REC. 11139–45, 81st Cong. 1st Sess. This precedent preceded the rule dividing time on a motion to instruct. See Rule XXVIII, cl. 1(b), House Rules and Manual §909a (1995).

During consideration of House Joint Resolution 372 (public debt limit increase) in the House on Oct. 11, 1985,⁽¹⁵⁾ a motion was made by Robert H. Michel, of Illinois, as follows:

MR. MICHEL: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to instruct conferees.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Michel moves that the managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes on the two Houses on the joint resolution, H.J. Res. 372, be instructed to promptly report amendments to the Budget Control and Impoundment Act which provide mechanisms for deficit reductions, including specific and mandatory budget goals for achieving a balanced budget within the next 6 years.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁶⁾ The gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel) is recognized for 1 hour.

MR. MICHEL: Mr. Speaker, I would not expect to use the complete hour.

THE SPEAKER: Will the gentleman yield a half hour to the Democratic side?

MR. MICHEL: Mr. Speaker, I would like to yield 15 minutes for the moment and 15 minutes for our side and let us see where we go.

THE SPEAKER: Does the gentleman want to ask unanimous consent that the debate be 30 minutes instead of 1 hour?

15. 131 CONG. REC. 27366, 27367, 99th Cong. 1st Sess.

16. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

The debate on a motion to instruct is now divided by Rule XXVIII, House Rules and Manual §909a (1995).

MR. MICHEL: Mr. Speaker, I do not want to do anything that is going to upset some Members here, but if we can put a little bit of restraint—

THE SPEAKER: Does the gentleman intend to yield equal time to the opponents of the motion, if there is opposition?

MR. MICHEL: Mr. Speaker, I would certainly intend that the time be equally divided.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel) is recognized for 30 minutes and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Rostenkowski) is recognized for 30 minutes.

Additional Time Is Obtained From Members in Control, Not by Unanimous Consent

§ 31.30 During general debate in Committee of the Whole of a bill being considered under a special rule providing that the time be controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the committee reporting the bill, additional time must be yielded by the members controlling the time and may not be obtained by unanimous consent.

On June 2, 1975,⁽¹⁷⁾ during consideration of the Voting Rights Act extension (H.R. 6219) in the

17. 121 CONG. REC. 16285, 16286, 94th Cong. 1st Sess.

Committee of the Whole, the following proceedings occurred:

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The time of the gentleman has expired.

MR. [HENRY B.] GONZALEZ [of Texas]: Mr. Chairman, I would ask unanimous consent to continue for an additional 5 minutes.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will state that the gentleman from California (Mr. Edwards) has control of the time. Does the gentleman from California wish to yield additional time to the gentleman from Texas? . . .

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The time of the gentleman has expired.

MR. GONZALEZ: Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will suspend. The Chair must advise the gentleman that under the rule that request is not in order.

Charging Time Yielded for Parliamentary Inquiry

§ 31.31 Where a Member to whom time has been yielded for general debate poses a parliamentary inquiry, the time consumed to answer the inquiry is deducted from his time for debate.

On Sept. 25, 1975,⁽¹⁸⁾ the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole responded to a parliamentary inquiry, as follows:

MR. [EDWARD J.] DERWINSKI [of Illinois]: Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes

18. 121 CONG. REC. 30196, 94th Cong. 1st Sess.

to the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. Buchanan).

(Mr. Buchanan asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁹⁾ The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. BUCHANAN: May I ask whether the making of this parliamentary inquiry is taken out of my time?

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair will state that it will be taken out of the gentleman's time.

Member Offering Motion To Recommend Striking Enacting Clause May Yield Part of Time

§ 31.32 A Member offering a motion in the Committee of the Whole that the Committee rise and report the bill to the House with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken may yield part of his time to another while he has the floor, but he may not yield all of his five minutes of debate to another to discuss the motion.

On Sept. 27, 1945,⁽²⁰⁾ Chairman Aime J. Forand, of Rhode Island,

19. J. Edward Roush (Ind.).

20. 91 CONG. REC. 9095, 79th Cong. 1st Sess.

ruled as follows on the yielding of time under the five-minute rule:

MR. [ANDREW J.] MAY [of Kentucky]: Mr. Chairman, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. May moves that the Committee do now rise and report the bill, H.R. 2948, back forthwith to the House with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken out.

MR. MAY: Mr. Chairman, I yield my 5 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina, if I may.

MR. [ROBERT] RAMSPECK [of Georgia]: The gentleman cannot do that, Mr. Chairman.

THE CHAIRMAN: He can yield time while he is holding the floor.

MR. MAY: I yield part of my time, then, to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Member Opposed to Motion To Strike Enacting Clause May Not Extend Time Beyond Five Minutes by Using Yielded Time

§ 31.33 Debate on the preferential motion to strike the enacting clause is limited to two five-minute speeches, and the Member recognized in opposition to the motion may not extend his time by using time yielded to him by unanimous consent under an allocation of time on the remainder of the bill.

During debate in the Committee of the Whole on an appropriation for public works for water and power development and energy research (H.R. 8122) on June 24, 1975,⁽¹⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [JOE L.] EVINS of Tennessee: Mr. Chairman, I now move that all debate on the remaining portion of the bill and all amendments thereto conclude in 30 minutes.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽²⁾ The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. Evins). . . .

So the motion was agreed to.

THE CHAIRMAN: Members standing at the time the motion was made will be recognized for 40 seconds each. . . .

MR. [SILVIO O.] CONTE [of Massachusetts]: Mr. Chairman, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Conte moves that the committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Conte) for 5 minutes. . . .

MR. [EDWARD P.] BOLAND [of Massachusetts]: Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the preferential motion.

(By unanimous consent, Messrs. Perkins, James V. Stanton, Moakley, and Burke of Massachusetts yielded their time to Mr. Boland). . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: The time of the gentleman has expired.

The Chair will advise the gentleman from Massachusetts, Mr. Boland, that

1. 121 CONG. REC. 20618, 20619, 94th Cong. 1st Sess.
2. Richard H. Ichord (Mo.).

the Chair will now put the question on the preferential motion, and after that time the Chair will recognize the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Boland) for the remainder of the time.

The question is on the preferential motion offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Conte).

The preferential motion was rejected.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair now recognizes the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Boland) for 2 additional minutes.

Member in Control Under Reservation of Objection May Yield

§ 31.34 Debate under a reservation of objection to a unanimous-consent request is controlled by the Member reserving the right to object.

On Sept. 30, 1976,⁽³⁾ Mr. Jack Brooks, of Texas, made the following motion with respect to a Senate amendment to H.R. 13367, extending the State and Local Fiscal Assistance Act of 1972:

MR. BROOKS: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Brooks moves that the House recede from its disagreement and concur in the Senate amendment to the House bill (H.R. 13367) to extend and amend the State and Local Fiscal Assistance Act of 1972 and for other purposes, with an amendment as follows: . . .

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: . . .

SEC. 5. Extension of Program and Funding

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 105 (relating to funding for revenue sharing) is amended—

(1) by inserting “or (c)” immediately after “as provided in subsection (b)” in subsection (a)(1): . . .

MR. BROOKS (during the reading): Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the motion be considered as read and printed in the Record.

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁴⁾ Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

MR. [FRANK] HORTON [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Brown) has reserved a point of order against the amendment.

Does the gentleman from Ohio desire to make the point of order?

MR. HORTON: Mr. Speaker, I am reserving the right to object on the unanimous-consent request to have the motion considered as read.

I wanted to ask the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Brooks) whether he is going to explain the motion to the House.

MR. BROOKS: Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, I look forward to that opportunity to explain it as my distinguished friend, the gentleman from New York (Mr. Horton) desires.

MR. [CLARENCE J.] BROWN of Ohio: Mr. Speaker, my reservation of the point of order relates to the fact that I have not seen the amendment of the gentleman; and if suspension of the reading of the amendment is to be undertaken, that is, if we are not going to hear it, there will be some necessity for me, in order to be able to make a point of order, to see the amendment or to hear an explanation of it from the gentleman from Texas. I would like to see the amendment, if I could.

3. 122 CONG. REC. 34080, 34085, 94th Cong. 2d Sess.

4. Carl Albert (Okla.).

MR. BROOKS: Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

MR. BROWN of Ohio: I will be happy to yield to the gentleman from Texas on my reservation of objection.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Texas can make his explanation under the reservation of objection which has already been made by the gentleman from New York (Mr. Horton), of the reservation of objection of the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Brown). . . . Does the gentleman from Texas desire to make a brief explanation of the amendment? If not, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Brown) desires to have the amendment read.

MR. BROOKS: Mr. Speaker, as soon as I am recognized, I will be pleased to explain the amendment in detail.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will state that at this time the gentleman from Texas can be recognized only if the gentleman from Ohio yields under his reservation.

MR. BROWN of Ohio: I yield.

Time Yielded Back Reverts to Member in Control

§ 31.35 A Member to whom time was yielded under the hour rule in the House may not, except by unanimous consent, reserve a portion of that time to himself; the unused time reverts to the Member controlling the hour who may subsequently yield further time to that Member.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Feb. 8, 1972,⁽⁵⁾ during consideration of House Resolution 164 (creating a select committee on privacy, human values, and democratic institutions):

MR. [RAY J.] MADDEN [of Indiana]: Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 164 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution as follows:

H. RES. 164 . . .

Whereas the full significance and the effects of technology on society and on the operations of industry and Government are largely unknown. . . .

Resolved, That there is hereby created a select committee to be known as the Select Committee on Privacy, Human Values, and Democratic Institutions. . . .

MR. MADDEN: Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Gallagher).

MR. [CORNELIUS E.] GALLAGHER [of New Jersey]: Mr. Speaker, may I take 5 minutes now and reserve 5 minutes to the end of the debate since it is my bill?

5. 118 CONG. REC. 3181-84, 92d Cong. 2d Sess.

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁶⁾ The gentleman may do that. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MR. [DURWARD G.] HALL [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object . . . is it in order to have a unanimous-consent request at a time like this when the time is controlled by the members of the Committee on Rules . . . ?

MR. GALLAGHER: . . . It was my understanding that I would have the time at the conclusion of debate.

MR. HALL: Mr. Speaker, I submit this is between the gentleman and the man handling the rule, and therefore I must object.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will notify the gentleman when 5 minutes are up. . . .

The gentleman from New Jersey has consumed 5 minutes.

MR. GALLAGHER: Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

THE SPEAKER: . . . The gentleman from Indiana has control of the time. . . .

If the gentleman from Indiana desires to yield further time at this time he can do so.

§ 31.36 Debate time yielded back by a Member to whom time was yielded under the hour rule reverts to the Member in control of the hour.

During consideration of House Resolution 97 (to seat Richard D. McIntyre as a Member from Indiana) in the House on Mar. 4,

6. Carl Albert (Okla.).

1985,⁽⁷⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [ROBERT H.] MICHEL [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of privilege.

Mr. Speaker, I send to the desk a privileged resolution (H. Res. 97) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 97

Whereas a certificate of election to the House of Representatives always carries with it the presumption that the State election procedures have been timely, regular, and fairly implemented; and . . .

Whereas the presumption of the validity and regularity of the certificate of election held by Richard D. McIntyre has not been overcome by any substantial evidence or claim of irregularity; Now, therefore be it

Resolved, That the Speaker is hereby authorized and directed to administer the oath of office to the gentleman from Indiana, Mr. Richard D. McIntyre.

Resolved, That the question of the final right of Mr. McIntyre to a seat in the 99th Congress is referred to the Committee on House Administration.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁸⁾ . . . The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. Alexander).

MR. [WILLIAM V.] ALEXANDER [of Arkansas]: Mr. Speaker, I move that the resolution be referred to the Committee on House Administration. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman is entitled to 1 hour under

7. 131 CONG. REC. 4277, 4282, 4283, 99th Cong. 1st Sess.

8. James C. Wright, Jr. (Tex.).

that motion, during which time the gentleman from Arkansas controls the time. . . .

MR. ALEXANDER: Mr. Speaker, I would yield 30 minutes for purposes of debate only, to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel). . . .

MR. MICHEL: Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Illinois has consumed 10 minutes. The gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel) has 20 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. Alexander) has 10 minutes remaining.

Does the gentleman from Illinois desire to yield additional time?

MR. MICHEL: I yield back the balance of my time, Mr. Speaker. . . .

MR. ALEXANDER: How much time do I have remaining?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman has 25 minutes remaining.

MR. ALEXANDER: I thank the Chair.

MR. MICHEL: Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right with one remaining speaker.

MR. ALEXANDER: Mr. Speaker, the gentleman yielded back the balance of his time.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Let the Chair state that the gentleman from Illinois—the Chair understood the gentleman from Illinois to yield back the balance of his time.

Majority Leader Recognized on Privileged Resolution Yielded One-half Time to Minority Leader

§ 31.37 Where the Majority Leader was recognized for one hour of debate on a privileged resolution creating an ad hoc legislative committee pursuant to Rule X, clause 5(c), he yielded one-half of the time to the Minority Leader.

Proceedings in the House relating to consideration of House Resolution 508 (creating an ad hoc committee on energy) on Apr. 21, 1977,⁽⁹⁾ were as follows:

MR. [JAMES C.] WRIGHT [Jr., of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, pursuant to clause 5 of rule X, I offer a privileged resolution and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 508

Resolved, (a) that pursuant to rule X, clause 5, the Speaker is authorized to establish an Ad Hoc Committee on Energy to consider and report to the House on the message of the President dated April 20, 1977. . . .

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁰⁾ The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Wright).

(Mr. Wright asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

MR. WRIGHT: Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. This resolution authorizes the Speaker to appoint an ad hoc committee to receive the messages and the recommendations of the President of the United States with respect to the energy problems of this country. . . .

9. 123 CONG. REC. 11550, 95th Cong. 1st Sess.

10. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

Mr. Speaker, I now yield 30 minutes to the distinguished minority leader, or such part of that time as he may consume, and reserve to myself the remainder of the time. I yield to the gentleman from Arizona for purposes of debate only.

More Than One Hour May Be Yielded Under Budget Act

§ 31.38 While normally the “hour” rule (clause 2 of Rule XIV) prohibits a Member controlling the floor from yielding more than one hour to another Member, a statutory provision constituting a House rule which specifically allocates larger amounts of time may permit more than one hour to be yielded.

Pursuant to section 305(a)(3) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 (Public Law 93-344, as amended by Public Law 95-523), a period of up to four hours for debate on economic goals and policies follows the presentation of opening statements on the first concurrent resolution on the budget by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Budget. Thus, the chairman of the Committee on the Budget (or his designee managing the resolution) may yield for more than one hour to another Member to control a portion of the time for such debate, which is equally divided and controlled by the majority and minority. The following exchange occurred on Apr. 30, 1981:⁽¹¹⁾

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹²⁾ The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Gephardt).

MR. [RICHARD A.] GEPHARDT [of Missouri]: It is my wish now to yield to the gentleman from California (Mr. Hawkins) for a discussion of the provisions of Humphrey-Hawkins which relate to this entire debate.

THE CHAIRMAN: How much time does the gentleman from Missouri wish to yield?

MR. GEPHARDT: It is my understanding under the previously arranged rule that I yield 4 hours; is that correct?

THE CHAIRMAN: Two hours, under the statute. Two on each side.

MR. GEPHARDT: I yield 2 hours to the gentleman from California (Mr. Hawkins).

Parliamentarian’s Note: Although section 305(a)(3) does not specify that the four hours of debate is equally divided and controlled by the majority and minority, such has been the practice, which is consistent with the management of other general debate on the resolution.

Special Order Speech—Yielding Portion of Time

§ 31.39 By unanimous consent, a Member recognized for one hour in the House for a “special-order speech” may yield a designated portion of that time to another Member, to be yielded in turn by that Member.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on July 17, 1985:⁽¹³⁾

MR. [WILLIAM F.] CLINGER [Jr., of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I am delighted to be joined in this special order by my distinguished chairman, the chairman of the Committee on Public Works and Transportation, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Howard), and by my distinguished leader of the Economic Development Subcommittee, the gentleman from New York (Mr. Nowak).

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to yield to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Howard) 30 minutes of my special order time.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁴⁾ Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

MR. CLINGER: Mr. Speaker, I yield to my chairman.

MR. [JAMES J.] HOWARD [of New Jersey]: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I be permitted to yield a portion of the time yielded to me by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Clinger) to other Members of the House.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Member Permitted by Unanimous Consent To Take Seat While Yielding

§ 31.40 A Member recognized to offer an amendment (to a substitute) under the five-minute rule was permitted, by unanimous consent, to take his seat while yielding to another Member for purposes of debate.

On July 28, 1983,⁽¹⁵⁾ during consideration of H.R. 2760 (prohibition on covert assistance to Nicaragua) in the Committee of the Whole, the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [EDWARD P.] BOLAND [of Massachusetts]: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the amendment offered as a substitute for the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Boland to the amendment offered by Mr. Mica as a substitute for the amendment offered by Mr. Young of Florida: . . .

MR. BOLAND: . . . Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from New York (Mr. Solarz).

13. 131 CONG. REC. 19474, 19475, 99th Cong. 1st Sess.

14. Richard A. Gephardt (Mo.).

15. 129 CONG. REC. 21413, 21414, 98th Cong. 1st Sess.

MR. [STEPHEN J.] SOLARZ [of New York]: Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding once more.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Boland) may sit while I engage in my remarks.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁶⁾ Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection. . . .

MR. [E. THOMAS] COLEMAN of Missouri: Mr. Chairman . . . does the gentleman have the time or does the chairman have the time?

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Boland) has the time.

MR. BOLAND: Mr. Chairman, would the gentleman yield?

MR. COLEMAN of Missouri: I yield.

MR. BOLAND: My understanding is that the gentleman from New York (Mr. Solarz) asked unanimous consent that I be permitted to sit and there was no objection to it. So I yielded the time to the gentleman from New York so he could continue.

§ 32. Interruption of Member With the Floor

A Member with the floor may not be interrupted, without his consent, for ordinary motions, inquiries, or questions of privilege.⁽¹⁷⁾ He may be interrupted by a point of order but is entitled to the floor when the point of order is disposed of,⁽¹⁸⁾ unless the point of order is directed towards the failure of the Member with the floor to observe the rules of debate, in which case the Member may be called to order and required to take his seat.⁽¹⁹⁾ Messages and conference reports have interrupted Members in debate, usually by the request of the Chair that the Member speaking suspend his remarks.⁽²⁰⁾

A Member who seeks to interrupt another in debate, by requesting him to yield, should address the Chair and through the Chair gain the consent of the Member with the floor.⁽¹⁾

Seeking Permission To Interrupt

§ 32.1 A Member desiring to interrupt another in debate should address the Chair for the permission of the Member speaking.

On June 29, 1956,⁽²⁾ Chairman Francis E. Walter, of Pennsylvania, sustained a point of order that a Member desiring to interrupt another in debate, by asking him to yield, should properly address the Chair for the permission of the Member speaking:

MR. [RALPH W.] GWINN [of New York]: We had no exact testimony on the point before our committee.

MR. [CLEVELAND M.] BAILEY [of West Virginia]: Will the gentleman yield?

MR. GWINN: I would like to answer the question of the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania first.

MR. [CLARE E.] HOFFMAN of Michigan: Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state it.

MR. HOFFMAN of Michigan: The point of order is that a Member who seeks recognition must first address the Chair rather than inquire of the Member whether he will yield or not.

THE CHAIRMAN: The point of order is sustained. The practice which has grown up here is not a good one. When a request is made for a Member to yield, the request should be made to the Chair and the Chair in turn submits the request to the speaker having the floor.

2. 102 CONG. REC. 11455, 84th Cong. 2d Sess.

§ 32.2 A Member may interrupt another Member in debate only if the Member who has the floor yields for that purpose.

On Oct. 14, 1978,⁽³⁾ the following exchange occurred in the Committee of the Whole:

MR. PHILLIP BURTON [of California]: Mr. Speaker, a point of order. Would the gentleman talk a little more slowly so we could absorb these very simple questions he is asking?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁴⁾ The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Ashley) has the time.

MR. PHILLIP BURTON: Mr. Speaker, does the gentleman have another copy of these questions and answers?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Texas (Mr. Charles Wilson) has the floor.

MR. CHARLES WILSON of Texas: Mr. Speaker, I do not yield.

MR. [JOHN D.] DINGELL [of Michigan]: Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

MR. CHARLES WILSON of Texas: I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

ing debate without being yielded to and without making a point of order, the time consumed by his remarks will not be charged against the debate time of the Member controlling the floor and his remarks will not be printed in the Record.

On Feb. 7, 1985,⁽⁵⁾ the House had under consideration House Resolution 52, directing the prima facie seating of a Member-elect, who had been denied seating pending a committee report on the question of the final right to the seat in the 99th Congress. A motion was made to refer the resolution:

MR. [JAMES C.] WRIGHT [Jr., of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to refer.

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁶⁾ The Clerk will report the motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Wright moves to refer the resolution to the Committee on House Administration.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Texas [Mr. Wright] is recognized for 1 hour.

MR. WRIGHT: Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Frenzel] or his designees, and pending that I yield myself such time as I may consume. . . .

6. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

MR. [BILL] FRENZEL [of Minnesota]: Now, Mr. Speaker, there is not time to do everything. First let us talk about the 5,000 invalidated votes that Republicans stole; 96 percent of the invalidated votes in the recount were done by a recount commission appointed with 2-to-1 Democrats, by a Democrat judge, hardly a Republican shenanigan. . . .

This is a blockbuster vote. This is murder. This is a rape of a system. The issue is the ultimate abuse of representative government. We have an elected, certified Member. . . .

[Mr. Wright interjected remarks at this point.]

MR. FRENZEL: Mr. Speaker, I did not yield to the gentleman. Was he making a point of order?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair would probably understand, as does the gentleman, what the gentleman from Texas was doing. He was questioning whether the words should be taken down or not. But no point of order was made.

The gentleman from Minnesota will continue.

MR. FRENZEL: Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Speaker if I might get an appropriate amount of time extra, as the gentleman from Texas did?

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will continue.

MR. FRENZEL: I thank the Speaker. If I may continue.

THE SPEAKER: The remarks of the gentleman from Texas are not taken out of the time of the gentleman from Minnesota. . . .

MR. FRENZEL: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. FRENZEL: Mr. Speaker, my inquiry is will the Speaker protect my request to strike the intrusion into my discussion by the distinguished majority leader, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Wright], under Deschler's Precedents, and this is volume 8, section 24.65, which says that—

A Member desiring to interrupt another in debate should address the Chair for permission. If the Member having the floor declines to yield, he may strike from the record.

THE SPEAKER: As to the remarks of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Wright], which were not a point of order in view of the fact that the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. Frenzel] had the time and did not yield to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Wright], the remarks of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Wright] will not be printed in the Record.

Similarly, the question of the effect of remarks interjected into debate by one not properly recognized arose on Apr. 19, 1937,⁽⁷⁾ on which date Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, answered a parliamentary inquiry on the requirement that Members seeking to interrupt a Member with the floor obtain recognition from the Chair and obtain consent of the Member with the floor:

MR. [EDWARD W.] CURLEY [of New York]: Last Thursday, April 15, during the discussion of the antilynching bill, I submitted two questions to the gentleman from New York [Mr. Wadsworth]. Upon reading the Congressional Record the following day I found they were omitted. . . .

What I wish to know Mr. Speaker, is whether or not I can have the permanent Record corrected so as to include the two questions and the offside remark that went with them?

THE SPEAKER: Will the gentleman from New York allow the Chair to ask him a question before ruling on the gentleman's inquiry?

MR. CURLEY: Certainly.

THE SPEAKER: Did the gentleman from New York address the Chair and ask whether or not the gentleman from New York [Mr. Wadsworth], then occupying the floor, would yield?

MR. CURLEY: I did, Mr. Speaker. I think the gentleman from New York [Mr. O'Connor] was presiding on both occasions.

THE SPEAKER: Did the gentleman from New York [Mr. Wadsworth] yield?

MR. CURLEY: The gentleman from New York [Mr. Wadsworth] did not yield, and so stated. But not long thereafter the gentleman from New York [Mr. Gavagan] asked the same questions, received the same reply, that the gentleman from New York [Mr. Wadsworth] did not yield; yet the questions and remarks of the gentleman from New York [Mr. Gavagan] are incorporated in the Congressional Record.

THE SPEAKER: This is a rather important inquiry that the gentleman from New York [Mr. Curley] has submitted. It has not been raised, so far as the Chair recalls, during the present session of Congress. In order that the rights of Members may be protected, and that the Members may know what the rules and precedents are with respect to this proposition, the Chair will read from section 3466, volume 8, of Cannon's Precedents of the House of Representatives, the following statement:

7. 81 CONG. REC. 3588, 3589, 75th Cong. 1st Sess.

The Speaker may order stricken from the notes of the reporters remarks made by Members who have not been recognized and to whom the Member having the floor has declined to yield. . . .

The Chair may say that in conformity with this precedent, and what the Chair conceives to be sound procedure, the rule should be reiterated that when a Member is occupying the floor and a Member after addressing the Chair and asking the Member then occupying the floor if he will yield for a question or for an interruption, and the gentleman then speaking declines to yield, it is not proper for a Member nevertheless to interject into the Record some remarks which he desires to make.

Speaker Bankhead also answered a parliamentary inquiry on the right of Members, when revising the Congressional Record, to delete from their remarks statements interposed by other Members not yielded time:

MR. [CASSIUS C.] DOWELL [of Iowa]: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state it.

MR. DOWELL: When a Member has the floor and declines to yield, and no one is recognized to propound a parliamentary inquiry or direct an inquiry to the gentleman having the floor, and the other Member, not being recognized by the Chair, makes some statement, has not the Member who has the floor the right to leave those injected remarks out of the record?

THE SPEAKER: Under the decision referred to by the Chair, undoubtedly the Member interrupted would have the right to strike those remarks from the Record.⁽⁸⁾

Interruption by Motions—To Close Debate

§ 32.4 A Member having the floor in debate on his amendment may not be interrupted without his consent by a motion to close debate.

On Aug. 21, 1940,⁽⁹⁾ Mr. John C. Schafer, of Wisconsin, offered an amendment under the five-minute rule in the Committee of the Whole and was recognized for five minutes. The proceedings were as follows:

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁰⁾ The gentleman from Wisconsin is recognized for 5 minutes.

MR. SCHAFFER of Wisconsin: Mr. Chairman—

8. If a Member with the floor declines to yield for a statement or question but then responds to such an interruption, he may not in his revision of remarks delete the interpolation. See 81 CONG. REC. 3669, 3670, 75th Cong. 1st Sess., Apr. 20, 1937.
9. 86 CONG. REC. 10698, 76th Cong. 3d Sess.
10. Abe Murdock (Utah).

MR. [HENRY B.] STEAGALL [of Alabama]: Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this section and all amendments thereto close in 5 minutes.

MR. [JESSE P.] WOLCOTT [of Michigan]: Mr. Chairman, I object.

MR. STEAGALL: Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this section—

MR. SCHAFFER of Wisconsin: Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state it.

MR. SCHAFFER of Wisconsin: Mr. Chairman, I did not yield to the gentleman from Alabama to submit a unanimous-consent request or to make a motion. I have some rights here under the rules of the House. I demand the regular order, and that is that I be permitted to continue without interruption.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes, but there is a motion before the House.

MR. SCHAFFER of Wisconsin: Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order against that motion. I did not yield for the gentleman to make a motion. I had the floor. The gentleman did not ask me to yield and I did not yield. I have some rights under the rules of the House and I ask that they be respected by the gentleman who has interrupted even though he is chairman of the important committee in charge of the pending legislation.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Wisconsin is recognized for 5 minutes.

—To Rise

§ 32.5 In the Committee of the Whole, a Member may not be interrupted by a motion to rise while he has the floor, unless he yields for that purpose.

On Mar. 12, 1964,⁽¹¹⁾ Chairman Chet Holifield, of California, stated in response to a parliamentary inquiry that unless the Member with the floor yielded for that purpose, another Member could not move that the Committee rise:

THE CHAIRMAN: Does the gentleman yield for a parliamentary inquiry?

MR. [ROBERT J.] CORBETT [of Pennsylvania]: I yield to the gentleman.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman is recognized.

MR. [AUGUST E.] JOHANSEN [of Michigan]: Would a motion that the Committee rise be in order at this time?

THE CHAIRMAN: If the gentleman from Pennsylvania yields for that purpose.

MR. CORBETT: Mr. Chairman, I cannot yield further.

—To Adjourn

§ 32.6 A Member holding the floor may not be interrupted by a motion to adjourn unless he yields for the motion.

On Apr. 24, 1956,⁽¹²⁾ Mr. Carl Vinson, of Georgia, was speaking under a special-order agreement.

11. 110 CONG. REC. 5101, 88th Cong. 2d Sess.

12. 102 CONG. REC. 6891, 84th Cong. 2d Sess.

Mr. Wayne L. Hays, of Ohio, moved that the House adjourn after Mr. William M. Colmer, of Mississippi, had made a point of no quorum. Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled:

If the gentleman from Georgia retains the floor, that motion is not in order.⁽¹³⁾

Parliamentarian's Note: This principle does not hold true if a point of order of no quorum is made during debate and the Chair announces that a quorum is not present; Rule XV, clause 6, has been amended, however, to prohibit points of order of no quorum during debate only.

Parliamentary Inquiries

§ 32.7 A Member may not be taken from the floor for a parliamentary inquiry.

On May 26, 1960,⁽¹⁴⁾ Mr. Donald R. Matthews, of Florida, had the floor in the Committee of the Whole and Mr. Cleveland M. Bailey, of West Virginia, attempted to state a parliamentary inquiry. Chairman Aime J. Forand, of

14. 106 CONG. REC. 11267, 11268, 86th Cong. 2d Sess.

Rhode Island, ruled that Mr. Matthews could not be interrupted by Mr. Bailey for a parliamentary inquiry without his consent.⁽¹⁵⁾

§ 32.8 A Member may not be interrupted by another Member for a parliamentary inquiry without his consent and if the Member who has the floor refuses to yield and demands regular order the Chair will not recognize another Member to propound a parliamentary inquiry.

On July 8, 1975,⁽¹⁶⁾ the proceedings described above occurred in the Committee of the Whole, as follows:

MR. [JOHN D.] DINGELL [of Michigan]: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Dingell to the amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by Mr. Hébert:

MR. DINGELL: Mr. Chairman, this is an amendment about which my colleagues have received communications in the last few days from the Sierra Club and from other nationwide conservation organizations. . . .

15. See also 114 CONG. REC. 30217, 90th Cong. 2d Sess., Oct. 8, 1968; and 110 CONG. REC. 1998, 88th Cong. 2d Sess., Feb. 5, 1964.

16. 121 CONG. REC. 21628, 94th Cong. 1st Sess.

MR. [DON] YOUNG of Alaska: Mr. Chairman, I have a point of order to the germaneness of this amendment.

MR. DINGELL: Mr. Chairman, I do not yield for the point of order. The point of order is too late.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁷⁾ The Chair rules that the point of order is too late.

MR. YOUNG of Alaska: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

MR. DINGELL: Mr. Chairman, may we have the regular order. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Dingell) refuses to yield.

MR. YOUNG of Alaska: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN: That could only be made before the gentleman from Michigan was recognized with respect to his amendment. . . .

MR. DINGELL: Mr. Chairman, I ask for the regular order.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Dingell) refuses to yield.

Under regular order, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Dingell) is recognized.

§ 32.9 A Member may not interrupt another Member in debate by a parliamentary inquiry unless the Member having the floor yields for that purpose.

The following exchange occurred in the House on Feb. 25, 1985:⁽¹⁸⁾

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁹⁾ Under a previous order of the House,

17. Neal Smith (Iowa).

18. 131 CONG. REC. 3344, 3346, 99th Cong. 1st Sess.

19. Sam B. Hall, Jr. (Tex.).

the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Gingrich) is recognized for 60 minutes.

MR. [NEWT] GINGRICH [of Georgia]: Mr. Speaker, I am going to insert in the Record today and read into the Record several editorials, one from the Atlanta Journal and Constitution yesterday, Sunday, February 24, and one this morning from the Wall Street Journal. . . .

MS. [MARY ROSE] OAKAR [of Ohio]: Mr. Speaker, parliamentary inquiry. . . .

MR. GINGRICH: Mr. Speaker, the gentlewoman has not asked me to yield, and I was in fact making an inquiry myself to the Chair. I was asking the Chair to rule in this sort of setting if one is reporting to the House on the written opinion of a columnist in which the columnist has said very strong things, is it appropriate for the House to be informed of this and, if so, what is the correct procedure?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The ruling of the Chair is that the gentleman should not read into the Record things which would clearly be outside the rules of this House. . . .⁽²⁰⁾

MS. OAKAR: I am going to ask my own parliamentary inquiry. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Will the gentleman yield to the gentlewoman for a parliamentary inquiry?

MR. GINGRICH: Not at the present moment. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Let the gentleman continue with his parliamentary inquiry.

20. For discussion of the prohibition against reading in debate of press accounts which are personally critical of a sitting Member, see § 83, infra.

MR. GINGRICH: I might tell the gentlewoman that since this is a special order that she cannot get the floor unless I yield it to her.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will make the rulings. . . .

The gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Gingrich) is recognized.

—Parliamentary Inquiry and Point of Order

§ 32.10 A Member having the floor may not be interrupted by another Member raising a parliamentary inquiry unless he yields for that purpose, but the Chair must permit an interruption to rule on any point of order raised during debate.

On Dec. 18, 1987,⁽¹⁾ during consideration of a privileged resolution (H. Res. 335, disciplining a Member) in the House, the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [JULIAN C.] DIXON [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I call up a privileged resolution (H. Res. 335) in the matter of Representative Austin J. Murphy, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 335

Resolved, That the House of Representatives adopt the report by the Committee on Standards of Official

1. 133 CONG. REC. 36266, 36271, 100th Cong. 1st Sess.

Conduct dated December 16, 1987, in the matter of Representative Austin J. Murphy of Pennsylvania. . . .

MR. [NEWT] GINGRICH [of Georgia]: Mr. Speaker, I commend the committee for its report and its recommendation. . . .

This committee's earlier report on the gentleman from Rhode Island should be reexamined with this new yardstick. The committee's letter on the gentlewoman from Ohio should be scrutinized with this new yardstick. The admission of $24,000 in election law violations by the gentleman from California should be held up to this new yardstick.

Finally, the numerous allegations about the Speaker must be—

MR. [TOMMY F.] ROBINSON [of Arkansas]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽²⁾ The gentleman will state it.

MR. ROBINSON: Mr. Speaker, I thought we were here today to hear a very serious charge against one of our colleagues from Pennsylvania, not from California or other States.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Will the gentleman suspend? Does the gentleman from Georgia yield?

MR. GINGRICH: No, I do not yield, Mr. Speaker.

MR. ROBINSON: Mr. Speaker, I raise a point of order.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state his point of order.

MR. ROBINSON: Mr. Speaker, my point of order is that we are here to consider the committee's report against our colleague Austin Murphy and not against other Members today that the charges have not been substantiated or presented to the committee.

2. Dave McCurdy (Okla.).

MR. GINGRICH: Would the Chair—

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Will the gentleman suspend?

The [gentleman] will yield on the point of order.

On the debate currently ongoing, there can be references made to other cases reported by the committee, not by individual or by name. The gentleman from Georgia, as the Chair understands, has not mentioned other individuals and the gentleman from Arkansas—

MR. ROBINSON: Mr. Speaker, he has, too.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman may compare disciplinary actions reported by the committee and should confine his remarks to the matters before the House.

Point of Order and Call of the House

§ 32.11 A Member stating a question of privilege may be interrupted by a point of order relating thereto.

On June 30, 1939,⁽³⁾ Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, was in the process of stating a point of personal privilege based on an insertion in the Congressional Record. Mr. Hoffman was interrupted by several points of order on the grounds that a question of privilege was not stated and on the grounds that Mr. Hoffman was not confining his remarks to the question of privilege. Mr. Hoffman objected to the interruptions and stated that he did not yield for a point of order. Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, ruled that a Member making a point of order was entitled to recognition while the question of privilege was being stated.

3. 84 CONG. REC. 8468, 8469, 76th Cong. 1st Sess.

—Special Order Interrupted by Call of the House; Member Regains Floor After Motion To Dispense With Proceedings

§ 32.12 When a Member holding the floor under a special order is interrupted by a call of the House, he is again entitled to the floor when a motion to dispense with further proceedings under the call has been agreed to.

On June 4, 1963,⁽⁴⁾ two special-order speeches were scheduled, the first by Mr. Clark MacGregor, of Minnesota. Mr. MacGregor was repeatedly interrupted by quorum calls which demonstrated a quorum as being present. Mr. MacGregor retained the right to the floor pending each quorum call, and he resumed after a motion to dispense with further proceedings under a call had been agreed to.

4. 109 CONG. REC. 10151–65, 88th Cong. 1st Sess.

Point of No Quorum

§ 32.13 A point of no quorum is a privileged matter and is in order at any time, even when a Member has the floor in debate.

On May 4, 1949,⁽⁵⁾ in the Committee of the Whole, Chairman Henry M. Jackson, of Washington, ruled that a motion to adjourn was not in order and that the motion that the Committee rise could not be made unless the Member with the floor yielded for that purpose. Mr. Donald W. Nicholson, of Massachusetts, then made the point of order that a quorum was not present. Mr. Monroe M. Redden, of North Carolina, objected that Mr. Nicholson was out of order since he had not asked the Member with the floor [Mr. Miller] to yield for that purpose. Chairman Jackson ruled:

The Chair will state that a point of order based on no quorum is a privileged matter and is in order at any time.

On July 12, 1949,⁽⁶⁾ in the Committee of the Whole, Mr. William

5. 95 CONG. REC. 5616, 5617, 81st Cong. 1st Sess.

6. Id. at p. 9312.

R. Poage, of Texas, who had the floor, declined to yield to Mr. Wayne L. Hays, of Ohio. Mr. Hays then made the point of order that a quorum was not present. Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, objected that Mr. Poage had not yielded for that purpose, but Chairman Charles M. Price, of Illinois, overruled the point of order:

MR. RANKIN: Mr. Chairman, a point of order: A Member has no right to interrupt the speaker to make a point of no quorum.

THE CHAIRMAN: A point of no quorum may be made at any time.

MR. RANKIN: The gentleman from Texas did not yield for that point.

THE CHAIRMAN: The point of no quorum is in order at any time.

Question of Personal Privilege

§ 32.14 A Member may not be deprived of the floor by another raising a question of personal privilege.

On July 5, 1945,⁽⁷⁾ Mr. Malcolm C. Tarver, of Georgia, offered a motion to correct the Record, in order to accurately record a colloquy occurring between himself and Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi. Mr. Rankin sought recognition to be heard in opposition to the motion, but Speaker Sam

7. 91 CONG. REC. 7221-25, 79th Cong. 1st Sess.

Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that Mr. Tarver had the floor. Mr. Rankin then attempted to raise a question of personal privilege. The Speaker ruled:

The gentleman cannot take the gentleman from Georgia off the floor by a question of personal privilege. The only way he could do it would be by a point of order that a quorum is not present.

§ 32.15 A question of personal privilege cannot take another Member from the floor.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Sept. 29, 1983: ⁽⁸⁾

MR. [ROBERT H.] MICHEL [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, I hope that within the next few minutes I can maintain my balance. I have really become so nauseated by the drivel I have heard from the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. Alexander). He leaves out one important component about what contributes to deficits. Blaming the President for deficits is just unconscionable.

No President, Republican or Democrat, whatever, can spend one dime unless this Congress first appropriates. . . .

I am serving my 27th year in this Congress, always as a member of the minority party, and I will tell the Members that I have been down in this well supporting amendments to cut funding, and I will stack that record of mine up against that of the gentleman from Arkansas and any other Member who spoke on the Democratic side tonight. . . .

8. 129 CONG. REC. 26508, 26509, 98th Cong. 1st Sess.

MR. [BILL] ALEXANDER [of Arkansas]: Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

MR. MICHEL: I will accord the gentleman the same courtesy he gave me. I will wait until the end of my remarks.

MR. ALEXANDER: Well, the gentleman mentioned my name. I assert a point of personal privilege.

MR. MICHEL: I know. And the gentleman referred to my name, too, so we will just accord him the same courtesy.

MR. ALEXANDER: Mr. Speaker—

MR. MICHEL: I refuse to yield, Mr. Speaker.

MR. ALEXANDER: Mr. Speaker, I assert a point of personal privilege. The gentleman used my name, and I would like to assert a point of personal privilege.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: ⁽⁹⁾ The gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. Lott) controls the time and cannot be taken from the floor by a point of personal privilege.

MR. [TRENT] LOTT [of Mississippi]: I do not yield, Mr. Speaker. I yielded to the gentleman from Illinois.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The time is that of the gentleman from Mississippi.

MR. LOTT: And I continue to yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

MR. MICHEL: The Democratic Presidential contender, Ernest Hollings, said it best, I think: "Every time a special interest appeared, we responded."

Interruption To Reserve Objection

§ 32.16 Where a Member has been recognized for one hour

9. Matthew F. McHugh (N.Y.).

of debate, and makes a unanimous-consent request, any time consumed by a Member who reserves the right to object to that request is not charged to the Member who has been recognized for an hour.

On Apr. 15, 1970, Mr. Louis C. Wyman, of New Hampshire, was recognized for one hour of debate for a special-order speech. As he began his remarks, he asked unanimous consent to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter. Mr. Phillip Burton, of California, reserved the right to object and made several remarks on the pending resolution. In response to a parliamentary inquiry, Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, ruled that Mr. Wyman still had one hour of debate available on his unanimous-consent request and that the time consumed by Mr. Burton would not be charged to Mr. Wyman's hour.⁽¹⁰⁾

Perfecting Amendment May Not Be Offered While Member Debating Motion To Strike

§ 32.17 While a motion to strike a pending portion of a bill will be held in abeyance until perfecting amendments to that portion are disposed of, a Member who has been recognized to debate his motion to strike may not be deprived of the floor by another Member who seeks to offer a perfecting amendment, but the perfecting amendment may be offered and voted on before the question is put on the motion to strike.

10. 116 CONG. REC. 11917, 11918, 91st Cong. 2d Sess.

During consideration of H.R. 10024 (Depository Institutions Amendments of 1975) in the Committee of the Whole on Oct. 31, 1975,⁽¹¹⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [JOHN H.] ROUSSELOT [of California]: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Roussetot: Beginning on page 10, line 18, strike all that follows through page 188, line 10.

MR. [FERNAND J.] ST GERMAIN [of Rhode Island]: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

I believe that under the rules of the House since this amendment involves a motion to strike the title, that perfecting amendments that are at the desk take precedence over such a motion to strike a title. Is that not correct?

11. 121 CONG. REC. 34564, 34565, 34566, 94th Cong. 1st Sess.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹²⁾ That is true, if any are offered. . . .

MR. [JOHN J.] MOAKLEY [of Massachusetts]: Mr. Chairman, I might state that I was standing when the Chairman recognized the gentleman from California (Mr. Rousselot), and I have a perfecting amendment at the desk.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair will state that the amendment offered by the gentleman from California, Mr. Rousselot, is pending now, and that the gentleman from California has been recognized. The gentleman may offer his perfecting amendment after the gentleman from California has completed his five minutes in support of his amendment to strike.

Messages and Conference Reports

§ 32.18 Both the reception of a message from the Senate and the consideration of a conference report are highly privileged matters and may interrupt the consideration of a bill, even though the previous question has been ordered thereon.

On May 3, 1961,⁽¹³⁾ the Committee of the Whole rose and reported back to the House H.R. 6441, to amend the Federal Water Pollution Control Act. Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, stated 12. Spark M. Matsunaga (Ha.).

13. 107 CONG. REC. 7172, 87th Cong. 1st Sess.

that pursuant to the rule the previous question was ordered.

The Speaker then interrupted the further consideration of the bill to receive a message from the Senate that the Senate had agreed to a conference report on H.R. 3935 (to amend the Fair Labor Standards Act), and to recognize Mr. Adam C. Powell, of New York, to call up the conference report on H.R. 3935.

Parliamentarian's Note: When a Member with the floor suspends temporarily for the reception of a message or conference report or other pressing legislative business, the time consumed by the interruption is not charged to his time. See, for example, § 73.19, infra, where a Member occupying the floor for a "special order speech" suspended for a motion to suspend the rules and consumed the remainder of his time following adoption of the motion.⁽¹⁴⁾

14. The Speaker may request the Member with the floor to suspend for the reception of a message [see House Rules and Manual § 561 (1995)]. The presentation and consideration of a conference report is highly privileged [see Rule XXVIII clause 1(a) and comments thereto, House Rules and Manual § 909 (1995)], and takes precedence over the operation of the previous question on another measure.

§ 33. Losing or Surrendering Control

A Member in control of time may voluntarily surrender the floor by simply so stating,⁽¹⁵⁾ by withdrawing the measure he is managing,⁽¹⁶⁾ or by yielding for the offering of a motion or an amendment.⁽¹⁷⁾

A Member loses the floor, without the right to resume, if he yields for an amendment,⁽¹⁸⁾ if he is ruled out of order for disorderly language and is not permitted by the House to proceed in order,⁽¹⁹⁾ or if he yields the floor without moving the previous question.⁽²⁰⁾

A Member may lose the floor if he yields for an ordinary motion, but he does not lose the floor if he yields for the motion to adjourn⁽¹⁾ or that the Committee of the Whole rise, and he does not lose the floor, when managing a conference report and amendments in disagreement, if a preferential motion is offered.⁽²⁾

Member Called to Order for Unparliamentary Words

§ 33.1 A Member called to order for words spoken in debate is required to take his seat, and where the words are held unparliamentary, he may not proceed without the consent of the House.

On Oct. 31, 1963,⁽³⁾ Mr. Edgar Franklin Foreman, of Texas, was called to order for referring to another Member of the House as a “pinko.” Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, ruled that “to characterize any Member of the House as a ‘pinko’ is in violation of the rules.”

Objection was then made to unanimous-consent requests to explain the remarks objected to and to allow Mr. Foreman to proceed in order:

MR. [CHARLES A.] HALLECK [of Indiana]: Mr. Speaker, I desire to propound a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state it.

3. 109 CONG. REC. 20742, 88th Cong. 1st Sess.

MR. HALLECK: Mr. Speaker, I understand that the ruling of the Chair was that the use of the word "pinko" involves a violation of the rules of the House.

THE SPEAKER: That is correct.

MR. HALLECK: Under those circumstances may not the gentleman from Texas be permitted to continue with the balance of his statement?

THE SPEAKER: Only by permission of the House.

MR. HALLECK: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Foreman] be permitted to continue with the balance of his statement.

THE SPEAKER: In order?

MR. HALLECK: Yes, sir.

THE SPEAKER: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

MR. [JOHN J.] ROONEY [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, I object.

MR. [BRUCE R.] ALGER [of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state it.

MR. ALGER: I do not know the accuracy of Jefferson's Manual in this respect, but it says—and I am reading from the manual:

Disorderly words are not to be noticed till the Member has finished his speech.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will state that in accordance with the custom and under the rules the demand may be made to take down the words during a speech.⁽⁴⁾

4. For discussion of the requirement that a Member called to order must take his seat, see §§ 49 et seq., infra.

Irrelevant Remarks

§ 33.2 Where a rule provides that debate in the Committee of the Whole shall be confined to the bill, a Member must confine his remarks to the bill and if he continues to talk to other matters after repeated points of order, the Chair will request that he take his seat.

On Mar. 29, 1944,⁽⁵⁾ the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union was considering H.R. 4257, to expatriate or exclude certain persons for evading military service. (The House had adopted H. Res. 482 providing for the consideration of the bill in Committee of the Whole, general debate to be "confined to the bill.")

Mr. Emanuel Celler, of New York, requested unanimous consent to speak out of order, and Mr. Noah M. Mason, of Illinois, objected to the request on the ground that "under the rule adopted by the House, debate on this bill is to be restricted to the bill."

A Member whose words are demanded to be taken down may retain the floor by obtaining unanimous consent for the withdrawal of the words (see § 51, infra) or by permission of the House (see § 52, infra).

5. 90 CONG. REC. 3263, 78th Cong. 2d Sess.

Mr. Celler was then called to order twice for speaking on a subject irrelevant to the bill, such as the conduct of certain other nations in relation to the American war effort. When Mr. Celler continued to speak out of order, the following exchange took place (Chairman James Domengeaux [La.], presiding):

MR. [ADOLPH J.] SABATH [of Illinois]: Mr. Chairman, I rise to a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state the point of order.

MR. SABATH: The gentleman is not speaking to the bill. He has been admonished several times, he has refused, and I am obliged to make the point of order myself, though I regret it.

THE CHAIRMAN: The point of order is sustained and the gentleman is again requested to confine himself to the bill.

MR. MASON: Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. How many times do we have to call the gentleman to order and try to get him to confine his remarks to the bill before the privilege of the House is withdrawn?

THE CHAIRMAN: This will be the last time. If the gentleman does not proceed in order, he will be requested to take his seat.⁽⁶⁾

6. Special orders may provide that general debate in the Committee of the Whole be confined to the bill. See generally, for the requirement that debate be confined to the subject matter, §§35 et seq., infra. Rule XIV clause 1, House Rules and Manual

Withdrawal of Pending Resolution

§ 33.3 The manager of a resolution providing for a special rule, pending when a recess had been declared to await the copy of an engrossed bill, retained the floor, but then withdrew the special rule from consideration.

On Apr. 8, 1964,⁽⁷⁾ the House was considering House Resolution 665, offered by Mr. Richard Bolling, of Missouri, from the Committee on Rules, providing for taking a bill from the Speaker's table and agreeing to Senate amendments thereto. Before a vote was had on the resolution, Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, declared a recess pending the receipt of an engrossed bill, H.R. 10222, the Food Stamp Act of 1964. When the House reconvened, the Speaker announced that the unfinished business was the reading of the latter bill. Mr. Oliver P. Bolton, of Ohio, made a parliamentary inquiry as to the status of the resolution pending at the recess and the Speaker, without responding to the inquiry, recognized Mr. Bolling, the manager of the resolution, who then withdrew the resolution from consideration.⁽⁸⁾

Yielding for Amendment

§ 33.4 A Member controlling time for debate in the House who yields to another Member to offer an amendment loses the floor and the right to move the previous question.

On Mar. 13, 1939,⁽⁹⁾ Mr. Howard W. Smith, of Virginia, offered at the direction of the Committee on Rules House Resolution 113, authorizing a committee investigation. When the previous question was rejected, Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, ruled that Mr. Carl E. Mapes, of Michigan, opposed to the resolution, was entitled to recognition for one hour. Mr. Mapes inquired whether he could yield to another Member to offer an amendment and the Speaker responded that if he yielded for an amendment, he would lose control of the floor (and of the right to move the previous question).⁽¹⁰⁾

§ 33.5 Where the Member in charge of a resolution under the hour rule yields to another for the purpose of offering an amendment, he loses control of the floor and the sponsor of the amendment is given control.

On Mar. 27, 1945,⁽¹¹⁾ Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, stated in response to a parliamentary inquiry that since the chairman of the Committee on Rules, Mr. Edward E. Cox, of Georgia, controlling debate on House Resolution 195, creating a select committee, yielded for an amendment to the resolution, he lost the floor and the sponsor of the amendment, Mr. Clinton P. Anderson, of New Mexico, gained control for one hour.

§ 33.6 The Member controlling the time for debate on his motion to instruct House managers at a conference loses the floor if he yields for an amendment.

On Feb. 8, 1965,⁽¹²⁾ Mr. Robert H. Michel, of Illinois, was in control of time for debate on a motion to instruct House managers at a conference, which motion he had offered. Mr. Michel yielded for five minutes to Mr. Odin Langen, of Minnesota. Mr. Langen then attempted to offer an amendment. Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, inquired whether Mr. Michel yielded for that purpose and Mr. Michel stated that he would yield for the amendment. The Speaker advised Mr. Michel:

The Chair will state that the gentleman from Illinois will lose the floor when he yields for that purpose.

Mr. Michel declined to yield for the offering of the amendment.

§ 33.7 The manager of a conference report controlling the floor on a motion to dispose of an amendment in disagreement, by yielding to another Member to offer an amendment to his motion, loses the floor and the Member to whom he has yielded controls one hour of debate on his amendment and may move the previous question on his amendment and on the original motion.

During consideration of the conference report on H.R. 7933 (the Defense Department appropriation bill for fiscal year 1978) in the House on Sept. 8, 1977,⁽¹³⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [GEORGE H.] MAHON [of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, I hope we have had a fair debate on the issues. My motion provides for the continuation of the B-1 program, and I rise in further support of my motion and in opposition to the Addabbo amendment.

By previous arrangement, in order to be absolutely fair with the House and give the House an opportunity to work its will, I yield to the gentleman from New York (Mr. Addabbo) for the purpose of offering an amendment.

MR. [JOSEPH P.] ADDABBO [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment to the motion offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Mahon).

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Addabbo to the motion offered by Mr. Mahon: In lieu of the sum proposed to be inserted by said motion insert: "$6,262,000,000".

MR. ADDABBO: Mr. Speaker, I will not take the hour. By previous arrangement and agreement with the chairman of the full committee, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Mahon), who has been kind enough to recognize me at this time for the purpose of offering this amendment, the agreement was that I would after offering the substitute move the previous question so that we would have a clear vote on the question of whether or not to fund the B-1. . . .

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the amendment to the motion.

The previous question was ordered.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁴⁾ The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York (Mr. Addabbo) to the motion offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Mahon).

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

MR. ADDABBO: Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 202, nays 199, not voting 33. . . .

So the amendment to the motion was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Mahon), as amended.

The motion, as amended, was agreed to.

trol of the floor if he yields for the purpose of having another amendment offered.

On Mar. 13, 1939,⁽¹⁵⁾ Mr. Howard W. Smith, of Virginia, of the Committee on Rules called up House Resolution 113, authorizing the Committee on the District of Columbia to investigate the milk industry in the District. Mr. Smith moved the previous question and it was rejected. Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, recognized Mr. Carl E. Mapes, of Michigan, to control one hour of debate in opposition to the resolution. In response to numerous parliamentary inquiries, the Speaker stated that Mr. Mapes could not accept an amendment to the amendment he proposed, or yield to another Member to offer an amendment, without losing control of the floor and losing the right to move the previous question on the resolution and on his amendment.

§ 33.9 Where a Member calling up a measure in the House offers an amendment and then yields to another Member to offer an amendment to his amendment, he loses the floor and the Member to whom he yielded is recognized for one hour and may move the previous question on the amendments and on the measure itself.

On Dec. 6, 1977,⁽¹⁶⁾ the House had under consideration House Joint Resolution 662 (continuing appropriations for fiscal 1978) when the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [GEORGE H.] MAHON [of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the rule just adopted by the House, I call up the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 662) making further continuing appropriations for the fiscal year 1978, and for other purposes. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁷⁾ The gentleman from Texas (Mr. Mahon) is recognized for 1 hour.

MR. MAHON: Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume and, Mr. Speaker, during the consideration of House Joint Resolution 662, I shall yield only for the purposes of debate and not for amendment unless I specifically so indicate. . . .

Second, immediately after I offer my amendment, I will yield to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel), the ranking minority member of the Labor-HEW Subcommittee and the ranking minority conferee on that appropriation bill for an amendment on the abortion issue. . . .

Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Mahon: On page 2, after line 9, insert the following:

16. 123 CONG. REC. 38392, 38393, 38400, 38401, 95th Cong. 1st Sess.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. MICHEL TO THE AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. MAHON

MR. [ROBERT H.] MICHEL [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment to the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Michel to the amendment offered by Mr. Mahon: At the end of the amendment of the gentleman from Texas strike the period, insert a semicolon, and add the following: "Provided, That none of the funds provided for in this paragraph shall be used to perform abortions except where the life of the mother would be endangered if the fetus were carried to term; or except for such medical procedures necessary for the victims of forced rape or incest. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel) is recognized for 1 hour.

MR. MICHEL: Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Mahon), the chairman of our committee, pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. . . .

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the amendments and the joint resolution.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Without objection, the previous question is ordered.

There was no objection.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel) to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Mahon). . . .

[The] amendment to the amendment was rejected. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Mahon).

The amendment was agreed to.

Chairman of Committee Surrendered Control Where He Opposed Bill

§ 33.10 On one occasion, the chairman of a committee, acting at the President's request, introduced a bill, presided over the hearings in committee, reported the bill, applied to the Committee on Rules for a special rule, and moved that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole; when recognized to control one-half of the debate in the Committee, he then announced his opposition to the measure and surrendered management of the bill to the ranking majority member of the committee.

On June 14, 1967,⁽¹⁸⁾ Harley O. Staggers, of West Virginia, Chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, moved that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole for the consideration of House Joint Resolution 559, providing for the settlement of a railroad labor dispute. The House had adopted House Resolution 511, making in order the consideration of the bill and providing that general debate be controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

In the Committee of the Whole, Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, of Arkansas, recognized Mr. Staggers to control one-half the time on the bill. Mr. Staggers made the following statement:

Mr. Chairman, I am here today in a most unusual position. I was requested by the President to introduce the bill we have before us today, and because of my responsibilities as chairman of the committee, I introduced the bill. If the House was to be given an opportunity to work its will on this legislation, it was necessary that hearings begin promptly and continue as expeditiously as possible, and I think the record will bear me out, that the hearings before our committee have been prompt, they have not been delayed in any respect.

¹⁸ 113 CONG. REC. 15822, 15823, 90th Cong. 1st Sess.

In fact we interrupted consideration of a very important piece of health legislation in order to take up this bill. We have heard every witness who wanted to be heard on the legislation. I did this because I felt it to be my responsibility to the House as chairman of the committee.

Following the conclusion of our hearings I promptly scheduled executive sessions for consideration of the bill and we met as promptly as possible both morning and afternoon and the committee reported the bill to the House.

Yesterday I went before the Rules Committee as chairman of the committee to present the facts to the Rules Committee and attempt to obtain a rule so that the bill would be considered by the House. I have done these things because I felt it is my responsibility to do so as chairman of the committee.

Unfortunately, Mr. Chairman, I was opposed to this bill when I introduced it, and having heard all the witnesses and all the testimony, I am still opposed to it. For that reason I have asked the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Friedel] to handle the bill in Committee of the Whole, so that I would be free to express my opposition to it. . . .

Mr. Chairman, this concludes the presentation I desire to make on the bill. At this time I request the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Friedel], the ranking majority member on the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, to take charge of managing the bill on the floor.

Parliamentarian's Note: The chairman of a committee has the responsibility of reporting or causing to be reported any measure approved by his committee and taking or causing to be taken steps to have the matter considered and voted upon in the House, regardless of his personal opposition to the measure.⁽¹⁹⁾

—Chairman of Committee Opposed Bill as Amended

§ 33.11 The Committee of the Whole having adopted certain amendments to a bill, the chairman of the committee from which the measure was reported expressed his objections, relinquished control of the bill and subsequently offered a motion that the Committee rise and report the bill to the House with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken.

On July 5, 1956,⁽²⁰⁾ the Committee of the Whole had adopted certain amendments to H.R. 7535, to authorize federal assistance to states and local communities in financing an expanded program of school construction. Graham A. Barden, of North Carolina, who was controlling consideration of the bill as the chairman of the reporting committee (Education and Labor), then made the following statement:

Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. . . .

I have very definitely reached the conclusion that the American people do not want this legislation in its present form. Certain things have happened to the bill that make it very, very obnoxious and objectionable to the people I represent.

I never have claimed to be an expert when advocating something that I was sincerely and conscientiously for. I have always felt I would be a complete flop in trying to advocate something I did not believe in and did not advocate. This bill is objectionable to me. It has so many bad features and so many things have been given priority over the consideration of the objective that we set out to accomplish that I must say, in all frankness, to the House I cannot continue in the position here of directing this bill. I feel that someone who can be fairer to the bill in its present shape than I, should handle the bill. I would have to be a much better actor than I now am to proceed in the position of handling this piece of legislation which I cannot support and do not want to pass. For that reason, I want the House to understand my very definite position in the matter. So, with that, I think the House will understand my position and those in a position on the committee to handle the bill will have my cooperation to a certain extent, but no one need to expect any assistance from me or any encouragement for the bill.

Mr. Barden later offered a motion that the Committee rise and report the bill to the House with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken, which was defeated (the bill itself was later also defeated).⁽¹⁾

Member Offering Preferential Motion Does Not Gain Control of Time

§ 33.12 The time for debate on an amendment reported from conference in disagreement is equally divided between the majority and minority parties under Rule XXVIII clause 2(b), and a Member offering a preferential motion does not thereby gain control of time for debate; nor can the Member who has offered the preferential motion move the previous question during time yielded to him for debate, since that would deprive the Members in charge of control of the time for debate.

On Dec. 4, 1975,⁽²⁾ an example of the proposition described above occurred in the House during consideration of the conference report on H.R. 8069 (the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare and related agencies appropriation bill):

MR. [DANIEL J.] FLOOD [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Flood moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 72 and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment, insert the following:

"Sec. 209. None of the funds contained in this Act shall be used to require, directly or indirectly, the transportation of any student to a school other than the school which is nearest or next nearest the student's home. . . .

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Bauman moves that the House recede from its disagreement to Senate amendment No. 72 and concur therein.

THE SPEAKER:⁽³⁾ The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Flood).

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, may I inquire, who has the right to the time under the motion?

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Flood) has 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel) has 30 minutes. The time is controlled by the committee leadership on each side, and they are not taken from the floor by a preferential motion. . . .

MR. [ROBERT H.] MICHEL [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Bauman).

MR. BAUMAN: The gentleman from Maryland has made his case and if the gentleman would like to concur in the stand taken by the majority party in favor of busing he can do that. I do not concur.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion.

MR. FLOOD: Mr. Speaker, I demand the question be divided.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Flood) has the floor and the Chair is trying to let the gentleman be heard.

MR. FLOOD: Mr. Speaker, I demand a division.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, I have not yielded. My time has not expired.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman has time for debate only.

MR. BAUMAN: No; Mr. Speaker, it was not yielded for debate only.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Maryland has 15 seconds.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman was yielded to for debate only. The gentleman from Illinois had no authority under clause 2, rule XXVIII to yield for any other purpose but debate.

Parliamentarian's Note: Debate on a motion that the House recede from its disagreement to a Senate amendment and concur is under the hour rule. In the above instance, the motion to recede and concur was divided.⁽⁴⁾ If the motion is so divided, the hour rule applies to each motion separately.⁽⁵⁾ Thus, technically, the Bauman motion to concur could have been debated under the hour rule, since the request for division of the question was made prior to the ordering of the previous question. Control of the time, however, would have remained with the majority and minority under the rule.

Whether or not the division demand was made before or after the ordering of the previous question on the motion to recede and concur, the preferential motion offered by Mr. Flood to concur with an amendment could have been debated under the hour rule equally divided, since it was a separate motion not affected by ordering the previous question on the motion to recede and concur.

Had the Bauman motion to concur been rejected, the motion to concur with another amendment would have been in order, and preferential to a motion to insist on disagreement.

§ 33.13 Time for debate on motions to dispose of amendments in disagreement is equally divided, under Rule XXVIII clause 2(b), between the majority and minority party; and if a minority Member has been designated by his party to control time, another minority Member who offers a preferential motion does not thereby gain control of the time given to the minority.

On May 14, 1975,⁽⁶⁾ during consideration of the conference report on H.R. 4881⁽⁷⁾ in the House, the following proceedings occurred:

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁸⁾ The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 61: Page 41, line 9, insert:

“FEDERAL RAILROAD ADMINISTRATION
“RAIL TRANSPORTATION IMPROVEMENT
AND EMPLOYMENT

“For payment of financial assistance to assist railroads by providing funds for repairing, rehabilitating, and improving railroad roadbeds and facilities, $700,000,000. . . .

MR. [GEORGE H.] MAHON [of Texas]:
Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

PREFERENTIAL MOTION OFFERED BY MR.
CONTE

MR. [SILVIO O.] CONTE [of Massachusetts]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Conte moves that the House recede from its disagreement to Senate amendment Number 61 and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate, insert the following:

“CHAPTER VIII

“DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION

“FEDERAL RAILROAD ADMINISTRATION

“For payment of financial assistance to assist railroads by providing funds for repairing, rehabilitating, and improving railroad roadbeds and facilities, $200,000,000. . . .

MR. [E. G.] SHUSTER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state it.

MR. SHUSTER: Mr. Speaker, how is the time divided?

THE SPEAKER: The time is divided equally between the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Mahon), who has 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel) who has 30 minutes or such small fraction thereof as he may decide to use.

§ 33.14 The offering of a preferential motion cannot deprive the Member making an original motion (to dispose of a Senate amendment) of control of the floor for debate, and the Chair will recognize the Member controlling the floor when a preferential motion is offered.

During consideration of the foreign assistance appropriation bill (H.R. 7797) in the House on Oct. 18, 1977,⁽⁹⁾ the following motions were offered:

MR. [CLARENCE D.] LONG of Maryland: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Long of Maryland moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 74 and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: Restore the matter stricken by said amendment, amended to read as follows:

“Sec. 503C. Of the funds appropriated or made available pursuant to this Act, not more than $18,100,000 shall be used for military assistance, not more than $1,850,000 shall be used for foreign military credit sales, and not more than $700,000 shall be used for international military education and training to the Government of the Philippines.”. . .

MR. [C. W.] YOUNG of Florida: Mr. Speaker, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Young of Florida moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 74 and concur therein.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁰⁾ The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Long).

9. 123 CONG. REC. 34112, 95th Cong. 1st Sess.

10. William H. Natcher (Ky.).

Parliamentarian's Note: Although during the above proceedings Mr. Young moved the previous question on his preferential motion, ordinarily the maker of a preferential motion should not be permitted to move the previous question thereon, since he does not gain the floor for any purpose other than to offer the motion. The manager of the bill should be the one recognized to move the previous question on the motion.

Although, as in the above instance, the minority Member controlling half the time on a motion on an amendment in disagreement may make a preferential motion during his time for debate, the more usual practice is that the preferential motion be made either before or after the hour of debate on the initial motion.

§ 33.15 The motion to recede and concur in a Senate amendment reported back from conference in disagreement takes precedence over a motion to insist on disagreement thereto, but the proponent of the preferential motion does not thereby gain control of the time for debate.

During consideration of the conference report on H.R. 14238 (the legislative branch appropriations for fiscal year 1977) in the House on Sept. 22, 1976,⁽¹¹⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹²⁾ The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 56: Page 35, line 1 insert:

RESTORATION OF WEST CENTRAL FRONT OF CAPITOL

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Architect of the Capitol, under the direction of the Senate and House Office Building Commissions acting jointly, is directed to restore the West Central Front of the United States Capitol (without change of location or change of the present architectural appearance thereof), $25,000,000. . . .

MR. [GEORGE E.] SHIPLEY [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Shipley moves that the House insist on its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 56.

MR. [SAMUEL S.] STRATTON [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a preferential motion to recede and concur in the Senate amendment No. 56 to the legislative appropriation conference report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Stratton moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate number 56 and concur therein.

11. 122 CONG. REC. 31899, 31900, 31902, 94th Cong. 2d Sess.

12. Carl Albert (Okla.).

MR. STRATTON: Mr. Speaker, will the distinguished gentleman from Illinois, the chairman, yield me 5 minutes.

MR. SHIPLEY: I yield the gentleman from New York 5 minutes. . . .

MR. STRATTON: Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Yates) wishes to offer a substitute motion to recede and concur with an amendment striking the cost plus fixed fee contract.

Is it in order for that motion to be offered if I withdraw my motion?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will state that the gentleman may offer his motion if the gentleman from New York (Mr. Stratton) withdraws his preferential motion. . . .

MR. STRATTON: . . . Would a motion to recede and concur with an amendment be a preferential motion?

THE SPEAKER: It would be preferential over a motion to insist on disagreement. . . .

MR. STRATTON: . . . I withdraw my motion. . . .

MR. [SIDNEY R.] YATES [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a preferential motion.

THE SPEAKER: The Clerk will report the preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Yates moves on amendment 56 to recede and concur with the Senate on amendment No. 56 with an amendment as follows: On page 35, line 11, strike out the words "including cost-plus-fixed-fee contracts". . . .

MR. SHIPLEY: Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Yates).

§ 33.16 Although the motion to concur in a Senate amendment takes precedence over the motion to disagree where the stage of disagreement has been reached, the Member offering the preferential motion does not thereby gain control of the time for debate, which remains in the control of the manager of the bill under the hour rule.

On Nov. 29, 1977,⁽¹³⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House:

MR. [DANIEL J.] FLOOD [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I move to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H.R. 7555) making appropriations for the Departments of Labor, and Health, Education, and Welfare, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1978, and for other purposes, with the amendment of the Senate to the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate No. 82, and disagree thereto.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment to the House amendment to the Senate amendment No. 82, as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate numbered 82, insert the following:

Sec. 209. None of the funds contained in this Act shall be used to perform abortions: . . .

MR. [GEORGE H.] MAHON [of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a preferential motion.

13. 123 CONG. REC. 38033, 95th Cong. 1st Sess.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Mahon moves that the House concur in the amendment of the Senate to the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate numbered 82. . . .

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁴⁾ The gentleman from Pennsylvania is recognized for 1 hour.

Parliamentarian's Note: Debate on a motion to dispose of a Senate amendment which has not been reported from conference in disagreement but which is otherwise before the House, the stage of disagreement having been reached, is under the control of the manager of the bill under the hour rule and is not divided between the majority and minority parties under clause 2(b) of Rule XXVIII.

Member in Control of General Debate Loses Control Only if Time Is Yielded Back

§ 33.17 A Member controlling time for general debate in Committee of the Whole loses the right to consume such time only if it is yielded back, and not pursuant to any informal agreement on management of time that may be reached by the managers of the bill.

During consideration of the Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1982 (H.R. 7357) in the Committee of the Whole on Dec. 16, 1982,⁽¹⁵⁾ the following exchange occurred:

14. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁶⁾ For what purpose does the gentleman from California (Mr. Miller) rise?

MR. [GEORGE] MILLER of California: For the purpose of clarification, Mr. Chairman. It was my understanding under the agreement reached earlier today, that if you did not use your full allotment of your time in these 2 hours, you would lose it, and that tomorrow we would have 3 hours of debate, an hour remaining for Education and Labor, an hour remaining for Judiciary, and an hour for Agriculture.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair advises the gentleman from California that the only way you would lose your time, you would have to yield it back.

Parliamentarian's Note: If a case arose where no Member controlling general debate sought recognition to consume time or to move that the Committee rise, the Chair could, after requesting the managers whether they sought time, direct the Clerk to read the bill for amendment under the five-minute rule.

Time Yielded Back by One to Whom Time Was Yielded Reverts to Member in Control time was yielded under the hour rule reverts to the Member in control of the hour.

During consideration of House Resolution 97 (to seat Richard D. McIntyre as a Member from Indiana) in the House on Mar. 4, 1985,⁽¹⁷⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [ROBERT H.] MICHEL [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of privilege.

Mr. Speaker, I send to the desk a privileged resolution (H. Res. 97) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 97

Whereas a certificate of election to the House of Representatives always carries with it the presumption that the State election procedures have been timely, regular, and fairly implemented; and . . .

Whereas the presumption of the validity and regularity of the certificate of election held by Richard D. McIntyre has not been overcome by any substantial evidence or claim of irregularity; Now, therefore be it

Resolved, That the Speaker is hereby authorized and directed to administer the oath of office to the gentleman from Indiana, Mr. Richard D. McIntyre.

Resolved, That the question of the final right of Mr. McIntyre to a seat in the 99th Congress is referred to the Committee on House Administration.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁸⁾ . . . The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. Alexander).

MR. [WILLIAM V.] ALEXANDER [of Arkansas]: Mr. Speaker, I move that the resolution be referred to the Committee on House Administration. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman is entitled to 1 hour under that motion, during which time the gentleman from Arkansas controls the time. . . .

MR. ALEXANDER: Mr. Speaker, I would yield 30 minutes for purposes of debate only, to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel). . . .

MR. MICHEL: Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Illinois has consumed 10 minutes. The gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel) has 20 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. Alexander) has 10 minutes remaining.

Does the gentleman from Illinois desire to yield additional time?

MR. MICHEL: I yield back the balance of my time, Mr. Speaker. . . .

MR. ALEXANDER: How much time do I have remaining?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman has 25 minutes remaining.

MR. ALEXANDER: I thank the Chair.

MR. MICHEL: Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right with one remaining speaker.

MR. ALEXANDER: Mr. Speaker, the gentleman yielded back the balance of his time.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Let the Chair state that the gentleman from Il-

—Member to Whom Time Was Yielded May Not Reserve a Portion

§ 33.19 A Member to whom time was yielded under the hour rule in the House may not, except by unanimous consent, reserve a portion of that time to himself; the unused time reverts to the Member controlling the hour who may subsequently yield further time to that Member.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Feb. 8, 1972,⁽¹⁹⁾ during consideration of House Resolution 164 (creating a select committee on privacy, human values, and democratic institutions):

MR. [RAY J.] MADDEN [of Indiana]: Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 164 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution as follows:

H. RES. 164 . . .

19. 118 CONG. REC. 3181–84, 92d Cong. 2d Sess.

Resolved, That there is hereby created a select committee to be known as the Select Committee on Privacy, Human Values, and Democratic Institutions. . . .

MR. MADDEN: Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Gallagher).

MR. [CORNELIUS E.] GALLAGHER [of New Jersey]: Mr. Speaker, may I take 5 minutes now and reserve 5 minutes to the end of the debate since it is my bill?

THE SPEAKER:⁽²⁰⁾ The gentleman may do that. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MR. [DURWARD G.] HALL [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object . . . is it in order to have a unanimous-consent request at a time like this when the time is controlled by the members of the Committee on Rules. . . ?

MR. GALLAGHER: . . . It was my understanding that I would have the time at the conclusion of debate.

MR. HALL: Mr. Speaker, I submit this is between the gentleman and the man handling the rule, and therefore I must object.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will notify the gentleman when 5 minutes are up. . . .

The gentleman from New Jersey has consumed 5 minutes.

MR. GALLAGHER: Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

THE SPEAKER: . . . The gentleman from Indiana has control of the time. . . .

If the gentleman from Indiana desires to yield further time at this time he can do so.

Under Trade Act: Member Controlling Time in Opposition May Not Be Compelled To Use Less Than Time Allotted

§ 33.20 Debate on an implementing revenue bill must be equally divided and controlled among those favoring and those opposing the bill under section 151(f)(2) of the Trade Act of 1974, and unanimous consent is required to divide the time between the chairman and ranking minority member of the committee if both favor the bill; in the absence of such a unanimous-consent agreement, a Member opposed to the bill is entitled to control 10 hours of debate in opposition, with priority of recognition to opposing members of the Committee on Ways and Means; and the Member recognized to control the time in opposition may not be compelled to use less than that amount of time unless the Committee rises and the House limits further debate in the Committee of the Whole.

During consideration of the Trade Agreement Act of 1979 (H.R. 4537) in the House on July 10, 1979,⁽¹⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [AL] ULLMAN [of Oregon]: Mr. Speaker, pursuant to Section 151(f) of Public Law 93-618, the Trade Act of 1974, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 4537) to approve and implement the trade agreements negotiated under the Trade Act of 1974, and for other purposes, and pending that motion, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that general debate on the bill be equally divided and controlled between the gentleman from New York (Mr. Conable) and myself. . . .

THE SPEAKER:⁽²⁾ Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. Ullman)?

MR. [JOHN M.] ASHBROOK [of Ohio]: Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object. . . .

I take this reservation for the purpose of propounding a parliamentary inquiry to the Chair.

The rule, section 151, before consideration says:

Debate in the House of Representatives on an implementing bill or approval resolution shall be limited to not more than 20 hours which shall be divided equally between those favoring and those opposing the bill or resolution. . . .

My query to the Chair as a part of my reservation is, if the unanimous-consent request of the chairman is granted can the chairman then move

1. 125 CONG. REC. 17812, 17813, 96th Cong. 1st Sess.
2. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

to terminate debate at any time during the course of debate before the 20 hours have expired?

THE SPEAKER: Reading the statute a motion further to limit the debate shall not be debatable, and that would be made in the House, either now or later, and not in the Committee of the Whole.

MR. ASHBROOK: Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, if the gentleman from Ohio were to be recognized as opposing the bill, does the gentleman have the absolute right to the 10 hours regardless of the time that would be taken on the other side?

THE SPEAKER: Unless all general debate were further limited by the House a member of the Committee on Ways and Means who is opposed to the bill could seek to control the 10 hours of time. The gentleman would be entitled to the 10 hours unless a request came from a member of the Committee on Ways and Means who would be in opposition. . . .

MR. ASHBROOK: I thank the Speaker. I ask this for a very specific purpose. Further reserving the right to object, it is my understanding then that the gentleman from Oregon could not foreclose debate as long as whoever controls the opposition time still has part of the 10 hours remaining. Is that correct, under the statute providing for consideration of this trade bill? . . .

THE SPEAKER: Not unless the committee rose and the House limited all debate.

A motion to limit general debate would not be entertained in the Committee of the Whole and the Chair cannot foresee something of that nature happening.

Effect of Rejection of Previous Question on Motion To Instruct Conferees

§ 33.21 Under Rule XXVIII, clause 1(b), debate on any motion to instruct conferees is equally divided between majority and minority parties or among them and an opponent; but where the previous question is rejected on a motion to instruct, a separate hour of debate on any amendment to the motion is fully controlled by the proponent of the amendment under the hour rule (Rule XIV, clause 2), as the manager of the original motion loses the floor.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Oct. 3, 1989,⁽³⁾ during consideration of H.R. 3026 (District of Columbia appropriations for fiscal year 1990):

MR. [JULIAN C.] DIXON [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 3026) making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of said District for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments thereto, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

For further discussion of Rule XXVIII, see § 26, supra.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁴⁾ Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

MR. [BILL] GREEN [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to instruct.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Green moves that the managers on the part of the House, at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill H.R. 3026, be instructed to agree to the amendment of the Senate numbered 3.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from New York [Mr. Green] is recognized for 30 minutes in support his motion. . . .

MR. GREEN: Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion to instruct. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The question is on ordering the previous question.

[The previous question was rejected.]

MR. DIXON: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

I understand now that the gentleman from California [Mr. Danne-meyer] intends to offer an amendment to the motion offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Green].

My question is: Under the offering will I receive part of the time?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would state to the gentleman from California [Mr. Dixon] that 1 hour would be allotted to the gentleman from California [Mr. Danne-meyer]. He would have to yield time to the gentleman from California [Mr. Dixon]. . . .

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Danne-meyer to the motion to instruct: At the end of the pending motion, strike the period, insert a semicolon, and add the following language: “; Provided further that the conferees be instructed to agree to the provisions contained in Senate amendment numbered 22.”

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from California [Mr. Danne-meyer] is recognized for 1 hour.

MR. [WILLIAM E.] DANNEMEYER [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I yield one-half of the time to the gentleman from California [Mr. Dixon], for purposes of debate only.

Parliamentarian's Note: The control of debate in the above instance is to be distinguished from debate on motions in the House to dispose of amendments in disagreement. In the latter case, although the manager of the original motion might lose the floor upon defeat of his motion, debate on a subsequent motion is nevertheless divided under Rule XXVIII, clause 2(b). It is only debate on amendments to such motions, when pending, that is not divided.

4. William J. Hughes (N.J.).

Member in Control Must Remain Standing—Member Inadvertently Seated Himself

§ 33.22 While a Member controlling the floor in debate must remain standing, a Member who inadvertently seats himself and then immediately stands again before the Chair recognizes another Member may be permitted to retain control of the floor.

On Oct. 19, 1977,⁽⁵⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole during consideration of the Energy Transportation Security Act of 1977 (H.R. 1037):

MR. [GEORGE E.] DANIELSON [of California]: Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the gentleman from California (Mr. McCloskey) seated himself and thereby yielded back the balance of his time.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁶⁾ The Chair adopts a commonsense interpretation of the rule.

MR. DANIELSON: Mr. Chairman, I ask for regular order.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from California (Mr. McCloskey) was back up on his feet almost immediately and indicated that he wanted to continue his colloquy with the gentleman from New York (Mr. Murphy).

Does the gentleman from California (Mr. McCloskey) desire to yield to the gentleman from New York (Mr. Murphy)?

MR. [PAUL N.] MCCLOSKEY [Jr., of California]: Mr. Chairman, I desire to yield to the gentleman from New York (Mr. Murphy).

§ 34. Control Passing to Opposition

As noted earlier, when an essential motion made by the Member in charge of the bill is decided adversely, the right to prior recognition passes to the Member leading the opposition to the motion. Under this principle the control of the measure passes to the opposition when the House disagrees to the recommendation of the committee reporting the bill or when the motion for the previous question on the measure is rejected.⁽⁷⁾

The opposing side also gains control of some time, but not of the pending proposition, where the rules or an agreement provides that on a certain question or motion a fixed amount of debate be conducted, equally divided between those favoring and those opposing the question.⁽⁸⁾

Effect of Rejection of Essential Motion, Generally

§ 34.1 When an essential motion made by the Member in charge of a bill is decided adversely, control passes to the Member leading the opposition to the motion.

On June 2, 1930,⁽⁹⁾ the House was considering the passage of a vetoed bill originating in the Sen-feror of motion still retains control and right to yield for amendment).

ate. A motion to postpone consideration of the bill had been made by the chairman of the committee managing the bill and had been rejected. Mr. John N. Garner, of Texas, stated a parliamentary inquiry whether that motion was not an essential motion whose defeat required recognition to pass to the minority. Speaker Nicholas Longworth, of Ohio, discussed the principle raised and ruled that the motion to postpone consideration was not an essential motion within the meaning of the rule.⁽¹⁰⁾

Defeat of Motion To Table Resolution

§ 34.2 Where a Member calling up a resolution in the House uses part of his hour of debate and then offers a motion to table the resolution which is defeated, the Chair normally recognizes another Member for an hour of debate; but where no other Member seeks recognition, the Chair may recognize the Member who called up the resolution to control the remainder of his hour of debate.

10. For the general requirement that recognition pass to the opposition after the rejection of an essential motion made by the Member in charge of a proposition, see §15, supra.

On June 15, 1979,⁽¹¹⁾ proceedings in the House related to House Resolution 291, a resolution of inquiry directing the President to provide Members of the House with information on the energy situation:

MR. [JOHN D.] DINGELL [of Michigan]: Mr. Speaker, I call up the resolution (H. Res. 291), a resolution of inquiry directing the President to provide Members of the House with information on the energy situation, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 291

Resolved, That the President, to the extent possible, is directed to furnish to the House of Representatives, not later than fifteen days following the adoption of this resolution, full and complete information on the following:

(1) the existence and percentage of shortages of crude oil and refined petroleum products within the United States and administrative regions; . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹²⁾ The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Dingell) is recognized for 1 hour. . . .

MR. DINGELL: Mr. Speaker, at this time I move to table the resolution of inquiry now before the House.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The question is on the motion to table offered by the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Dingell).

MR. [SILVIO O.] CONTE [of Massachusetts]: Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 4, nays 338, not voting 92, as follows. . . .

So the motion to table was rejected.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Dingell).

MR. DINGELL: Mr. Speaker, may I inquire as to how much time remains?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will state to the gentleman that he has 48 minutes remaining.

MR. DINGELL: Mr. Speaker, I will, then, at this time yield 24 minutes to my distinguished friend, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Devine), for purposes of debate only.

Rejection of Previous Question

§ 34.3 If the previous question is voted down on a resolution before the House, control of the measure passes to the opponents of the resolution, and the Chair then recognizes a Member of the minority party, if opposed.

On July 20, 1939,⁽¹³⁾ Mr. Howard W. Smith, of Virginia, managing a resolution to authorize an investigation, moved the previous question on the resolution. Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, answered parliamentary inquiries as to control of the resolution should the previous question be rejected:

13. 84 CONG. REC. 9591, 9592, 76th Cong. 1st Sess.

MR. [VITO] MARCANTONIO [of New York]: If the previous question is voted down, will that open up the resolution to amendment?

THE SPEAKER: Undoubtedly.

MR. SMITH of Virginia: A further parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state it.

MR. SMITH of Virginia: If I understand the situation correctly, if the previous question is voted down, the control of the measure would pass to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Keller]; and the resolution would not be open to amendment generally, but only to such amendments as the gentleman from Illinois might yield for. Is my understanding correct, Mr. Speaker?

THE SPEAKER: If the previous question is voted down, it would not necessarily pass to the gentleman from Illinois; it would pass to the opponents of the resolution. Of course, a representative of the minority would have the first right of recognition.

§ 34.4 In response to parliamentary inquiries the Speaker advised that if the previous question on a privileged resolution reported by the Committee on Rules were voted down, the Chair would recognize the Member who appeared to be leading the opposition.

On Oct. 19, 1966,⁽¹⁴⁾ Mr. Claude D. Pepper, of Florida, called up by direction of the Committee on Rules House Resolution 1013, establishing a Select Committee on Standards and Conduct. Mr. Pepper was recognized for one hour and offered a committee amendment to the resolution, which amendment was agreed to. Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, then answered a series of parliamentary inquiries as to the procedure to be followed should Mr. Pepper move the previous question and should the motion be defeated:

MR. [WAYNE L.] HAYS [of Ohio]: Mr. Speaker, if the previous question is refused, is it true that then amendments may be offered and further debate may be had on the resolution?

THE SPEAKER: If the previous question is defeated, then the resolution is open to further consideration and action and debate. . . .

MR. [CORNELIUS E.] GALLAGHER [of New Jersey]: If the previous question is voted down we will have the option to reopen debate, the resolution will be open for amendment, or it can be tabled. Is that the situation as the Chair understands it?

THE SPEAKER: If the previous question is voted down on the resolution,

14. 112 CONG. REC. 27725, 89th Cong. 2d Sess.

the time will be in control of some Member in opposition to it, and it would be open to amendment or to a motion to table.

§ 34.5 Where the motion for the previous question on a resolution (reported from the Rules Committee) is rejected, the Chair recognizes the Member who led the opposition to the previous question, who may offer an amendment and is recognized for one hour.

During consideration of House Resolution 312, waiving points of order and providing special procedures during consideration of H.R. 4390 (the legislative branch appropriations for fiscal year 1980) on June 13, 1979,⁽¹⁵⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁶⁾ The question is on ordering the previous question. . . .

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 126, nays 292, not voting 16, as follows: . . .

[Mr. Delbert L. Latta, of Ohio, who had led the opposition to the previous question was recognized.]

MR. LATTA: Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment in the nature of a substitute.

15. 125 CONG. REC. 14650, 96th Cong. 1st Sess.

16. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by Mr. Latta: Strike all after the resolving clause and insert in lieu thereof the following: . . .

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Latta) is recognized for 1 hour.

MR. LATTA: Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

§ 34.6 Upon rejection of the motion for the previous question on a resolution reported from the Committee on Rules, control shifts to the Member leading the fight against the previous question, who may offer a proper amendment or motion and who controls the time for debate thereon.

On May 29, 1980,⁽¹⁷⁾ during consideration of House Resolution 682 (providing for consideration of H.R. 7428, public debt limit extension), the following proceedings occurred in the House:

MR. [RICHARD] BOLLING [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 682, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 682

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 7428) to extend the present public debt limit through June 30, 1980.

17. 126 CONG. REC. 12667, 12668, 12672, 12677, 96th Cong. 2d Sess.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁸⁾ The gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Bolling) is recognized for 1 hour. . . .

The question is on ordering the previous question.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the yeas appeared to have it. . . .

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 74, nays 312, not voting 47, as follows:

So the previous question was not ordered. . . .

THE SPEAKER: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Bauman).

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by Mr. Bauman: Strike out all after the resolving clause and insert in lieu thereof the following: . . .

A point of order against the amendment based on the germaneness rule was sustained.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, I offer a privileged motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Bauman moves to refer House Resolution 682 to the Committee on Rules.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Bauman) is recognized for 1 hour. . . .

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion.

The previous question was ordered.

THE SPEAKER: The question is on the privileged motion offered by the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Bauman).

The preferential motion was agreed to.

Parliamentarian's Note: Upon the rejection of the previous question on a special rule from the Committee on Rules, motions under Rule XVI, clause 4, to refer or to postpone are in order, as well as motions to amend and to lay on the table.

§ 34.7 Where the House rejects the previous question, the Member who led the opposition thereto is entitled to one hour of debate and is entitled to close debate where he has yielded half of his time to another Member.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on June 25, 1981,⁽¹⁹⁾ during consideration of House Resolution 169 (providing for consideration of H.R. 3982, Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981):

MR. [RICHARD] BOLLING [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 169 and ask for its immediate consideration.

19. 127 CONG. REC. 14065, 14078, 14079, 14081, 97th Cong. 1st Sess.

The Clerk read the resolution as follows:

H. RES. 169

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to move, any rule of the House to the contrary notwithstanding, that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 3982) to provide for reconciliation pursuant to section 301 of the first concurrent resolution on the budget for the fiscal year 1982. . . .

THE SPEAKER:⁽²⁰⁾ The gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Bolling) is recognized for 1 hour. . . .

After debate, Mr. Bolling moved the previous question on the resolution.

THE SPEAKER: The question is on ordering the previous question.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

MR. [DELBERT L.] LATTA [of Ohio]: Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

[The previous question was rejected.]

MR. LATTA: Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by Mr. Latta: Strike all after the resolving clause and insert in lieu thereof the following: . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁾ The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Latta) is recognized for 1 hour.

MR. LATTA: Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield to my good friend, the Speaker of the House. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Let the Chair inquire of the gentleman from Ohio, did he . . . yield 30 minutes of the hour to the Speaker?

MR. LATTA: Right. . . .

MR. [THOMAS P.] O'NEILL [Jr., of Massachusetts]: I reserve my right until such time as the gentleman wants to move the previous question.

MR. LATTA: We have the right under the rules of procedure to close debate.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman is correct.

MR. LATTA: We have the right to close debate on this issue.

MR. O'NEILL: I have no requests for time on this side.

Powell, of New York, and referring the question of his final right to a seat to a select committee. Pending debate on the resolution, Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, answered parliamentary inquiries on the procedure to be followed:

MR. [JOE D.] WAGGONNER [Jr., of Louisiana]: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

Mr. Speaker, if the previous question is voted down would, then, under the rules of the House, amendments or substitutes be in order to the resolution offered by the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. Udall]?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will state to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. Waggonner] that any germane amendment may be in order to that particular amendment.

MR. WAGGONNER: Mr. Speaker, one further parliamentary inquiry. . . .

Mr. Speaker, under the rules of the House would the option or priority or a subsequent amendment or a substitute motion lie with the minority?

THE SPEAKER: . . . [T]he usual procedure of the Chair has been to the effect that the Member who led the fight against the resolution will be recognized.

Rejection of Conference Report

§ 34.9 Where a conference report was rejected and the manager of the report did not seek further recognition, the Speaker recognized a minority member of the committee with jurisdiction of the bill to move to concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment.

On Dec. 10, 1969,⁽³⁾ Mr. Wright Patman, of Texas, manager of a conference report, moved the previous question and the House rejected the conference report. When Mr. Patman did not seek further recognition, Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, recognized Garry E. Brown, of Michigan, a minority member of the Committee on Banking and Currency which had reported the bill, to offer a motion to concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment.

§ 34.10 Where a conference report on a House bill with a Senate amendment is rejected, the Chair directs the Clerk to report the Senate amendment; and if the manager of the report does not seek recognition to offer a motion to dispose of the Senate amendment the Chair recognizes the Member who had led the opposition to the conference report to offer a motion to dispose of the amendment.

3. 115 CONG. REC. 38102-06, 91st Cong. 1st Sess.

On Sept. 16, 1977,⁽⁴⁾ during proceedings relating to the consideration of the conference report on H.R. 5262 (international financial institutions), called up by Mr. Henry S. Reuss, of Wisconsin, the following occurred:

So the conference report was rejected.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

MR. [TOM] HARKIN [of Iowa]: Madam Speaker, I offer a preferential motion. The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Harkin moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the text of the bill (H.R. 5262) to provide for increased participation by the United States in the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, the International Development Association, the International Finance Corporation, the Asian Development Bank and the Asian Development Funds, and for other purposes, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁵⁾ The gentleman from Iowa (Mr. Harkin) will be recognized for 30 minutes in support of his motion, and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Stanton) will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. Harkin).

Rejection of Motion To Dispose of Senate Amendment—Recognition To Offer Successor Motion

§ 34.11 Where a motion is made by the Member in charge of a conference report to recede and concur in a Senate amendment with an amendment and the motion is defeated, recognition for a motion to further insist on disagreement passes to a Member opposed.

On June 26, 1942,⁽⁶⁾ Malcolm C. Tarver, of Georgia, the Member in charge of a bill reported from conference with amendments in disagreement, moved that the House recede and concur with an amendment in a Senate amendment in disagreement. The motion was rejected.

Clarence Cannon, of Missouri, a Member opposed to the Senate amendment, then arose to make the motion to further insist on disagreement to the Senate amendment, at the same time that Mr. Tarver arose to make the same motion. After the question of recognition was discussed, Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, recognized Mr. Cannon to make the motion:

6. 88 CONG. REC. 5637, 77th Cong. 2d Sess.

MR. TARVER: Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit a parliamentary inquiry. It was my purpose to offer a motion as I have done in connection with the same subject matter on previous occasions. I had risen for the purpose of offering a motion to further insist upon the disagreement of the House to Senate amendments Nos. 90 and 91. I wish to inquire whether or not I am privileged, as chairman of the House conferees, to offer that motion?

MR. CANNON of Missouri: Mr. Speaker, my motion is to further insist.

MR. TARVER: Mr. Speaker, I was on my feet before the gentleman from Missouri rushed over between me and the microphone and offered his motion.

MR. CANNON of Missouri: Mr. Speaker, it is a long-established rule of procedure that when a vital motion made by the Member in charge of a bill is defeated, the right to prior recognition passes to the opposition. That is the position in which the gentleman finds himself. He has made a major motion. The motion has been defeated. Therefore the right of recognition passes to the opposition, and I ask to be recognized to move to further insist. . . .

THE SPEAKER: The Chair is of the opinion that the gentleman from Missouri has been properly recognized to offer a motion. The gentleman will state his motion.

MR. CANNON of Missouri: Mr. Speaker, I move that the House further insist on its disagreement to the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.⁽⁷⁾

§ 34.12 Where the House rejects a motion by the manager of a bill to dispose of a Senate amendment remaining in disagreement, recognition to offer another motion is accorded to a Member who led the opposition to the rejected motion.

On Sept. 30, 1976,⁽⁸⁾ Mr. Jack Brooks, of Texas, made the following motion with respect to a Senate amendment to H.R. 13367, extending the State and Local Fiscal Assistance Act of 1972, the Speaker having ruled out the conference report on a point of order and directed the Clerk to report the Senate amendments remaining in disagreement for disposition by motion.

MR. BROOKS: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Brooks moves that the House recede from its disagreement and concur in the Senate amendment to the House bill (H.R. 13367) to extend and amend the State and Local Fiscal Assistance Act of 1972 and for other purposes, with an amendment as follows:

MR. [FRANK] HORTON [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask what the allocation of time is on this particular motion.

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁹⁾ The Chair will state that the rule provides, of course, for 30 minutes on a side under consideration of a conference report but the practice has been followed, if the Chair recalls correctly, of allotting 30 minutes to a side on a motion when a conference report is ruled out on a point of order.

Under that procedure, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Brooks) will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair would inquire who will be handling the matter on the minority side?

MR. HORTON: Mr. Speaker, I will be handling time on this side.

THE SPEAKER: And the gentleman from New York (Mr. Horton) will be recognized for 30 minutes for debate only.

The motion was rejected.⁽¹⁰⁾

MR. HORTON: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Horton moves that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment to H.R. 13367, with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: . . .

§ 34.13 Upon rejection of a motion offered by the manager of a conference report on an amendment in disagreement, recognition passes to a Member opposed to offer another motion.

During consideration of H.R. 9375 (supplemental appropriations) in the House on Dec. 6, 1977,⁽¹¹⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹²⁾ The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 43: Page 20, after line 10, insert: Appropriations provided under this heading in the Department of Defense Appropriation Act, 1977, are rescinded in the amount of $462,000,000.

MR. [GEORGE H.] MAHON [of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Mahon moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 43 and concur therein.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 166, nays 191, answered “present” 3, not voting 74, as follows: . . .

So the motion was rejected.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

MR. [B. F.] SIKES [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Sikes moves that the House insist on its disagreement to Senate Amendment No. 43.

—Debate on Successor Motion

§ 34.14 Under clause 2(b) of Rule XXVIII, the time allotted for debate on an original motion to dispose of disagreement on a Senate amendment is divided equally between majority and minority parties (except that if both floor managers support the motion then one-third of the time may be claimed by an opponent); and where the original motion to dispose of the Senate amendment in disagreement is rejected, the time for debate on a successor motion is also governed by clause 2(b) of Rule XXVIII and may be equally divided.

On Aug. 6, 1993,⁽¹³⁾ the House had under consideration Senate amendments in disagreement to H.R. 2493 (Agriculture appropriations for 1994):

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁴⁾ The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Senate amendment No. 164: Page 81, after line 12, insert:

Sec. 730. (a) None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act shall be used by the Secretary of Agriculture to provide a total amount of payments to a person to support the price of honey under section 207 of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1446h) and section 405A of such Act (7 U.S.C. 1425a) in excess of $50,000 in the 1994 crop year.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. SKEEN

MR. [JOE] SKEEN [of New Mexico]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Clerk will report the motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Motion offered by Mr. Skeen:

Mr. Skeen moves that the House recede and concur in the amendment of the Senate numbered 164 with an amendment as follows: In the matter proposed to be inserted by the amendment, add the following: "The GAO shall conduct a study and report to Congress on the effectiveness of the program."

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. Skeen] is recognized for 30 minutes.

MR. [HARRIS W.] FAWELL [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. FAWELL: First of all, the motion that the gentleman from New Mexico offered was read so fast I did not understand just what it was. But I rise in opposition.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: If the gentleman is opposed to the motion offered by the gentleman from New Mexico, the gentleman [Mr. Fawell] is entitled to 20 minutes to debate the issue. . . .

MR. FAWELL: . . . Assuming that this particular motion fails, can the Chair advise me where we will be then?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Another Member will be recognized for another motion on this amendment in disagreement. . . .

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. Skeen]. . . .

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were yeas 140, nays 274, not voting 19, as follows: . . .

So the House refused to recede and concur in the amendment of the Senate numbered 164 with an amendment. . . .

MR. FAWELL: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Fawell moves that the House recede and concur in the amendment of the Senate numbered 164 with an amendment as follows: In the matter proposed to be inserted by the amendment, strike "$50,000" and insert "$0".

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Fawell] will be recognized for 30 minutes in support of his motion, and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Durbin] will be recognized for 30 minutes in opposition.

Under a former practice, if the initial motion to dispose of the amendment in disagreement was rejected, the time for debate on a subsequent motion was under the hour rule and entirely within the control of the Member of the opposition recognized to make the motion. Thus, on July 19, 1977,⁽¹⁵⁾ during consideration of the conference report on H.R. 7554 (Housing and Urban Development and independent agencies appropriation bill for fiscal 1978) in the House, it was demonstrated that, where a motion to dispose of an amendment reported from conference in disagreement, offered by the manager of the conference report, is rejected, the Speaker recognizes a Member leading the opposition to offer another motion to dispose of the amendment.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁶⁾ The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 24: Page 17, line 11, strike out "$2,943,600,000" and insert "$3,013,000,000".

MR. [EDWARD P.] BOLAND [of Massachusetts] [manager of the conference report]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Boland moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 24 and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed by said amendment insert "$2,995,300,000".

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Boland) is recognized for 30 minutes and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Coughlin) is recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Boland).

MR. BOLAND: Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. . . .

MR. [DON] FUQUA [of Florida]: Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to amendment No. 24. . . .

[After debate, the motion was rejected.]

MR. FUQUA: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Fuqua moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 24 and concur therein.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Florida (Mr. Fuqua) is recognized for 60 minutes. . . .

MR. FUQUA: Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion.

The previous question was ordered.

The motion was agreed to.

§ 34.15 Division of time for debate provided in clause 2(b) of Rule XXVIII between the majority and minority party on an amendment reported from conference in disagreement applies to a second motion to dispose of the Senate amendment upon defeat of the first, and where the second motion is offered by a minority Member, the Chair may allocate one-half of the time to him and one-half to a majority Member later to be designated, notwithstanding earlier control of time by the manager of the conference report and the ranking minority member on the initial motion.

During consideration of the supplemental appropriations and rescission bill for fiscal year 1980 (H.R. 7542) in the House on July 2, 1980,⁽¹⁷⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

17. 126 CONG. REC. 18357, 18359, 18360, 96th Cong. 2d Sess.

16. Norman Y. Mineta (Calif.).

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁸⁾ The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Long), to concur with the Senate amendment numbered 95.

The motion was rejected.

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Bauman moves to recede and concur in the amendment of the Senate (No. 95) with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken and inserted by said amendment insert the following:

CHAPTER VI

FOREIGN OPERATIONS

FUNDS APPROPRIATED TO THE PRESIDENT

INTERNATIONAL DISASTER ASSISTANCE

For an additional amount to carry out the provisions of Section 491 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, $43,000,000 to remain available until expended. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Maryland is recognized. . . .

MR. [CLARENCE D.] LONG of Maryland: Mr. Speaker, I have a preferential motion.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, I have been recognized, I believe. . . .

¹⁸ Paul Simon (Ill.).

MR. LONG of Maryland: Mr. Speaker, I was on my feet for a preferential motion.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: On this motion the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Bauman) has the time. . . .

MR. [THOMAS P.] O'NEILL [Jr., of Massachusetts]: . . . I offer a preferential motion that is at the desk.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, I did not yield to the gentleman to offer a motion.

MR. O'NEILL: I was recognized.

MR. BAUMAN: Well, I did not yield for that purpose, Mr. Speaker. I control the time, do I not?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Bauman) has 30 minutes, the majority side has 30 minutes. . . .

MR. BAUMAN: My parliamentary inquiry is that the Chair stated a moment ago that the time on a preferential motion to concur with an amendment is divided between the majority and the minority. Is it not controlled by the maker of the motion? Only amendments in disagreement are divided.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The practice of the House is clearly on a motion of this type after an initial motion has been rejected on an amendment reported from conference in disagreement that the time is divided between the majority and the minority parties.

E. RELEVANCY IN DEBATE

§ 35. Debate in the House

The House rules provide in Rule XIV clause 1 that in addressing the House a Member “shall confine himself to the question under debate, avoiding personality.”⁽¹⁹⁾ The rule is neither intended nor enforced to prevent free and open debate in the House at the appropriate time, but is designed to expedite proceedings when a specific proposition is before the House for action. Although the Speaker or the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole may on his own initiative call a Member to order for indulging in irrelevant debate,⁽²⁰⁾ the Chair generally awaits a point of order before ruling on the issue.⁽¹⁾ If a Member persists in 19. See House Rules and Manual § 749 (1995). For discussion of the rule against indulging in personalities in debate, see § 60, infra.

20. For occasions where the Speaker has called Members to order on his own initiative for failing to confine themselves to a question of privilege, see § 36.5, infra; 8 Cannon’s Precedents § 2481. 5 Hinds’ Precedents § 5043 (footnote) indicates that in the early practice of the House of Representatives, the Speaker routinely called Members to order for speaking beside the question.

1. See, for example, §§ 35.1 and 35.11, infra; 5 Hinds’ Precedents §§ 5043–5048.

irrelevant debate after being cautioned by the Chair to proceed in order, the House may proceed under clause 4 of Rule XIV, requiring that the Member take his seat and not proceed further without the consent of the House.⁽²⁾

The rule of relevancy of debate in the House is a rule of common sense and flexibility, and Members must be permitted some latitude to discuss issues related to the pending proposition.⁽³⁾

A Member may be authorized by the House (or Committee of the Whole) to discuss matters unrelated to the pending proposition by requesting unanimous consent “to speak out of order.”⁽⁴⁾

Where a special rule from the Committee on Rules is pending, to provide for the consideration of a bill, debate in the House thereon should be confined to the merits and provisions of the resolution and should not extend to a general and complete discussion of the measure whose consideration is provided for in the resolution, since such debate should transpire

2. 8 Cannon’s Precedents § 2534.

3. See the Speaker’s statement at § 35.1, infra. Early practice took a very strict construction of the rule; see 5 Hinds’ Precedents §§ 5043–5048.

4. See § 35.7, infra.

during the consideration of the measure itself. But the nature and importance of a special order requires that debate be allowed on the general purposes and necessity for consideration of the measure provided for, as well as discussion of past proceedings on other bills to demonstrate the reasons for the drafting of the resolution in question.⁽⁵⁾

It has always been held, and generally quite strictly, that in the House the Member must confine himself to the subject under debate.⁽⁶⁾ Debate on a motion to amend must be confined to the amendment, and may neither include the general merits of the bill,⁽⁷⁾ nor range to the merits of a proposition not included in the underlying resolution.⁽⁸⁾

A Member raising a question of privilege, either of the House or of the Member, must confine himself to the question presented,⁽⁹⁾ and may not generally refer to pending legislation.⁽¹⁰⁾ Where the question of privilege is based upon criticism of the Member's statements or actions with respect to a certain legislative proposal, he may refer to that proposal in order to justify his motivations and to answer the criticism raised.⁽¹¹⁾

Where a proposition is not pending in the House, Members may express themselves on any subject (which is otherwise appropriate under the rules of the House) by requesting unanimous consent to address the House or by inserting remarks in the Record.⁽¹²⁾

Relevancy During General Debate

§ 35.1 Debate in the House is confined to the subject under consideration, but the Speaker has indicated that the rule of relevancy is applied with tolerance and latitude.

On Dec. 10, 1963,⁽¹³⁾ Mr. Byron G. Rogers, of Colorado, raised a point of order against the remarks of Mr. William H. Avery, of Kansas. Mr. Rogers observed that the House was at that time considering a special rule on the indigent defendants bill, whereas Mr. Avery was talking about the civil rights bill. Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, ruled as follows:

The Chair takes a lenient attitude toward debate in the House. If the gentleman from Kansas feels that there is anything involved in this bill that might be connected with legislation concerning civil rights, the Chair feels that the gentleman, who is conversant with the rules, is proceeding and will proceed in order.

Mr. H. R. Gross, of Iowa, then asked unanimous consent that Mr. Avery have permission to speak out of order and the House so ordered.

Debate on Special Order

§ 35.2 Debate on a resolution reported by the Committee on Rules and providing for the consideration of a bill is generally limited to the merits of such resolution.

On June 22, 1937, House Resolution 227 was offered by the Committee on Rules to provide a special rule for consideration in the Committee of the Whole of a bill relating to the tenure of certain federal judges (H.R. 2271).⁽¹⁴⁾

14. 81 CONG. REC. 6157, 75th Cong. 1st Sess.

Mr. Leon Sacks, of Pennsylvania, who was yielded time, rose:

Mr. Speaker, there are no words I can utter to defend that great Governor of Pennsylvania, George H. Earle, which would explain his humane qualities and true democratic principles more than his own action. Does the gentleman from Michigan prefer the action of the President of his own party at Anacostia, or would he prefer the orderly prevention of bloodshed in Johnstown?

Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, sustained a point of order that Mr. Sacks was not proceeding in order, since the matter under debate was the resolution reported from the Committee on Rules for the consideration of the bill and because Mr. Sacks' remarks were not directed to the merits of that procedure:

THE SPEAKER: . . . The Chair will state the rule and its proper interpretation.

Rule XIV provides as follows:

When any Member desires to speak or deliver any matter to the House, he shall . . . confine himself to the question under debate, avoiding personality.

The matter now under debate is the resolution reported out of the Committee on Rules for the consideration of a bill from the Committee on the Judiciary. The gentleman from Pennsylvania will kindly proceed in order under the rule.⁽¹⁵⁾

15. Id. at p. 6162.

§ 35.3 In debate on a special rule, the terms of which restrict general debate upon a bill to a specified time, it is in order to show by way of illustration from past experience the need for limiting general debate on the bill, but such discussion may not be broadened to include a reply to a speech made at some other time in general debate.

On June 20, 1935, while the House was considering a special rule (H. Res. 266) for consideration of a deficiency appropriation bill (H.R. 8554) in the Committee of the Whole, several points of order were made that Mr. Byron B. Harlan, of Ohio, was indulging in general debate rather than specific debate on the special rule.⁽¹⁶⁾

Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, ruled that Mr. Harlan must confine himself to the resolution before the House and not discuss extraneous matters. After some intervening debate, the Speaker asked Mr. Harlan to suspend his debate for a comment from the Chair:

. . . It has always been the custom heretofore in discussing resolutions making in order matters of legislation for Members to be rather liberal in their discussions and not necessarily to confine themselves to the pending resolution.

The Chair thinks that discussion on these rules should not be too narrowly restricted. Of course, under the precedents, a Member must confine himself to the subject of debate when objection is raised. The pending resolution is one which undertakes to limit general debate upon the deficiency bill to 2 hours and to confine the debate to the bill itself. The Chair thinks it is entirely too narrow a construction to undertake to hold a Member, in discussing the resolution either pro or con, to the simple question of whether or not the rule should be adopted, and that it is entirely legitimate discussion for a Member who is undertaking to uphold the rule and to justify confining debate to the bill to cite as illustrations what has occurred in previous discussions. The Chair does not think a Member, in using such illustrations, is justified in answering a speech that has been made upon a previous occasion. However, the Chair repeats that the Chair does think it is perfectly legitimate for a Member who is undertaking to justify the rule to refer to experiences on previous occasions where the debate was not limited to the bill, and the Chair hopes that the gentleman from Ohio will proceed in order.

Debate on Special Order for Consideration of Bill

§ 35.4 While under clause 1 of Rule XIV, debate in the House is confined to the question under debate, debate on a special rule reported from the Committee on Rules providing for the consideration of a bill may range to the merits of the bill proposed to be considered.

On Sept. 26, 1989,⁽¹⁷⁾ during consideration of House Resolution 245 (providing for consideration of H.R. 3299, the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1989) in the House, the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [BUTLER] DERRICK [of South Carolina]: Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 245 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 245

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 1(b) of rule XXIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 3299) to provide for reconciliation pursuant to section 5 of the concurrent resolution on the budget for the fiscal year 1990. . . .

MR. [JAMES A.] TRAFICANT [Jr., of Ohio]: . . . Now, in this package that we are discussing today, there is a capital gains cut proposal being bandied around. Here are the statistics I have, and if I am wrong, I would be glad to be corrected. If you are a family of four and you earn $25,000 your tax break will be $15.

17. 135 CONG. REC. 21530, 21532, 101st Cong. 1st Sess.

MR. [CLIFFORD B.] STEARNS [of Florida]: Mr. Speaker, I have a point of parliamentary inquiry. . . .

My question, Mr. Speaker, is this: Is this debate relative to the rule?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁸⁾ The House is presently debating the resolution from the Committee on Rules.

MR. STEARNS: And, Mr. Speaker, this particular debate by this distinguished gentleman is relevant to the rule?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The debate on the rule can go beyond the language of the resolution and the rule proposed to the merits of the legislation which will be considered by the rule.

§ 35.5 Debate on a special rule reported from the Committee on Rules authorizing the Speaker to entertain motions to suspend the rules on the current calendar day should be confined to that proposal; while it is permissible during debate on such rule to discuss the priority of business and the importance of bills that would not be scheduled for consideration under the rule, it is not permissible to discuss the substance of such bills on the merits.

On Sept. 27, 1990,⁽¹⁹⁾ the House was considering a resolution⁽²⁰⁾ permitting motions to suspend the rules on that calendar day. A bill that would not be scheduled for consideration under the proposed rule was discussed:

20. H. Res. 479.

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: . . . I am sure the chairman of the Judiciary Committee is speaking from the standpoint of this caucus when he says that he has a tough crime bill, but one of our concerns was that, for instance, in that bill that someone who blew up an airplane that contained 300 people would not be eligible for the death penalty. That would not be an option allowed to the jury under Federal law in the bill that he brought forward to us. We regard that as maybe being not quite tough enough.

There are concerns [about] the business of applying racial quotas to a death penalty consideration that is in the gentleman's bill. There are many people who feel that racial quota portion will, in fact, negate the ability of juries to deal meaningfully with death penalty decisions. . . .

I simply would say that we have to have a rule on the House floor that allows us to get real votes on some of these meaningful issues. . . .

MR. [JAMES A.] HAYES of Illinois: Mr. Speaker, I thought that we were discussing the rule on the suspensions. Now we have got into discussing the content of the crime bill. I think it is completely out of order.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁾ The gentleman is correct. The debate should proceed on the matter before the House, and that is the rule proposed by the gentleman from Massachusetts on the suspensions. . . .

1. Terry L. Bruce (Ill.).

MR. [BILL] MCCOLLUM [of Florida]: . . . I totally agree with the gentleman. The issue is this rule. The issue is on the question of the consideration of all these suspensions today, instead of considering the crime bill, instead of considering something that could have been out here much earlier than it is apparently going to be, not the substance of the work of the gentleman from Texas. . . .

MR. [CRAIG A.] WASHINGTON [of Texas]: Mr. Speaker I raise a point of order that the gentleman is not discussing the matter up for discussion on the floor.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will advise the Members, that in the Chair's opinion discussing the priority of business is probably within the confines of the resolution called up by the gentleman from Massachusetts, but when debate ranges into the merits of the relative bills not yet before the House, the Chair would admonish the Members that that probably goes beyond the resolution offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Role of Chair in Enforcing Relevancy

§ 35.6 The Chair does not take the initiative to enforce the rule of relevance in debate but does enforce the rule when a point of order based thereon is made.

On Sept. 27, 1990,⁽²⁾ during consideration of a special rule authorizing the Speaker to entertain motions to suspend the rules on that calendar day, substantive issues relating to bills that would not be scheduled for consideration under the rule were discussed during debate on the rule.⁽³⁾ The Chair indicated that the rule of relevance in debate is enforced “where that point of order is made:”

MR. [BILL] MCCOLLUM [of Florida]: . . . The issue is on the question of the consideration of all these suspensions today, instead of considering the crime bill, instead of considering something that could have been out here much earlier than it is apparently going to be. . . .

MR. [CRAIG A.] WASHINGTON [of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, I raise a point of order that the gentleman is not discussing the matter up for discussion on the floor. . . .

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

Mr. Speaker, since we are suspending all of the rules of the House at the Speaker’s discretion under this bill, is it not appropriate to discuss matters that the Speaker might decide to suspend the rules on this day? . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁴⁾ . . . [O]nce the House gets into debating the content of the legislation that might be brought before the House, the Chair would admonish Members they have gone beyond the confines of the motion made by the gentleman from Massachusetts. . . .

MR. WALKER: . . . [I]n discussing suspending all of the rules of the House . . . for the rest of this day, it seems to us there are matters of content involved. Is the Chair suggesting we cannot discuss matters of content of things that might be suspended under the rules?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would admonish the Members that they are not allowed to discuss the merits of matters not pending before the House where that point of order is made. The pending business before the House is the resolution offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts, to adopt the rule reported by the Committee on Rules.

That is what is before the House.

Pro Forma Amendment

§ 35.7 Where a Member was addressing the House on a motion to strike out the last word and consent was granted to him to proceed for an additional time, the Speaker held that he must confine his remarks to the bill under consideration where objection was made, notwithstanding that in his original time he had not been proceeding in order.

On June 15, 1935,⁽⁵⁾ Mr. Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, arose to state a parliamentary inquiry where the House was considering a bill by unanimous consent in the House as in the Committee of the Whole:

5. 79 CONG. REC. 9383, 74th Cong. 1st Sess.

Where a Member is speaking on the floor, out of order, under a motion to strike out the last word, and it is clearly apparent to every person present that his speech is out of order, and another Member . . . from Mississippi [Mr. Rankin] . . . asks that he be permitted to proceed for 15 minutes so that he may have time to examine his records, when it is generally understood that the whole speech is out of order, and the unanimous consent for such 15 additional minutes is granted by the House, is the Member precluded from so using his 15 minutes? I submit that it was generally understood that the extra 15 minutes granted by the House were to be used out of order.

Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, ruled as follows:

The Chair will state to the gentleman from Mississippi, that the gentleman, of course, is familiar with the rules, and knows how consent may be obtained to speak out of order. The gentleman from Mississippi did not submit his request in that form. The gentleman made reference to some records that the gentleman from New Hampshire was searching for at the time. Consent was given to proceed for 15 minutes. When a Member of the House exercises his privilege and makes the point of order that the gentleman is proceeding out of order when consent has not been given, there is no alternative and the Chair must rule that the point of order is well taken and ask the gentleman speaking to confine himself to the matter before the House.

Parliamentarian's Note: The Speaker had previously advised that in order to obtain permission to deliver remarks unrelated to the pending question, a Member must specifically request unanimous consent to "speak out of order."

During Morning Hour Call of Committees

§ 35.8 Debate in the House during the morning hour call of committees must be confined to the pending matter under consideration.

On June 12, 1933,⁽⁶⁾ during the morning hour call of committees, the Committee on the Judiciary was called and Mr. Gordon Browning, of Tennessee, called up a bill to establish a Tennessee judicial district. Mr. Edward W. Goss, of Connecticut, raised a parliamentary inquiry: "Do I understand this time is allotted for general debate, or is the debate confined to the bill, under the rule?" Speaker Henry T. Rainey, of Illinois, ruled that "In the House, debate must be confined to the bill under consideration.”

Debate on Impeachment Charges

§ 35.9 In presenting impeachment charges a Member is not confined to a bare statement of the charges but may supplement them with argumentative statements.

On May 7, 1935,⁽⁷⁾ Mr. Everett M. Dirksen, of Illinois, rose in order to prefer charges of impeachment against Federal Judge Samuel Alschuler. During Mr. Dirksen’s address, in which he stated his personal opinion of the judge in question and of other federal judges, Mr. Hatton W. Sumners, of Texas, arose to state:

I am not familiar with the precedents, but I have the impression that in preferring charges of impeachment, argumentative statements should be avoided as much as possible. If I am wrong in that statement with reference to what the precedents and custom have established, I of course withdraw the observation.⁽⁸⁾

Mr. Dirksen stated that he had no desire to violate the precedents but stated that there were two additional pages of explanatory matter which he desired either to state to the House or to insert into the Record to elaborate the statement of specific charges that had been made. Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, ruled:

The Chair thinks it is entirely up to the gentleman from Illinois so far as the propriety of his statement is concerned.⁽⁹⁾

Similarly, on Jan. 14, 1936, Mr. Robert A. Green, of Florida, arose to present impeachment charges against Federal Judge Halsted L. Ritter.⁽¹⁰⁾ Mr. Carl E. Mapes, of Michigan, rose to state a point of order that Mr. Green was presenting argumentative and personal statements, after Mr. Green had delivered the following remarks:

. . . I am vitally interested in this investigation for two important reasons: First, from a careful study of the evidence I am convinced that Judge Ritter is an ignorant, unjust, tyrannical, and corrupt judge; that a majority of the people in his district have the same convictions that I have; that confidence in him and his court is lacking; that his usefulness as a judge of the southern district of Florida has long since come to an end. Second, a large portion of the district over which Judge Ritter presides is in my congressional district, and my people demand and feel that they are entitled to a judge learned in the law and one who has dignity, honor, and integrity.⁽¹¹⁾

Speaker Byrns ruled that Mr. Green was entitled to one hour's debate on the charges and that he could use all or any portion of the hour as he saw fit, including a general discussion of the charges.

§ 35.10 In debating articles of impeachment a Member may refer to the political, social, and family background of the accused.

On Mar. 2, 1936, Mr. Hatton W. Summers, of Texas, called up for consideration House Resolution 422 presenting articles of impeachment against Federal Judge Ritter.⁽¹²⁾ Extensive debate ensued on the resolution, and Mr. Louis Ludlow, of Indiana, arose to present himself as a "character witness" on behalf of Judge Ritter. He began to discuss the family background of the accused and the "outstanding character and personality" of the accused's father.

Mr. Malcolm C. Tarver, of Georgia, arose to state the point of order that Mr. Ludlow was "endeavoring to read into the Record a statement with regard to the progenitors of the gentleman against whom these impeachment proceedings are pending." Mr. Tarver stated that such matters were not properly to be considered by the House and should not be discussed.⁽¹³⁾

Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, ruled that within the four and one-half hours of debate provided for on the resolution, Members could address themselves to any subject relating to the articles of impeachment and the accused.⁽¹⁴⁾

Electing Member to Committee

§ 35.11 During debate on the election of a Member to a standing committee, it is beyond the scope of permissible debate to indulge in personal attacks against the nominated Member or to address the possible future agenda of the committee, but should relate to the qualifications of the Member to serve on the committee.

On July 10, 1995,⁽¹⁵⁾ the House had under consideration a resolution to elect a Member to a standing committee:

MR. [JOHN A.] BOEHNER [of Ohio]: Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Republican Conference, I offer a privileged resolution (H. Res. 183) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

14. Id. at p. 3069.

15. 141 CONG. REC. p. ____, 104th Cong. 1st Sess.

H. RES. 183

Resolved, that the following named Member be, and he is hereby, elected to the following standing committee of the House of Representatives:

Committee on Ways and Means:
Mr. Laughlin of Texas, to rank following Mr. Portman of Ohio. . . .

MR. BOEHNER: . . . Mr. Speaker, as chairman of the Republican Conference, I am pleased to welcome the gentleman from Texas, Mr. Greg Laughlin, to our party. Mr. Laughlin saw fit several weeks ago to change parties here in the House of Representatives, and we are glad to have him on our side of the aisle.

As a result, about a week and a half ago, the Republican conference did in fact vote by unanimous vote to place the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Laughlin] on the Committee on Ways and Means. To my colleagues on the other side of the aisle who appear to have some chagrin over the fact we are placing Mr. Laughlin on the Committee on Ways and Means, I would point out that today Republicans hold about 58 percent of the seats on the Committee on Ways and Means. It has been since 1923 that the majority party has had less than 60 percent of the votes on the Committee on Ways and Means. Historically, that percentage has been a 60 to 40 split between the majority and minority on the Committee on Ways and Means. . . .

MR. [RICHARD A.] GEPHARDT [of Missouri]: . . . Mr. Speaker, I would like to respond to the case that the distinguished gentleman from Ohio has made on behalf of the Republican side. I would like to respond to both what is happening here procedurally and what is happening substantively.

First, the procedure: The gentleman is correct in saying that in past Congresses there has been a desire on the part of the majority party on certain key committees to have a larger ratio than the ratio represented by the members of the House. Many times in the past, we have had 60 percent, as Democrats on the Committee on Ways and Means and on the Committee on Rules. But I would point out that in all of those times, the ratio that the Democrats represented in the House was higher than the 53 percent that the Republicans now represent as part of the House. . . .

Let me talk about the substance. What I think is really going on here is an attempt, as was pointed out in the Washington Times on Friday, June 30, 1995, to add a Republican member of senior status to shield freshman Republicans from having to vote for deep, deep cuts in Medicare.

I quote, "Mr. Laughlin likely will provide support for potentially unpopular reductions in Medicare benefits, should GOP leaders give three committee freshmen, all of whom won with less than 51 percent of the vote, permission to vote 'no.'"

My colleagues, what is about to happen in Medicare are the largest changes to Medicare in the history of the program. If the hints we are reading in the weekend press are right, we are talking about huge increases in the premiums for Medicare recipients. If that is what is going on here, a stacking of the committee in order to make sure those cuts go through, then this is substantively wrong. If Members on your side of the aisle believe in these kinds of changes in Medicare, everybody should vote for it. Why should we be shielding Members from voting for these kinds of cuts?

Finally, let me tell you what I really think is going on here. In reading the comments of leaders on the Republican side for some time now, not just lately, I think there is an effort here to make Medicare a voluntary program. I think there is an effort to get rid of Medicare. I think that is what is really at stake. . . .

MR. BOEHNER: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

Mr. Speaker, is it my understanding that the debate on this issue should be confined to the resolution that is on the floor of the House?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁶⁾ The rules and precedents of the House would indicate that debate on the matter should relate to the matter before the House. . . .

MR. [DAVID E.] BONIOR [of Michigan]: . . . Mr. Speaker, let us not kid ourselves this evening. This debate is about one simple thing. And while we may talk about representation on the committee, which, in fact, I believe has been skewed, this debate is about Medicare. It is about whether or not we should cut Medicare to provide tax cuts for the wealthiest people in our society. It is about whether or not we should double Medicare premiums to give a tax break to the wealthiest corporations in America. . . .

MR. BOEHNER: Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order that the gentleman is not speaking to the relevant issue at hand. I make a point of order that the gentleman in the well, the minority whip, is not talking to the relevant issue at hand that is in the debate today. The issue is the seating of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Laughlin] on the Committee on Ways and Means. The gentleman proceeded, as others before him have, to talk about the issue of Medicare, which is not the subject of debate. As I understand the rules of the House, the gentleman should be required to speak to the issue that is on the floor.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman makes a point of order that engaging in debate should be on the topic before the House. The gentleman in the well is reminded that the debate topic before the House is the resolution with regard to membership on the committee and debate should be confined to that subject matter.

MR. BONIOR: Mr. Speaker, I would say to the Members that the members who serve on that committee will determine that fate of literally 40 million Americans on Medicare. There is no way you can divide or divorce the issue of who sits on that committee and the issue of what tax breaks are given, what tax breaks are taken away, what Medicare benefits are given, what Medicare benefits are taken away, what Medicaid benefits are given, what Medicaid benefits are taken away. They are bound together. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman is requested by the Chair to proceed in order.

MR. BONIOR: As this Washington Times article points out, "Mr. Laughlin will provide support for potentially unpopular reductions in Medicare benefits, should the GOP leaders give three committee freshmen, all of whom won with less than 51 percent of vote, permission to vote no." Which raises the question, what will Mr. Laughlin do on this committee? Will he cover for these three freshmen? It is an interesting question. Mr. Laughlin ought to tell the American people. He ought to tell the people of the district what are his intentions with respect to Medicare, if he is going to serve as a member of this committee.

16. Robert S. Walker (Pa.).

POINT OF ORDER

MR. BOEHNER: Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state his point of order.

MR. BOEHNER: Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order that the gentleman in the well is questioning the motives of the gentleman that is in question on the resolution appointing him to the committee.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman at this point has not named any member of the Committee on Ways and Means. The gentleman is reminded, however, that he has an obligation to the rules of the House to proceed in order. . . .

MR. BONIOR: Mr. Speaker, I would like to pose a question to the Speaker then. The question is this, how does the Speaker intend to separate those who serve on the committee from the jurisdiction which they have on that committee? What is the dividing line? Would the Chair give a ruling to this Member on where the dividing line is?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The resolution before the House is on the election of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Laughlin] to the committee. The subject matter before the House is not what he plans to do once he joins the committee. The gentleman will confine himself to the issue before the House. . . .

MR. [JOHN D.] HAYWORTH [Jr., of Arizona]: . . . Mr. Speaker, it is absolutely fascinating to listen to the guardians of the old order, the new minority, espouse a form of institutional amnesia. I may not have been here in previous Congresses, but thanks to C-SPAN and thanks to the history books, we can take a look and we can see what happened time and again in this Chamber. Debate was shut up. People were stifled. We had a decision that existed that was egregious.

POINT OF ORDER

MR. BONIOR: Point of order, Mr. Speaker. The gentleman is not talking about the resolution and he is off the issue.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Arizona [Mr. Hayworth] must confine himself to the subject matter of the resolution before the House. . . .

MR. [BILL] PAXON [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, when the Democrats give a big tax liberal a seat on the Committee on Ways and Means, they call it good government. However, when Republicans give a smaller tax, smaller government conservative a seat on the Committee on Ways and Means, the Democrats say something is wrong with that. The truth is today's debate has nothing to do at all with selling out or with Medicare or anything else. It has to do with sour grapes.

For years the Democrats' liberal leadership has used conservatives. They have promised them seats on important committees, like the Committee on Ways and Means, but when it came time to deliver, it was not done.

POINT OF ORDER

MR. [BARNEY] FRANK of Massachusetts: Point of order, Mr. Speaker. My point of order is that unless the Speaker has taken the words of the gentleman from Michigan to heart, that violates the subject of the Speaker's previous instructions, Mr. Speaker. It is off the point of the issue of appointing the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Laughlin].

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from New York [Mr. Paxon] is reminded he must proceed in order.

MR. PAXON: Mr. Speaker, the truth about this whole committee's assignment brouhaha brought up by our friends across the aisle is that the liberal leadership wants conservative bodies in their caucus but does not want to deliver for them on this House floor. Now they are angry that the gentleman from Texas, Greg Laughlin, the gentleman from Georgia, Nathan Deal, Richard Shelby, Senator Campbell, and about 100 State and local Democrats have switched parties. That is what this debate is about here.

POINT OF ORDER

MR. FRANK of Massachusetts: Point of order, Mr. Speaker. This clearly violates the spirit of the Speaker's previous instructions. I would like to be clear that unless we are going to have one test of rules for this party and another set of rules for the other, that clearly violates what the gentleman stated to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Bonior].

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair had reminded Members on both sides of the aisle when the question has been raised that they are to proceed in order. The Chair would continue to say to both sides of the aisle in fairness that they must proceed in order on the resolution. The subject matter under discussion is the election of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Laughlin] on the Committee on Ways and Means. That should be the subject of the discussion on the floor.

Resignation From Committee

§ 35.12 In response to parliamentary inquiries, the Speaker indicated that the question of whether a Member should be relieved from committee service was debatable only within narrow limits and that the Chair would take the initiative in enforcing that restriction.

On June 16, 1975,⁽¹⁷⁾ after the Speaker⁽¹⁸⁾ laid before the House a letter of resignation from the chairman of the Select Committee on Intelligence, the following proceedings occurred:

The Speaker laid before the House the [resignation of Mr. Lucien N. Nedzi, of Michigan] from the House Select Committee on Intelligence. . . .

THE SPEAKER: The question is, shall the resignation be accepted?

17. 121 CONG. REC. 19054, 19056, 19059, 94th Cong. 1st Sess.

18. Carl Albert (Okla.).

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Nedzi). . . .

MR. NEDZI: . . . Mr. Speaker, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. O'Hara).

MR. [JAMES G.] O'HARA [of Michigan]: Mr. Speaker, before proceeding, I wonder if I could address to the Chair a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman may state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. O'HARA: Mr. Speaker, I have looked at the precedents and I am somewhat uncertain as to the proper scope of the debate on such a question. I would hope that the Chair could enlighten this gentleman and the House.

THE SPEAKER: . . . The Chair will state that rule XIV, clause 1, requires that a Member confine himself to the question under debate in the House, avoiding personalities. On January 29, 1855, as cited in section 4510 of volume 4, Hinds' Precedents, Speaker Boyd held that the request of a Member that he be excused from committee service was debatable only within very narrow limits.

The Chair trusts that debate on the pending question will be confined within the spirit of that ruling and the Chair will further state that he will strictly enforce the rule as to the relevancy of debate. . . .

MR. [GARRY] BROWN of Michigan: . . . Under the germaneness test that the Speaker recited at the commencement of this discussion did the Speaker contemplate that on his own volition and initiative that he would raise the question of germaneness; or must that question of germaneness be raised by someone on the floor? . . .

Does the Speaker [intend] to question the germaneness when in his mind it appears to be nongermane?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair has so stated, and the Chair so intends.

Disciplinary Resolution

§ 35.13 Debate on a resolution reprimanding a Member is confined to the official conduct of that Member and may not extend to the conduct or criminal convictions of other Members or former Members.

During consideration of House Resolution 1414 in the House on Oct. 13, 1978,⁽¹⁹⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [JOHN J.] FLYNT [Jr., of Georgia]: Mr. Speaker, I call up a privileged resolution (H. Res. 1414) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution as follows:

H. RES. 1414

Resolved, That the House of Representatives adopt the report by the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct dated October 6, 1978, in the matter of Representative Charles H. Wilson of California.

THE SPEAKER:⁽²⁰⁾ The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Flynt) for 1 hour.

MR. FLYNT: . . . Mr. Speaker, in early 1977 . . . the House directed the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct to . . . conduct a "full and

19. 124 CONG. REC. 36976-81, 95th Cong. 2d Sess.

20. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

complete inquiry and investigation to determine whether Members of the House of Representatives . . . accepted anything of value . . . from the Government of the Republic of Korea or representatives thereof.” . . .

This violation charged against my colleague and my friend, Charles H. Wilson of California, is that he acted in a manner that did not reflect creditably on the House of Representatives, in that he made a statement in writing to the committee in response to a questionnaire, whether he had received anything of value over $100 from Tongsun Park.

When Mr. Wilson responded, he said that he had not. Subsequently, he told the committee . . . that he had previously received a wedding gift, on the occasion of his marriage in the Republic of Korea, from Tongsun Park. . . .

MR. CHARLES H. WILSON of California: . . . I have already informed the House of my decision not to contest the committee's recommendation that acceptance of its report shall constitute a reprimand. . . .

My decision was extraordinarily difficult for several reasons. My action may be considered by some as an admission of guilt. This is not the case. I assure you that I now believe, as I have throughout, that I am innocent. I freely admit that my wife and I received a cash wedding present from Tongsun Park. But there was nothing improper in this. The committee itself has found that the receipt of that present violates no statute or rule of this House. . . .

MR. [BRUCE F.] CAPUTO [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, I respect the right of everyone to feel differently about this matter; but some of us went to Korea to hear Tongsun Park. I do not know if you had a chance to read his testimony. I gather a lot of you did not. He testified that he made $850,000 in payments to some 34 Members of the House and the Senate. A lot of them are no longer Members of the House. Some of them are Members of the Senate. That is why all are not here today facing charges.

Second, a former Member of the House was indicted and convicted. Let me read to you from his conviction:

It was further part of said conspiracy that Tongsun Park, with knowledge and under the direction of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency, would corruptly provide money to various Members of the Congress and the Senate.

MR. [B. F.] SISK [of California]: Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state the point of order.

MR. SISK: Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order that the gentleman is not speaking on the subject under consideration. At the present time we are hearing a situation in connection with our colleague from California (Mr. Charles H. Wilson). We are not discussing the whole Korean episode from start to finish.

I think the gentleman is talking out of line in connection with something he is raising. I do not think he is in order.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will speak on the subject matter before us, which is House Resolution 1414, concerning Mr. Charles H. Wilson of California.

§ 35.14 No point of order lies, during debate on a disciplinary resolution (of censure) reported from the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, against discussion of evidence allegedly not presented before the Committee, as the Chair can only rule on the basis of relevancy in debate, and not on the admissibility of evidence which is related to the charges on which censure is based.

On May 29, 1980,⁽¹⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House during consideration of a privileged resolution reported from the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct (censuring Charles H. Wilson):

MR. [FLOYD] SPENCE [of South Carolina]: Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. Thomas).

(Mr. Thomas asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

MR. [WILLIAM M.] THOMAS [of California]: . . . In addition to the sources the committee chairman mentioned located in the committee report, I have recently been able to obtain a candidate's campaign statement from the secretary of state of California, a statement that was required to be filed for primary elections and for general and special elections. I have before me this statement:

I, Charles H. Wilson, hereby state that at the general election held on the 3rd day of November, 1970, I was a candidate for election to the office of: United States House of Representatives, and that all moneys paid, loaned, contributed, or otherwise furnished to me, directly or indirectly, . . . were, . . . as follows: . . .

MR. [WILLIAM D.] FORD of Michigan: . . . [A] point of order, Mr. Speaker. . . .

Mr. Speaker, I believe all we are supposed to be examining here is the record that was developed by the committee. I did not object when the gentleman from Wyoming (Mr. Cheney) brought in matters that were not in the record, but now the gentleman is going outside the action of the committee and presenting to this body evidence that was not presented before the committee, evidence that was apparently obtained by him independent of the committee's recommendation.

It is my assumption that Mr. Wilson has to defend against the record that was sent here by the committee. Now, if we have to defend against anything that anyone else wants to bring in, that is another matter.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽²⁾ The Chair does not believe that the gentleman is stating a point of order specifically. . . .

MR. FORD of Michigan: Mr. Speaker, my point of order is against the gentleman's introducing evidence here that was not introduced before the committee.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would rule on the gentleman's point of order by saying that the only test of the debate on the issues is the

1. 126 CONG. REC. 12661, 12662, 96th Cong. 2d Sess.

2. Robert A. Roe (N.J.).

relevancy of the matter presented. . . .

MR. [WILLIAM L.] CLAY [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, I have a point of order.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state his point of order.

MR. CLAY: Mr. Speaker, is it correct that we are supposedly deliberating on charges against one, Charles H. Wilson, that took place in 1971 and 1972? And, if so, what bearing on that does a record from 1970 have?

That is the record the gentleman is quoting from, Mr. Speaker.

MR. THOMAS: Mr. Speaker, may I answer that question?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Yes, the gentleman is recognized.

MR. THOMAS: Mr. Speaker, the loan of $10,000 was made July 31, 1970. It was stated in the committee that that loan was reimbursement for campaign expenses. I am quoting from a November 1970 document filed with the secretary of state of California which indicates no moneys whatsoever were expended on the basis of that loan. . . .

Mr. Speaker, the dollar amounts indicate in fact in the primary and in the general election there was a campaign surplus. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: If the Chair may address the point of order, as far as the Chair is concerned, the Chair observes that the dialog that is taking place in the colloquy relates to the subject matter that is before the House, and the Chair thinks that it may unfold as the gentleman in the well is presenting it. The Chair sees no valid reason for a point of order at this point.

MR. CLAY: Mr. Speaker, if I may proceed with my point of order, this committee has spent hundreds of thousands of dollars for investigators and attorneys. They spent 18 months investigating this case and did not present this at the hearing or at the trial of Charles H. Wilson.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will suspend.

The Chair observes that this is a very vitally important matter. The Chair feels that there are 350 to 400 pages in this committee report alone, plus all kinds of other background data.

The Chair does not feel that it has the prerogative of judging specifically other than general relevancy.

The Chair overrules the point of order, and the gentleman in the well will proceed.

§ 35.15 Debate on a resolution recommending a disciplinary sanction against a Member may not exceed the scope of the conduct of the accused Member.

On Dec. 18, 1987,⁽³⁾ during consideration of a privileged resolution (H. Res. 335, disciplining a Member) in the House, the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [JULIAN C.] DIXON [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I call up a privileged resolution (H. Res. 335) in the matter of Representative Austin J. Murphy, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

3. 133 CONG. REC. 36266, 36271, 100th Cong. 1st Sess.

H. RES. 335

Resolved, That the House of Representatives adopt the report by the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct dated December 16, 1987, in the matter of Representative Austin J. Murphy of Pennsylvania. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁴⁾ The gentleman from California [Mr. Dixon] is recognized for 1 hour.

MR. [NEWT] GINGRICH [of Georgia]: Mr. Speaker, I commend the committee for its report and its recommendation. Given the facts, a reprimand is a reasonable recommendation and I will vote "yes" but I sympathize with the plight of Mr. Murphy. We must be careful not to make a scapegoat of the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

This committee's earlier report on the gentleman from Rhode Island should be reexamined with this new yardstick. The committee's letter on the gentlewoman from Ohio should be scrutinized with this new yardstick. The admission of $24,000 in election law violations by the gentleman from California should be held up to this new yardstick.

Finally, the numerous allegations about the Speaker must be——

MR. [TOMMY F.] ROBINSON [of Arkansas]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

I thought we were here today to hear a very serious charge against one of our colleagues from Pennsylvania, not from California or other States.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Will the gentleman suspend? Does the gentleman from Georgia yield?

4. Doug McCurdy (Okla.).

MR. GINGRICH: No, I do not yield, Mr. Speaker.

MR. ROBINSON: Mr. Speaker, I raise a point of order.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state his point of order.

MR. ROBINSON: Mr. Speaker, my point of order is that we are here to consider the committee's report against our colleague Austin Murphy and not against other Members today that the charges have not been substantiated or presented to the committee.

MR. GINGRICH: Would the Chair——

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Will the gentleman suspend?

The [gentleman] will yield on the point of order.

On the debate currently ongoing, there can be references made to other cases reported by the committee, not by individual or by name. The gentleman from Georgia, as the Chair understands, has not mentioned other individuals and the gentleman from Arkansas——

MR. ROBINSON: Mr. Speaker, he has, too.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman may compare disciplinary actions reported by the committee and should confine his remarks to the matters before the House.

MR. ROBINSON: I have a further parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker. To my knowledge, these charges are not before the committee.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Georgia will proceed in order.

§ 35.16 Debate on a motion to postpone, whether when first offered or when reconsidered, must be confined to the advisability of postponement and may not go to the merits of the main proposition.

During consideration of House Resolution 660 (in the matter of Representative Charles H. Wilson) in the House on May 29, 1980,⁽⁵⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [ALLEN E.] ERTEL [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I was in the House when the previous speaker got in the well and evidently brought in material which was not in the record before the committee, which in my judgment means there has been surprise to the defense in this case in the fact that the gentleman brought up evidence, which is a document from the State of California. . . .

I did vote on the prevailing side not to postpone. I would not have voted not to postpone, except for this what I consider to be a very unfair procedure. . . .

Mr. Speaker, I move to reconsider the vote to postpone. . . .

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁶⁾ Does the gentleman have the motion in writing?

The Clerk will report the motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Ertel moves that the House reconsider the vote on the motion to postpone to a day certain. . . .

THE SPEAKER: The question is on the motion offered by Mr. Ertel to reconsider the vote on the motion offered by Mr. Rousselot to postpone consideration. . . .

So the motion to reconsider the vote on the motion to postpone was agreed to. . . .

THE SPEAKER: The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. Rousselot) to postpone to June 10.

MR. [WYCHE] FOWLER [Jr., of Georgia]: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask unanimous consent from this body for 10 minutes, to be equally divided between the opposition and the majority party, to debate the motion now before us by the gentleman from California (Mr. Rousselot). . . .

THE SPEAKER: Is there objection to the 10 minutes' debate?

The Chair hears none.

MR. FOWLER: Mr. Speaker, I have been permitted by my chairman of the committee to say to the body that we were willing, able, and prepared to stand on the report, the recommendations of our committee to this body on the matter of Charles H. Wilson. We were surprised today by the document introduced by the gentleman from California (Mr. Thomas). No other member of the committee had seen it. Mr. Charles H. Wilson had not seen it. We did not know that it was going to be introduced, and I would like to ask and would yield to the gentleman from California (Mr. Thomas) to ask him if he would request unanimous consent to strike from the Record that testimony in order to lay on the table.

MR. [WILLIAM D.] FORD of Michigan: Point of order, Mr. Speaker. . . .

I assume that the rules for debate of this 10 minutes are controlled by the

5. 126 CONG. REC. 12663-65, 96th Cong. 2d Sess.

6. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

House rules, as was the original debate on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California, and that limits it to the question of delaying this matter, and not the merits of the case.

THE SPEAKER: Under the unanimous-consent request the gentleman is within his rights, the debate is on the advisability of postponement.

Speaker's Reluctance To Rule in Advance on Relevancy

§ 35.17 Where a special order provided that one hour out of four hours of debate on conference reports considered en bloc be confined to one of the reports, the Speaker declined in advance of the debate to discuss the scope of relevancy during the designated hour, but stated he would rule on any points of order made during such debate.

On Oct. 14, 1978,⁽⁷⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House:

MR. [THOMAS L.] ASHLEY [of Ohio]: Mr. Speaker, pursuant to House Resolution 1434, I call up the conference reports on the bills [H.R. 4018, Public Utility Rates; H.R. 5037, Energy Conservation; H.R. 5146, Coal Conversion; H.R. 5289, Natural Gas Policy; and H.R. 5263, Energy Tax].

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁸⁾ Pursuant to House Resolution 1434, the

7. 124 CONG. REC. 38349, 38350, 95th Cong. 2d Sess.

8. William H. Natcher (Ky.).

gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Ashley) will be recognized for 2 hours and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Anderson) will be recognized for 2 hours.

The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Ashley) and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Anderson) for 30 minutes to debate the conference report on H.R. 5289. . . .

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: May I . . . inquire of the Chair whether the first hour of debate is to be directed to the natural gas conference report and not to the other four conference reports?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman is correct.

MR. BAUMAN: Only to the natural gas conference report?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman is correct.

MR. BAUMAN: Would it be out of order to discuss the other parts during that time?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would like to advise the gentleman that the Chair would have to rule as points along that line are brought to the attention of the Chair.

Motion To Postpone

§ 35.18 Debate on a motion to postpone must be confined to the issue of the desirability of postponement, and may not go to the merits of the main proposition.

During consideration of a privileged resolution reported from the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, the Speaker advised the Members as to the scope of debate on a motion to postpone. The proceedings in the House on May 29, 1980,⁽⁹⁾ were as follows:

MR. [CHARLES E.] BENNETT [of Florida]: Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, I call up a privileged resolution (H. Res. 660) in the matter of Representative Charles H. Wilson, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 660

Resolved,

(1) That Representative Charles H. Wilson be censured: . . .

MR. [JOHN H.] ROUSSELOT [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion. The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Rousselot moves to postpone further consideration of House Resolution 660 until June 10, 1980.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁰⁾ The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California (Mr. Rousselot) for 1 hour.

MR. ROUSSELOT: Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes, for the purposes of debate only, to my colleague, the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. Bethune).

MR. [ED] BETHUNE [of Arkansas]: Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, during the course of the committee hearings one of the critical arguments that was made by the gentleman from California (Mr. Charles H. Wilson) was that the committee was acting as investigator, prosecutor, grand juror—

MR. [WILLIAM D.] FORD of Michigan: Mr. Speaker, I have a point of order.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state his point of order.

MR. FORD of Michigan: Mr. Speaker, under the rules of the House the debate must be confined to the question of the postponement and not to any of the matters involving the matter being postponed.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman is correct.

The Chair would like to advise the Members that a motion to postpone to a day certain is debatable within very narrow limits only. Under the precedents of the House, the motion is debatable only as to the desirability of postponing consideration of this resolution to June 10, and it does not admit debate on the merits of the pending proposition.

Debate as Legislative History

§ 35.19 A Member's allegation that debate between two other Members was an improper attempt to establish legislative history on a pending motion in the House was held not to constitute a proper point of order or parliamentary inquiry.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Dec. 2, 1982,⁽¹¹⁾ during consideration of

9. 126 CONG. REC. 12649, 12650, 12652, 96th Cong. 2d Sess.

10. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

11. 128 CONG. REC. 28552, 28559, 28560, 97th Cong. 2d Sess.

H.R. 2330 (Nuclear Regulatory Commission authorization):

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹²⁾ Pursuant to clause 4, rule XXVIII, a motion to reject section 23 of the conference report having been adopted, the conference report is considered as rejected and the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. Udall) is recognized to offer an amendment consisting of the remainder of the conference report.

MR. [MORRIS K.] UDALL [of Arizona]: Mr. Speaker, pursuant to clause 4, rule XXVIII, and the action of the House, I move that the House recede from its disagreement and concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment which I send to the desk.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Clerk will report the motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Udall moves that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate, insert the following: . . .

MR. [RICHARD L.] OTTINGER [of New York]: Is it correct that the Commission's existing uranium mill tailings licensing requirements would then automatically go into effect, without constraints related to possible inconsistencies with proposed EPA standards?

MR. UDALL: Yes, that is correct. The applicability of NRC's existing standards in total would not be left in doubt by any provisions of the amendment.

MR. [SAMUEL S.] STRATTON [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

Are the gentleman from New York and the gentleman from Arizona establishing statutory legislation with these colloquies? They are giving to the EPA something that it does not have under the statutory law, or to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from New York fails to state a point of order.

MR. STRATTON: Well, it is a point of inquiry, Mr. Speaker. I am trying to determine whether this colloquy is going to go down in the law books as being the law of the land, because it certainly differs to what the legislation [is] at the present time. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has no authority over mill tailings or has any authority to direct the EPA.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair is unable to respond to the gentleman's inquiry. The response will have to come from the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. Udall).

MR. UDALL: Mr. Speaker, let me say to the gentleman from New York that obviously we cannot with a colloquy change the law. We cannot change the conference report. We can indicate what it means and how it is interpreted by Members who served on it.

Debate on Special Orders

§ 35.20 Unanimous-consent requests to address the House for up to one hour may specify the subject of the "special order", and the occupant of the Chair during that special order may enforce the rule of relevancy in debate if the special order has been permitted only on that subject.

12. William H. Natcher (Ky.).

Most special-order requests do not specify the subject to be debated, and if granted by the House the Member recognized may speak on any subject. Under Rule XIV, clause 1, however, if the question under debate has been specified by the House, the Member must confine his remarks to that subject. On Jan. 23, 1984,⁽¹³⁾ a Member indicated the subject of special orders requested, and another Member asked for a ruling that the special orders be strictly limited to those subjects:

MRS. [PATRICIA] SCHROEDER [of Colorado]: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that today, following legislative business and any special orders heretofore entered into, the following Members may be permitted to address the House, revise and extend their remarks, and include extraneous material:

Ms. Oakar, for 15 minutes;

Mr. Annunzio, for 5 minutes;

Mr. Gonzalez, for 30 minutes

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁴⁾

Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Colorado?

MRS. SCHROEDER: Mr. Speaker, I also ask unanimous consent that following legislative business on the following days, these special orders be allowed so that Members may revise and extend their remarks, and include therein extraneous material:

13. 130 CONG. REC. 90-93, 98th Cong. 2d Sess.

14. Richard B. Ray (Ga.).

Mrs. Schroeder, to honor the prior Congressman, Mr. Rogers—

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Regular order, Mr. Speaker.

MRS. SCHROEDER: Mr. Speaker, may I make a point? These are requests for the honoring of members who were deceased over the period that we have been adjourned.

MR. WALKER: Regular order, Mr. Speaker.

The unanimous-consent request is simply for time, and it is not supposed to include the title of what it is that is being done. . . .

MRS. SCHROEDER: Yes, Mr. Speaker. There is precedent for restating why we want special days assigned, and several Members, prior Members of this body, were deceased during this period while we have been adjourned.

Many Members would like to participate in the special orders, and Members have requested certain days in advance so that we could know that and send out a "Dear Colleague" in order to do that. . . .

The three orders dealing with that are these:

Myself, representing the memory of Byron Rogers, which we hope to do on January 30 for 60 minutes; and

Mr. Kastenmeier and Mr. Fascell on January 31, both wanting 60 minutes to the memory of our deceased prior chairman, Mr. Zablocki.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Colorado?

MR. WALKER: Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do so to request of the Chair whether or not these special orders will be absolutely limited to those subject matters. I ask whether the Chair will rule at this point that those special orders being entered into will be absolutely limited to those subject matters that were suggested by the gentlewoman from Colorado.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will state that the occupant of the chair at the time would have to rule on such matters.

Motion To Amend

§ 35.21 Debate on a motion to amend must be confined to the subject of the amendment, and may not range to the merits of a proposition not included in the underlying resolution.

On Jan. 31, 1995,⁽¹⁵⁾ H. Res. 43, permitting committee chairmen to schedule and announce hearings, was being considered in the House:

H. RES. 43

Resolved, That, in rule XI of the Rules of the House of Representatives, clause 2(g)(3) is amended to read as follows:

“(3) The chairman of each committee of the House (except the Committee on Rules) shall make public announcement of the date, place, and subject matter of any committee hearing at least one week before the commencement of the hearing. If the chairman of the committee determines that there is good cause to begin the hearing sooner, the chairman shall make the announcement at the earliest possible date. Any announcement made under this subparagraph shall be promptly published in the Daily Digest and promptly entered into the committee scheduling service of the House Information Systems.”.

An amendment was offered:

MR. [GERALD B. H.] SOLOMON [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Solomon: Page 2, line 2, strike “If” and all that follows through the period on page 2, line 5 and insert the following: “If the chairman of the committee, with the concurrence of the ranking minority member, determines there is good cause to begin the hearing sooner, or if the committee so determines by majority vote, a quorum being present for the transaction of business, the chairman shall make the announcement at the earliest possible date.”. . .

MR. SOLOMON: Mr. Speaker, the amendment speaks for itself. It is an agreed-upon amendment. I do not know of any opposition to it. At the appropriate time, if there are no other speakers on the other side of the aisle, I would expect to move the previous question.

Mr. Speaker, I would ask the gentleman from Massachusetts if he has any requests for time.

MR. [JOHN J.] MOAKLEY [of Massachusetts]: Mr. Speaker, I have requests from the Members who were part of the compact we struck last Friday. . . .

MR. [JOHN] BRYANT of Texas: Mr. Speaker, this is a rules change pending before the House today that was worked out and brought to the floor over a period of several days. Into this rules change was invested a good deal of effort by the Republicans and by the Democrats, but this is not a rules change that the public is concerned about.

15. 141 CONG. REC. p. ____, 104th Cong. 1st Sess.

When the House of Representatives adopted its rules for the 104th Congress, a rules change, which the public is concerned about and that had the overwhelming support of Democrats, was conspicuously absent. That is a rule to prohibit the taking of gifts by Members of Congress from paid lobbyists.

MR. [JOHN] LINDER [of Georgia]: Point of order, Mr. Speaker. Regular order.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁶⁾ For what purpose does the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Linder] rise?

MR. LINDER: Mr. Speaker, I would inquire if the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Bryant] is speaking to the motion before the House.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will state that debate must be confined to the pending resolution.

The gentleman from Texas [Mr. Bryant] may proceed in order.

MR. BRYANT of Texas: Mr. Speaker, the pending resolution ought to include language to say that Members of Congress cannot take free meals and free vacations and free golf trips from lobbyists that are paid to influence the proceedings before this House. That addition to this provision could have been brought forward. It ought to be brought forward.

16. William E. Barrett (Nebr.).

MR. SOLOMON: Mr. Speaker, regular order. The gentleman is not talking in regard to a germane amendment to the issue before us right now.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would advise the gentleman that the debate must be confined to the subject at hand.

MR. BRYANT of Texas: I have a parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker. . . .

Mr. Speaker, if I advocate that this amendment ought to be defeated unless it includes the language that I have suggested with regard to prohibiting Members of Congress from taking freebies from lobbyists, would I then not be talking upon the amendment at hand?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: It is not relevant to discuss unrelated issues as a contingency on this resolution.

§ 36. —On Question of Privilege

Question of Personal Privilege

§ 36.1 In addressing the House on a question of personal privilege a Member must confine himself to that question.

On May 6, 1932, Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, arose to state a question of personal privilege based on a newspaper editorial accusing the majority of the House of treason under the leadership of Mr. Rankin.⁽¹⁷⁾

17. 75 CONG. REC. 9715, 72d Cong. 1st Sess.

Speaker John N. Garner, of Texas, ruled that a question of personal privilege was stated, and Mr. Rankin delivered further remarks. Mr. Albert Johnson, of Washington, then arose to make a point of order that Mr. Rankin was not speaking to the question of privilege. Speaker Garner ruled that Mr. Rankin must confine himself to the question.⁽¹⁸⁾

§ 36.2 In speaking to a question of personal privilege based on criticism of a Member, he is required to confine his remarks to the question involved, but is entitled to discuss related matters necessary to challenge the charge against him.

On Feb. 28, 1956,⁽¹⁹⁾ Mr. Craig Hosmer, of California, arose to a point of personal privilege, based on an editorial from a newspaper accusing him of falsehoods in relation to a bill before the House.

After Speaker Pro Tempore John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, ruled that Mr. Hosmer had stated a question of personal privilege Mr. Hosmer obtained

18. See also 90 CONG. REC. 876, 877, 78th Cong. 2d Sess., Jan. 28, 1944; and 81 CONG. REC. 6309, 6310, 75th Cong. 1st Sess., June 24, 1937.

19. 102 CONG. REC. 3477, 3479, 3480, 84th Cong. 2d Sess.

unanimous consent to revise and extend his remarks and to include extraneous matter, including tables, during his debate.

Mr. Byron G. Rogers, of Colorado, subsequently rose to the point of order that Mr. Hosmer was not speaking on his question of personal privilege but was speaking as to the nature of the bill involved. The Speaker Pro Tempore ruled as follows:

The Chair has previously stated that in laying the foundation for answering the charge of falsehood in the editorial, the gentleman from California would have rather a broad field to discuss his reasons for defending himself. The Chair calls attention to the gentleman from California, that there are limits to the liberality extended in this connection and suggests that the gentleman from California proceed in order.

Mr. Hosmer proceeded further on his point of personal privilege, and Mr. Rogers rose to another point of order that Mr. Hosmer was again discussing a bill and placing before the Members of the House a chart, and not referring in any way to the truth or falsity of the charges involved in the question of personal privilege. The Speaker Pro Tempore ruled:

The Chair might state that he feels that the gentleman from California is very close to the line where the Chair may sustain a point of order. As the Chair understands it, the gentleman has the right to discuss the facts involved in the pending bill insofar as that is necessary in order for the gentleman to express his views with reference to the charge of falsehood contained in the editorial, and to answer that charge, and make his record in that respect. The Chair again suggests to the gentleman from California, having in mind the observations of the Chair, particularly those just made, that he proceed in order and confine his discussion of the bill at this time only to that which is necessary to challenge the charge of falsehood contained in the editorial.

References to Pending Legislation

§ 36.3 A Member who is recognized on a question of personal privilege must limit himself to a discussion of the charges made against him and may not discuss a measure which is to come before the House for consideration.

On Apr. 9, 1943,⁽²⁰⁾ Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, rose to a question of personal privilege based on a newspaper article charging him with being one of "Hitler's American stooges." Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that a question of personal privilege was stated.

While discussing his question of personal privilege, Mr. Hoffman

20. 89 CONG. REC. 3195, 78th Cong. 1st Sess.

digressed to discuss a tax bill which had been introduced in the House and which was to come before the House for consideration. Mr. Herman P. Eberharter, of Pennsylvania, arose to state a point of order:

. . . I submit the gentleman is not speaking on a question of personal privilege when he is discussing a measure which is to come before the House for consideration.

MR. HOFFMAN: I would like to be heard on that, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will ask the gentleman from Michigan to proceed in order, and under the rule he must limit himself to a discussion of the charges made in his question for personal privilege. The gentleman will proceed in order.⁽¹⁾

On Aug. 4, 1970,⁽²⁾ Mr. Silvio O. Conte, of Massachusetts, rose to a question of personal privilege to challenge words spoken in debate in the House, although the ordinary procedure requires a timely demand that the objectionable words be taken down. Mr. Conte based his question of personal privilege on the fact that Mr. Page H. Belcher, of Oklahoma, had referred to Mr. Conte as "another guy" who had "horned in" on the act in relation to a certain bill. Mr. Conte then began discussing

1. Id. at p. 3197.

2. 116 CONG. REC. 27130, 91st Cong. 2d Sess.

the bill in question, the Agricultural Act of 1970.

Mr. Delbert L. Latta, of Ohio, made the point of order that Mr. Conte was not directing his remarks to the words he challenged but to a legislative proposition which would be fully discussed when general debate commenced on the bill. Speaker Pro Tempore Edward P. Boland, of Massachusetts, directed Mr. Conte to confine his remarks to the point of personal privilege.

Parliamentarian's Note: A point of order was subsequently made that the raising of a point of personal privilege was not the proper procedure to challenge words spoken in debate but that the words should be demanded to be taken down. The Speaker Pro Tempore ruled that the point of order came too late, and unanimous consent was granted that the objectionable words be stricken from the Record.

References to Grounds for Impeachment

§ 36.4 Where a question of personal privilege is based upon newspaper editorials impugning a Member's motives in offering a resolution seeking to impeach the President, the Member in addressing the House may discuss the several charges contained in his resolution in order to justify his resolution.

On Jan. 23, 1933, Mr. Louis T. McFadden, of Pennsylvania, rose to a question of personal privilege based on newspaper criticism of his having moved for the impeachment of President Roosevelt.⁽³⁾ When Mr. McFadden proceeded to read additional newspaper editorials, Mr. Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, rose to make the point of order that Mr. McFadden was not confining himself to the question. Mr. Bertrand H. Snell, of New York, stated the rule that a Member proposing a question of personal privilege must confine his remarks to the matter contained in items on which he bases his question of privilege. Speaker John N. Garner, of Texas, stated that the newspaper articles read by Mr. McFadden raised questions as to his right to move for impeachment and that they were relevant to the question.

In response to a further point of order by Mr. Snell, Speaker Pro Tempore Blanton ruled that although Mr. McFadden could not refer to the experience and law of Great Britain in relation to impeachment, he could discuss the charges contained in his resolution of impeachment in order to justify his moving for impeachment:

3. 76 CONG. REC. 2294, 72d Cong. 2d Sess.

MR. SNELL: Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the gentleman is not confining himself to the question before the House or the matter of personal privilege, referring in particular to his actions in his representative capacity. He is quoting the King of England and stating matters that happened over in England which have nothing to do with the charge against the gentleman from Pennsylvania in his representative capacity. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair sustains the point of order in so far as it relates to any reference to England, unless there was some reference to England in the resolution. The gentleman from Pennsylvania knows the rules. He is confined absolutely to the matters that were embraced within his resolution, and must not go beyond that.

MR. SNELL: Just a moment, Mr. Speaker. Has he the right to go into every single phase of the charges he made in the resolution that he presented here a week or two ago?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair thinks he is entitled to explain any matter that is contained within his resolution because for the filing of it he was called by certain newspapers contemptible, unpatriotic, and the author of an indecent act.

MR. SNELL: I maintain that he may not discuss what other men in England have said.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair has sustained the point of order to that limit, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania understands the rule and must proceed in order.

Question of Privilege of the House

§ 36.5 A Member having been recognized on a question of the privileges of the House must confine himself to such question.

On Aug. 28, 1940,⁽⁴⁾ Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, recognized Mr. Jacob Thorkelson, of Montana, on a matter of privilege of the House raised on the preceding day and pending at adjournment. Mr. Thorkelson's question of privilege was based on the alleged extension of remarks in the Record by Mr. Adolph J. Sabath, of Illinois, without first obtaining permission of the House. The Speaker ruled that such an extension of remarks gave grounds for a question of privilege of the House. Mr. Thorkelson proceeded in debate on his question of privilege and on a resolution which he had offered to expunge from the Record the remarks inserted by Mr. Sabath without permission to revise and extend. When Mr. Thorkelson began discussing British history,

4. 86 CONG. REC. 11150-58, 76th Cong. 3d Sess.

the Speaker interjected to inquire what relation the discussion had to the question of privilege of the House:

THE SPEAKER: Would the gentleman from Montana allow a question from the Chair?

MR. THORKELSON: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: On what phase is the gentleman addressing himself so far as the question of privilege is concerned?

MR. THORKELSON: I did not want to read this, Mr. Speaker. I asked unanimous consent to have it inserted in the Record. This is a history of the secret service I am now reading.

THE SPEAKER: Conceding that, to what phase does it have reference so far as the question of privilege is concerned?

MR. THORKELSON: With regard to whether I have uttered truths or falsehoods. I believe that is part of my resolution.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair does not find any language in the gentleman's resolution where he is charged with an untruth or falsity.

MR. THORKELSON: There is the question of whether I have stated facts or not.

THE SPEAKER: The only question of privilege involved is whether or not the matter was put in without permission of the House.

MR. THORKELSON: The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Sabath] asked me to read it. Now, then, if he does not want me to read it, I will put it in the Record.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Illinois objected to the gentleman's request to incorporate the statement in the Record. He did not request the gentleman to read it. The Chair does not desire to interrupt the continuity of the gentleman's argument, but the Chair is under some obligation to see that the gentleman conforms with the rules and discusses the matter of privilege about which he complains.

Mr. Thorkelson then made a point of order that under the Constitution he had a right to present his case before the House and not to be deprived of that right by the Chair. The Speaker overruled the point of order.

Question of Personal Privilege

§ 36.6 Debate on a question of personal privilege must be confined to the statements or issue which gave rise to the question of privilege.

On May 31, 1984,⁽⁵⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House:

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of personal privilege.

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁶⁾ The gentleman will state it.

MR. WALKER: Mr. Speaker, in this morning's Washington Times newspaper, an article appears which, if accurate, constitutes a personalized attack, calls into question possible associations this Member may have and, therefore, it seems to me is subject to a point of personal privilege.

6. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

I quote from the newspaper article:

Mr. O'Neill, meanwhile, shrugged off the ads but launched his own attack on the conservative Republicans with whom he has become increasingly irritated.

"I understand the young fellows, the regressives, the John Bircher types, absolutely insisted they run the ads on me," the speaker said.

In making the statement, Mr. O'Neill specifically names Reps. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., and Robert S. Walker, R-Pa., and said "they want to turn back the clock to the days when there were only the rich and the poor in America."

He said the conservatives oppose him because he is "fighting for the middle man and the poor man."

THE SPEAKER: May the Chair say I may have compared the gentleman's philosophy with those who belong to the Birch Society. I never said that the gentleman belonged to the Birch Society.

But nevertheless there is a point of personal privilege because of the fact that the newspaper printed an article. The point of personal privilege is against the newspaper.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Walker) for 1 hour. . . .

MR. [THOMAS S.] FOLEY [of Washington]: . . . Mr. Speaker, the gentleman said he thought the American people viewed the responsibility of the Speaker as being fair and impartial as the presiding officer. I think that is right, and I think this Speaker has been fair and impartial as a presiding officer.

As a matter of fact, going back over the last decade it is absolutely rare, probably to the point of being able to count the times on one hand, where we have had an appeal from a ruling of the Chair, whether it is being occupied by the Speaker personally, or by someone acting in his behalf. This cannot be said of the other body or of most State legislatures. . . .

[I]t is one thing for the gentleman to suggest that some action of the Speaker off the floor and not presiding over the floor is something he wants to criticize; it is another thing to imply that there is unfairness, partiality or partisanship in the way this Speaker has conducted himself in this Chamber.

MR. WALKER: I would say to the gentleman that the Speaker of the House is the Speaker of the House full time. He is the symbol of this body when he is on the floor and when he is off the floor. What he says and does as Speaker of the House reflects on us all, all of the time. . . .

MR. [VIN] WEBER [of Minnesota]: . . . What we have just heard from our colleague from Washington is a definition of fairness of the chair being that that Speaker's rulings are not appealed. Well, I will say to you on this side of the aisle we do not think that this Speaker has been fair. We do not think it is fair that legislation is bottled up in committee and not brought to the floor for votes, we do not think it is fair that constitutional amendments are scheduled for action on the Suspension Calendar, we do not think it is fair that we are not given proportional representation on any committees of the House of Representatives, and I could go on and on and on. . . .

MS. [MARY ROSE] OAKAR [of Ohio]: . . . You three gentlemen have been, in my judgment, engaging in [McCarthyism] every evening. You take the liberty of not only engaging in that kind of rhetoric, but mentioning names. . . . I was one of them, and you are so ignorant of the truth that you got me mixed up, I think, with Congresswoman Schroeder. . . .

You indicated that I had an 18-year-old son who did not want to be drafted, or something like that. I do not have an 18-year-old son. . . .

MR. WALKER: The gentlewoman, of course, does make a point. There was an inaccurate reference to her, not to the statement that she made, but to the fact that she referred—but that she referred—

MR. [JOHN T.] MYERS [of Indiana]: Regular order, Mr. Speaker.

MR. WALKER: I was just about to apologize to the gentlewoman, which is more than the Speaker has given me. I would say to the gentlewoman she is owed an apology. . . .

MS. OAKAR: Will you yield?

MR. WALKER: I was trying to apologize to you. If you want me to stop, I will be very glad to yield to the gentlewoman.

MS. OAKAR: I gave a 1-minute speech about 3 weeks ago in which I mentioned that, and it is a little belated, your apology, and I am really surprised that you had not done so before this. But then I do not think you fellows are very interested in the truth. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁷⁾ The Chair would like to have order.

Let the Chair remind the Members to confine their remarks to the issue of personal privilege which is the newspaper article which was brought up in the first place. . . .

MR. [NEWT] GINGRICH [of Georgia]: You know, it does not surprise me that some Democrats get up and tell us how fair the Speaker is. I expect if we were all Democrats we might think he is fair, too. . . .

We have been through a cycle in which the President has been called heartless. It has been said he has ice water in his veins. . . .

The distinguished majority leader managed to describe the President as a liar 10 times in a 1-minute speech.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Let the Chair remind the participants in this debate to stick to the issue of the gentleman from Pennsylvania's personal privilege, which is not what the gentleman from Georgia was just debating.

Seating of Member

§ 36.7 It is in order during debate on a motion to refer a resolution directing the temporary seating of a Member-elect to discuss court decisions relating to the constitutional authority of the House to judge its elections.

During consideration of House Resolution 97 (to seat Richard D. McIntyre as a Member from Indiana) in the House on Mar. 4, 1985,⁽⁸⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

8. 131 CONG. REC. 4277, 4278, 4280, 99th Cong. 1st Sess.

7. John P. Murtha (Pa.).

MR. [ROBERT H.] MICHEL [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of privilege.

Mr. Speaker, I send to the desk a privileged resolution (H. Res. 97) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 97

Whereas a certificate of election to the House of Representatives always carries with it the presumption that the State election procedures have been timely, regular, and fairly implemented; and . . .

Whereas the presumption of the validity and regularity of the certificate of election held by Richard D. McIntyre has not been overcome by any substantial evidence or claim of irregularity: Now, therefore be it

Resolved, That the Speaker is hereby authorized and directed to administer the oath of office to the gentleman from Indiana, Mr. Richard D. McIntyre.

Resolved, That the question of the final right of Mr. McIntyre to a seat in the 99th Congress is referred to the Committee on House Administration.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁹⁾ The gentleman states a valid question of privilege.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. Alexander).

MR. [WILLIAM V.] ALEXANDER [of Arkansas]: Mr. Speaker, I move that the resolution be referred to the Committee on House Administration. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman is entitled to 1 hour under that motion, during which time the gentleman from Arkansas controls the time. . . .

9. James C. Wright, Jr. (Tex.).

MR. ALEXANDER: . . . [A] certificate of election from the appropriate State officer is considered only as prima facie evidence of election and may be rendered ineffective by the House under its power to judge elections. . . .

Mr. Speaker, the matter before us today was . . . resolved in a memorandum opinion on March 1 by the U.S. district court for the District of Columbia in the case of McIntyre versus O'Neill, whereupon the court found as follows. . . .

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

Mr. Speaker, am I correct that the gentleman must address himself to the resolution that is before the House, and addressing district court matters that are outside the ability of this House to make decisions would not be addressing itself specifically to the resolution at hand?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair must rule that if a court proceeding relates to a matter under discussion in the Chamber, then it is not out of order to make reference to the court's findings and related matter during debate on the motion to refer.

§ 37. Debate in Committee of the Whole

During general debate in the Committee of the Whole, remarks need not be confined to the pending bill unless ordered by the House or unless Calendar Wednesday business is being considered.⁽¹⁰⁾ Under the modern practice, however, bills are generally considered in the Committee of the Whole pursuant to special rules reported by the Committee on Rules,⁽¹¹⁾ and such rules often provide that debate in the Committee shall “be confined to the bill,” therefore requiring relevancy in debate.⁽¹²⁾ Similarly, the Committee may by unanimous consent require that debate be confined to the bill,⁽¹³⁾ in which case the Members in their remarks must conform to the rule of relevancy.

10. See §39.1, infra.

If a Member does not obtain unanimous consent to speak out of order and is repeatedly called to order for failing to confine himself to the subject, he may be directed by the Chair to take his seat.⁽¹⁴⁾

Where a bill is being read for amendment in the Committee of the Whole under the five-minute rule, all debate should be confined

See Rule XXIII clause 3, House Rules and Manual § 865 (1995) and the comments thereto for the subjects requiring consideration in Committee of the Whole. Under clause 7 of Rule XXIV, general debate in Committee of the Whole on Calendar Wednesday business must be confined to the bill.

11. See Ch. 21, supra.
12. See § 37.1, infra.
13. See § 37.2, infra.
14. See § 37.1, infra; 8 Cannon's Precedents § 2592, 2594, 2595.

to the pending amendment,⁽¹⁵⁾ and a Member should not discuss under the five-minute rule amendments to parts of the bill and subjects not then before the committee.⁽¹⁶⁾ Although Members frequently avail themselves of the practice under the five-minute rule of offering pro forma amendments, the purpose of which is to gain time in debate without actually offering an amendment, a point of order against a Member so moving will require him to limit his remarks to the pending question.⁽¹⁷⁾ But a Member offering the preferential motion to strike the enacting clause under the five-minute rule may discuss the entire bill, the motion bringing into question the entire bill before the Committee of the Whole.⁽¹⁸⁾

An appeal to the Chair's ruling in the Committee of the Whole is 15. See § 38.1, 38.4, infra; 5 Hinds' Precedents § 5240–5256; 8 Cannon's Precedents § 2591.

Rule XXIII clause 5, House Rules and Manual § 870 (1995) allows a Member offering an amendment in the Committee of the Whole five minutes “to explain any amendment he may offer.”

16. See § 38.5, infra.
A Member may obtain unanimous consent to speak out of order during the five-minute rule (see § 38.16, 38.17, infra).
17. See § 38.8–38.14, infra.
18. See § 37.5–37.11, 38.18–38.20, infra.

governed by the five-minute rule, and debate on the appeal must be confined to the subject of the Chair's ruling.⁽¹⁹⁾

Effect of Special Rule

§ 37.1 Where a rule provides that debate in the Committee of the Whole shall be confined to the bill, a Member must confine his remarks to the bill and if he continues to speak to other matters after repeated points of order, the Chair will request that he take his seat.

On Mar. 29, 1944,⁽²⁰⁾ the Committee of the Whole was considering H.R. 4257, to expatriate or exclude certain persons for evading military and naval service. (The House had adopted H. Res. 482 for consideration of the bill in Committee of the Whole, providing that general debate be "confined to the bill.")

Mr. Emanuel Celler, of New York, requested unanimous consent to speak out of order, and Mr. Noah M. Mason, of Illinois, objected to the request on the ground that "under the rule adopted by the House, debate on this bill is to be restricted to the bill."

19. See § 38.15, infra.

20. 90 CONG. REC. 3263, 78th Cong. 2d Sess.

Mr. Celler was then called to order twice for speaking to a subject irrelevant to the bill; he discussed the conduct of the Arabian nations in relation to the American war effort.

When Mr. Celler continued to speak out of order, the following exchange took place (Chairman James Domengeaux [La.] presiding):

MR. [ADOLPH J.] SABATH [of Illinois]: Mr. Chairman, I rise to a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state the point of order.

MR. SABATH: The gentleman is not speaking to the bill. He has been admonished several times, he has refused, and I am obliged to make the point of order myself, though I regret it.

THE CHAIRMAN: The point of order is sustained and the gentleman is again requested to confine himself to the bill.

MR. MASON: Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. How many times do we have to call the gentleman to order and try to get him to confine his remarks to the bill before the privilege of the House is withdrawn?

THE CHAIRMAN: This will be the last time. If the gentleman does not proceed in order, he will be requested to take his seat.

Debate on "Omnibus" Appropriation Bill

§ 37.2 Where general debate was confined in the Committee of the Whole to an appropriation bill by unanimous consent, the Speaker indicated that since the pending bill included many different appropriations, debate on the bill would be broad in scope.

On Apr. 3, 1950,⁽¹⁾ the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole for the consideration of H.R. 7786, making appropriations for the support of the government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1951. By unanimous consent, the House ordered that general debate be confined to the bill. Mr. Ben F. Jensen, of Iowa, arose to express the hope that the Chairman of the Committee, Clarence Cannon, of Missouri, and other Members would not make points of order on the relevancy of debate since there was so much involved in the bill. Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, replied:

The Chair would think that this appropriation bill actually being 11 bills in one, and covering everything in the Government, a Member speaking on the bill would have a rather wide range.

Parliamentarian's Note: The 1951 appropriation bill consolidated into one bill 11 different appropriation bills considered in prior years.

Speaking Out of Order by Unanimous Consent

§ 37.3 Where the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union is considering a bill under terms of a resolution which states that debate shall be "confined to the bill," a Member may proceed out of order only by unanimous consent.

On Nov. 27, 1967, the Committee of the Whole was considering H.R. 13489, a credit union measure.⁽²⁾ The Member having the floor had yielded two minutes to Mr. John M. Murphy, of New York, who was speaking on the failure of the city administration of New York City to provide an adequate housing program. Mr. Durward G. Hall, of Missouri, rose to state a point of order that Mr. Murphy was speaking out of order. The Chairman, Donald M. Fraser, of Minnesota, indicated that Mr. Murphy could speak out of order only by unanimous consent.

§ 37.4 Where a resolution confines general debate on a bill in Committee of the Whole to the bill under consideration, a Member may speak on another subject only by unanimous consent, and the Member controlling the time may not yield to another Member to speak out of order.

2. 113 CONG. REC. 33773, 90th Cong. 1st Sess.

On Nov. 25, 1970, the Committee of the Whole was considering H.R. 19504, the Federal Aid Highway Act of 1970, under a resolution (H. Res. 1267) confining general debate to the subject matter of the bill.⁽³⁾ Mr. John C. Kluczynski, of Illinois, who had the floor, yielded to Mr. Samuel S. Stratton, of New York, to speak out of order. Chairman Chet Holifield, of California, ruled that Mr. Kluczynski was required to make a unanimous-consent request for that purpose and that the Chair could not make the request for him.

Scope of Debate on Motion To Strike Enacting Clause

§ 37.5 Debate on a preferential motion that the Committee of the Whole rise with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken out may go to any portion of the bill under consideration.

On Apr. 4, 1974,⁽⁴⁾ during consideration of the supplemental

3. 116 CONG. REC. 38747, 91st Cong. 2d Sess.

4. 120 CONG. REC. 9853, 93d Cong. 2d Sess.

military procurement authorization for fiscal year 1974 (H.R. 12565) in the Committee of the Whole, Mr. John J. Flynt, Jr., of Georgia, made a motion, as follows:

MR. FLYNT: Mr. Chairman, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Flynt moves that the Committee now rise and report the bill back to the House with a recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁵⁾ The gentleman is recognized for 5 minutes.

MR. FLYNT: Mr. Chairman, make no mistake about it, this so-called $1.4 billion ceiling is in reality—

MR. [JOE D.] WAGGONNER [Jr., of Louisiana]: Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state it.

MR. WAGGONNER: I make a point of order that the gentleman is not speaking to the preferential motion.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: Under the rule governing preferential motions, the gentleman from Georgia is privileged to speak to any part of the bill, but he must confine his remarks to the bill.

§ 37.6 Debate in opposition to a preferential motion to strike out the enacting clause may relate to any portion of the bill, including the merits of an amendment

5. James G. O'Hara (Mich.).

pending when the preferential motion was offered.

During consideration of the military procurement authorization (H.R. 6674) in the Committee of the Whole on May 20, 1975,⁽⁶⁾ the proposition described above was demonstrated as follows:

MR. [MELVIN] PRICE [of Illinois]: Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto, and on further amendments to the bill, end in 20 minutes.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁷⁾ The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Illinois.

The motion was agreed to. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: The time of the gentleman has expired. [All time has expired.]

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Chairman, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Bauman moves that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken out.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Chairman, I only offer this motion in order to obtain time since I was not able to receive any time from the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. Harkin) who offered what he claimed to be the Bauman amendment. I have read his amendment very carefully. It is not the same amendment which I offered to the National Science Foundation authorization bill. . . .

6. 121 CONG. REC. 15458, 15465, 15466, 94th Cong. 1st Sess.

7. Dan Rostenkowski (Ill.).

MR. [TOM] HARKIN [of Iowa]: Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words, and I rise in opposition to the preferential motion.

I thank the gentleman from Maryland for giving me an opportunity to expand a little bit more on some of these ridiculous spending programs that waste the taxpayers' dollars.

If the offices of other Members are like mine, whenever they get one of these letters they begin to wonder, and people begin to ask the Members, just what it is we do to take care of these situations. If we pass this routine authorization bill for the Defense Department for $32 billion in the usual manner, we will have to answer to our constituents if we choose to be honest about it.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Chairman, I demand regular order.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman speaks on the preferential motion.

The Chair would like to make the observation that any portion of the bill is open to [debate].

§ 37.7 Since the preferential motion that the Committee rise and report with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken applies to the entire bill, debate may be directed to any part of the bill (including a pending amendment) and need not be confined to the merits of the preferential motion.

On June 20, 1975,⁽⁸⁾ during consideration of the Energy Research and Development Administration authorization for fiscal year 1976 (H.R. 3474), the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [TOM] HARKIN [of Iowa]: Mr. Chairman, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Harkin moves that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken out. . . .

MR. HARKIN: Mr. Chairman, this amendment simply does this. It sets a middle-ground course between the Coughlin amendment and the committee position.

What my amendment does is go back to the original law as it was enacted and ask that the utility companies and private industries come up within 50 percent of the capital cost of the construction of the Clinch River breeder reactor. . . .

MR. [JOHN H.] ROUSSELOT [of California]: Mr. Chairman, a point of order. . . .

Mr. Chairman, does the gentleman not have to speak to the preferential motion?

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁹⁾ The Chair would advise the gentleman, as he advised another gentleman awhile ago, that debate on the preferential motion opens the entire bill to debate. . . .

MR. [MIKE] MCCORMACK [of Washington]: Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

My point of parliamentary inquiry is, does not the gentleman have to relate to his motion in some manner? He is not even remotely relating to his motion.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair has listened to the gentleman in the well and it seems to the Chair that the gentleman in the well is debating within the parameters of the bill which is before the Committee, and the point of order is overruled.

§ 37.8 Since the preferential motion that the Committee rise and report with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken applies to the entire bill, debate may be directed to any part of the bill, and the motion may be used by a Member to secure five minutes to debate a pending amendment notwithstanding a limitation of time for debate on the pending amendment and all amendments thereto.

On June 20, 1975,⁽¹⁰⁾ during consideration of H.R. 3474⁽¹¹⁾ in the Committee of the Whole, the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [JOHN] YOUNG of Texas: Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto cease in 30 minutes.

10. 121 CONG. REC. 19941, 19951, 94th Cong. 1st Sess.

11. A bill authorizing appropriations for the Energy Research and Development Administration for fiscal year 1976.

9. J. Edward Roush (Ind.).

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹²⁾ The gentleman from Texas moves that all debate on the McCormack amendment and all amendments thereto cease in 30 minutes.

THE CHAIRMAN: The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Young).

The motion was agreed to. . . .

MR. [ROBERT W.] EDGAR [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Chairman, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Edgar moves that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken.

MR. EDGAR: Mr. Chairman, I make this motion to get more time to talk about this very important matter. . . . We rise in support of the Coughlin amendment. We feel very strongly that the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. Harkin) has pointed out many of the important features of this program that have to be taken into consideration and we feel very strongly that we should delete this item from the budget.

Mr. Chairman, I yield the continuation of my time to the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. Harkin). . . .

MR. [STEVEN D.] SYMMS [of Idaho]: Mr. Chairman, I demand regular order.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair is following regular order. . . .

MR. SYMMS: Is it regular order to seek recognition under a preferential motion?

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair will state that under the parliamentary procesure the entire bill is under debate. The Chair is following regular order.

§ 37.9 Debate on a preferential motion, that the Committee of the Whole rise and report the bill to the House with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken, may relate to any portion of the bill, including the merits of an amendment pending when the motion was offered.

During consideration of the energy and water appropriation bill (H.R. 4388) in the Committee of the Whole on June 14, 1979,⁽¹³⁾ the following exchange occurred:

MR. [JOHN D.] DINGELL [of Michigan]: Mr. Chairman, I offer a preferential motion.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁴⁾ The Clerk will report the preferential motion of the gentleman from Michigan.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Dingell moves that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken out.

MR. [JOHN T.] MYERS of Indiana: Mr. Chairman, is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

THE CHAIRMAN: Is the gentleman from Michigan opposed to the bill?

MR. DINGELL: In its present form, I am, Mr. Chairman.

13. 125 CONG. REC. 14995, 96th Cong. 1st Sess.

14. Philip R. Sharp (Ind.).

12. J. Edward Roush (Ind.).

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman qualifies. The gentleman from Michigan is recognized for 5 minutes in support of his motion. . . .

A point of order was made as to the relevancy of Mr. Dingell's subsequent remarks.

MR. [MICKEY] EDWARDS [of Oklahoma]: Mr. Chairman, I do not believe the gentleman is proceeding in order. I believe the gentleman is supposed to speak on his preferential motion and not on the amendment the gentleman is offering.

MR. DINGELL: Mr. Chairman, I am explaining why I will vote for the preferential motion.

THE CHAIRMAN: Any aspect of the bill is debatable.

The gentleman from Michigan is recognized.

§ 37.10 Debate on a preferential motion that the enacting clause be stricken may relate to any portion of the pending bill or amendment, and need not be confined to the propriety of the motion.

The following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole on Aug. 20, 1980,⁽¹⁵⁾ during consideration of the Treasury Department and Postal Service appropriations bill for fiscal 1981 (H.R. 7593):

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Chairman, I offer a preferential motion. . . .

15. 126 CONG. REC. 22173-76, 96th Cong. 2d Sess.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁶⁾ . . . The Clerk will report the motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Bauman moves that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken. . . .

MR. BAUMAN: . . . These health programs, which are provided to Federal employees, are paid for by a combination of Government and employees. . . .

MRS. [PATRICIA] SCHROEDER [of Colorado]: Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

Mr. Chairman, I do not believe the gentleman is discussing his preferential motion.

THE CHAIRMAN: The entire bill is debatable on a preferential motion.

§ 37.11 Debate in Committee of the Whole on a preferential motion to rise with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken need not be confined to a pending amendment but need only relate to the bill.

On July 29, 1982,⁽¹⁷⁾ during consideration of the military procurement authorization for fiscal year 1983 (H.R. 6030) in the Committee of the Whole, the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Chairman, I offer a preferential motion.

16. Richardson Preyer (N.C.).

17. 128 CONG. REC. 18605, 97th Cong. 2d Sess.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁸⁾ The Clerk will report the preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Walker moves that the Committee do now rise and report the bill to the House with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken out.

MR. WALKER: Mr. Chairman, I think we have had a very valuable debate on some vital issues here today. . . .

Now, I did not agree with everybody who brought their issues to the floor. As a matter of fact, I voted against I think most of the amendments that have been offered; but it has been very valuable debate and it has been debate that has taken place in pretty strict adherence to the 5-minute rule, primarily because I started objecting here earlier today, and I must say that I am sorry I had to object to the gentleman from Massachusetts who was making a point on something he felt very strongly about and particularly because I had to object to the gentleman from New York who for many years has stood strong on this floor for civil defense and was not permitted to make his full argument because I objected. . . .

MR. [ANDREW] JACOBS [Jr., of Indiana]: Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state it.

MR. JACOBS: Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order that the gentleman is not speaking to his motion.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair will observe that debate on this motion can range over the entire bill and procedure thereon.

The gentleman will continue.

18. Les AuCoin (Oreg.).

Argument on Point of Order

§ 37.12 Argument on a point of order must be confined to the point of order and may not go to the merits of the amendment being challenged.

On June 24, 1976,⁽¹⁹⁾ during consideration of H.R. 14232 (the Departments of Labor and Health, Education, and Welfare appropriation bill for fiscal 1977), the following proceedings occurred:

MRS. [MILLICENT H.] FENWICK [of New Jersey]: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment as a substitute for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas (Mr. Skubitz).

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mrs. Fenwick as a substitute for the amendment offered by Mr. Skubitz: On page 7, strike the period at the end of line 25, and insert in lieu thereof: “: Provided, That none of the funds appropriated under this paragraph shall be obligated or expended to . . . enforce any standard, rule, regulation, or order under the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 which is applicable to any person who is engaged in a farming operation. . . .”

MR. [GARY A.] MYERS [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the amendment offered as a substitute for the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Myers of Pennsylvania to the amendment

19. 122 CONG. REC. 20370, 20371, 94th Cong. 2d Sess.

offered by Mrs. Fenwick as a substitute for the amendment offered by Mr. Skubitz: At the end of the amendment offered by Mrs. Fenwick strike the period and add the following: “Provided further, That the funds appropriated under this paragraph shall be obligated or expended to assure full compliance of the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 by Members of Congress and their staffs.”

MR. [WILLIAM D.] FORD of Michigan: Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN: ⁽²⁰⁾ The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Michigan.

MR. FORD of Michigan: Mr. Chairman, the amendment is not germane. It is also in violation of the rule against legislating on an appropriation bill. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Myers).

MR. MYERS of Pennsylvania: Mr. Chairman, because of my great concern for the safety of all workers and because of the fact that Members of Congress are allowed in fact to have several offices and up to 18 full-time employees, some of those who travel vehicular equipment on the highways are exposed to extreme hazards. . . .

The objective of this bill is to appropriate money to see that OSHA is bringing under compliance all workers who work in an environment such as an industrial office or similar facilities.

MR. [RONALD A.] SARASIN [of Connecticut]: Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Myers) is being heard on a point of order.

MR. SARASIN: Mr. Chairman, it would appear that the gentleman is not addressing himself to the point of order, but he is addressing himself to the amendment.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman is correct.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Myers), at this point, should address his comments to the point of order made by the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Ford), to-wit, that the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Myers) would not be germane to the language of the substitute which it would seek to amend and, further, that it would constitute legislation on an appropriation bill.

§ 38. Debate Under Five-minute Rule

Relevancy Requirement

§ 38.1 Debate in the Committee of the Whole under the five-minute rule must be confined to the pending amendment.

On Jan. 23, 1936,⁽¹⁾ during debate on a supplemental appropriations bill, Mr. Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, arose to move to strike out the last word and stated that he was using the motion “merely as a vehicle for my remarks.” He then commenced to discuss the failure to appropriate compensation to the widow of a former Congressman. Mr. William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, arose to state a point of order that Mr. Fish's remarks did not relate to the amendment then pending. Chairman Jere Cooper, of Tennessee, ruled as follows:

20. James C. Wright, Jr. (Tex.).

. . . The gentleman is aware, of course, that certain practices are sometimes indulged in by general consent but if a point of order is made against them, the point of order must be sustained. Debate under the 5-minute rule must be confined to the paragraph under consideration. The paragraph here under consideration relates to the National Labor Relations Board. The gentleman's remarks do not, apparently, refer to this subject matter. The point of order is, therefore, sustained.⁽²⁾

§ 38.2 Although debate on an amendment under the five-minute rule in Committee of the Whole must be confined to the subject matter of the amendment, enforcement of the rule requires that a point of order be made, since the Chair does not normally enforce the rule on his or her own initiative and may even allow some latitude in debate, at the sufferance of the Committee of the Whole.

On this occasion, the Speaker Pro Tempore had refused to recognize for one-minute speeches before the legislative business.⁽³⁾ The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole stated his intention to allow, with the sufferance of the Committee of the Whole, the rule of relevancy in debate to be relaxed, in order to allow Members to address the subject of one-minute speeches. The proceedings in the Committee of the Whole on July 25, 1980,⁽⁴⁾ were as follows:

MR. [E. G.] SHUSTER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment as a substitute for the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Shuster as a substitute for the amendment offered by Mr. Mitchell of New York:

None of the funds appropriated for the emergency preparedness and mobilization program may be used to purchase oil that originated in Libya, where evidence has been presented that said oil did in fact originate in Libya. . . .

MR. SHUSTER: Mr. Chairman, I use this as a mechanism to focus on an issue of great importance to the minority and junior Members of both parties. By way of background leading up to the Libyan-HUD relationship, I wish to inform the House that this morning I delivered to the Speaker of the House a letter expressing our shock and disappointment with the sudden reversal of a many year custom in this House where the Chair refused to recognize Members for 1-minute speeches at the beginning of the day's session. . . .

Fifth, 1-minute speeches are especially important for new Members on both sides of the aisle, because they must often wait for hours or days to express themselves in committee or on floor debate, since the seniority system puts them at the bottom of the ladder. Sometimes, they are allocated. . . .

MR. JOHN L. BURTON [of California]: The gentleman from California rises to inquire of the Chair if the gentleman is speaking on the HUD appropriation bill or has got an amendment to the House rules.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁵⁾ The gentleman from Pennsylvania is addressing the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania. . . .

MR. JOHN L. BURTON: . . . We have an agreement to let him talk out of order?

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair, with the sufferance of the Committee and at this point in the proceedings, is personally willing to allow the gentleman from Pennsylvania broad leeway. . . .

MR. [WILLIAM M.] THOMAS [of California]: Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

The old political saying was, "If you can't stand the heat, get out of the kitchen."

Apparently, the Democratic leadership has changed that to say, "If you can't stand the heat, move the kitchen."

MR. JOHN L. BURTON: Mr. Chairman, a point of order. . . .

Mr. Chairman, these people are not talking about a relevant, germane amendment to this bill, and I think it is outrageous that these dilatory tactics go on in the people's House. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: Does the gentleman from California make a point of order?

MR. JOHN L. BURTON: Yes. He is out of order. Would you rule on my point of order?

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman must proceed in order.

§ 38.3 While debate under the five-minute rule must be confined to the pending portion of the bill, the Chair cannot anticipate whether debate on a particular issue might be related to what a pending portion of the bill contains or does not contain, or to a germane amendment thereto.

The following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole during consideration of H.R. 2969 (the Department of Defense authorization for fiscal year 1984) on June 15, 1983:⁽⁶⁾

MR. [ED] BETHUNE [of Arkansas]: Mr. Chairman, I am not trying to get the debate off on something that is irrelevant. I am now satisfied, based on the letter from the Secretary dated today in response to my announcement that I intended to call a secret session, that I can discuss the details concerning the Big Eye bomb. I intend to do that whether the gentleman wishes to have me do that or not. . . .

MR. [SAMUEL S.] STRATTON [of New York]: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. Bethune) has indicated that he intends to discuss the Big Eye bomb under title I of the armed services procurement bill of 1984. My inquiry is, Would not such a discussion be ruled out of order, since there are no procurement funds in title I for the Big Eye bomb?

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁷⁾ The Chair will state that the question would only be whether it is relevant to the matter under consideration in title I of the procurement bill, if the debate were in open session in the Committee of the Whole.

MR. STRATTON: Mr. Chairman, there are no procurement funds for the Big Eye, and there are no production funds, so then it would be out of order, I take it, Mr. Chairman.

Let me advise the Chair, however, that we do have money in the R&D title II section, but not in title I.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will state that the debate may advocate that production money be included for the Big Eye bomb. The Chair does not know what the amendment or debate would advocate.

Indulging in Personalities

§ 38.4 Debate under the five-minute rule in the Committee of the Whole must be confined to the pending amendment and a Member may not indulge in personalities.

On Apr. 17, 1936,⁽⁸⁾ during consideration of a District of Columbia rent bill in the Committee of the Whole, Mr. Marion A. Zioncheck, of Washington, offered an amendment and during debate stated as follows:

Mr. Chairman, there has been a bad rumor running around the town that the reason the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Blanton] objects to this bill is that he is a landlord.

Mr. Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, made a point of order against those remarks, and Chairman William B. Umstead, of North Carolina, ruled as follows:

. . . The gentleman from Washington will confine his remarks to the amendment which he offered and avoid personalities, and please proceed in order.

Following another personal remark by Mr. Zioncheck, the Chairman again reminded him that he could not indulge in personalities.

Confining Remarks to Pending Amendment

§ 38.5 Where a Member has been recognized under the five-minute rule in the Committee of the Whole to propose an amendment, he must confine his remarks to the pending amendment and discussion of subjects which may be addressed later in the reading is not in order.

On Jan. 21, 1964,⁽⁹⁾ Mr. Adam C. Powell, of New York, arose to offer an amendment, under the five-minute rule, to a bill amending the Library Services Act. Mr. Powell proceeded to state major differences between House practice and Senate practice with respect to striking language from a bill. Mr. Peter H. B. Frelinghuysen, Jr., of New York, rose to state the point of order that Mr. Powell was not confining himself to the present amendment but was stating major differences in all the amendments that Mr. Powell could offer to later parts of the bill. Chairman William S. Moorhead, of Pennsylvania, ruled as follows:

The gentleman must confine himself to the discussion of the amendment. It may be to explain it he will have to be broader than just the narrow amendment itself, but it must be to the subject of the pending amendment.

MR. FRELINGHUYSEN: And he must confine himself, Mr. Chairman, to the significance of the amendment which he has offered?

9. 110 CONG. REC. 755, 88th Cong. 2d Sess.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will proceed in order.

§ 38.6 Only one amendment to a substitute may be pending at one time, and amendments which might be subsequently offered may not be debated while another amendment is pending.

On May 15, 1979,⁽¹⁰⁾ during consideration of the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act of 1979 (H.R. 39), the following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole:

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹¹⁾ The question is on the amendments offered by the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. Huckaby) to the amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

The amendments to the amendment in the nature of a substitute were agreed to.

MR. [PETER H.] KOSTMAYER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Chairman, I have two amendments.

THE CHAIRMAN: Are these amendments to the Merchant Marine Committee amendment?

MR. KOSTMAYER: To Udall-Anderson.

THE CHAIRMAN: There is already an amendment pending to the Udall substitute. Another amendment to the Udall substitute is not in order at this point.

10. 125 CONG. REC. 11178, 96th Cong. 1st Sess.

11. Paul Simon (Ill.).

MR. KOSTMAYER: Well, Mr. Chairman, they can be spoken on now and voted on later; is that correct?

THE CHAIRMAN: They are not in order at this time.

§ 38.7 It is relevant in debate under the five-minute rule to discuss what weapons could be funded by a pending portion of a bill containing general, unallocated authorizations for weapons production and procurement, particularly where an amendment is pending to prohibit use of the funds for the type of weapon under discussion.

On June 15, 1983,⁽¹²⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole during consideration of H.R. 2969 (the Department of Defense authorization for fiscal year 1984):

MR. [ED] BETHUNE [of Arkansas]: . . . Now, let us get to the Big Eye bomb, which is the only thing left before us here today. . . . The Big Eye bomb has an interesting history. Nineteen years ago . . . they started working on the Big Eye bomb. . . .

In October 1982, in the test chamber at Aberdeen, Md., . . . they tested a Big Eye bomb . . . and at 60 degrees Fahrenheit it blew up. . . .

I do not think, from what I know about this bomb, that they can make it work, based on this information. . . .

So I do not think you have got a situation here where you have got the bugs out of this bomb, frankly. In fact, all of the evidence is to the contrary.

Nineteen years they have been working on this bomb, and they finally decided to test it under something similar to what they might actually face in the modern combat world, and it blew up on them. . . .

MR. [SAMUEL S.] STRATTON [of New York]: Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the gentleman from Arkansas. The gentleman is discussing a munition that is not funded in this section of the bill, and he is spending considerable time of the Committee in discussing that, although there are no funds for the production of the weapon that he refers to. I think he is proceeding out of order.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹³⁾ The gentleman from Arkansas is discussing chemical weapons, and it is difficult to restrict the gentleman to a narrow interpretation of that in the comments he is making.

MR. STRATTON: Mr. Chairman, if I may be heard further on the point of order, there are a number of things that are funded in the bill. Binary systems is the basic issue which the gentleman from Wisconsin addressed himself to. But the particular one that the gentleman from Arkansas is debating is something that is not funded in this portion of the bill, and it seems to me that this is a proceeding out of order and abusing the time of the Committee.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: Does the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. Bethune) wish to be heard on the point of order?

12. 129 CONG. REC. 15817, 15818, 98th Cong. 1st Sess.

13. Marty Russo (Ill.).

MR. BETHUNE: Mr. Chairman, is my time protected while the gentleman from New York makes his point of order?

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman's time is protected.

MR. BETHUNE: I thank the Chair.

Mr. Chairman, I would just simply say that the bill does ask for moneys to build buildings, facilities, to do tooling work, to build the casings for the Big Eye bomb. I do not know what could be more relevant than to discuss whether or not it works before we start building facilities and the QL mix that would go in the bomb. . . .

MR. STRATTON: Mr. Chairman, the thrust of the gentleman's argument in discussing an item that is not funded in the legislation is to create the impression that all of the activities of the Department of the Army in dealing with chemical weapons, and particularly the binary weapons which are funded in this section, is defective. But the item which he is constantly referring to, and with all of its mistakes, is not included; and the problems that it had led the committee to remove the money for that particular weapon. If the gentleman wants to discuss it, it ought to be discussed in the research and development title of the bill rather than in the procurement and production title with which we are engaged now.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁴⁾ The Chair will rule.

The money in the bill is unearmarked and the arguments of the gentleman from Arkansas are considered relevant to the debate on his amendment which is pending and which addresses the issues being debated.

The Chair will overrule the point of order.

Debate Under Pro Forma Amendment

§ 38.8 Debate in the Committee of the Whole under the five-minute rule must be confined to the pending amendment and, if a point of order is raised, a Member may not under a pro forma amendment discuss a section of the bill not immediately pending.

On Feb. 9, 1950,⁽¹⁵⁾ Mr. Cecil F. White, of California, arose to make the point of order that Mr. Reid F. Murray, of Wisconsin, who had gained the floor through offering a motion to strike the last word, was not discussing the deficiency appropriation bill (H.R. 7200) then under consideration, nor had he asked for unanimous consent to proceed out of order. Mr. Murray replied:

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from California is too hasty because I am talking on this bill and the things that I am talking about are leading up to this question of food for the Indians which has to do with this particular bill.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁶⁾ The matter under consideration at the moment

15. 96 CONG. REC. 1753, 81st Cong. 2d Sess.

16. Mike Mansfield (Mont.).

14. John P. Murtha (Pa.).

happens to be the Tennessee Valley Authority.

MR. MURRAY of Wisconsin: Mr. Chairman, that may be true, but I moved to strike out the last word. I am talking in connection with this bill. In this bill we have surplus foods for the Indians.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman should discuss that matter which is pending at the present time. The part of the bill to which he refers has not been reached yet.

§ 38.9 Debate on a motion to strike out the last word in the Committee of the Whole must relate to the matter contained in the pending section or amendment.

On Jan. 23, 1936, Chairman Jere Cooper, of Tennessee, ruled that where a point of order was made against a Member who had moved to strike out the last word of a pending amendment and then discussed matters irrelevant to the amendment, the Chair was required to order the Member with the floor to confine his remarks to the pending amendment.⁽¹⁷⁾

§ 38.10 Debate on a pro forma amendment must be confined to the portion of the bill to which the pro forma amendment has been offered.

An example of the proposition stated above occurred on June 21,

17. 80 CONG. REC. 963, 74th Cong. 2d Sess.

1974,⁽¹⁸⁾ during consideration of H.R. 15472 (agriculture, environment and consumer appropriations for fiscal year 1975) in the Committee of the Whole. The proceedings were as follows:

MR. [PIERRE S.] DU PONT [IV, of Delaware]: Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

(Mr. du Pont asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

MR. DU PONT: Mr. Chairman, I am taking this time now for fear that when we get down to the end of the bill there will be a limitation of time, and I will not have the opportunity to explain the amendment that I intend to offer on the last page of the bill.

Mr. Chairman, I intend to offer an amendment to set a maximum limit on the appropriations under this bill to $12.7 billion. . . .

MR. [JOHN E.] MOSS [of California]: Mr. Chairman, I insist on the regular order, and the regular order is the point of the bill where we are now reading. It is not a point to be reached at a later time. I insist upon the regular order.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁹⁾ The gentleman is correct. The gentleman in the well received permission to strike out the last word and then proceeded to discuss an amendment to be offered to the last section of the bill. The gentleman from [Delaware] is not discussing a part of the bill that is pending.

The point of order is sustained.

18. 120 CONG. REC. 20595, 93d Cong. 2d Sess.

19. Sam Gibbons (Fla.).

§ 38.11 Debate in Committee of the Whole on a pro forma amendment offered under the five-minute rule must be confined to the subject of the pending bill.

During consideration of an appropriation bill (H.R. 7631) in the Committee of the Whole on July 24, 1980,⁽²⁰⁾ a point of order was sustained relative to the scope of debate on an amendment. The proceedings were as follows:

MR. [JAMES T.] BROYHILL [of North Carolina]: Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word. . . .

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from California (Mr. Danielson) has a bill in his committee, and I know I wrote some of the early language of that bill. I just wanted to ask the gentleman if that committee will be reporting that regulatory reform bill anytime soon.

In his remarks the gentleman said that the Congress legislates, the executive will execute the law, and the judiciary will interpret it. The problem is that we have been turning over law-making powers to the executive, and that is wrong. . . .

MR. [BOB] TRAXLER [of Michigan]: Mr. Chairman, with due respect and with due deference to my colleagues, I must rise to a point of order.

October 1 is coming, and I feel we will not have this bill completed by that time. I would ask that we return to general order.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁾ The debate must be confined to the subject of the bill. For that reason, the point of order is sustained.

²⁰ 126 CONG. REC. 19442, 96th Cong. 2d Sess.

The gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. Broyhill) will proceed in order.

Parliamentarian's Note: While general debate in Committee of the Whole need not be confined to the subject matter of the pending bill in the absence of a special rule so providing, debate under the five-minute rule must be relevant to the pending bill or amendment.

§ 38.12 While normally under the five-minute rule debate on a pro forma amendment may relate either to a pending amendment in the nature of a substitute or to a perfecting amendment thereto (as not necessarily in the 3rd degree), where a special rule permitted both the offering of perfecting amendments in the 2nd degree and of pro forma amendments to the substitute when perfecting amendments were not pending, the Chair permitted pro forma amendments during pendency of perfecting amendments but in response to a point of order required that debate be related solely to the perfecting amendment.

During consideration of the first concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 1983 (H. Con. Res. 345) in the Committee of the Whole on May 26, 1982,⁽²⁾ the following exchange occurred:

MR. [LES] AU COIN [of Oregon]: Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

(Mr. AuCoin asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

MR. AU COIN: Mr. Chairman, I rise to strike the requisite number of words not because I intend to speak to the amendment of the gentleman from Michigan, but instead to take this time in concert with colleagues who care very much about what the Latta amendment does to housing. Not for housing, but to housing.

Because of the extent of the confusion in the House over this issue some time needs to be taken tonight before we ultimately vote on the Latta amendment. . . .

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 5 additional minutes.

MR. [JAMES H.] QUILLEN [of Tennessee]: Mr. Chairman, I understood we were debating the Conyers amendment, and I did not hear permission to speak out of order.

MR. AU COIN: Mr. Chairman, my remarks go to the Latta substitute, and I believe that is pending before the committee.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽³⁾ The Chair will have to state that the matter that is pending is the Conyers amendment,

2. 128 CONG. REC. 12088, 12090, 97th Cong. 2d Sess.

3. Richard Bolling (Mo.).

and that debate should be germane to the Conyers amendment.

§ 38.13 Debate under the five-minute rule in Committee of the Whole must be confined to the pending amendment when that point of order is raised, even if a Member is attempting to respond to previous extraneous remarks in debate against which no point of order was raised.

During consideration of the Defense Industrial Base Revitalization Act (H.R. 5540) in the Committee of the Whole on Sept. 23, 1982,⁽⁴⁾ the following exchange occurred:

MR. [ED] BETHUNE [of Arkansas]: Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words, and I rise in support of the Erlenborn amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I would associate myself with the remarks made by the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Erlenborn). . . .

We just passed a tax bill, and in that tax bill were all kinds of provisions to encourage investment, to encourage businesses to expand, and we have heard speech after speech about how those provisions that we passed in the tax bill were to favor—

MR. [JAMES J.] BLANCHARD [of Michigan]: Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

4. 128 CONG. REC. 24967, 24968, 97th Cong. 2d Sess.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁵⁾ The gentleman will state his point of order.

MR. BLANCHARD: I believe the gentleman from Arkansas is out of order, Mr. Chairman, in the fact that he is not speaking on the amendment or anything related to the amendment.

I respect his views and we will fully air those, but this amendment is the Davis-Bacon amendment; it is not related to the debate.

MR. BETHUNE: Mr. Chairman, may I respond?

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman may respond.

The Chair will say that the gentleman should address the amendment.

MR. BETHUNE: The gentleman would be glad to address the amendment except that the subject that the gentleman is now treating was raised by the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Ford), not the gentleman from Arkansas.

It seems to me only fair that I be permitted to take some of my time to rebut the statements made.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair will simply observe that the debate should relate to the amendment. The gentleman will continue with his time. . . .

MR. BETHUNE: Mr. Chairman, when a subject is raised by another Member and then a Member is subsequently recognized under the 5-minute rule, may the Member use whatever portion of his 5 minutes he desires to rebut the statements made in the course of the proceeding of the debate?

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair will state that if extraneous debate occurred at a previous time, then a point of order would lie to object to that at that time. Since the point of order was not raised, the gentleman from Arkansas is under obligation to confine his remarks to the amendment.

§ 38.14 Debate under the five-minute rule must be confined to the pending portion of the bill if a point of order is made, but a Member may speak out of order by unanimous consent.

During consideration of H.R. 3132 (the Treasury and Postal Service appropriations for fiscal year 1984) in the Committee of the Whole on June 8, 1983,⁽⁶⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [ABRAHAM] KAZEN [Jr., of Texas]: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

I intend to have a colloquy with the distinguished chairman of the subcommittee on a matter that was contained in title I. I do not have an amendment to offer. I just want to clarify some of the language in the report.

Do I have to ask unanimous consent to go back to title I or am I privileged under my privilege to strike the last word? May I enter into that colloquy without asking for unanimous consent?

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁷⁾ The Chair will advise the gentleman he may move to strike the last word and then ask unanimous consent to speak out of order if challenged.

7. Gerry E. Studds (Mass.).

(By unanimous consent, Mr. Kazen was allowed to speak out of order.)

Debate on Appeals

§ 38.15 An appeal in the Committee of the Whole is debatable under the five-minute rule and such debate is confined to the appeal.

On Feb. 22, 1950,⁽⁸⁾ Chairman Francis E. Walter, of Pennsylvania, ruled that where the Member who had the floor yielded time in debate to a second Member, the second Member could not yield time to a third Member for the purpose of moving that the Committee of the Whole rise and report to the House. Mr. Howard W. Smith, of Virginia, appealed from the decision of the Chair and the Chairman stated that the appeal was debatable for five minutes but that the discussion was required to be on the appeal.

Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, was recognized and described the proposition then under consideration (H.R. 4453, to prohibit discrimination in employment because of race, color, religion, or national origin) as "communistic legislation that Stalin promulgated in 1920." Mr. Vito Marcantonio, of New York, arose to the point of order that "the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Rankin] must direct his remarks to the question of the appeal from the ruling of the Chair." The Chairman sustained the point of order.

Unanimous Consent To Speak Out of Order

§ 38.16 Since debate under the five-minute rule is confined to the subject matter of the bill, unanimous consent is required for a Member to propose a question of personal privilege under the guise of a pro forma amendment.

On Sept. 4, 1969,⁽⁹⁾ Mr. Edward I. Koch, of New York, stated a question of personal privilege in the Committee of the Whole. Chairman Cornelius E. Gallagher, of New Jersey, stated that a point of personal privilege could not be raised in the Committee of the Whole but that Mr. Koch could offer a pro forma amendment to be heard on his question. Mr. Koch then did as the Chairman suggested. Mr. Joe D. Waggoner, Jr., of Louisiana, made a point of order that Mr. Koch could not proceed out of order by debating matters extraneous to the subject matter of the bill under consideration (H.R. 12085, extending the Clean Air Act) without requesting unanimous consent to proceed out of order. The Chairman sustained the point of order and Mr. Koch was granted unanimous consent to speak out of order on the question of personal privilege on a pro forma amendment.

§ 38.17 Debate under the five-minute rule in Committee of the Whole must be confined to the subject matter then pending, but a Member may speak out of order by unanimous consent, regardless of whether the Committee is proceeding pursuant to the provisions of a special order permitting only designated amendments to be offered.

On Aug. 3, 1977,⁽¹⁰⁾ the Committee of the Whole had under consideration the National Energy Act (H.R. 8444) when the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [MARIO] BIAGGI [of New York]: Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to be permitted to speak out of order. . . .

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Reserving the right to object,

10. 123 CONG. REC. 26483, 95th Cong. 1st Sess.

Mr. Chairman, may we know what the purpose is?

MR. BIAGGI: . . . I am asking for permission to speak out of order because on this day Archbishop Makarios of Cyprus passed away. I would like, for the record, to make some appropriate comments.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

Mr. Chairman, is this request in order under the rule which allows no amendments and no Members the opportunity to offer any changes in the bill?

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹¹⁾ The Chair will respond that by unanimous consent, it would be in order to speak out of order.

Motion To Strike Enacting Clause

§ 38.18 On a motion to strike out the enacting clause of a bill in the Committee of the Whole, there is great latitude in debate and a Member having the floor may discuss the entire bill.

On Apr. 25, 1947,⁽¹²⁾ Chairman Earl C. Michener, of Michigan, overruled a point of order that the gentleman with the floor, discussing the motion that the Committee of the Whole rise and report the bill back to the House with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken, must confine his remarks to the motion:

12. 93 CONG. REC. 4087, 80th Cong. 1st Sess.

MR. [FRANCIS H.] CASE of South Dakota: Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state it.

MR. CASE of South Dakota: It has always been my understanding that when a preferential motion to strike out the enacting clause was used, that the debate had to be upon that motion. I submit to the Chair that the gentleman is not speaking on the motion.

THE CHAIRMAN: On a motion to strike out the enacting clause of a bill, the whole bill is before the House; therefore, there is great latitude in debate.⁽¹³⁾

§ 38.19 Debate in opposition to a preferential motion to strike out the enacting clause may relate to any portion of the bill, including the merits of an amendment pending when the preferential motion was offered.

During consideration of the military procurement authorization (H.R. 6674) in the Committee of the Whole on May 20, 1975,⁽¹⁴⁾ the proposition described above was demonstrated as follows:

13. The Chair has repeatedly ruled that the motion opens up the entire scope of the bill for discussion. See, for example, 113 CONG. REC. 32679, 90th Cong. 1st Sess., Nov. 15, 1967; 113 CONG. REC. 14145, 14147, 14148, 90th Cong. 1st Sess., May 25, 1967; 104 CONG. REC. 16718, 16719, 85th Cong. 2d Sess., Aug. 8, 1958; and 79 CONG. REC. 3744, 74th Cong. 1st Sess., Mar. 15, 1935.

MR. [MELVIN] PRICE [of Illinois]: Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto, and on further amendments to the bill, end in 20 minutes.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁵⁾ The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Illinois.

The motion was agreed to. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: The time of the gentleman has expired. [All time has expired.]

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Chairman, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Bauman moves that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken out.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Chairman, I only offer this motion in order to obtain time since I was not able to receive any time from the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. Harkin) who offered what he claimed to be the Bauman amendment. I have read his amendment very carefully. It is not the same amendment which I offered to the National Science Foundation authorization bill. . . .

MR. [TOM] HARKIN [of Iowa]: Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words, and I rise in opposition to the preferential motion.

I thank the gentleman from Maryland for giving me an opportunity to expand a little bit more on some of these ridiculous spending programs that waste the taxpayers' dollars.

If the offices of other Members are like mine, whenever they get one of these letters they begin to wonder, and people begin to ask the Members, just what it is we do to take care of these situations. If we pass this routine authorization bill for the Defense Department for $32 billion in the usual manner, we will have to answer to our constituents if we choose to be honest about it.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Chairman, I demand regular order.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman speaks on the preferential motion.

The Chair would like to make the observation that any portion of the bill is open to [debate].

§ 38.20 Since the preferential motion that the Committee rise and report with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken applies to the entire bill, debate may be directed to any part of the bill, and the motion may be used by a Member to secure five minutes to debate a pending amendment notwithstanding a limitation of time for debate on the pending amendment and all amendments thereto.

THE CHAIRMAN: The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Young).

The motion was agreed to. . . .

MR. [ROBERT W.] EDGAR [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Chairman, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Edgar moves that the Committee do now rise and report the bill back to the House with the recommendation that the enacting clause be stricken.

MR. EDGAR: Mr. Chairman, I make this motion to get more time to talk about this very important matter. . . . We rise in support of the Coughlin amendment. We feel very strongly that the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. Harkin) has pointed out many of the important features of this program that have to be taken into consideration and we feel very strongly that we should delete this item from the budget.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair is following regular order. . . .

MR. SYMMS: Is it regular order to seek recognition under a preferential motion?

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair will state that under the parliamentary procedure the entire bill is under debate. The Chair is following regular order.

§ 39. —General Debate in Committee of the Whole

Relevancy Not Required in General Debate Under General Rules

§ 39.1 A Member is not required to confine himself to the subject matter of the pending bill during general debate in the Committee of the Whole unless a special rule provides otherwise.

On Apr. 9, 1957,⁽¹⁹⁾ Mr. Noah M. Mason, of Illinois, rose to make a point of order that Mr. Clarence Cannon, of Missouri, who was addressing the Committee of the Whole, was speaking about the Postmaster General and not confining his remarks to the bill then under discussion, H.R. 6700, the Department of Commerce and related agencies appropriation bill. Mr. Cannon countered that there was no rule confining debate to the subject matter of the pending bill in general debate in the Committee. Chairman Brooks Hays, of Arkansas, ruled as follows:

. . . The Chair is not aware of any rule that requires discussion during general debate to be restricted to the bill. It is only where a special rule limits debate to the subject of the bill that the speaker is restricted to the provisions of the bill.

MR. MASON: Then we are considering this bill without a rule from the Rules Committee which would limit debate to the bill; is that it?

THE CHAIRMAN: That is correct, the Chair will advise the gentleman; consequently, there is no limitation in general debate on an appropriation bill.⁽²⁰⁾

On May 13, 1948,⁽²¹⁾ while the Committee of the Whole was sitting, the following ruling by Chairman Charles B. Hoeven, of Iowa, was made in response to a point of order by Mr. Leon H. Gavin, of Pennsylvania:

I wish to ask the Chairman what legislation we are discussing. What good bill is before the House?

THE CHAIRMAN: The House is in the Committee of the Whole in general debate on the bill H.R. 6500 [legislative branch appropriation bill of 1949]. The gentleman from Missouri has been recognized for 5 minutes and his time has not expired.

20. Where a special rule confines debate in the Committee of the Whole to the bill under consideration, unanimous consent is required to speak to another subject (see §§ 37.3, 37.4, supra).

MR. GAVIN: Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the gentleman is not discussing the bill under consideration. It is time we got back to a discussion of this bill. We have taken too much time on extraneous matters.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair will state that under general debate, the debate is not confined to the bill.

The point of order is overruled.

§ 39.2 General debate in Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union need not relate to the bill under consideration in the absence of a special rule or a unanimous-consent agreement requiring general debate to be confined to the bill; thus, during general debate on a general appropriation bill in Committee of the Whole, a Member may discuss any subject relating to the state of the Union.

On June 28, 1974,⁽¹⁾ during consideration of the District of Columbia appropriation bill,⁽²⁾ the Chair overruled a point of order as follows:

MR. [C. W.] YOUNG of Florida: Mr. Chairman, it is my intention to speak

1. 120 CONG. REC. 21743, 21744, 93d Cong. 2d Sess.
2. H.R. 15581.

out of order at this time. I regret that I must use this procedure to continue a debate that was begun earlier, but the 2 minutes that were offered to me at that time were just not sufficient to cover the material.

MR. [BILL D.] BURLISON of Missouri: Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽³⁾ The gentleman from Missouri will state it.

MR. BURLISON of Missouri: I do not believe the gentleman is speaking on the matter under consideration.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair is prepared to rule. Under the precedents and under present unanimous-consent agreement governing the general debate on the pending bill, there is no limitation on matters which may be discussed in the Committee of the Whole. If the Committee of the Whole, operating under a rule from the Committee on Rules which limited debate to consideration of the subject matter of the bill, the gentleman's point of order would be in order.

The point of order at this time is not in order, and the Chair overrules the point of order.

MR. YOUNG of Florida: Mr. Chairman, I rise as one Member of this House, one of a very few, in fact, maybe the only one who has ever been personally involved in an impeachment procedure from the time that it was first initiated in a State House of Representatives until the time that it was disposed of in the State Senate.

Parliamentarian's Note: Because general appropriation bills are privileged for consideration in Committee of the Whole under

3. Dante B. Fascell (Fla.).

Rule XI, and since the unanimous-consent request limiting and dividing control of general debate did not confine debate to the bill, the principle of wide latitude for debate as established in 8 Cannon's Precedents § 2590 was applicable in this instance.

On District of Columbia Day

§ 39.3 General debate in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union on District of Columbia Day is not limited to the subject matter of the pending bill.

On June 14, 1937,⁽⁴⁾ while the Committee of the Whole was considering District of Columbia legislation on cosmetology (H.R. 6869), and Mr. Howard W. Smith, of Virginia, had the floor, Mr. Everett M. Dirksen, of Illinois, rose to a point of order that Mr. Smith was addressing himself to a matter that had already been disposed of and was not confining his remarks to the bill then under consideration. Chairman Sam D. McReynolds, of Tennessee, ruled as follows:

The gentleman is mistaken. We are not under unanimous consent. We are under the general rules of the House, and the gentleman from Maryland has 1 hour and he has yielded 5 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia, who can talk about whatever he pleases.⁽⁵⁾

4. 81 CONG. REC. 5670, 75th Cong. 1st Sess.

On Apr. 22, 1940,⁽⁶⁾ the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union was considering on District of Columbia Day H.R. 8980, a tax bill for the District of Columbia. During debate on the bill, Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, had the floor and was discussing matters related to the civil service, the coming war, and the decisions of the Supreme Court. Mr. Jack Nichols, of Oklahoma, arose to make a point of order:

Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the gentleman is not proceeding in order. I presume the gentleman is entitled to this hour by reason of the fact that he is in opposition to the bill which is being considered. If I am not correct in that I would like to have the Chair correct me, but if I am correct, then I think the gentleman's remarks should be confined to the subject matter of the bill.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁷⁾ The point of order is overruled. The gentleman will proceed.

goals and policies provided for on a concurrent resolution on the budget by section 305(a)(3) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, the debate must be confined to the subject of such goals and policies.

On Apr. 23, 1980,⁽⁸⁾ during consideration of the congressional budget for fiscal years 1981, 1982, and 1983 (H. Con. Res. 307) in the Committee of the Whole, the Chair responded to parliamentary inquiries relating to the scope of debate on the matter. The proceedings were as follows:

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁹⁾ Pursuant to section 305(a), title 3, of Public Law 93-344, as amended, of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974, the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. Giaimo) will be recognized for 5 hours, and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Latta) will be recognized for 5 hours.

After opening statements by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Budget, the Chair will recognize the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. Giaimo) and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Latta) for 2 hours each to control debate on economic goals and policies. After these 4 hours of debate have been consumed or yielded back, the Chair will recognize the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Budget to control the remainder of their 10 hours of debate.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. Giaimo). . . .

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman has consumed 45 minutes. The Chair will now recognize the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. Giaimo) and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Latta) for 2 hours each to control debate on economic goals and policies.

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Chairman, as I understand the statutory requirements, the debate now will be confined to economic policy and goals; is that correct?

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: That is correct.

MR. BAUMAN: What if a Member strays from that and starts talking about other things, should other Members make points of order and point out that they are out of order? I mean, I do want to do this under the rule.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would have to interpret at that time whether they were within the bounds of the rule or not, and the rules relating to relevancy in debate would apply.

Under Special Rule Confining Debate "to the Bill"

§ 39.5 Where a special rule provided for the chairman of the Committee on International Relations to designate Members to equally divide and control two extra hours of general debate on a bill in Committee of the Whole, the chairman of said committee informed the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole of his designation of himself, another Member of the majority party and two Members of the minority party to control one-half hour each; and the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole advised that such debate was not required by the rule to be confined to any particular issue, but to the bill as a whole.

On July 31, 1978,⁽¹⁰⁾ Mr. Clement J. Zablocki, of Wisconsin, the Chairman of the Committee on International Relations, made a statement as to the division of control of time for debate pursuant to a special rule providing for two extra hours of debate on H.R. 12514, foreign aid authorizations for fiscal 1979. The intent behind requesting the extra hours had been to afford debate directed at the Turkish arms embargo issue, but the rule properly omitted any reference to the scope of debate, other than the requirement that all general debate be confined to the bill.

MR. ZABLOCKI: Mr. Chairman, under the rule, it is my understanding that the 1 hour for general debate on the entire bill, that that hour is equally divided between myself and the ranking minority member, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Broomfield).

Then the 2 hours that the rule provides for the Greek-Turkey-Cyprus issue, that there be 1 hour in support of lifting the embargo and 1 hour in opposition, and that the hour in support would be divided between myself and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Broomfield), and those in opposition to lifting the embargo would be managed by the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Fascell) and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Derwinski).

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹¹⁾ The Chair will respond to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Zablocki) that the Chair has been informed that the gentleman from Wisconsin has designated the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Fascell) for 1 hour, and also the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Derwinski) for 1 hour. The rule, of course, does not confine any such debate to the embargo issue alone.

F. DISORDER IN DEBATE

§ 40. In General

Order in debate is governed by numerous rules and practices of the House. Proceeding in order in debate means not only following all the rules and requirements for the conduct of business in the House or Committee of the Whole,⁽¹²⁾ but also observing the principles of decorum and courtesy in debate. This chapter focuses on those rules and practices which require Members to address the House in a certain way and to avoid personal references or language, and which provide procedures for dealing with disorderly words and disorderly acts occurring in debate.

11. Don Fuqua (Fla.).

The Speaker has the authority and the responsibility to preserve order and decorum in debate,⁽¹³⁾ and the Chairman has like power in the Committee of the Whole.⁽¹⁴⁾ The House has the power to punish a Member for disorderly conduct in debate by way of censure, expulsion, or other disciplinary action.⁽¹⁵⁾

Decorum in debate is also governed by Rule XIV House Rules and Manual § 749 (1995) and by certain provisions in Jefferson's Manual (see House Rules and Manual §§ 353 et seq. [1995]).

On the opening day of the 101st Congress, the Speaker prefaced his customary announcement of policies concerning such aspects of the legislative process as recognition for unanimous-consent requests and privileges of the floor with a general statement concerning decorum in the House, including particular adjurations against engaging in personalities, addressing remarks to spectators, and passing in front of the Member addressing the Chair.⁽¹⁶⁾

Decorum in Debate

§ 40.1 In response to a parliamentary inquiry as to order and decorum in debate, the Speaker recently having implemented a system for access to audio coverage of House proceedings by the news media for broadcast distribution, the Speaker advised and reminded Members that (1) clause 1 of Rule XIV requires Members on seeking recognition to rise, address themselves to the Chair, and confine themselves to the question under debate, avoiding personality; (2) Members should address their remarks only to the Chair and not to other entities such as the “press”; (3) Members should not refer to or address any occupant of the galleries; and (4) Members should refer to other Members in debate only in the third person, by State designation.

On June 14, 1978,⁽¹⁷⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House:

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁸⁾ The gentleman from Maryland will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, my parliamentary inquiry is this:

On June 8, 1978, the Speaker announced to the House that audio coverage of the House would be allowed and that the national radio networks would be permitted to have access to the House system. At that time the Chair stated and requested from the House the cooperation of all parties involved to insure that the dignity and the integrity of the proceedings of the House would be upheld.

Mr. Speaker, the rules of the House, I am sure the Speaker knows, include as one of the duties of the Chair to preserve order and decorum. Under clause 8 of rule XIV, a prohibition forbids any Member to introduce or to bring to the attention of the House or to make reference to persons in the gallery, nor may the Speaker entertain a request for the suspension of this rule by unanimous consent or otherwise. Clause 1 of rule XIV also requires that all Members address the Chair at all times.

17. 124 CONG. REC. 17615, 95th Cong. 2d Sess.

18. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

The gentleman from Maryland would further state that during the course of recent debate the gentleman has noted that, since the audio coverage of the floor proceedings has begun, and during the several months since televised proceedings have been permitted to be transmitted to the office of Members that Members on a number of occasions have addressed themselves to those people either viewing the proceedings on television or those listening to the radio.

My parliamentary inquiry is whether under the rules and the precedents of the House the Members must confine themselves to addressing the Chair without any reference to persons outside the Chamber or in the galleries?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair appreciates the parliamentary inquiry presented by the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Bauman) and indeed anticipated such an inquiry because the Chair appreciates the talent and vast knowledge the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Bauman) has as to the rules of the House and states that in no way may a Member address anybody but the Chair himself, and the Chair has prepared a statement to that effect.

The Chair is prepared to respond to the parliamentary inquiry put by the gentleman from Maryland.

The gentleman from Maryland inquires into the proper manner of addressing this body now that the audio coverage of floor proceedings has been authorized pursuant to House Resolution 84. The Chair would point out that clause I, rule XIV, of the rules of the House requires a Member in seeking recognition to rise, address himself to the Speaker, and on being recognized confine himself to the question under debate, avoiding personality. Further, chapter 29, section 13.3 of Deschler's Procedure states that a Member should address his remarks to the Chair and only to the Chair; it is not in order for a Member to address his remarks to "the press." Nor is it in order in debate to refer to anyone in the galleries under section 13.5 of the same chapter of Deschler's Procedure. And, a Member should refer to another Member only in the third person, by State designation.

Accordingly the Chair will inform the gentleman that Members should continue to address their remarks to the Speaker, or to the Chair, and only to the Speaker, or to the Chair.

MR. BAUMAN: I thank the Speaker for his ruling and his kind words.

§ 40.2 During a special order eulogizing the late Congressman Brooks Hays, author of a publication on order and decorum in the House ("Dignity of the House"), an address delivered by Mr. Hays on the subject in the 85th Congress was inserted in the Record.

On Nov. 4, 1981,⁽¹⁹⁾ Mr. Beryl F. Anthony, Jr., of Arkansas,

¹⁹ 127 CONG. REC. 26550, 26572, 26576, 26577, 97th Cong. 1st Sess.

made the following remarks in the House:

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. Bethune) is recognized for 60 minutes. . . .

MR. [ED] BETHUNE [of Arkansas]: . . . I see the distinguished gentleman from south Arkansas is with us today. I would yield to the gentleman. . . .

MR. ANTHONY: . . . Something else that Brooks Hays did that our older Members will realize and I only realized because I accidentally bumped into a little book that Mr. Hays had prepared and it was on the decorum that should be used in this body. . . . I will insert his speech given on this floor on July 11, 1957 at this point in the Record:

There was no objection.

Mr. Hays of Arkansas. Mr. Speaker, for a number of years prior to his retirement at the end of the 84th Congress, the Honorable George Dondero, a distinguished Member of the House, followed the practice of making a brief presentation early in the first session of each Congress of some of the rules supplementing the instructions that our greatly esteemed Parliamentarian, Mr. Lewis Deschler, and his able assistant, Colonel Roy, always give to new Members. It is a little late in this session to attempt that service and I feel unequal to the task, but I have been requested to present these viewpoints, partly for the benefit of our new Members and partly as a reminder for all of us. . . . There are some things we learn by our individual experience in this body, but sometimes we have to rely on our predecessors. It is in this realm of faith upon those who preceded us that I point to the value of the traditions and Rules of the House. There is a reason for every rule we have. It is the product of our long experience in parliamentary government.

An error sometimes creeping into our speeches is to begin an address, after obtaining the Speaker's recognition, "Ladies and gentlemen of the House." This is bad practice and actually an affront to the Speaker, for when we address the Speaker we address the House, and we should never add anything to this significant phrase of respect, "Mr. Speaker." The proper beginning, of course, when we are in the Committee of the Whole is "Mr. Chairman." One can quickly ascertain whether it should be "Mr. Speaker" or "Mr. Chairman" by looking to see if the Mace is in its place. . . .

We are admonished when any Member has the floor never to walk between him and the Speaker or in front of the person having the floor. Smoking in every part of the Chamber is prohibited specifically

Let me move quickly to one or two other points. It is never proper to say "you" in addressing another Member nor should his first name ever be used. It is always "the gentleman from Wyoming, the gentleman from Alabama."

One must always stand to object to any unanimous consent request and, of course, address the Speaker before voicing the objection. Anyone who wishes to interrupt a Member should always rise and first address the Chair—"Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?"

Badges

§ 40.3 Clause 1 of Rule XIV, requiring Members desiring to "speak or deliver any matter to the House" to rise and address the Speaker to be recognized, proscribes, in effect, the wearing of badges by Members to communicate messages; thus, the Speaker, exercising his authority to preserve order and decorum, has advised Members that the wearing of badges is inappropriate under the rules of the House.

The following statement was made by the Speaker⁽²⁰⁾ during proceedings on Apr. 15, 1986:⁽¹⁾

All Members wearing yellow badges should be advised that they are inappropriate under the rules of the House.

The badges in question urged support of military assistance to the Nicaraguan Contras. In recent years, some Members and staff have worn various badges on the floor to convey political messages to their colleagues and to the TV audience. Under the definition of decorum and debate in clause 1 of Rule XIV, a Member must first seek recognition and then speak his message, or use exhibits as provided in Rule XXX subject to approval of the House if objection is made.

Speaker's Admonition

§ 40.4 The Speaker admonished all Members to preserve proper decorum in debate to permit Members to be heard during a series of one-minute speeches.

On July 23, 1987,⁽²⁾ Speaker James C. Wright, Jr., of Texas, made the following announcement:

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will request the cooperation of Members today in that there are a great many Members who have indicated a desire to be heard under the 1-minute rule which is our period of democracy here in the Chamber and during which any Member is entitled to be heard.

The Chair would ask that Members cooperate in observing the 1-minute rule and that other Members observe the decorum of the Chamber and if they do not wish to hear what is being said, to retire from the Chamber, because whoever addresses the House is entitled to be heard.

§ 40.5 The rules which direct the Speaker to preserve order and decorum in the House authorize the Chair to take necessary steps to prevent or curtail disorderly outbursts by Members; thus, for example, the Chair may order the microphones in the Chamber turned off if being utilized by a Member, who has not been properly recognized, to engage in disorderly behavior.

2. 133 CONG. REC. 20849, 100th Cong. 1st Sess.

On Mar. 16, 1988,⁽³⁾ during the period for one-minute speeches in the House, it was demonstrated that, where a Member has been notified by the Chair that his debate time has expired, he is thereby denied further recognition in the absence of the permission of the House to proceed, and he has no right to further address the House after that time. The proceedings were as follows:

(Mr. Dornan of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

MR. [ROBERT K.] DORNAN of California: Mr. Speaker, and I address a different Member of this Chamber from New York, because you have left your chair, and Mr. Majority Whip from California, you have also fled the floor. In 10 years Jim and Tony—I am not using any traditional titles like “distinguished gentleman”—Jim and Tony, in 10 years I have never heard on this floor so obnoxious a statement as I heard from Mr. Coelho, which means “rabbit” in Portuguese, as ugly a statement as was just delivered. Mr. Coelho said that we on our side of the aisle and those conservative Democrats, particularly those representing States which border the Gulf of Mexico, sold out the Contras. That is absurd . . . Panama is in chaos and Communists in Nicaragua, thanks to the liberal and radical left leadership in this House are winning a major victory, right now.

3. 134 CONG. REC. 4079, 4084, 4085, 100th Cong. 2d Sess.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁴⁾ The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. Dornan] has expired.

MR. DORNAN of California: Wait a minute. On Honduran soil and on Nicaraguan soil.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The time of the gentleman has expired.

MR. DORNAN of California: And it was set up in this House as you set up the betrayal of the Bay of Pigs.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The time of the gentleman has expired.

MR. DORNAN of California: I ask—wait a minute—I ask unanimous consent for 30 seconds. People are dying.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The time of the gentleman has expired.

MR. DORNAN of California: People are dying.

MR. [HAROLD L.] VOLKMER [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, regular order, regular order.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The time of the gentleman has expired. Will the Sergeant at Arms please turn off the microphone?

MR. DORNAN of California: . . . I demand a Contra vote on aid to the Democratic Resistance and the freedom fighters in Central America. In the name of God and liberty and decency I demand another vote in this Chamber next week. . . .

MR. [JUDD] GREGG [of New Hampshire]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

Mr. Speaker, I was just in my office viewing the proceedings here, and during one of the proceedings, when the gentleman from California [Mr. Dornan] was addressing the House, it was drawn to my attention that the Speaker requested that Mr. Dornan's microphone be turned off, upon which Mr. Dornan's microphone was turned off.

4. Gary L. Ackerman (N.Y.).

Mr. Speaker, my inquiry of the Chair is: Under what rule does the Speaker decide to gag opposite Members of the House? . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair is referring to Mr. Dornan. He requested permission of the Chair to proceed for 1 minute, and that permission was granted by the House. Mr. Dornan grossly exceeded the limits and abused the privilege far in excess of 1 minute, and the Chair proceeded to restore order and decorum to the House. . . .

MR. GREGG: . . . I have not heard the Chair respond to my inquiry which is what ruling is the Chair referring to which allows him to turn off the microphone of a Member who has the floor?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Clause 2 of rule I.

MR. GREGG: Mr. Speaker, I would ask that that rule be read. I would ask that that rule be read, Mr. Speaker. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: It reads, 2. He shall preserve order and decorum, and, in case of disturbance or disorderly conduct in the galleries, or in the lobby, may cause the same to be cleared. . . .

MR. [LYNN] MARTIN of Illinois: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

The gentlewoman from Illinois would inquire of the Chair, because it was difficult occasionally to hear the rather strained ruling from the Chair, when I heard the Chair read from the rule, and I hope the Chair will recheck that sentence, because the Chair talked about disturbances in the gallery and disturbances outside the floor of the House.

Would the Speaker reread the exact sentence that would indicate why and how a microphone could be turned off of a duly elected Member of the House on the floor of the House? . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Under rule I, clause 2—and I will only read the half of it that applies, so as not to cause confusion in the minds of those who appear to be confused—“He shall preserve order and decorum.”

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, the sentence goes on.

MRS. MARTIN of Illinois: I believe, Mr. Speaker, that you have been requested specifically to quote that rule that affects a Member of the House on the floor, and that is not that sentence. . . . The Chair is not saying that a Member of the House, is subject to the same rule, even though it does not state it, as applied to the gallery, will apply to Members of the House. I do not believe that that can happen in an elected representative body.

Mr. Speaker, would the Chair please quote how it affects an elected Member speaking on the floor?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will read just what he read before.

“He shall preserve order and decorum, and,—” Then it proceeds to speak about in another place.

“Order and decorum is not just in the halls and in the galleries. The word “and” is followed by a comma.

Parliamentarian's Note: Clause 4 of Rule XIV⁽⁵⁾ is, of course, also applicable in situations such as that described above. In pertinent part, that rule states: "If any Member, in speaking or otherwise, transgress the rules of the House, the Speaker shall, or any Member may, call him to order; in which case he shall immediately sit down, unless permitted, on motion of another Member, to explain"

§ 40.6 A resolution proscribing the Chair from ordering microphones turned off any time a Member is speaking on the floor (not merely when a Member is recognized for debate) does not give rise to a question of the privileges of the House under Rule IX, since not alleging a violation of any rule of the House (an outburst or demonstration occurring beyond recognition for debate time not being a "proceeding" of the House); similarly, while a Member may as a question of personal privilege be recognized to complain about an abuse of House rules as applied to debate in which he was properly participating, he may not raise a question of personal privilege merely to complain that microphones had been ordered turned off during disorderly conduct during a period in which he had not been recognized.

On Mar. 16, 1988,⁽⁶⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House:

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of a privilege of the House under rule IX. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁷⁾ The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:⁽⁸⁾

Whereas, the Speaker pro tempore ordered the microphone cut off as a duly-elected Member of the House was speaking; Be it therefore

Resolved, That the Speaker, Speaker pro tempore, or any Member of the House as the Presiding Officer of the House of Representatives may not order the microphone to be cut off while any Member is speaking on the floor of the House of Representatives. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The resolution does not allege an abuse of the House rules, and is not a question of privilege.

The House will proceed to the unfinished business. . . .

MR. [ROBERT K.] DORNAN of California: Mr. Speaker, I take a point of personal privilege It is my understanding . . . that my microphones were not cut off on the House floor, that the microphones were only cut off to my home in Garden Grove where my wife was watching and to all people observing these proceedings through the national technical means of these six cameras on this Chamber.

My point of personal privilege is that I was offended as a Member by having my words cut off going to the outside world through the electronic means that this House voted for—not unanimously—voted for in this Chamber.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair has already just previously stated that his directions were to the House microphones and not to the electronic microphones.

Parliamentarian's Note: As noted above, clause 9(b)(1) of Rule I, which requires complete and unedited broadcast coverage of the proceedings of the House, does not require in-House microphone amplification of disorderly conduct by a Member following expiration of his recognition for debate. It is also arguable whether clause 9(b)(1) applies to disorderly debate or demonstrations, since these should not be construed to be “proceedings” of the House.

The Day They Broke Every Rule in the House

§ 40.7 The Speaker recognized a Member prior to legislative business for a “long minute” to pay tribute to Bob Hope (who was present in the gallery) on his 75th birthday; at the sufferance of the Speaker, Members referred to and addressed remarks to the guest in the gallery; and a Member, yielded to during an extended “one-minute” speech, sang during debate and was “excused” for that action by unanimous-consent request of the Speaker from the floor.

The following events occurred in the House on May 25, 1978:⁽⁹⁾

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁰⁾ The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Findley) for a long minute, and the Chair would request the Members to ask the gentleman to yield. That will be the procedure.

MR. [PAUL] FINDLEY [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, today is the 75th birthday celebration of Bob Hope, the greatest humorist of this century. . . . [W]e are taking this time to express our deep gratitude on behalf of the American people for his consistent willingness over the years to contribute countless hours serving his country and worthy charities. . . .

I yield to our assistant floor leader, the gentleman from New York (Mr. Wydler).

MR. [JOHN W.] WYDLER [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I am going to violate the House rules for that one sentence and address a

9. 124 CONG. REC. 15397–402, 95th Cong. 2d Sess.

10. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

comment on our distinguished guest, Bob Hope.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman is aware of the rules.

MR. WYDLER: I am aware of the rules.

On behalf of the people in my district, Bob, and on behalf of the people in America just this one sentence sums up our feelings toward you, and that is: "Thanks for the Memories." . . .

MR. [ROBERT H.] MICHEL [of Illinois]: . . . Mr. Speaker, If I could be granted one wish today it would be that this House could claim as a member, our honored guest, Bob Hope.

Think of it: All that expertise in foreign affairs from a man who has been on the road to Morocco, Singapore, and Zanzibar. . . .

Following the traditional prayer, Congressman Hope could regale us with a 1-minute comic monolog on the legislation before us. Since quite a bit of the legislation is funny enough as it is, his comments would serve as frosting on the cake.

The man who once was a prize-fighter under the name of "Packy East" would have no trouble adjusting to the floor battles between Republicans and Democrats. . . .

While I would like to think Bob Hope is inclined to be a Republican, he plays golf like a Democrat. Why, he is the only golfer ever to run up a deficit score on the course. . . .

I would like to conclude this welcome with a parody on a familiar refrain so well known to our honored guest:

THANKS FOR THE MEMORIES

Thanks for the memories,
Of places you have gone,
To cheer our soldiers on.
President sent Kissinger,
But you sent Jill St. John.
We thank you so much!

Thanks for the memories,
Of bringing Christmas cheer,
You did your best, I hear,
But servicemen all say your jokes,
Were worse than Billy Beer. . . .
We thank you so much!

(Chorus)

Seventy plus five is now your age,
Bob
We're glad to see you still upon the stage, Bob
We hope you make a decent living wage, Bob
For the more you make,
The more we take!

So thanks for the memories,
We honor you today,
And this is what we say:
Thank God you left Old England
And came to the U.S.A. . . .
We . . . thank you . . . soooooo much! . . .

MR. [THOMAS P.] O'NEILL [Jr., of Massachusetts]: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Illinois, Bob Michel, be excused for "singing."

There was no objection.

MR. O'NEILL: Mr. Speaker, I explain to our guests, particularly, that singing in the House, and speaking in a foreign language are not customary in the House. Also, you may be interested to know that in my 26 years in Congress, and I know there are Members senior to me here, never before have I ever witnessed anything of this nature. The rules say that nobody can be introduced from the galleries and that rule cannot be waived. Presidents' wives and former Presidents merely sit there. I have seen distinguished visitors, who have come to this House, sit in the galleries; but never before have I seen anything compared to what is transpiring on the floor today. It is a show of appreciation, of love and affection to a great American, and I think it is a beautiful tribute.

Speaking in Foreign Language

§ 40.8 A Member addressed the Committee of the Whole speaking Spanish, to whom another Member responded in Italian, there being no rule prohibiting a Member's speaking in a foreign language.

The following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole on Oct. 5, 1981,⁽¹¹⁾ during consideration of H.R. 3112 (to extend the Voting Rights Act of 1965):

MR. [MICKEY] LELAND [of Texas]: Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words, and I rise to oppose the amendment.

(The following is a translation of remarks which were delivered in Spanish:)

MR. LELAND: My colleagues, I want to begin speaking Spanish. I want to begin speaking the language of millions of citizens of this country. Many of you cannot understand me. And if you cannot understand me, nor can you understand 21 percent of the adult citizens of El Paso, Tex.; and nor can you understand 17 percent of all adult workers of the Southwest. These citizens of the United States speak only Spanish. You perhaps cannot understand them nor participate in their culture—but these are citizens of the United States, with the rights of citizens; their culture is an American culture, and an intimate part of our culture which makes it more rich and more strong.

And even though you cannot understand me when I speak Spanish maybe you can begin to understand the hypocrisy of our political system which excludes the participation of Hispanic-Americans only for having a different culture and speaking a different language. Ya Basta!!

MRS. [MILLICENT] FENWICK [of New Jersey]: Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

MR. LELAND: I yield to the gentleman from New Jersey.

MRS. FENWICK (In Spanish): "Si, my colleague, I beg you have pity on us".

(In Italian) "I speak for our Italian citizens. They, too, have a great culture."

Personal Privilege Not Appropriate To Address Offenses in Debate

previously spoken of him in debate.

On Mar. 16, 1988,⁽¹²⁾ the Chair responded to a parliamentary inquiry regarding a point of personal privilege, as indicated below:

MR. [ROBERT K.] DORNAN of California: Mr. Speaker, I have a point of parliamentary inquiry. . . .

I would like to inquire if this Member is able to take a point of personal privilege, that is 1 hour of debate on the House floor at the moment it is granted, if I feel that my honor was impugned when the majority whip, who also spoke way beyond 1 minute . . . if Mr. Coelho tells me that I have sold out the young men and women that I visited with not more than a month ago who are at this moment being strafed and rocketed by Soviet gunships, to tell me to my face—and I am sitting in the front row—that I sold them out impugned my honor.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹³⁾ The gentleman will state a parliamentary inquiry.

MR. DORNAN of California: Do I have a right for a point of personal privilege on that?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: That is not a remedy that the gentleman has under the circumstances.

MR. DORNAN of California: May I ask the ruling of the Chair as to why I cannot maintain a point of personal privilege that my honor was impugned.

12. 134 CONG. REC. 4087, 100th Cong. 2d Sess.

13. Gary L. Ackerman (N.Y.).

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The point of personal privilege does not derive from words spoken in debate.

Privilege of House Alleging Rule Violation

§ 40.10 A question of the privileges of the House under Rule IX may be based upon an alleged violation of a rule by the Chair; thus, a resolution alleging that termination by the Chair of audio broadcast coverage of House proceedings had been improperly ordered, and directing the Speaker to assure future compliance with Rule I, clause 9(b)(1), requiring complete audio coverage of House proceedings, by not permitting interruptions of coverage, was held to involve a question of the integrity of House proceedings and to constitute a question of the privileges of the House.

On Mar. 17, 1988,⁽¹⁴⁾ the House adopted a resolution offered as a question of the privileges of the House directing the Speaker to assure uninterrupted audio and visual coverage of House proceedings, as indicated below:

MRS. [LYNN] MARTIN of Illinois: Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of the privileges of the House pursuant to rule IX of the rules of the House, and I have a resolution at the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

14. 134 CONG. REC. 4180, 100th Cong. 2d Sess.

The Clerk read the resolution as follows:

H. RES. 406

Whereas, the broadcast coverage of House proceedings affects the dignity, decorum and integrity of those proceedings; and

Whereas, House Rule I, clause 9(b) requires the "complete and unedited audio and visual broadcasting" of House proceedings; and

Whereas, the Speaker held on April 30, 1985, that H. Res. 150, directing the Speaker to "provide for the audio and visual broadcast coverage of the Chamber while Members are voting," raised a legitimate question of the privileges of the House (House Rules & Manual, 100th Congress, §662); and

Whereas, on Wednesday, March 16, 1988,¹⁵ the audio broadcast coverage of House proceedings was terminated during a Member's spoken remarks while the audio system in the Chamber continued to operate; and

Whereas, such termination of audio broadcast coverage violates the provision of clause 9(b)(1) of House Rule I requiring "complete and unedited audio and visual broadcasting of House proceedings": Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, The Speaker is hereby directed to take such steps as are necessary to ensure future compliance with House Rule I, clause 9(b) that the audio and visual broadcast coverage of House proceedings not be interrupted, including instructions to any Members acting as Speaker pro tempore, and any officers or employees of the House involved with the broadcast system, and the implementation of any necessary safeguards to prevent the termination of such coverage.

THE SPEAKER:¹⁶ The Chair believes that the resolution offered by the gentlewoman from Illinois [Mrs. Martin] does constitute a question of the privileges of the House under the precedents cited in the preamble of the resolution since it directs compliance with clause 9[(b)(1)] of rule I, which requires complete and unedited broadcast coverage of the proceedings of the House.

Therefore, the gentlewoman from Illinois [Mrs. Martin] is recognized for 1 hour. . . .

MR. [THOMAS S.] FOLEY [of Washington]: . . . Mr. Speaker, we have no objection to the adoption of the resolution on this side, but I think it is important to note as well that while the American people certainly have the right to see whatever occurs on the floor of the House during the legislative session of the House, it is also incumbent on all Members of the House on both sides of the aisle to observe the rules of the House and to observe good order and decorum. And without attempting to characterize the events of yesterday, it is clear that under the traditions and rules of the House, members who proceed out of order after their time has expired or proceed when not properly recognized by the Chair are not in good order and are not debating in the spirit of the rules of the House. . . .

As the gentlewoman has said, the American people have the right under our rules to see what occurs on the House floor. We hope that Members on both sides of the aisle will behave in a way that indicates that they are observing good order and decorum, that they are responding to the rulings of the Chair, and that they are also observing the rules that proper debate cannot take place in the House when the time allotted to the Member has expired or the Member is acting in contravention to the proper rulings of the Chair.⁽¹⁷⁾

Comportment as Breach of Decorum

§ 40.11 A Member's comportment may constitute a breach of decorum even though the content of her speech is not, in itself, unparliamentary; it is a breach of decorum for a Member to ignore the Chair's gavel and request to be seated.

On July 29, 1994,⁽¹⁸⁾ a Member ignored repeated requests by the Chair to suspend and be seated:

MS. [MAXINE] WATERS [of California]: Madam Speaker, last evening a Member of this House, Peter King, had to be gavelled out of order at the White-water hearings of the Banking Committee. He had to be gavelled out of order because he badgered a woman who was a witness from the White House, Maggie Williams. I am pleased I was able to come to her defense. Madam Speaker, the day is over when men can badger and intimidate women.

MR. [F. JAMES] SENSENBRENNER [Jr., of Wisconsin]: Madam Speaker, I demand the gentlewoman's words be taken down.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁹⁾ The gentlewoman from California [Ms. Waters] must suspend and be seated.

The Clerk will report the words.

MS. WATERS:—

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentlewoman will please desist and take her seat.

MS. WATERS:—

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair is about to direct the Sergeant at Arms to present the mace.

THE SPEAKER:⁽²⁰⁾ The Clerk will report the words. . . .

While in the opinion of the Chair the word "badgering" is not in itself unparliamentary, the Chair believes that the demeanor of the gentlewoman from California was not in good order in the subsequent period immediately following those words having been uttered.

Accordingly, the Chair rules that without leave of the House, the gentlewoman from California may not proceed for the rest of today. The Chair would ask whether there is objection to the gentlewoman from California receiving the right to proceed in good order.

ject, Mr. Speaker, does that mean that all of the words will be taken down subsequent to the point that she was ruled out of order and stricken from the Record?

THE SPEAKER: None of those words will be in the Record, the Chair will state to the gentleman. None of the words will be in the Record subsequent to that since she was not recognized. . . .

MRS. [PATRICIA] SCHROEDER [of Colorado]: Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I am a little puzzled by the word "demeanor." I was in the Chamber at the time, and I did see the Chair try to gavel the gentlewoman down, but I can understand why she could not hear, because there were so many people at mikes and I think she was confused by that. So I am a little troubled about that. How can you challenge "demeanor"?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair wishes to advise the gentlewoman from Colorado that it is the opinion of the Chair that the Chair at the time was attempting to insist that the gentlewoman from California desist with any further statements and sit down. She did not accord cooperation to the Chair and follow the Chair's instructions. Consequently, it is the finding of the Chair that her demeanor at that point in refusing to accept the Chair's instructions was out of order.

Parliamentarian's Note: While a Member who is held to have breached the rules of decorum in debate is presumptively disabled from further recognition on that day, by tradition the Speaker's ruling and any necessary expungement of the Record are deemed sufficient sanction, and by custom the chastened Member is permitted to proceed in order (usually by unanimous consent).

§41. Disorderly Acts; Attire

Rule XIV, clause 7⁽¹⁾ provides: While the Speaker is putting a question or addressing the House no Member shall walk out of or across the hall, nor, when a Member is speaking, pass between him and the Chair; and during the session of the House no Member shall wear his hat, or remain by the Clerk's desk during the call of the roll or the counting of ballots, or smoke upon the floor of the House; and the Sergeant-at-Arms is charged with the strict enforcement of this clause. Neither shall any person be allowed to smoke or to use any personal, electronic office equipment (including cellular phones and computers) upon the floor of the House at any time. Disturbances by Members§ 41.1 It is a breach of order for a Member to stand by or walk about a Member who has the floor in debate.

On Mar. 5, 1936,⁽¹³⁾ while Mr. Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, had the floor, Mr. Marion A. Zioncheck, of Washington, rose and stood by Mr. Blanton. Mr. Blanton objected to the interruption, and Chairman William L. Nelson, of Missouri, ruled that Mr. Zioncheck was out of order as not being in his seat while another Member had the floor.⁽¹⁴⁾

—Adhering to the Speaker's Gavel§ 41.2 A Member's comportment may constitute a breach of decorum even though the content of her speech is not, in itself, unparliamentary; it is a breach of decorum for a Member to ignore the Chair's gavel and request to be seated.

13. 80 CONG. REC. 3376, 74th Cong. 2d Sess.

14. Under parliamentary law, no Member is to disturb another in his speech, stand up to interrupt him, pass between the Speaker and the speaking Member, go across the House, or walk up and down the House. Jefferson's Manual, House Rules and Manual § 364 (1995).

On July 29, 1994,⁽¹⁵⁾ a Member ignored repeated requests by the Chair to suspend and be seated:

MS. [MAXINE] WATERS [of California]: Madam Speaker, last evening a Member of this House, Peter King, had to be gaveled out of order at the White-water hearings of the Banking Committee. He had to be gaveled out of order because he badgered a woman who was a witness from the White House, Maggie Williams. I am pleased I was able to come to her defense. Madam Speaker, the day is over when men can badger and intimidate women.

MR. [F. JAMES] SENSENBRENNER [Jr., of Wisconsin]: Madam Speaker, I demand the gentlewoman's words be taken down.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁶⁾ The gentlewoman from California [Ms. Waters] must suspend and be seated.

The Clerk will report the words.

MS. WATERS:—

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentlewoman will please desist and take her seat.

MS. WATERS:—

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair is about to direct the Sergeant at Arms to present the mace.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁷⁾ The Clerk will report the words. . . .

While in the opinion of the Chair the word "badgering" is not in itself unparliamentary, the Chair believes that the demeanor of the gentlewoman from

16. Carrie Meek (Fla.).

17. Thomas S. Foley (Wash.).

California was not in good order in the subsequent period immediately following those words having been uttered.

Accordingly, the Chair rules that without leave of the House, the gentlewoman from California may not proceed for the rest of today. The Chair would ask whether there is objection to the gentlewoman from California receiving the right to proceed in good order.

MR. [GERALD B. H.] SOLOMON [of New York]: Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, does that mean that all of the words will be taken down subsequent to the point that she was ruled out of order and stricken from the Record?

THE SPEAKER: None of those words will be in the Record, the Chair will state to the gentleman. None of the words will be in the Record subsequent to that since she was not recognized. . . .

MRS. [PATRICIA] SCHROEDER [of Colorado]: Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I am a little puzzled by the word "demeanor." I was in the Chamber at the time, and I did see the Chair try to gavel the gentlewoman down, but I can understand why she could not hear, because there were so many people at mikes and I think she was confused by that. So I am a little troubled about that. How can you challenge "demeanor"?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair wishes to advise the gentlewoman from Colorado that it is the opinion of the Chair that the Chair at the time was attempting to insist that the gentlewoman from California desist with any further statements and sit down. She did not accord cooperation to the Chair and follow the Chair's instructions. Consequently, it is the finding of the Chair that her demeanor at that point in refusing to accept the Chair's instructions was out of order.

Parliamentarian's Note: While a Member who is held to have breached the rules of decorum in debate is presumptively disabled from further recognition on that day, by tradition the Speaker's ruling and any necessary expungement of the Record are deemed sufficient sanction, and by custom the chastened Member is permitted to proceed in order (usually by unanimous consent).

Interrupting Another Member

§ 41.3 It is a breach of order in debate for a Member without rising and addressing the Chair to interject remarks into another Member's speech.

On July 25, 1935,⁽¹⁸⁾ while Mr. Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, had the floor, Mr. Samuel Dickstein, of New York, interjected remarks from his seat without addressing the Chair or securing the consent of Mr. Blanton. Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, intervened and ruled "it is distinctly against the rules for a gentleman in his seat to interrupt a Member who is speaking.”⁽¹⁹⁾

On Apr. 18, 1973,⁽²⁰⁾ Chairman Morris K. Udall, of Arizona, sustained a point of order made by Mr. George E. Danielson, of California, that a Member then speaking was not standing as required by the rule of the House.

“Clear the Well”

§ 41.4 Where a point of order was made that the well of the House should be cleared in compliance with the House rules, the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole requested a Member to step back from the well of the House to propound his question.

On Mar. 7, 1957,⁽¹⁾ the following exchange and ruling by Chairman Wayne L. Hays, of Ohio, took place:

MR. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN [of Minnesota]: I do not want to yield for a speech.

19. To speak, a Member must rise, address himself to the Speaker, and be recognized. Rule XIV clause 1, House Rules and Manual § 749 (1995).

Parliamentarian's Note: Sitting on the committee table while speaking into a microphone is not in accord with proper decorum.

1. 103 CONG. REC. 3268, 85th Cong. 1st Sess.

MR. [GEORGE H.] CHRISTOPHER [of Missouri]: I did not come down to heckle the gentleman.

MR. AUGUST H. ANDRESEN: I will yield for a question, but I refuse to yield for a speech.

MR. CHRISTOPHER: I would like to ask a question.

MR. [CLARE E.] HOFFMAN [of Michigan]: Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state it.

MR. HOFFMAN: I ask that the well be cleared.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Michigan makes a point of order that the well should be cleared. The gentleman will step back to the seats to ask his question.

MR. CHRISTOPHER: I want to ask a question about the 51 million acre base.

MR. HOFFMAN: Mr. Chairman, I insist on my point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Missouri will suspend. We want to comply strictly with the rules. The gentleman will stand back out of the well, please, while the question is propounded.⁽²⁾

§ 41.5 The Speaker announced that Members should not traffic the well of the House when another Member is speaking.

quiry, made an announcement concerning conduct of Members while a Member is speaking in the House:

MS. [MARCY] KAPTUR [of Ohio]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentlewoman will state her parliamentary inquiry.

MS. KAPTUR: Mr. Speaker, my inquiry has to do with the courtesy extended to Members who are attempting to deliver their 1-minute messages this morning. I notice that Members on the other side are moving around the podium and placing their papers there, distracting from the individual who is speaking. Now this side has not chosen to use those tactics.

My inquiry is as to appropriate behavior when another Member of the House is addressing the public.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentlewoman's observation is well taken. Members should not be standing in front of the rostrum while other Members are speaking, and the Chair would ask all Members to observe basic courtesy when Members are speaking in the House.

MS. KAPTUR: And Members awaiting their turn to speak should be seated until they are recognized by the Speaker?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Members should not traffic the well when any other Member is speaking.

Similarly, on Mar. 3, 1995,⁽⁵⁾ the Speaker Pro Tempore⁽⁶⁾ re-

MR. [HAROLD L.] VOLKMER [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state it.

MR. VOLKMER: Do the rules of the House permit Members to walk in the well, be present in the well while a Member is speaking in the well?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Members should not cross in front of Members while they are speaking in the well.

MR. VOLKMER: Is it permissible to walk on the other side of the well while a Member is speaking in the well?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Members should not walk between the Member speaking and the Chair.

MR. VOLKMER: What I am trying to point out to Members on the other side, we have never done it on this side, is not to get your papers up and get ready to make your 1-minute while a Member is speaking in the well.

Altercations Between Members

§ 41.6 Members of the House were permitted to comment as witnesses or make corroborating statements relative to an altercation between two Members in the Speaker's lobby.

On Oct. 29, 1963,⁽⁷⁾ Mr. Bruce R. Alger, of Texas, was granted permission to address the House relative to an altercation between two Members:

7. 109 CONG. REC. 20413, 88th Cong. 1st Sess.

Mr. Speaker, I take the floor with some sorrow and some humor. All of us in Congress have certain standards to maintain on the floor of this House. It has come to my attention that one of the gentlemen from Texas threatened another Texan on the floor of the House, to pistol whip him the way they did back home. I ask the gentleman from California to tell of the incident as he saw it.

MR. [DEL. M.] CLAWSON [of California]: I was a witness when this very unfortunate threat was made a few minutes ago on the floor of the House to pistol whip him as they did in Texas. Off the floor I saw the culmination of this thing when the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Gonzalez] threatened the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Foreman] and followed through by striking Mr. Foreman with his fist. I was frankly shocked and surprised to see this very undignified incident and irresponsible action by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Gonzalez] take place in the House of Representatives.

MR. ALGER: I want to thank the gentleman for corroborating what I understand to be the case. I want to compliment my colleague, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Foreman], for his restraint in not retaliating by striking the other gentleman, the gentleman from San Antonio [Mr. Gonzalez].

MR. [EDGAR FRANKLIN] FOREMAN: Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

MR. ALGER: I yield to the gentleman.

MR. FOREMAN: I thank the gentlemen for coming to my aid in this instance. In these matters I am perfectly capable of handling myself physically, particularly when it comes to fisticuffs. However, I was quite surprised to find that the gentleman from San Antonio completely lost his head, and evidently, his reasoning, and had to resort to striking me in these Halls of Congress because he disagreed with something that had been reported in the newspapers that I had said.

The gentleman from Texas [Mr. Gonzalez] said he understood that I had called him a Communist. This was certainly a misunderstanding on his part. I have stated that in my opinion Mr. Gonzalez' ultraliberal, leftwing voting record had done a disservice to the U.S. Constitution and helps to serve the Socialist-Communist cause. I stand behind this statement without retraction or apology.

Parliamentarian's Note: On Feb. 22, 1945, an altercation occurred between Mr. Frank E. Hook, of Michigan, and Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, the latter being disturbed by allegedly blasphemous words used against him in debate by Mr. Hook. Some physical contact took place between the two Members on the floor while the House was in session. Mr. Hook's words, which precipitated the incident, were stricken from the Record by order of Speaker Pro Tempore Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia. Mr. Hook and Mr. Rankin later apologized to the House on Feb. 23, 1945, and no further action was taken by the House.⁽⁸⁾

Announcements as to Anticipated Disorder

§ 41.7 The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole may make an announcement concerning decorum on the floor during forthcoming debate on a certain bill.

On Oct. 21, 1969,⁽⁹⁾ Chairman Daniel J. Flood, of Pennsylvania, made an announcement in relation to the decorum on the House floor during the debate on H.R. 13827, the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1969. The Chairman stated that House employees who did not have specific privileges of the floor would be withdrawn from the floor, that the whips would be quiet, that the aisles to the right and left would be cleared, and that there would be no undue activity at the rail during debate on the bill.⁽¹⁰⁾

Members during debate, such as applauding or rising to applaud, are not a part of the Record, and the Speaker may direct the reporters of the debates to refrain from inserting indications of such activity in the Record.

On Mar. 6, 1945, Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, addressed the House on the subject of demonstrations of approval in the House by way of applause, shouts, and laughter. He made the suggestion that such demonstrations should be reflected in the Congressional Record, although the rulings of the Chair had been to the contrary. Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, discussed his past rulings on the question and the rationale thereof. He concluded, "the Chair has held that demonstrations in the House are not a part of the Record, and shall continue to hold that until the rules of the House are changed."⁽¹¹⁾

Evidence of "Applause" Normally Omitted

§ 41.9 The word "applause" may be inserted in the Record where the demonstration occurs during a joint session of Congress.

11. 91 CONG. REC. 1789, 79th Cong. 1st Sess.

On Mar. 6, 1945,⁽¹²⁾ Mr. Charles L. Gifford, of Massachusetts, called attention to the appearance in the Congressional Record of Mar. 1 of the word “applause” 20 times. He stated that the insertions apparently included applause as part of the proceedings of the House, although Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, had just stated that demonstrations in the House were not and should not be a part of the Record.⁽¹³⁾ Speaker Rayburn responded that (1) he had not been presiding at the session referred to and (2) the insertions were not improper because the date referred to was the occasion of a joint session of Congress in which the President delivered an address.

Only Chair Puts Question

§ 41.10 Votes on questions may be put only by the Chair and it is not in order for a Member having the floor in debate to ask that Members who would vote for the pending bill if it contained a certain provision to express their approval by rising in their seats or raising their hands.

12. 91 CONG. REC. 1790, 79th Cong. 1st Sess.

13. See §41.8, supra.

On May 5, 1955,⁽¹⁴⁾ Mr. Abraham J. Multer, of New York, requested in debate that those Members who would vote for a pending bill if it contained a certain amendment to rise in their seats. Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, made the point of order that Mr. Multer had no right to ask for a vote, and Chairman Robert L. F. Sikes, of Florida, sustained the point of order. Mr. Multer then refused to yield to another Member, stating that he would yield only for a “show of hands or rising” by Members who would vote for the provision. Chairman Sikes reminded Mr. Multer to proceed in order.

§ 41.11 On one occasion during debate in Committee of the Whole, there being no objection, the Minority Leader requested his party members to demonstrate their support for a certain proposition by a show of hands.

On Aug. 6, 1963,⁽¹⁵⁾ Minority Leader Charles A. Halleck, of Indiana, stated in regard to a pending bill:

Mr. Chairman, I do not know whether it would be parliamentary or not, but I would like to have the Republicans who are here—and we are in goodly number—raise their hands to indicate whether they will vote for this bill with or without the amendment.

No objection was made to the request for a show of hands.

Proper Attire

§ 41.12 The Speaker announced, since questions had been raised concerning the proper attire for Members in the Chamber following the raising of thermostat controls to 78 degrees to comply with a Presidential order regarding energy conservation, that (1) the Speaker still considered traditional attire appropriate for Members, including a coat and tie for male Members and appropriate attire for female Members; (2) the Chair would recognize any Member to offer a resolution as a question of the privileges of the House to permit a relaxation in dress; and (3) the Chair would prefer not to rule on a point of order that a Member was in violation of the Speaker's guidelines, trusting that the standards of dress would be voluntarily maintained and accepted by Members, but would not foreclose the possibility of entertaining such a point of order; the Speaker also refused to recognize a Member in violation of traditional standards of dress, and requested the Member in question to remove himself from the floor and don proper attire.

On July 17, 1979,⁽¹⁶⁾ Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr., of Massachusetts, made the following announcement:

THE SPEAKER: The Chair wishes to make a statement.

In recent days the Congress has undertaken measures to comply with the President's Executive order implementing thermostat controls for non-residential buildings, most particularly by raising the temperature in the Capitol and congressional office buildings to 78 degrees. This effort to conserve energy has undoubtedly resulted in some discomfort for Members, staff, and visitors to the Capitol. As a result, some questions have arisen concerning proper dress for Members when they are in the House Chamber. Over many years and during some uncomfortable seasons, Members have respected an unwritten standard. Historically, a coat and tie has always been required for male Members and appropriate attire for female Members. The Chair believes that the House should continue to adhere to this practice. The Chair certainly intends to. Perhaps the Chair reflects the views of his own generation but he feels that this is one of the ways in which he shows his respect for this institution.

16. 125 CONG. REC. 19008, 96th Cong. 1st Sess.

The Chair does not believe he should become an arbiter of style. What color a person wears or the manner in which he or she combs his hair is certainly a matter for individual determination. . . .

If any Member would desire to offer a resolution raising a question of privilege of the House to the effect that Members may relax their dress, such Member may so offer the resolution and the Chair would recognize him for such purposes. . . . The Chair would ask the gentleman from Texas if he would kindly remove himself from the floor and appear in the customary attire that the Members of the Congress wear. . . .

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, in view of the ruling by the distinguished Speaker of the House, in the future would it be in order, under clause 2 of rule I, which grants the Speaker power to preserve order and decorum, to make a point of order against any Members of the House who do not accede to the dress code that the Speaker has described?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will advise the gentleman from Maryland that the Chair hopes not to have to rule on a point of order concerning a dress code for Members and would prefer that the standards of dress be voluntarily maintained and accepted by the Members.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, would the Chair entertain such a point of order if it were made?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair would not foreclose that at this time.

MR. BAUMAN: I thank the Chair.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair would ask the gentleman from Texas to remove himself from the floor, and the gentleman can address the House at such time as he is in the proper attire.

MR. [JAMES A.] MATTOX [of Texas]: Mr. Speaker—

THE SPEAKER: The Chair is not recognizing the gentleman. The Chair has made his statement.

If any Member desires to offer a resolution to change the customs and attire with regard to dress, as a point of privilege of the House, the Chair would recognize the Member.

§ 41.13 The Speaker announced, during a vote by electronic device, that Members were not permitted under the traditions of the House to wear overcoats on the House floor.

On Dec. 16, 1981,⁽¹⁷⁾ Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr., of Massachusetts, made an announcement in the House, as follows:

THE SPEAKER (during the vote): The Chair has been informed by some of the Members that the Chair has not been adhering to the customs and traditions of the House, one being that Members should not be on the floor with outer garments, with overcoats. So, they will kindly remove themselves and remove the garments.

Hats

§ 41.14 The wearing of hats on the floor by Members is not permitted under clause 7 of Rule XIV and the prohibition extends to the taking off of the hat in tribute to a constituent athletic team.

On June 22, 1993,⁽¹⁸⁾ the Chair addressed the issue of the wearing of hats:

(Mrs. Collins of Illinois asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

MRS. [CARDISS] COLLINS of Illinois: Mr. Speaker, I proudly rise today to congratulate the Chicago Bulls for their threepat NBA championship victory Sunday night, which secured them a distinguished place in NBA history as one of the league's best teams of all time. For the first time in 27 years, and only the third time ever, an NBA champion took home the coveted crown 3 years in succession—an un-BULL-ievable feat in today's era of professional sports. . . .

Mr. Speaker, I salute my Chicago Bulls.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁹⁾ The Chair understands the enthusiasm of the gentleman from Illinois, but admonishes other Members that the wearing of hats on the floor of the House, even to doff them in honor of a very successful team, is not permitted under the House rules.

tained a point of order that Members were smoking on the floor in violation of clause 7 of Rule XIV.

On Aug. 14, 1986,⁽²⁰⁾ during consideration of H.R. 4428 (Department of Defense authorization for fiscal year 1987) in the Committee of the Whole, Chairman Pro Tempore Marty Russo, of Illinois, sustained a point of order as indicated below:

MR. [THOMAS J.] DOWNEY of New York: Mr. Chairman, I rise to a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state his point of order.

MR. DOWNEY of New York: Mr. Chairman, is smoking permitted on the House floor?

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will advise Members that there is no smoking on the House floor. Clause 7 of rule XIV is explicit on that point. The Chair will advise Members that the Chair has a very vigilant eye for those kind of infractions. The Chair will advise Members, the Chair is ever watchful for that opportunity to find someone out of order for smoking on the floor.

The Chair will advise Members that the Chair is reluctant to point out Members who have smoking material on their person on the floor. This is the Chair's last warning to those individuals. The Chair will have the Sergeant at Arms enforce the rule.

§ 41.16 The prohibition against smoking on the floor of the House extends to smoking behind the rail.

On Feb. 23, 1995,⁽¹⁾ the Chair responded to parliamentary inquiries on the subject of smoking:

MR. [RAY] LAHOOD [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽²⁾ The gentleman will state it.

MR. LAHOOD: Mr. Speaker, is it within the realm of the House rules for Members to smoke on the floor?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: That is prohibited.

MR. LAHOOD: I wish the Chair would advise Members of that, please.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Members are so advised.

MR. [HAROLD L.] VOLKMER [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state it.

MR. VOLKMER: Mr. Speaker, at the rear of the Chambers, behind the rail, is that included in the area in which Members can smoke?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: That has been ruled to be part of the floor.

MR. VOLKMER: And Members are not to smoke in the back behind the rail?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman is correct.

On Aug. 2, 1955,⁽³⁾ Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, answered a parliamentary inquiry:

MR. [CLARE E.] HOFFMAN of Michigan: Mr. Speaker, if the House is in recess, under the rules of the House may a Member speak from the well of the House while the recess is on?

THE SPEAKER: Not when the House is in recess.

§ 42. Manner of Address; Interruptions

When speaking in the House, a Member must rise and respectfully address himself to "Mr. Speaker."⁽⁴⁾ In the Committee of the Whole, the proper form of address is "Mr. Chairman."⁽⁵⁾ If the presiding officer is a woman, the proper address is "Madam Speaker" or "Madam Chairman."⁽⁶⁾ Remarks in debate are not properly addressed either to individual Members⁽⁷⁾ or to occupants of the galleries.⁽⁸⁾

On Jan. 12, 1932,⁽¹¹⁾ Mr. Robert Luce, of Massachusetts, arose to state a question of privilege and then discussed at length the proper form of address in the House or in the Committee of the Whole:

Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of privilege.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹²⁾ The gentleman will state it.

MR. LUCE: . . . There is presented to me this morning an opportunity to call to the attention of the House a matter that has disturbed me for some time. This is my first convenient chance to lay it before the House. I find in the Record this morning that a few remarks I made yesterday are printed as follows on page 1694:

“Mr. Speaker, ladies, and gentlemen.”

Not since I have been a Member have I thus broken parliamentary law. Of course, I desire not to go on record as supporting a practice which is obnoxious to me.

When I came here 12 years ago, nobody, so far as I can recollect, ever deviated from the parliamentary rule that salutation should be confined to the occupant of the chair, either “Mr. Speaker” or “Mr. Chairman.” Within a very few years the practice has grown up of addressing the House en masse by some form of preliminary language. This is contrary to the parliamentary precedent of several hundred years.

I would read to you a statement by Sir Thomas Smith who described the practice of the Parliament of Queen Elizabeth's time. He said:

11. 75 CONG. REC. 1815, 72d Cong. 1st Sess.
 12. John N. Garner (Tex.).

Though one do praise the law, the other dissuade it. For every man speaketh as to the speaker, not as one to another, for that is against the order of the House.

Jefferson's Manual, which is the law of the House when it has no rule to the contrary, says that "when any Member means to speak . . . he is . . . to address himself not to the House, nor to any particular Member, but to the Speaker," and so forth. Notice that he is to address himself not to the House, but to the Speaker of the House.

. . . I am quite sure that the reason for the rule has always persisted and will continue to persist, because it is, as the writers say, to avoid altercations. Its purpose is to prevent men from directly addressing each other and thus invite a breach of decorum.

For that reason, and hoping that I have not unduly taken the time of the House in calling attention to this matter, I ask unanimous consent that the words "ladies and gentlemen" be stricken from the report of my speech. [Applause.]

Speaker Garner responded:

The Chair is in entire sympathy with the remarks made by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Luce]. It is supposed to be a slight upon the Chair, according to the expressions of the former Speakers of the House, when Members address the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole or the Speaker and then address the Members on the floor en masse. The Speaker represents the House of Representatives in its organization, and by adressing the Chair gentlemen address the entire membership of the House.

Similarly, on May 21, 1941,⁽¹³⁾ Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, stated in response to a parliamentary inquiry that the proper form of address was "Mr. Speaker" or "Mr. Chairman" without the addition of "ladies and gentlemen" or any other language.⁽¹⁴⁾

§ 42.2 Remarks in the House, even if critical of the Speaker, should be directed to "Mr. Speaker" under clause 1 of Rule XIV, even if he is not occupying the chair.

On Nov. 1, 1983,⁽¹⁵⁾ Speaker Pro Tempore Paul Simon, of Illinois, responded to a parliamentary inquiry regarding the proper mode of addressing the Chair in the House:

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, it is apparent from your remarks in the New York Times this morning that the political rhetoric of 1984 is going to get plenty rough. . . .

MR. [SAMUEL S.] STRATTON [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state it.

MR. STRATTON: Mr. Speaker, is it in order for any Member of the House to address a Speaker pro tempore who is occupying the chair and make charges that were directed at the Speaker himself?

It would appear to be improper. I would think, under the rules of the House.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair is advised that the remarks are directed to the Chair, whoever the occupant of the chair is.

Addressing the President

§ 42.3 Although Members may discuss past and present Presidential actions and suggest possible future Presidential actions, it is not in order to address remarks in debate directly to the President, as in the second person.

On Oct. 16, 1989,⁽¹⁶⁾ during the period for one-minute speeches in the House, the Speaker cautioned Members against a renewed tendency to address remarks in debate directly to the President.

MR. [ROBERT G.] TORRICELLI [of New Jersey]: Mr. Speaker, George Bush's

16. 135 CONG. REC. 24715, 101st Cong. 1st Sess.

honeymoon is most assuredly now over. . . .

Mr. President, it is time to get to work, time to decide why is it you sought the Presidency, to tell us where it is you would take America. . . .

Mr. President, listen to this, if you will, from the president of the Chase Manhattan Bank: "There are some very significant issues out there such as the fiscal deficit, our relations with Japan, that have to be the subject of major initiatives. I'd like to see that initiative, and I haven't. There is no agenda."

Mr. President, listen to not only your critics but to your fans. It is time to lead our country.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁷⁾ As the Chair announced on July 23, 1987, it is not in order to address the President in debate. Members must address their remarks to the Chair. Although Members may discuss past and present Presidential actions and suggest possible future Presidential actions, they may not directly address the President, as in the second person.⁽¹⁸⁾ er form of address is “Madam Chairman” in the Committee of the Whole and “Madam Speaker” in the House.

On Mar. 2, 1932, Speaker John N. Garner, of Texas, responded as follows to a parliamentary inquiry:

MR. [CLAUDE V.] PARSONS [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state it.

MR. PARSONS: Yesterday afternoon the distinguished Congresswoman from Florida occupied the chair and in addressing the Chair I addressed her as Madam Chairman. I notice in the Record this morning, on page 5196, that it is printed as Mr. Chairman. I wish to inquire which one of the titles is correct.

THE SPEAKER: In the opinion of the present occupant of the chair, the gentleman from Illinois in addressing the Chair as Madam Chairman used the correct form.⁽¹⁹⁾

On Sept. 20, 1973,⁽²⁰⁾ Chairman Martha W. Griffiths, of Michigan, was presiding in the Committee of the Whole and Mr. H. R. Gross, of Iowa, addressed her as “Ms. Chairperson.” The Chairman responded as follows:

For the benefit of Members, the Chair would like to announce that the Chair is properly addressed as Madam Chairman. While she seems to be neutral, she is not neuter.

Addressing Members

§ 42.5 It is a breach of parliamentary law for Members to preface their remarks by addressing themselves to “Mr. Speaker, gentlemen of the House,” or “Mr. Speaker, Members of the House.”

On Mar. 21, 1938,⁽¹⁾ Mr. John J. Cochran, of Missouri, raised a parliamentary inquiry as to the proper form of address by Members. He stated that a practice had grown up of addressing remarks to “gentlemen of the House” and “Members of the House.” He stated that such a form was an insult to the female Members of the House and recommended return of the House to the universal parliamentary practice of addressing only the Speaker and not the Members.

After lengthy discussion, Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, cited the governing rule (Rule XIV) and stated that only the Speaker in the House and the Chairman in the Committee of the Whole should be addressed.

§ 42.6 The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole has

1. 83 CONG. REC. 3768, 3769, 75th Cong. 3d Sess.

on occasion reminded Members that remarks in debate should be addressed to the Chairman and not to other Members in the Chamber.

During consideration of House Joint Resolution 403 (making further continuing appropriations for fiscal year 1984) in the Committee of the Whole on Nov. 8, 1983,⁽²⁾ the following exchange prompted the Chair to remind the Members of the rule regarding addressing the Chair in debate rather than other Members:

MR. [JAMES C.] WRIGHT [Jr., of Texas]: I appreciate the gentleman's good wishes. I accept them in the spirit in which they are offered.

MR. [SILVIO O.] CONTE [of Massachusetts]: Somebody thought I got mad at you down here.

MR. WRIGHT: You? Of course, not you.

MR. [WILLIAM H.] NATCHER [of Kentucky]: Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽³⁾ I invite the gentlemen participants in this colloquy to follow the rules and address the Chair and not each other.

MR. CONTE: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Addressing Galleries

§ 42.7 It is not in order for a Member to address his remarks to the "press."

2. 129 CONG. REC. 31458, 98th Cong. 1st Sess.

3. Wyche Fowler, Jr. (Ga.).

On Apr. 24, 1963,⁽⁴⁾ Chairman Eugene J. Keogh, of New York, ruled on a point of order directed against a Member who addressed "the press."

MR. [THOMAS B.] CURTIS [of Missouri]: Mr. Chairman, I want to say to my so-called liberal friends who voted the motion up which closed off debate on such a serious matter that you have clearly demonstrated your concern for the basic civil liberties.

I would say to the press that this is a good observation—

MR. [ROSS] BASS [of Tennessee]: Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the gentleman is out of order in addressing the press gallery or any other gallery from the floor of the House.

MR. CURTIS: I am not addressing the press gallery. I am addressing—

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Missouri will suspend. The Chair advises the gentleman that the correct parliamentary procedure is for the gentleman to address the Chair and only the Chair. The gentleman will proceed in accordance with the rules.

Parliamentarian's Note: Under the current practice of televising House proceedings, it is not in order to address remarks to anyone in the television audience or to anyone not present, including Members.

Interruptions in Debate

§ 42.8 The Speaker has repeatedly ruled that under the rules and procedures of the House a Member who wishes to interrupt another who has the floor must first address the Chair and then obtain consent of the Member who has the floor.

4. 109 CONG. REC. 6892, 88th Cong. 1st Sess.

On June 7, 1961,⁽⁵⁾ while Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, had the floor, he yielded to Mr. Albert Thomas, of Texas, who thereafter attempted to interrupt Mr. Hoffman and to yield to a third Member. Mr. Hoffman made a point of order:

Mr. Chairman . . . Members [have] to address the Chair or the Speaker before making a request that the Member speaking could yield to anyone. Is that right?

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁶⁾ That is the rule and practice of the House and Committee.

MR. HOFFMAN of Michigan: Pardon me, then. I had not noticed that the practice was being observed.

Similarly, on July 16, 1935,⁽⁷⁾ Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, ruled as follows:

The rules of the House provide that Members of the House shall observe proper decorum in debate. This is the only way in which matters may be discussed in a sound, sensible, sane manner, and a proper conclusion arrived at. Those Members particularly who have been here for years, it seems to the Chair, should be doubly careful to strictly conform to the rule.

The rules provide that when a Member rises to interrupt another he shall address the Chair and do it respectfully and secure the consent of the Member who is talking.

The Speaker then cited Rule XIV clause 1, governing the subject of address.⁽⁸⁾

The Speaker has ruled on numerous other occasions that it is not in order in debate for a Member to interrupt another who has the floor without first addressing the Chair and obtaining consent of the Member who has the floor.⁽⁹⁾

intervened in debate to rule as follows:

MR. [JOSEPH P.] MONAGHAN [of Missouri]: May I say to the gentleman—

MR. [JOHN J.] O'CONNOR [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, I do not yield.

MR. MONAGHAN: There will be a day of reckoning for those advocating the delusion plan suggested [consideration of H. Res. 197, a rule for consideration of social security legislation].

MR. O'CONNOR: Mr. Speaker, I do not yield.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will state that the rules provide that a Member desiring to interrogate the Member who has the floor must first address himself to the Chair and obtain consent of the gentleman addressing the House. It is highly improper . . . for a Member to rise and interrupt the Member addressing the House without first addressing the Chair and obtaining consent of the gentleman who has the floor.

§ 42.10 It is a breach of order in debate for a Member without rising and addressing the Chair to interject remarks into another speech.

On July 25, 1935,⁽¹¹⁾ while Mr. Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, had the floor, Mr. Samuel Dickstein, of New York, interjected remarks from his seat without addressing the Chair or securing the consent of Mr. Blanton. Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, intervened and ruled "it is distinctly against the rules for a gentleman in his seat to interrupt a Member who is speaking."

§ 42.11 The Chair enforces section 364 of Jefferson's Manual by admonishing Members who attempt to disturb Members who are addressing the House by conversing with them.

In the proceedings of Feb. 21, 1984,⁽¹²⁾ the Chair sought to preserve order by admonishing Members not to converse with a Member attempting to address the House:

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹³⁾ The House will be in order.

The Chair would like to suggest that the rules of the House prohibit the engagement of private conversation with someone who is in the process of speaking or has just concluded speaking and would ask the gentleman on his left and the gentleman on his right to extend to one another the courtesies commonly expected of Members of the House.

§ 42.12 One Member may not submit a parliamentary inquiry while another Member has the floor without his consent.

12. 130 CONG. REC. 2758, 98th Cong. 2d Sess.

13. James C. Wright, Jr. (Tex.).

On Mar. 13, 1936,⁽¹⁴⁾ when Mr. Thomas O'Malley, of Wisconsin, attempted to interrupt the Member who had the floor by stating a parliamentary inquiry, Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, ruled that a Member could not take the Member speaking off the floor by stating a parliamentary inquiry without obtaining the latter's consent.⁽¹⁵⁾

—Remarks Do Not Appear in Record

§ 42.13 Where a Member interrupts debate without being recognized or yielded to by the Member under recognition and without rising to a point of order, his remarks do not appear in the Record as he was not recognized to make them, but his name is shown in the Record at the points of interruption.

the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Burton] is recognized for 60 minutes.

MR. [DAN] BURTON of Indiana: Mr. Speaker, we have a number of Members that want to speak tonight on the problems we have with the House Post Office. . . .

I just wanted to say to the gentleman that the Members of this body would not be nearly as concerned had this not been swept under the rug 1 year ago, and time goes on and on. It is the same, and it is very analogous to the check scandal. . . .

And so I think we have an obligation.

MR. [DAVID R.] OBEY [of Wisconsin]:
. . . .

MR. BURTON of Indiana: I did not yield; I did not yield. I do not yield.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Burton] has the floor.

MR. BURTON of Indiana: . . . All I say to my colleagues is: Let us make a clean breast of it. Let us bring the facts before the House and not impede justice. . . .

MR. [JOHN T.] DOOLITTLE [of California]: If the gentleman will yield, there is a specific point I want to respond to.

The firing of those U.S. attorneys was not routine. It had never been done before in such a fashion. And to stand here on the floor and to represent that was routine is a misstatement. It was completely out of the ordinary.

MR. OBEY: . . .

MR. [RANDY] CUNNINGHAM [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I ask for regular order or to have the gentleman removed.

MR. BURTON of Indiana: This gentleman keeps interfering. I yielded to him once. I have control of the time, as I understand it.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Burton] has control of the time.

MR. OBEY: Mr. Speaker, has the gentleman asked the U.S. attorney?

MR. BURTON of Indiana: Mr. Speaker, I have the time. I am not yielding to the gentleman.

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: I think there are questions about whether or not this letter is an attempt to prevent an investigation.

MR. OBEY: . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Indiana has the time.

MR. WALKER: The gentleman knows the rules of the House.

MR. OBEY: Yes, I do.

MR. WALKER: If the gentleman from Indiana will yield to the gentleman, the gentleman is not obeying the rules of the House.

MR. OBEY: . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Indiana controls the time and has yielded to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

MR. BURTON of Indiana: Mr. Speaker, may I make an inquiry? We have been interrupted several times. This is taking away from our time. I hope that the Chair will be fair in allocating the time, because we have had to endure this now for about the last 10 minutes.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will endeavor to be fair.

MR. BURTON of Indiana: Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

MR. WALKER: Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me. . . .

MR. OBEY: . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Indiana has yielded to the gentleman from Pennsylvania, who controls the floor.

MR. WALKER: The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Obey] of course does not want to listen to the points being made here because the gentleman from Wisconsin was one of those who voted last year to table the resolution attempting to make—

MR. OBEY: . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Obey] has not been yielded time, has not been recognized.

Member Declines To Yield

§ 42.14 A Member wishing to interrupt another in debate should address the Chair for permission of the Member speaking who may exercise his own discretion as to whether or not to yield; the Chair will take the initiative in preserving order when a Member declining to yield in debate continues to be interrupted by another Member, and may order that the remarks of the Member interrupting not appear in the Record.

On July 26, 1984,⁽¹⁸⁾ the Committee of the Whole had under consideration H.R. 11, the Education Amendments of 1984. Mr. Robert S. Walker, of Pennsylvania, who was discussing prayer in schools, was interrupted by George Miller, of California, who was reading passages aloud from the Bible for purposes of demonstrating his argument that the right to pray is not absolute:

MR. WALKER: . . . It has been referred to by many people on the floor today that they know of no situation in the country where silent prayer has ever been ruled out of order by the courts. That is wrong.

I have here an article before me from CQ in which it says that in Alabama the silent prayer in Alabama was ruled out of order by the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. . . .

[MR. MILLER of California proceeded to read from the Bible at this point.]

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁹⁾ The gentleman will suspend. The gentleman from California will suspend. The gentleman is out of order.

MR. MILLER of California: Mr. Chairman, I would just like to raise the point—

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman is out of order.

MR. WALKER: Mr. Chairman, I have not yielded to the gentleman.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman has not yielded.

The gentleman's words when he spoke in the well without getting the permission of the Member who had the floor will not appear in the Record.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania may proceed. . . .

MR. WALKER: . . . I must say that the gentleman reading from the Holy Bible in the course of the discussion here I think is somewhat inappropriate. It was far more appropriate in the course of political debate; it was far more appropriate than the so-called prayer uttered earlier by the gentleman from New York.

MR. MILLER of California: Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

MR. WALKER: I would be glad to yield to the gentleman.

MR. MILLER of California: I think the point is this: That suggesting that this is an absolute right and that in fact to try to prescribe it, whether it is audible, whether it is oral, whether it is loud, whether it is soft, whether it is silent, is a point of real contention, because it is not an absolute right, as the gentleman suggests.

We just saw the rules of the House work against that right. The gentleman raised the point earlier about a teacher—

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

Addressing Television Audience

§ 42.15 The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole reminded the Members that remarks in debate should be addressed to the Chairman, and not to Members or others not present in the Chamber.

19. Abraham Kazen, Jr. (Tex.).

On Apr. 5, 1979,⁽²⁰⁾ during consideration of the International Development Cooperation Act of 1979 (H.R. 3324) in the Committee of the Whole, Chairman Elliott Levitas, of Georgia, made the following statement:

THE CHAIRMAN: Before recognizing the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Derwinski), the Chair would like to observe that when the Members are engaging in debate in the Committee of the Whole, they should be addressing the Chairman of the Committee; they are not addressing Members who are watching on television sets or others outside the Chamber. The Chair would remind the Members to observe that rule.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois.

§ 42.16 It is not in order in debate to address remarks to the “television” or to anyone, including Members not present, viewing televised House proceedings, and the Chair on his or her own initiative calls a Member to order for violating that rule.

On Nov. 8, 1979,⁽¹⁾ the following exchange occurred in the Committee of the Whole during consideration of the Milk Price Support Act (H.R. 4167):

MR. [PAUL] FINDLEY [of Illinois]: Mr. Chairman, while the attendance in this Chamber is very light, just about as light as I can recall in my experience here, we have the hope that some of the Members are watching by television and therefore even though—

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽²⁾ The gentleman will suspend.

The Chair will admonish the gentleman to address the Chair and the Members in the body and not to make reference to the television.

§ 42.17 Remarks in debate must be addressed to the Chair only, and it is not in order to address remarks to the broadcast proceedings of the House or anyone viewing them.

On Sept. 29, 1983,⁽³⁾ during special-order speeches, Speaker Pro Tempore Matthew F. McHugh, of New York, responded to a parliamentary inquiry regarding violation of the rules in addressing anyone other than the Chair:

MR. [BILL] ALEXANDER [of Arkansas]: . . . I am grateful for this opportunity to be here this evening in this forum broadcast over television, for people to see for themselves the facts which have caused these gigantic and tragic deficits. . . .

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

I just want to inquire whether or not it is not true that referring to broadcasting of the proceedings of the House on television is not a violation of a rule of the House.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman (Mr. Alexander) should direct his remarks to the Chair.

Parliamentarian's Note: It should be noted that the Chair did not specifically rule on whether a Member could discuss the fact that the proceedings were being televised.

§ 42.18 Members in debate should address their remarks to the Chair and not to “our viewing audience.”

On Aug. 2, 1984,⁽⁴⁾ in sustaining a point of order, the Speaker Pro Tempore admonished the Member against referring to audiences, as indicated below:

MR. [DUNCAN L.] HUNTER [of California]: I thank the gentleman for yielding. He has made most of the points that I wanted to make and that is that sure, these are selective votes, although they were not selected particularly for us. These were selected because these were 19 of the most important votes that would have taken the biggest pieces of the deficit, and you voted regularly against them. And the point that is being made is that over the last 5 years we voted for $274.5 billion more than the President requested. . . .

I think for the purpose of keeping our viewing audience totally informed we should not misrepresent ourselves.

4. 130 CONG. REC. 22271, 98th Cong. 2d Sess.

MR. [ROBERT E.] WISE [Jr., of West Virginia]: Point of order, Mr. Speaker. Point of order.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁵⁾ The point of order is sustained.

Please do not refer to the viewing audience or television or any other reference of that kind.

§ 42.19 Prior to a special-order speech in which several Members intended to use photographic exhibits of missing children, the Chair reminded all Members to address the Chair and to avoid direct references to the television audience.

On Apr. 2, 1985,⁽⁶⁾ the Speaker Pro Tempore made an announcement, as follows:

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁷⁾ The Chair will ask that all Members who wish to exhibit pictures to address the Chair and avoid direct references to the television audience.

Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. Edwards) is recognized for 60 minutes.

MR. [MICKEY] EDWARDS of Oklahoma: Mr. Speaker, last summer I began a project to use the televised proceedings of the House of Representatives to help find some of the 160,000 children who each year are reported kidnaped either by strangers or by a parent who does not have custody.

§ 42.20 Remarks in debate should be addressed to the Chair, and not to others who are not in the Chamber, such as those in the television (whether closed circuit or public) audience.

On Oct. 9, 1985,⁽⁸⁾ the Chair took the initiative to remind a Member that references to any television audience were not in order. The proceedings in the Committee of the Whole during consideration of H.R. 3008 (Federal Pay Equity Act) were as follows:

MR. [TOMMY F.] ROBINSON [of Arkansas]: . . . I know the females in my office are watching. Louise, I pay you $47,000 a year. I do not discriminate in my office. I do not know about the rest of my Democratic colleagues. But I pay my employees based on their ability to do the job.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will suspend for a moment.

In accordance with the procedure of the House, the gentleman should not refer to any television audience.

§ 42.21 It is not in order in debate to address remarks to anyone viewing televised House proceedings, and the Chair enforces this rule on his or her own initiative.

8. 131 CONG. REC. 26961, 99th Cong. 1st Sess.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Feb. 25, 1986:⁽⁹⁾

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁰⁾ Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. Hansen) is recognized for 5 minutes.

MR. [JAMES V.] HANSEN [of Utah]: Mr. Speaker, I will not pretend that the House Chamber is full of people. In fact, there are just a few people in the House Chamber presently. I want to take this special order time to speak about tobacco use in America. . . .

Mr. Hansen in his opening remarks specifically referred to and addressed the television audience. He revised his remarks when requested by the Speaker Pro Tempore:

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would respectfully request the gentleman to revise his comments, and delete all references to the TV audience.

MR. HANSEN: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks, deleting all comments as specified by the Chair.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Utah?

There was no objection.

§ 42.22 Members should address the Chair in debate and should not address the television audience.

10. Thomas R. Carper (Del.).

On June 3, 1987,⁽¹¹⁾ during consideration of H.R. 1934 (fairness in broadcasting) in the Committee of the Whole, the Chair admonished the House about the proper manner of address during debate:

MR. [MIKE] SYNAR [of Oklahoma]: . . . I had some prepared remarks, but as I listened to the debate, I realized that most of the issues have been responded to, so let me take my 2 minutes to talk directly to the 8 million or more people who are watching this on C-SPAN and the millions or more who will be listening on radio with respect to this debate. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹²⁾ The Chair would request all speakers to address themselves to the Chair and not refer to the television audience.

§ 42.23 It is not in order in debate to address the viewing television audience, including other Members who might be watching, since under Rule XIV, clause 1, a Member must address the Chair.

On Dec. 17, 1987,⁽¹³⁾ the Chair took the initiative during a special-order speech to remind a Member that all remarks should be directed to the Chair:

MR. [DAN] BURTON of Indiana: Mr. Speaker, I intend to talk more tonight about the problems in Central America that we have to face as a nation and that the freedom fighters have to face as a people who are fighting against tyranny down there. Before I do, I would just like to say that I feel a sense of frustration, as many of my colleagues do, and if any of the leadership happens to be watching on television, I hope they will take these remarks under advisement, because it is really sad that here we are very close to Christmas Eve and we have not completed the business of this House.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair must remind the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Burton] that Members should not direct their remarks to any viewing audience. All remarks should be made to the Chair.

Proper Manner of Addressing Colleague

§ 42.24 Clause 1 of Rule XIV and section 361 of Jefferson's Manual prohibit a Member from engaging in personalities in debate and specifically require references to another Member only "by his seat in the House, or who spoke last, or on the other side of the question," and not by name or in the second person.

During debate on the military procurement authorization for fiscal year 1983 (H.R. 6030) in Committee of the Whole on July 21, 1982,⁽¹⁵⁾ the following exchange occurred:

MR. [SAMUEL S.] STRATTON [of New York]: Mr. Chairman, the gentleman is in a sense remaking his speech again and not responding to my point.

MR. [NICHOLAS] MAVROULES [of Massachusetts]: Well, Sam, I am responding to you. I am going to ask a basic question.

If we are going to discuss basic defense posture for this country, why is it always we go on to the MX missile. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁶⁾ The Chair will state to the gentleman that references to Members should not be by familiar name but by reference to the gentleman from the State of New York or the gentleman from the State of Massachusetts, rather than their familiar names. . . .

The Chair will . . . advise all Members that references to Members shall not be by their familiar names, under House rules. . . .

The Chair is not addressing the gentleman from New York. The Chair is addressing all Members, on the basis of what he has heard in the discussion.

§ 42.25 The proper form of reference to another Member is to the “gentleman (or gentlewoman) from (State),” and not any other appellation or characterization.

16. Les AuCoin (Oreg.).

On Oct. 2, 1984,⁽¹⁷⁾ during consideration of the balanced budget bill (H.R. 6300) in the House, the Chair, in responding to a parliamentary inquiry, reminded the Members of the proper form of reference to other Members:

MR. [DANIEL E.] LUNGREN [of California]: Well, Mr. Speaker, thank God this is not a medical research center, because if you believe laetrile cures cancer, you think that Dr. “Feelgood’s” bill here on the floor is going to do something, but the fact of the matter is that it has nothing to do with the legislation on the floor; it has to do with the will of the Members of Congress. . . .

MR. [RONALD V.] DELLUMS [of California]: Mr. Speaker, is it a violation of the comity and custom of the House to refer to a Member of this body in terms other than as the gentleman from a particular State?

The Chairman of this committee was referred to as “Dr. Feelgood Jones,” and I would think that is in violation of the comity and custom of the House. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁸⁾ The gentleman is correct in stating that it is the custom and practice and tradition of the body that Members of the body should be referred to as the gentleman or gentlewoman from a certain State.

§ 42.26 Members in debate should not refer to other

Members by their first names; rather such references should be in the third person, by state delegation.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Mar. 7, 1985:⁽¹⁹⁾

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Sure, I do very much, and that is the reason why I want every one of those votes counted to determine the result. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽²⁰⁾ Will the gentleman refrain from using personal names and use formal address in addressing another Member.

§ 43. Disorderly Language

The determination of what language is unparliamentary in debate is not subject to immutable rules; the current meaning of language, the tone and intent of the Member speaking, and the subject of his remarks, must all be taken into account by the Speaker. There have been instances in which the same word has on one occasion been ruled permissible and on another ruled unparliamentary.⁽¹⁾ A colloquialism may be ruled unparliamentary because of its commonly known implication.⁽²⁾ And the context of the debate itself must be considered in determining whether the words objected to constitute disorderly criticism or merely general opinion.

Both the English⁽³⁾ and American legislative practice suggest guidelines to be followed in determining whether certain words in relation to a certain subject are disorderly or permissible. For example, no reference may be made to gallery occupants.⁽⁴⁾ And although the proposals of other Members may be criticized, their motives and personalities may not be attacked.⁽⁵⁾ (Most of the rulings on the propriety of certain language in debate have involved references to Members and are so numerous as to occupy their own portion of this work.)⁽⁶⁾

2. See § 61, infra, for rulings on colloquialisms used in reference to Members.

3. Parliamentary law in relation to disorderly words in debate is generally discussed in Jefferson’s Manual, House Rules and Manual §§ 353–379 (1995).

For an analysis of principles governing the House of Commons, see Erskine May’s Treatise on the Law, Privileges, Proceedings and Usage of Parliament, 448–471, Butterworth & Co. Ltd. (London 1964) (17th ed.).

4. See § 45, infra.

5. See § 60, infra.

6. References to Members, to the House and its parties, and to committees

Several general rules may be safely stated as to disorderly language in general. Persons not Members of the House may be freely criticized on the floor without restriction as to personalities or motive, if such reference is not irrelevant and if language used is not in itself objectionable.⁽⁷⁾ Profanity may not be voiced in debate regardless of the subject of the remarks,⁽⁸⁾ and remarks with critical racial overtones are out of order.⁽⁹⁾

The manner in which a Member addresses or seeks to address the House, regardless of his proposed remarks, is subject to a point of order under House rules.⁽¹⁰⁾

Under clause 1 of Rule XIV, Members should refrain from using profanity or vulgarity in debate; the Chair has taken the initiative against a Member's use of profanity.⁽¹¹⁾

Under a new provision of House Rule XIV clause 9(b),⁽¹²⁾ unparliamentary remarks may be deleted only by permission or order of the House.

References to State or Region

§ 43.1 A statement in debate "when this committee investigates the recent wave of police lynch murder in Mississippi . . . and in the capital itself" was held in order.

On Mar. 9, 1948,⁽¹³⁾ the following words in debate, referring to the Committee on Un-American Activities, were objected to by Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, and demanded taken down: "When this committee investigates the recent wave of police lynch murder in Mississippi, in the area of Jackson, and in the capital itself—"

Mr. Rankin based his point of order on the fact that the Member speaking was accusing Mr. Rankin's state of murder. Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, ruled that the words were not unparliamentary and that the Member speaking was merely expressing his opinion.⁽¹⁴⁾

References to Associations or Groups

§ 43.2 A statement in debate accusing a medical association of “spurious reasoning” in regard to their opposition to a bill was held in order.

On Mar. 19, 1962,⁽¹⁵⁾ a Member stated in debate, “this is an example of the spurious reasoning that the AMA has with regard to their opposition to this bill.” The words were demanded to be taken down, and Speaker Pro Tempore W. Homer Thornberry, of Texas, ruled that the words were not violative of House rules.

References to Former President

§ 43.3 It has been held in order to state “that Abraham Lincoln was a Communist.”

On Nov. 15, 1945,⁽¹⁶⁾ Mr. Andrew J. Biemiller, of Wisconsin, accused Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, of having termed Abraham Lincoln a Communist, and on being corrected by Mr. Rankin, stated “I am delighted to have the record show that there is at least one liberal in the past century that Mr. Rankin does not consider as a Communist.” Mr. Rankin then demanded that those words be taken down, but Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that they were in order.

The Speaker then responded as follows to an additional point of order by Mr. Rankin:

MR. RANKIN: Mr. Speaker, the point of order is this: That, taken in the light of his previous statements, where he [Mr. Biemiller] falsely accused me of making a statement with reference to Abraham Lincoln that was exactly opposite from what I did say, his utterance was a violation of the rules of the House.

THE SPEAKER: Even if the gentleman had given his opinion that Mr. Lincoln was a Communist, that would not have been a violation of the rules of the House.

Remarks as to Race or Class

§ 43.4 A statement in debate expressing the opinion of the Member that if he were a Negro he would avoid association with non-Negroes was held not to reflect on any Member of the House and therefore to be in order.

On Apr. 5, 1946,⁽¹⁷⁾ Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, delivered

17. 92 CONG. REC. 3229, 3230, 79th Cong. 2d Sess.

the following words in debate, in relation to an amendment denying funds to segregated schools offered by Mr. Adam C. Powell, of New York:

If I were a Negro I would want to be as black as the ace of spades, and I would not be running around here trying to play tennis on a white man's court. I would go with the other Negroes and have the best time in my life.

Mr. Powell demanded those words be taken down, but Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that the words used did not refer by name or otherwise to any Member and were in order.⁽¹⁸⁾

§ 43.5 It has been held not a breach of order to refer in debate to a class or group of persons as "Negroes," although it was claimed that a corruption of that term was used.

On Feb. 18, 1947,⁽¹⁹⁾ Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, delivered the following remarks in debate:

Now, let us turn back to this Negro witness. His name is Nowell. He lived in Detroit. He said he was born in Georgia. Now, I have lived all my life and practiced law for years in a State where we had many, many lawsuits between Negroes and whites and between Negroes themselves. I am used to cross-examining them. I know something of the way they testify, and have a fairly good way weighing testimony, and if I am any judge this Negro, Nowell, was sincere in every word he said.

Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, then considered the following point of order:

MR. [ADAM C.] POWELL [of New York]: Is it within the rules of this Congress to refer to any group of our Nation in disparaging terms?

MR. RANKIN: It is not disparaging to call them Negroes, as all respectable Negroes know.

MR. POWELL: I am addressing the Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair is not aware of the disparaging term used.

MR. POWELL: He used the term "nigger" in referring to a group.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair understood the gentleman to say "Negro."

MR. RANKIN: Mr. Speaker, I said what I always say and what I am always going to say when referring to these people.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will proceed in order.

MR. POWELL: Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair overrules the point of order.

Similarly, on Sept. 21, 1949,⁽²⁰⁾ Mr. Rankin was delivering remarks in debate against Paul Robeson, whom he termed a “Negro Communist.” Mr. Vito Marcantonio, of New York, made the following point of order:

The gentleman from Mississippi used the word “nigger.” I ask that that word be taken down and stricken from the Record inasmuch as there are two Members in this House of the Negro race, and that word reflects on them.

Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, stated that he had understood Mr. Rankin to say “Negro.” Mr. Marcantonio insisted that Mr. Rankin had said “nigger”; the Speaker ruled as follows:

The Chair holds that the remarks of the gentleman from Mississippi are not subject to a point of order. He referred to the Negro race, and they should not be ashamed of that designation.

Profanity

§ 43.6 It is a breach of order in debate to use words bordering on profanity.

On July 18, 1951,⁽¹⁾ Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled after objection had been made to the use of the word “damn” in debate:

The Chair is bound to hold that the using of words like those just used . . . or any other words bordering on profanity, is a violation of the rules of the House.

1. 97 CONG. REC. 8415, 82d Cong. 1st Sess.

§ 43.7 Use of the word “damnable” has been held in order, although the Speaker in ruling on those words found the term rather harsh and expressed the hope that his ruling would not be a precedent for further use.

On Jan. 15, 1948,⁽²⁾ Mr. Emanuel Celler, of New York, stated in reference to the remarks on Palestine of Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi:

. . . [H]e makes an aspersion upon those who, with great intrepidity and great wisdom, pioneered to set up that state, that they are inclined to be Communists or are Communists. That is a damnable statement to make.

Mr. Rankin objected to the use of the word “damnable” as a violation of House rules and of “all rules of common decency,” and Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, ruled as follows:

The Chair is not too conversant with the word “damnable” but does not find that it is banned in the rules of parliamentary procedure. The Chair thinks it is a rather harsh word.

The Chair hopes that the Members will not take this as a precedent for using the word on too many occasions.

§ 43.8 A statement that a group does “not give a damn” was held to be a violation of rules on debate.

2. 94 CONG. REC. 205, 80th Cong. 2d Sess.

On July 18, 1951,⁽³⁾ the Committee of the Whole was considering amendments to H.R. 3871, the Defense Production Act of 1950. Mr. William J. Green, Jr., of Pennsylvania, made the following remarks about an amendment offered by Mr. Wingate H. Lucas, of Texas:

. . . Certainly I have a great deal of respect and admiration for the gentleman from Texas and for the other people that support these issues, but they all remind me of the fellow who sold a blind horse to the farmer. When the horse walked into the barn the farmer said to the city slicker, "Why, that horse is blind." He said, "No, he is not blind; he just doesn't give a damn."

Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, demanded that the statement implying that a group of Members didn't give a damn be taken down, and Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled the words out of order as bordering on profanity. Mr. Green then obtained unanimous consent to withdraw the objectionable words.

Blasphemous Words

§ 43.9 The Speaker ordered allegedly blasphemous words stricken from the Record without awaiting objection by the House.

3. 97 CONG. REC. 415, 82d Cong. 1st Sess.

On Feb. 22, 1945, Mr. Frank E. Hook, of Michigan, used critical and allegedly blasphemous language in debate, directed against Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi. After some disturbance on the floor, Mr. Rankin demanded the words be taken down. Speaker Pro Tempore Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia, ruled the language a breach of order and immediately ruled the words stricken from the Record, without awaiting the objection of the House.⁽⁴⁾

Parliamentarian's Note: The exact words used were stricken and do not therefore appear in the Record. Normally the Speaker says "without objection" the offending words will be stricken from the Record since the House, not the Chair, controls the Record. Mr. Rankin claimed that Mr. Hook had referred to him as a "God damn liar" but Mr. Hook contended he had stated "you are a dirty liar." The language used precipitated a short affray on the floor, but both Mr. Hook and Mr. Rankin apologized to the House, which took no further action.⁽⁵⁾

§ 44. —Reference to Senate or to Senators

The principle of comity governs the propriety of certain references in debate to the Senate or to individual Senators.⁽⁶⁾ The basis for applying the principle of comity is drawn from Jefferson's Manual:

It is a breach of order in debate to notice what has been said on the same subject in the other House, or the particular votes or majorities on it there; because the opinion of each House should be left to its own independency, not to be influenced by the proceedings of the other; and the quoting them might beget reflections leading to a misunderstanding between the two Houses.⁽⁷⁾

6. The common definition of comity is kindly, courteous behavior or mutual consideration between equals. The term also refers to the legal principle whereby courts of one sovereignty defer to the laws of another. Webster's Third New International Dictionary, G. & C. Merriam Co. (Springfield, 1966).

7. House Rules and Manual §371 (1995).

Jefferson's Manual is a part of the standing rules of the House where not inconsistent with them. Rule XLII, House Rules and Manual §938 (1995).

In the procedure of the House of Commons, the rule has been held "not to apply to reports of committees of the other House, even though they have not been communicated to the commons, nor is the rule ex-

Although Jefferson's Manual specifically prohibits reference only as to what has been said on the same subject in the other House, the weight of precedent favors the position that Members are not allowed to refer to any debates or proceedings in the Senate, to individual Senators, or even to speeches and statements made by Senators on or off the Senate floor.⁽⁸⁾

See §§ 44.32, 44.33, infra, for the prohibition against reference to a Senator's statements outside the Senate; §44.45, infra, for the prohibition against reference to a Senator's vote on legislation; §§ 44.24, 44.25, 44.45, infra, for the prohibition against quoting Senate proceedings in the Congressional Record; and §§ 44.12, 44.16, 44.23, infra, for the prohibition against reference to Senate proceedings on propositions before the House.

Although the Vice President presides over the Senate, he is not a Member thereof, and comity does not prohibit references to the Vice President in his capacity as an executive branch official (see § 47.9, infra).

fied by a further amendment to the rules which became effective in 1989.⁽⁹⁾ Clause 1 of Rule XIV, now provides that debate may include references to actions taken by the Senate or by committees thereof which are a matter of public record, references to the pendency or sponsorship in the Senate of bills, resolutions, and amendments, factual descriptions relating to Senate action or inaction concerning a measure then under debate in the House, and quotations from Senate proceedings on a measure then under debate in the House and which are relevant to the making of legislative history establishing the meaning of that measure, but may not include characterizations of Senate action or inaction, other references to individual Members of the Senate, or other quotations from Senate proceedings.

In addition to the references now specifically permitted by the rule, there are other relevant precedents which help define the parameters of debate. While it has normally been considered a breach of order to quote from Senate proceedings in the Congressional Record, unanimous consent has been granted for the insertion in the Record of portions of remarks made in the Senate on a particular bill.⁽¹⁰⁾ Members have on occasion been permitted to refer to speeches made by Senators which appeared in newspapers, without denominating the persons quoted as Senators.⁽¹¹⁾ Where a Member is discussing a question involving conference committee procedure, he may state what occurred in the conference committee session without referring to a named Senator.⁽¹²⁾

With respect to such references to the Senate or Senators as are still prohibited, the rule is of such positive force in the House that it has always been considered the particular duty of the Speaker or the Chair to intervene in debate and to prohibit references to the Senate on his own responsibility.⁽¹³⁾

¹⁰ See § 44.24, infra.

It has been generally stated that the Senate may be referred to properly in debate if the principles of the rule of comity are not violated. See 5 Hinds' Precedents §§ 5098, 5099, 5107-5111, 5114-5120.

The rule of comity applies in the Senate, but in the enforcement of the rule much is left to the discretion of the Senators and to the Presiding Officer of the Senate.⁽¹⁴⁾ However, the extent to which the rule is enforced or not enforced in the Senate is irrelevant to its application to the House.⁽¹⁵⁾

A difficult question arises when debate or proceedings in the Senate infringe upon the privileges of the House.⁽¹⁶⁾ Where a Representative alleges that statements were made in the Senate impugning the intergrity of the House or of its Members, the proper procedure is the adoption of a resolution to be messaged to the Senate and requesting corrective action, such as expungement of remarks from the

Congressional Record.⁽¹⁷⁾ It has been held that a resolution offered in the House requesting the Senate to expunge from the Record statements in criticism of a Member of the House was in violation of the rule prohibiting references to the Senate in debate;⁽¹⁸⁾ on the other hand, a properly drafted resolution referring to language published in the Record on a designated page of Senate proceedings as constituting a breach of privilege and requesting the Senate to take appropriate action concerning the subject was considered to present a question of the privileges of the House, and, having been agreed to, was messaged to the Senate.⁽¹⁹⁾

In one instance, a Member in debate referred to a Senator’s participation, at the Member’s invitation, in meetings on the House side of the Capitol with House Members; and to the Senator’s position on issues discussed.⁽²⁾ Even in this instance, however, the Member should have been requested to avoid specific references to members of the other body.

A Member may not refer to confirmation proceedings in the Sen-

Explanations of the Rule of Comity

§ 44.1 Historically, it has been held that a Representative could not in debate comment either directly or indirectly, even for complimentary remarks, on the action, speeches, or proceedings of a Senator or of the Senate itself.

On May 31, 1946,⁽⁴⁾ Mr. Andrew J. Biemiller, of Wisconsin, cited recent remarks made on the floor of the Senate criticizing the proceedings of the House on a certain legislative measure. He inquired whether such Senate references were not a violation of the rule of comity between the two Houses.

Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, delivered the following statement and analysis:

Ever since the present occupant of the chair has held that position he has sustained the point of order each and every time it has been made when there was any reflection on a Member of the other body that might disturb the comity of the two bodies, and has even taken it upon himself on various occasions voluntarily to call the attention of Members to Jefferson's Manual, upon which we base our rules and upon which the comity of the Houses has been preserved so long.

In Cannon's Precedents, volume VIII, section 2519, we find the following:

It is not in order in debate to criticize the action of Members of the Senate in connection with their legislative duties. Members may not in debate reflect upon the actions or speeches of Senators or upon the proceedings in the Senate.

This question has been raised many times in connection with actions of individual Members of the House. The rule, I believe, is rigid and the decisions have followed along that line. An inquiry was made of one Speaker as to whether it was proper to speak of a Senator or actions of the Senate if the remarks were not critical. The then Speaker held:

The rule is that a Member of the House cannot discuss a Senator at all, not even complimenting him, because if you do compliment him somebody might jump up and say that he was the grandest rascal in the country and you would then have on your hands a debate of a very acrimonious nature.

The Chair at that time went on to say, and this is the rule that the present occupant of the chair has consistently followed and will:

The Chair is firm and he believes that the House will remain firm to our adherence to the rules of sportsmanship and comity as laid down in Jefferson's Manual.

The House of Representatives, if the Chair can control the situation, will live up to that rule of comity now and hereafter. That is the statement the Chair desires to make.

MR. [JOSEPH W.] MARTIN [Jr.] of Massachusetts: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state it.

MR. MARTIN of Massachusetts: Mr. Speaker, the statement referred to was made in the other body, therefore is [it] not before the House at all?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair cannot rule on that and the Chair made no reference to a statement made in another body. He was very careful about that.⁽⁵⁾

5. A series of important rulings and statements on comity between the Houses was made between 1930 and 1935; See 8 Cannon's Precedents §§ 2503, 2506, 2518-2520.

or to the proceedings of the Senate is to preserve harmony between the two Houses.

On Jan. 16, 1946,⁽⁶⁾ in response to a parliamentary inquiry as to whether references to the other body were proper on the floor of the House, Speaker Pro Tempore John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, stated as follows:

The Chair will state, without the response being other than a general expression of the Chair's opinion on a matter which is not before the Chair to decide at the present time, that of course under the rules of the House and under the rules of any legislative body reference to debate in another body, generally speaking, violates the rules and tends to create lack of harmony between the branches.

Mr. Reid F. Murray, of Wisconsin, then arose to inquire whether a letter that he had written to a Member of the other body could be included in an extension of remarks in the Record. The Speaker Pro Tempore informed him that a point of order could always be raised following the insertion in the Record of material that violated a House rule. Further discussion then took place:

MR. [JOSEPH W.] MARTIN, [Jr.] of Massachusetts: Mr. Speaker, I am raising this question not because of this particular instance concerning which I have no desire to enter into any discussion, but in the interest of proper observance of the rules of the House I believe we ought to have a clear-cut decision as to whether we can mention in debate the name of a person who is a Member of the other body. I understand, of course, that the Chair has not been called upon to make a rule in this particular case because no objection was raised, but I do not think the matter should be left with the understanding that, generally speaking, it would not be in order. We ought to know whether it is in order or not in case an objection is raised. . . .

MR. [JOHN E.] RANKIN [of Mississippi]: Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Martin] is right, so far as mentioning the name of a Member of the other body as a Senator. But when a man arises here and mentions the name of a distinguished citizen of a State as a candidate for President, who happens to be a Member of the other body and does not mention that fact, I doubt if he violates the rules of the House. That rule is to create and maintain comity between the two Houses. It is to prevent the criticism of Members of the other body as such on the floor of the House. The same thing applies in the Senate. However, the gentleman from Wisconsin was a little late. A while ago when some Member here mentioned the fact that the other body was not in session and referred to it in that respect, I think he violated the rules of the House. But if you merely refer to a man, a distinguished citizen of the United States who happens to be a Member of the other body and do not refer to that fact, I do not think it violates the rule.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The whole purpose of the rule, of course, is to maintain and preserve comity between the two legislative bodies, which is of paramount importance.

§ 44.3 Speaker Longworth ruled that references to the Senate or its proceedings were not in order in House debate under the principles of Jefferson's Manual, notwithstanding contrary Senate practice.

On May 16, 1930, following a point of order against reference to the proceedings of a Senate committee, Mr. Bertrand H. Snell, of New York, quoted those sections of Jefferson's Manual pertinent to the subject of comity between the two Houses. Speaker Nicholas Longworth, of Ohio, delivered a lengthy statement on the development of Senate practice and on the recent decisions in that body holding that the sections of Jefferson's Manual did not apply to the Senate and that Senators could use their own discretion in commenting or reflecting upon House speeches or House proceedings.⁽⁷⁾

7. Since the Senate has not adopted Jefferson's Manual, the rule of comity in debate has been less strictly enforced there than in the House. See §46, infra, for Senate precedents.

Speaker Longworth stated that he would nevertheless insist upon strict adherence to both the letter and the spirit of Jefferson's Manual, prohibiting reflections "in any way on the floor of the House against the actions, speeches, or proceedings of another Member [of the Senate] or of the body itself."

§ 44.4 It is a violation of the rules of parliamentary procedure to refer by name to the remarks or actions of a Senator occurring in the Senate or elsewhere, and where a Member in debate or through an insertion in the Record transgresses this rule the Speaker calls him to order under Rule XIV clause 4.

Where a Member had on a previous day made an unchallenged reference in debate and in a Record insertion to the actions of a named Senator outside of the Senate, the Speaker, in response to a parliamentary inquiry, indicated that those remarks were in violation of the rule of comity between the two Houses⁽⁸⁾ and by unanimous consent the remarks were stricken from the permanent Record. The proceedings of Oct. 7, 1975,⁽⁹⁾ were as follows:

8. See House Rules and Manual (Jefferson's Manual) §374 (1995).

9. 121 CONG. REC. 32055, 32056, 94th Cong. 1st Sess.

MR. [JAMES C.] CLEVELAND [of New Hampshire]: Mr. Speaker, I have asked for this time for the purpose of addressing the Chair so that I may make an inquiry, which will be in the nature of a parliamentary inquiry, of the Chair, in regard to the following matter:

On last April 17, at page H2884 of the Record, I was commenting on the manner in which the Senate was handling aspects of the New Hampshire Senate election, remarks were critical of the Senate and the Speaker at this time called me to order, and, quoting from the Speaker's remarks, the Speaker asked me to desist and stated that my remarks were in violation of the rules of the House and the rules of comity.

For this reason, Mr. Speaker, I wish to bring this to the attention of the Chair: I noticed on October 1 that at pages H9424–H9425 of the Record the gentleman from New York (Mr. Koch) addressed the House under the 1-minute rule and had been extremely critical of the junior Senator from New York (Mr. Buckley).

Mr. Speaker, I would like to inquire if the remarks of the gentleman from New York (Mr. Koch), like those of mine earlier in the year, are in violation of the rules of the House and the rules of comity.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁰⁾ Does the gentleman from New York (Mr. Koch) desire to be heard?

MR. [EDWARD I.] KOCH [of New York]: I do, Mr. Speaker. . . .

In Cannon's Precedents, Mr. Speaker, there is a statement that it is not in order in debate to criticize Members of the other body, but such rule does not apply to criticisms of statements made by Members of the other body outside the Chamber.

In my remarks to which the gentleman from New Hampshire (Mr. Cleveland) refers, I did discuss the remarks of a Member of the other body, the younger brother of a noted columnist. . . .

In any event, as a result of those remarks, this noted columnist, for whom I have high regard . . . took exception to my remarks in his column.

In examining the precedents, I have come to the conclusion that I ought not to have mentioned the exact name of that Member of the other body. Therefore, with the Chair's permission, I would consent to a withdrawal of that unutterable name and have substituted in each and every case where that name was mentioned a reference to the fact that I was referring to the younger brother of a noted columnist.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair is ready to rule.

The Chair will state that not only was this matter brought to his attention today, but the Chair noted the remarks of the gentleman from New York when they appeared in the Record of October 1, 1975, and anticipated that this question might arise.

The Chair has, accordingly, checked the precedents. The precedents of the House indicate that it is not in order for a Member of this body to refer to the actions or remarks of a Member of the other body occurring either within the other body or elsewhere—Speaker Rayburn, May 5, 1941. The motives of the Member making the remarks are not relevant to a determination of whether they are or are not in order, as even complimentary remarks have been held to violate the rule of comity between the two Houses—Volume VIII, 2509.

10. Carl Albert (Okla.).

Speaker Rayburn succinctly stated the reason for the rule in 1941, subsequent to the citation given by the gentleman from New York, observing that—

If there is a thing in the world that is important, it is that there be comity and good feeling between the two legislative bodies.

To allow references in one body to the actions of Members of the other, he continued:

In all probability would lead to a situation which might make ordered legislative procedure impossible. (May 5, 1941, Record, pp. 3566–3567).

The present and all previous occupants of this Chair have attempted to preserve the comity between the two Houses.

The Chair notes that the remarks in question were in part delivered from the floor of the House and in part inserted for printing in the Record. Had the Chair been aware of the content of the remarks when uttered or been informed of the contents of the matter to be inserted, he would have enforced the rule of comity at that time.

The rule of comity has clearly been violated and, without objection, the remarks of the gentleman from New York will be stricken from the Record.

There was no objection.

Parliamentarian's Note: The Rayburn ruling of May 5, 1941, to the extent that it is inconsistent with the precedent cited by Mr. Koch (5 Hinds' Precedents §5112) overruled that prior precedent and it is no longer proper to refer to a Senator's statement made outside the Senate.

§ 44.5 Although the Senate does not strictly incorporate Jefferson's Manual as a rule and is not bound by the prohibitions against reference to Members of the House, the Speaker strictly enforces the House rule on his own initiative and may deny an offending Member further recognition; thus, in anticipation of debate potentially critical of the Senate and its members, the Speaker announced his intention to strictly enforce section 374 of Jefferson's Manual prohibiting improper references to the Senate, including a denial of further recognition to offending Members subject to House permission to proceed in order.

On June 16, 1982,⁽¹¹⁾ Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr., of Massachusetts, made a statement regarding comity in debate. The proceedings were as follows:

11. 128 CONG. REC. 13843, 13873, 97th Cong. 2d Sess.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair appreciates the fact that there is an amendment that will be offered very shortly concerning the Senate.

The Chair deems it necessary to make a statement at this time to firmly establish an understanding that improper references to the other body or its Members during debate are contrary to the rules and precedents of the House and will not be tolerated. The Chair will quote from section 374 of Jefferson's Manual which is a part of the rules of the House:

It is the duty of the House, and more particularly of the Speaker, to interfere immediately, and not to permit expressions to go unnoticed which may give a ground of complaint to the other House, and introduce proceedings and mutual accusations between the two Houses, which can hardly be terminated without difficulty and disorder.

Traditionally when a Member inadvertently transgresses this rule of the House, the Chair upon calling the Member to order prevails upon that Member to remove the offending remarks from the Record. With the advent of television, however, the Chair is not certain that such a remedy is sufficient. Henceforth, where a Member's references to the other body are contrary to the important principle of comity stated in Jefferson's Manual, the Chair may immediately deny further recognition to that Member at that point in the debate subject to permission of the House to proceed in order. The Chair requests all Members to abide by this rule in order to avoid embarrassment to themselves and to the House.

MR. [SILVIO O.] CONTE [of Massachusetts]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state it.

MR. CONTE: Mr. Speaker, in order to abide by the rules, which are very difficult, does the Senate have the same rule? Does the other body?

THE SPEAKER: No; the Senate does not have the same rule, but it is a rule of our House and we are going to abide by it as long as I am Speaker.

MR. CONTE: Is it permissible to refer to them as "the other body"?

THE SPEAKER: That is permissible, the other body. . . .

MR. [DAVID R.] OBEY [of Wisconsin]: If the gentleman will yield on that point, I do not want to behave like the other body. I am fed up with Members of the other body posing for holy pictures on congressional pay and then running around, collecting $60,000 in outside income.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair is constrained to admonish the body, in accordance with the warning of the Speaker earlier, that the Members should be careful in their references to the other body.

—Criticism of the Idea of "Comity"

§ 44.6 A Member took the floor to advocate a change in that provision of House rules contained in Jefferson's Manual prohibiting references to actions of the Senate and to Senators.

The following remarks were made in the House on Dec. 20, 1985:⁽¹²⁾

(Mr. Frank asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

MR. [BARNEY] FRANK [of Massachusetts]: . . . A couple of hundred years ago there was a proposal that said the Houses ought not to comment on each other. It has become very clear that it has become difficult to transact business and impossible to transmit intelligent information while we have that constraint.

So I hope that in the session that begins in 1987 we will change that archaic rule and we will be able in the House and Senate to talk about each other and to stop this pretense that each is off on some other planet somewhere uninfluenced by and uninfluenceable by the other.

Role of the Speaker

§ 44.7 It is the duty of the Chair to interrupt a Member in debate when the Member proposes to refer to the opinions or statements of Senators or to Senate proceedings in violation of the rules.

On May 25, 1937,⁽¹³⁾ when a Member proposed to read a letter from a member of the Senate in

12. 131 CONG. REC. 38731, 38732, 99th Cong. 1st Sess.

13. 81 CONG. REC. 5013, 75th Cong. 1st Sess.

Committee of the Whole, Chairman John J. O'Connor, of New York, on his own responsibility called him to order for reading a letter from a member of the other body.

Similarly, on Apr. 18, 1939,⁽¹⁴⁾ when a Member referred to the action of the Senate on a particular appropriation bill then before the House, Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, stated as follows:

The Chair desires to call the attention of the gentleman from Pennsylvania to the fact that under the rules of the House he is not permitted to refer to any action taken in the Senate of the United States.⁽¹⁵⁾

Announcements as to Enforcement of Rule of Comity

§ 44.8 The Speaker has on occasion addressed the House in relation to violations of the rule prohibiting references to the Senate in debate, and has stated his intention to prevent violations thereof.

14. 84 CONG. REC. 4404, 76th Cong. 1st Sess.

15. "[I]t is the duty of the House, and more particularly of the Speaker, to interfere immediately, and not to permit expressions to go unnoticed which may give a ground of complaint to the other House. . . ." Jefferson's Manual, House Rules and Manual §374 (1995).

On May 5, 1941,⁽¹⁶⁾ following a ruling by Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, on a violation of the House rules, whereby a Member inserted in his extension of remarks in the Congressional Record critical references to the speeches of a Senator made off the floor of the House, the Speaker addressed the House on the unprecedented frequency with which the particular rule was being violated in the 77th Congress. The Speaker stated that thereafter he would on his own initiative call the attention of Members to violations of the provision.

Again, on Jan. 17, 1955,⁽¹⁷⁾ Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, made the following announcement:

The Chair desires to make this statement at the beginning of this session with reference to something that has been maintained by every Speaker of the House since the present occupant of the Chair has been a Member of this body, and that is that the House of Representatives, regardless of what any other body or any other individual does, has maintained strictly those rules and regulations which protect and perpetuate the comity between the two Houses. And when any Member of this House rises to make remarks about what has happened in another body or about any individual in that body, the present occupant of the Chair will certainly see that the rules of the House and the rules of comity between the two Houses are enforced.

On Mar. 26, 1964,⁽¹⁸⁾ after ruling on a point of order based on House references to the Senate, Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, made the following announcement:

The Chair is going to be very strict in the future with relation to references to speeches made in the other body or to references to Members of the other body. The Chair feels at this time it might be well to read the rule of the House covering this subject:

It is a breach of order in debate to notice what has been said on the same subject in the other House, or the particular votes or majorities on it there; because the opinion of each House should be left to its own independency, not to be influenced by the proceedings of the other; and the quoting them might beget reflections leading to a misunderstanding between the two Houses.⁽¹⁹⁾

Comment on Senate Proceedings Critical of House

§ 44.9 A Member may not in debate comment on Senate proceedings impugning the integrity of the House, the proper procedure being the introduction of a resolution requesting corrective action by the Senate.

On May 11, 1932,⁽²⁰⁾ Mr. Fred A. Britten, of Illinois, stated his intention in the Committee of the Whole (which was considering H.J. Res. 149) to read from the Congressional Record proceedings in the Senate which impugned the honesty of purpose of every Member of the House. Mr. Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, arose to make the point of order that “in order to preserve the friendliness and the amity and the comity that exists and should exist between the two Houses of Congress, it has always been the rule that no criticism or censure could be made from this floor concerning any Member of the body in the other end of the Capitol.”

Chairman Gordon Browning, of Tennessee, ruled that Mr. Britten could neither quote from the Congressional Record nor quote from newspaper reports of Senate speeches or proceedings. The Chairman referred to the precedent of May 6, 1930, wherein Speaker Nicholas Longworth, of Ohio, had held that a Member could not reflect in any way in debate on the floor of the House on the actions, speeches, or proceedings of a Senator, or of the Senate itself.⁽¹⁾

20. 75 CONG. REC. 10019, 72d Cong. 1st Sess.

Mr. Britten appealed the Chairman’s decision, but withdrew his appeal after William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, then Speaker of the House, was granted five minutes’ time. Mr. Bankhead supported the Chairman’s ruling and alluded to the “very elaborate and very learned, and in my opinion very correct” ruling of Speaker Longworth. Mr. Bankhead added that when the Committee of the Whole rose Mr. Britten could raise his question of privilege by introducing a resolution to be sent to the Senate asking that any language impugning the House or its Members be corrected.

Comment on Conference Proceedings

§ 44.10 It is in order in debate while discussing a question involving conference committee procedures to state what occurred in a conference committee session, without referring to a named Senator.

On July 29, 1935,⁽²⁾ Mr. John G. Cooper, of Ohio, was discussing

1. For the exhaustive opinion of Speaker Longworth on May 6, 1930, see 8 Cannon’s Precedents §2518.
2. 79 CONG. REC. 12011, 74th Cong. 1st Sess.

the procedure followed at a conference committee and stated:

Mr. Speaker, I apologize, but I will say that the Senator, who is chairman of the conference committee, stated to us that if Mr. Cohen could not sit in at the conference there would be no conference.

He further said:

I doubt if I know enough about the bill to give it an intelligent discussion unless Mr. Cohen sits in here with me.

Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, made a point of order against Mr. Cooper's remarks on the ground that he had "no right to criticize Members of the Senate on the floor of the House, whether he calls them by name or not. This tirade against the Senate is in violation of the rules of the House."

Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, ruled as follows:

The rule provides that Members shall not criticize a Member of the other body in a discussion on the floor. As the Chair understands the gentleman, he is not referring to a Senator by name, but stating what occurred in the conference committee.

Comment on Senate Proceedings on Measure Pending in House

§ 44.11 Under the old rule, it was not in order in debate to quote Senate proceedings on a bill or resolution then before the House.

On Aug. 24, 1935,⁽³⁾ while the House was considering Senate Joint Resolution 175, amending the Independent Offices Appropriation Act of 1934, Mr. Schuyler Otis Bland, of Virginia, quoted from Senate debate on the joint resolution:

. . . Then Senator Black says about his resolution:

I am not trying to throw this matter into a state of chaos.

Mr. Edward C. Moran, Jr., of Maine, made the point of order that Mr. Bland was quoting from Senate proceedings and Mr. Bland responded:

For heaven's sake, has the Senate gotten to the place where its Senators cannot be quoted, and Senator Black, the great apostle of these gentlemen, cannot have his views presented for your consideration?

Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, ruled as follows:

The Chair reads from Jefferson's Manual, as follows:

It is a breach of order in debate to notice what has been said on the same subject in the other House, or the particular votes or majorities on it there; because the opinion of each House should be left to its own independency, not to be influenced by the proceedings of the other; and the quoting them might beget reflections leading to a misunderstanding between the two Houses.

3. 79 CONG. REC. 14599, 74th Cong. 1st Sess.

MR. BLAND: I beg the Chair's pardon.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair is of the opinion that the point of order is well taken. The gentleman from Virginia will proceed in order.⁽⁴⁾

§ 44.12 Although it is a breach of order in House debate to quote from Senate debate, Members may by unanimous consent insert in the Record Senate remarks on bills pending before the House.

On May 23, 1968,⁽⁵⁾ during consideration of H.R. 8578, amending the Land and Water Conservation Act of 1965, Mr. Hale Boggs, of Louisiana, asked unanimous consent that the Senate debate on a certain amendment to the bill be printed in the Record. No objection was heard, and a lengthy excerpt from Senate proceedings of April 23, 1968, was inserted.⁽⁶⁾

4. For the provisions cited by the Speaker, see Jefferson's Manual, House Rules and Manual §371 (1995). See Rule XIV clause 1, House Rules and Manual §749 (1995), for current rule on Senate references.
5. 114 CONG. REC. 14640-51, 90th Cong. 2d Sess.
6. Senate practice is similar, unanimous consent being required to refer to House proceedings on a proposition then before the Senate (see §46.6, infra).

§ 44.13 As provided in Jefferson's Manual,⁽⁷⁾ it is a breach of order in debate to notice what has been said on the same subject in the Senate, or to refer to particular Senators.

On Oct. 21, 1981,⁽⁸⁾ during consideration of the Food and Agriculture Act of 1981 (H.R. 3603) in the Committee of the Whole, the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [ROBERT N.] SHAMANSKY [of Ohio]: I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to quote from Senator Hatfield, from the Congressional Record of September 17, 1981—

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁹⁾ The Chair will advise the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Shamansky) that it is not in order to quote from the proceedings of the other body. . . .

MR. [JOEL] PRITCHARD [of Washington]: That is an excellent question and I intend to address that very question with the rest of my remarks.

7. See House Rules and Manual §§371, 372 (1995). Following changes made in Rule XIV clause 1 beginning in 1987, the quote from Senate proceedings would be considered permissible, as helping to illuminate the legislative history of the bill under consideration in the House. See House Rules and Manual §749 (1995).
8. 127 CONG. REC. 24748, 24753, 97th Cong. 1st Sess.
9. Matthew F. McHugh (N.Y.).

First of all, let us remember where this bill is going to go. It is going to go to conference committee. And the gentleman from North Carolina in the other body is the chairman of the Senate delegation.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair will advise the gentleman that reference to a particular Member of the other body is not in order.

§ 44.14 Under clause 1 of Rule XIV, the range of permissible references in debate to the Senate does not extend to characterizations of Senate actions or to votes of individual Senators; thus, the Chair sustained a point of order against remarks in debate to the effect that certain Senators had, by their votes in that body, given an imprimatur of reasonableness to a particular position.

On Nov. 2, 1989,⁽¹⁰⁾ during consideration of House Concurrent Resolution 221 (supporting Central American peace and democracy) in the House, the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [HENRY J.] HYDE [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, the distinguished chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee feels that there has been an agreement. . . .

We have a consensus document and the chairman with great diplomacy, wants to get a document that everybody can support. I do not object to our resolution. It is an adequate resolution, but it lacks substance. It is more cotton candy than T-bone steak.

10. 135 CONG. REC. 26918, 26919, 101st Cong. 1st Sess.

The Senate, on the other hand, the other body, passed a real resolution that is awfully tough. I would like the opportunity to vote for the Senate language rather than our rather pastel, pallid, accurate-as-far-as-it-goes but mild resolution.

Now first of all I would be interested to see how the gentleman on the other side could not vote for something because it is too abrasive when it is supported by both of the distinguished Senators from California, both of the distinguished Senators from Ohio, both of the distinguished Senators from Connecticut, the majority leader, the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee in the other body. It would seem to me that would qualify it, having their imprimatur, to get the support from everybody in this Chamber.

MR. [TED] WEISS [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, I have a point of order. . . .

Mr. Speaker, is it in order discussing what went on in the Senate and what the motivations were of the people in the Senate? . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹¹⁾ The gentleman may report the general collective action taken by the other body, but may not characterize the votes of individual Senators as good or bad.

—Senators as Sponsors of Legislation

§ 44.15 Under clause 1 of Rule XIV, debate ordinarily may include references to individual Senators only to identify them as sponsors of legislation; the range of permissible references to the Senate does not extend to the opinions or policy positions of individual Senators.

11. Jim McDermott (Wash.).

The following proceedings occurred in the House on July 12, 1990:⁽¹²⁾

MR. [NEWT] GINGRICH [of Georgia]: Mr. Speaker, it is outrageous for the Senate Democratic leader to publicly demand higher taxes and a massive 25-percent increase in the income tax top rate. The Senate Democratic leader is threatening to destroy the budget summit.

Mr. Speaker, Senator Mitchell does not attend summit meetings. He publicly demands tax increases. Senator Mitchell does not offer serious budget reforms. He publicly demands tax increases. Senator Mitchell does not offer spending cuts.

MR. [HAROLD L.] VOLKMER [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, I ask that the words of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Gingrich] be taken down.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹³⁾ The Chair will merely caution the gentleman from Georgia that such references to Members of the other body are not in order. . . .

MR. GINGRICH: I would inquire of the Speaker, if it is in reference to a public newspaper account of public activity by a political leader, and I believe in this House we have a remarkably wide range of free speech, and this is not a reference to any action by the Senator of Maine in the Senate.

THE SPEAKER: Under clause 1, rule XIV, it is an improper reference to a Member of the other body. . . .

MR. GINGRICH: . . . Would the Speaker, and I am not trying to play games with the Speaker, would the Speaker simply instruct the gentleman what precisely are the ground rules for discussing publicly the activities of the Democratic leader of the other body when they appear in public and not in the other body? . . .

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will remind the gentleman of clause 1 of rule XIV which states that when any member desires to speak or deliver any matter to the House:

He shall rise and respectfully address himself, Mr. Speaker, and on being recognized may address the House from any place on the floor or from the Clerk's desk, and he shall confine himself to the question under debate, avoiding personality. Debate may include references to actions taken by the Senate or by committees thereof, which are a matter of public record, references to the pendency or sponsorship of Senate bills, resolutions or amendment, factual description relating to Senate action or inaction concerning those then under debate in the House and questions from Senate proceedings on a measure then under debate in the House and which are relevant to the making of legislative history establishing the meaning of that measure, but may not include characteristics of Senate action or inaction, other references to individual Members of the Senate or other quotations from Senate proceedings.

Parliamentarian's Note: As indicated above, in the House, the Chair takes the initiative in calling to order a Member for making unparliamentary references to the Senate or its members.⁽¹⁴⁾

Critical or Derogatory References to Senators

§ 44.16 The Speaker held out of order a statement on a pending bill “[i]f Senators in a moment of aberration approve such language, I do not approve. . . .”

On Jan. 29, 1946,⁽¹⁵⁾ the Committee of the Whole was considering H.R. 4437, to return public employment offices to state operation. Mr. Everett M. Dirksen, of Illinois, offered an amendment, which was opposed by Mr. Emanuel Celler, of New York. Mr. Dirksen informed him that the language of the amendment had been approved by two Senators, whom he named, and Mr. Celler responded “[i]f Senators in a moment of aberration approve such language, I do not approve. . . .”

The words were taken down in the House on the demand of Mr.

John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, and stricken from the Record, after Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled the language “unparliamentary in referring to the action of the membership in another body.”

§ 44.17 It is a violation of the rule of comity to criticize in debate the actions of a Senator with regard to legislation, and it is the duty of the Chair to call to order a Member who violates the rule.

During consideration of the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act of 1979 (H.R. 39) in the Committee of the Whole on May 15, 1979,⁽¹⁶⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [MORRIS K.] UDALL [of Arizona]: I just want to put it in the record. I do not think it has much to do with what we are doing today, but on May 8 the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Seiberling), on page H2851, tells this whole story chapter and verse. I want to endorse what he said. It is a different ball game. It is akin to being in a poker game 10 minutes to midnight and I have a pair of deuces, and my opponent says, “I will split the pot with you.” Time is about to run out.

Under this December 18 deadline we made a deal, the best deal we could make. Then, some guy named Gravel comes on and the chips are all over the floor. Then, we decide to play until 3 o'clock and we redeal the cards and we find that we do not have that situation in our hand and nobody asks to split the pot. We want a strong bill. That was a pretty lousy compromise. I made it and I would have fought for it on the floor, but it was upset by the Senator from Alaska and it has no status here today.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁷⁾ The Chair would simply point out that references to actions taken in the other body are contrary to the rules of the House.⁽¹⁸⁾

§ 44.18 It is a breach of order under clause 1 of Rule XIV to characterize Senate action or inaction, such as mocking the resolve, courage or conviction of the Senate or referring to that body as “jello”.

Speaker Thomas S. Foley, of Washington, made an announcement regarding comity between the House and Senate following certain remarks made in debate in the House on Aug. 4, 1989.⁽¹⁹⁾ The proceedings were as follows:

MR. [BARNEY] FRANK [of Massachusetts]: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for 1 minute.

17. Paul Simon (Ill.).

18. See Jefferson's Manual, section 371. Mr. Udall subsequently revised his remarks to delete the references to Senator Gravel.

19. 135 CONG. REC. 19314, 19315, 101st Cong. 1st Sess.

THE SPEAKER: Without objection, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Frank) is recognized for 1 minute. . . .

MR. FRANK: I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, having consulted with the very distinguished and objective parliamentarians and with the Speaker, on reflection it did seem to me that my comparison of the U.S. Senate to Jell-O was not totally in keeping with the traditions of this institution and I thought it would be appropriate for me to indicate that fact to the House.

MR. [DENNIS E.] ECKART [of Ohio]: Continuing my reservation of objection on this matter, Mr. Speaker, perhaps the gentleman should offer his apology to General Foods.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

THE SPEAKER: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

There was no objection.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Frank) is recognized for 1 minute.

MR. FRANK: Mr. Speaker, as I said in foolish answer to the gentleman from Ohio, while I was not enthralled with the performance of our constitutional equal, the U.S. Senate, my comparison to them as Jell-O did not seem to me, on sober second thought, to be entirely appropriate, and I therefore apologize.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will take this occasion to state that the Chair appreciates the good humor of debate, but the Chair also believes that all Members should observe the rules of comity with respect to the other body. I am glad the gentleman from Massachusetts has made his statement.

§ 44.19 It is a violation of the rule of comity as expressed in section 374 of Jefferson's Manual, to read into the Record critical references to members of the Senate, even if the criticism was stated in a letter written by a non-Member.

During consideration of the Civil Rights Commission Act of 1983 (H.R. 2230) in the Committee of the Whole on Aug. 4, 1983,⁽²⁰⁾ the Chair admonished the Committee that references to either the other body or members thereof were not in order:

MR. [F. JAMES] SENSENBRENNER [Jr., of Wisconsin]: . . . I have in my possession a letter dated July 15 from Albert Shanker, president of the American Federation of Teachers, AFL-CIO, to Senator Biden which states in part:

Rarely have I been as outraged at the behavior of a fellow Democrat as I was watching you on the evening news Wednesday. Your performance at the Senate Judiciary Committee hearings on the Civil Rights commission nominees may as well have been bought, paid for and delivered by the Republican National Committee. Do you really believe, Senator Biden, that Democrats or fair minded people anywhere are going to think you a fit representative for telling the nation that you've made up your mind how you're going to vote on a nomination before you've heard one word of testimony from the nominees? . . .

Your anti-quota and anti-busing rhetoric at the hearing will not mask your action on these nominations. I can imagine no finer candidates for the Civil Rights Commission than Morris Abram, John Bunzel and Robert Destro . . .

Senator Biden, you have before your committee four excellent nominees with impeccable civil rights credentials. You will irreparably harm yourself and other Democrats next year if you insist on obstructing action on these nominees. You give Ronald Reagan an excellent issue on which to run next year if you and your colleagues insist on protecting the pro-quotas, pro-busing interests and attacking staunch civil rights veterans like Abram, Bunzel, Destro and Chavez. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁾ Before recognizing another Member to speak, the Chair would like to make a statement.

Regardless of the effect that pending legislation may have on proceedings in the other body, reference to actions or proceedings in that body or remarks critical of Members of that body are not in order under the rules and precedents of the House.

§ 44.20 It is a breach of order in debate to refer to the motives of the Senate or Senators in passing certain legislation; nor is it in order to read from the Congressional Record as to specific actions taken in the Senate on legislative issues.

1. Morris K. Udall (Ariz.).

20. 129 CONG. REC. 23135, 23136, 23145, 98th Cong. 1st Sess.

On Oct. 17, 1985,⁽²⁾ the Chair took the initiative to admonish a Member against references to the Senate or Senators. The proceedings were as follows:

MR. [MIKE] LOWRY of Washington: Mr. Speaker, with all due respect to my well-meaning friends, what the Gramm/Rudman movement over in the other body really did was simply provide a way by which at least 30-some Senators can get past the next election without having to face the tough proposition of how you really cut the budget. That was proven.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽³⁾ The Chair would advise the gentleman that it is against the rules of the House to refer to the motives of the other body or its Members.

MR. LOWRY of Washington: Mr. Speaker, I would not even consider inferring the motives of the other body.

Mr. Speaker, what I would like to do is read the record of the other body of the day after the Gramm-Rudman passed and they voted specifically on the items not to cut the budget.

On the Bradley amendment to cut the defense budget—

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will advise the gentleman that he must not refer to actions of the other body in that way.

§ 44.21 The Chair admonished a Member during debate not to refer to a Senator in a critical manner although not identified by name.

2. 131 CONG. REC. 27772, 99th Cong. 1st Sess.
3. Howard E. Wolpe (Mich.).

On Dec. 18, 1985,⁽⁴⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House:

MR. [FERNAND J.] ST GERMAIN [of Rhode Island]: . . . Mr. Speaker, as the gentleman from Pennsylvania is a member of our Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs, I would like to state that it has come to my attention that the other body has placed in the continuing resolution some special legislation for special people. There is a Member of the other body who, in 1983, fought tooth and nail to prevent a housing bill from being adopted in the Congress.

Again this year, Members will recall we put our housing bill into reconciliation. Once again, the same individual Member of the other body is saying, "No, no, no." He is using parliamentary chicanery to deny the people of this Nation safe, decent, sanitary housing.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁵⁾ The gentleman should not refer to the other body and he is skirting very closely on offensive language.

§ 44.22 It is not in order under clause 1 of Rule XIV to cast reflections on remarks made by a Senator, occurring in the Senate or elsewhere, even if the Senator is not identified by name.

On Feb. 23, 1994,⁽⁶⁾ a Member in debate criticized remarks made by a Senator, by referring to the Senator as “a person who resides in the State of South Carolina.”

4. 131 CONG. REC. 37813, 37814, 99th Cong. 1st Sess.

MR. [KWEISI] MFUME [of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, I rise today to offer a friendly amendment to the amendment in hopes of bringing balance and substance to this debate and to this issue of repudiation that go directly to the heart of remarks made by a gentleman of the other body. . . .

MR. [CHARLES B.] RANGEL [of New York]: I am trying to find out from the author of this amendment how could it be related to this amendment and whether it is inviting, whether it has been distributed, what it is that you bring before this House at this time. . . .

MR. MFUME: The amendment that I had hoped to offer was an amendment that would have brought balance to this debate in which all of us have a sense of outrage and revulsion at remarks that were made at Kean College, but many of us also have a sense of outrage and revulsion at remarks made by a Member of the other body recently in which black people were referred to as darkies, Hispanics were referred to as wetbacks, and Africans were referred to as cannibals. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁷⁾ The Chair would like to remind the gentleman in the well that he cannot refer to Members of the other body and statements made by that Member of the other body.

MR. MFUME: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of the Chair. Is the Chair tell-

Res. 343, expressing the Sense of Congress on the Senior Representative of the Nation of Islam.

7. Robert G. Torricelli (N.J.).

ing me that I cannot say or make mention of a Member of the other body as long as I do not use that person's name?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman, under the rules, cannot refer to statements made by the Members of the other body.

MR. MFUME: If I could ask further, may I have permission to refer to statements made from someone from South Carolina?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: If that is a Member from the other body, the gentleman cannot do that.

MR. MFUME: With all due respect, there are many people from South Carolina. I am not necessarily mentioning a Member of the other body but a resident of the State of South Carolina.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman would proceed in order at the Chair's request.

Similarly, on June 30, 1995,⁽⁸⁾ the Chair addressed the issue of references to Senators (as well as to the President), in response to remarks made by Mr. Robert K. Dornan, of California:

MR. DORNAN: I am going to get justice here. I am going to get justice for all the Vietnamese who were tortured to death in those so-called reeducation concentration camps. . . .

I will tell you this: This ex-member here, now a Senator, is from a Bible Belt State. . . .

I will tell you, if you are from Iowa, you know most of this material. I cannot believe what you have sent to represent your country. I hope you enjoy your Fourth of July in Iowa and New Hampshire, because you are going to have U.S. Senators and, God forbid, the three House Members from the minority, one of them a distinguished Army captain from the D-Day period. I hope they are not toasting the terrorists and the Communist victors who brought such human rights abuse and grief to all of Southeast Asia. . . .

8. 141 CONG. REC. p. ____, 104th Cong. 1st Sess.

I am going to go over with the parliamentarians how I can recoup my honor from January 25 of this year, when I used the expression "aid and comfort to the enemy." I know it is in the Constitution. I know there is a technicality when war is not declared. But I am going to discuss every dictionary definition, British and American, of aid, of comfort and of what constitutes an enemy. . . .

When I tell you that Clinton gave aid and comfort to the enemy in Hanoi by his Moscow trip and his demonstrations in London, where they were called the fall offensive, so named by the same Communists in Hanoi that will be toasting Americans today—

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁹⁾ The Chair would caution the Member to be very cautious of any statements about the President of the United States. . . .

The Chair would like to also point out for the Record something that the Representative does know, just to remind him, that personal references to members of the other body, even though not mentioned by name, when it is very clear to whom the references are made, should be avoided, and this is something that had been mentioned on February 23, 1994, by the Chair.

9. Constance A. Morella (Md.).

Reading Senate Proceedings From the Record

§ 44.23 It is not in order in debate to read from the Record statements made in the Senate or Senate proceedings which are not related to a pending measure in the House.

On Aug. 24, 1935,⁽¹⁰⁾ the following exchange and ruling by Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, took place:

MR. [SCHUYLER OTIS] BLAND [of Virginia]: . . . Then Senator Black says about his resolution:

I am not trying to throw this matter into a state of chaos.⁽¹¹⁾

MR. [EDWARD C.] MORAN [Jr., of Maine]: Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the present speaker is quoting from the Senate proceedings.

MR. BLAND: For heaven's sake, has the Senate gotten to the place where its Senators cannot be quoted, and Senator Black, the great apostle of these gentlemen, cannot have his views presented for your consideration?

MR. MORAN: Mr. Speaker, I ask for a ruling on the point of order.

10. 79 CONG. REC. 14599, 74th Cong. 1st Sess.

11. The resolution under discussion was S.J. Res. 175, amending the Independent Offices Appropriation Act of 1934.

MR. [JOHN J.] O'CONNOR [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, I understand the gentleman is reading from the Congressional Record.

MR. BLAND: Yes.

MR. O'CONNOR: And is not referring to a Senator in any disparaging manner.

MR. BLAND: Not in the slightest—I am commending him.

MR. MORAN: If the Speaker will refer to the discussion of the Bland bill upon the floor of the House, he will find that the same point of order was made against me—that is how I recall it—and the point of order was sustained.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair reads from Jefferson's Manual, as follows:

It is a breach of order in debate to notice what has been said on the same subject in the other House, or the particular votes or majorities on it there; because the opinion of each House should be left to its own independency, not to be influenced by the proceedings of the other; and the quoting them might beget reflections leading to a misunderstanding between the two Houses.

MR. BLAND: I beg the Chair's pardon.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair is of the opinion that the point of order is well taken. The gentleman from Virginia will proceed in order.

§ 44.24 Although in certain circumstances it is a breach of order to refer to Senate debate, on one occasion a Member by unanimous consent secured permission to include in the Record portions of remarks made in the Senate.

On May 23, 1968,⁽¹²⁾ during consideration of H.R. 8578, amending the Land and Water Conservation Act of 1965, Mr. Hale Boggs, of Louisiana, asked unanimous consent that the Senate debate on a certain amendment be printed in the Record. No objection was heard, and a lengthy excerpt from Senate proceedings of Apr. 23, 1968, was inserted.⁽¹³⁾

§ 44.25 On one occasion, the Speaker declined to rule on a point of order directed against a critical reference to the views of a Senator, expressed in a speech on the Senate floor, and, after noting the applicable rule, permitted the Member to proceed in order.

On Mar. 26, 1964,⁽¹⁴⁾ while making a one-minute speech in the House, Mr. Louis C. Wyman, of New Hampshire, expressed his disagreement with remarks of the Chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations made

12. 114 CONG. REC. 14640-51, 90th Cong. 2d Sess.

13. Insertions in the Record, see Ch. 5, supra. Under the more liberal practice beginning in the 100th Congress, such references, if related to a measure then pending in the House, would be permitted.

14. 110 CONG. REC. 6361, 6362, 88th Cong. 2d Sess.

on the Senate floor on the preceding day. A point of order was made against reference to a member of the other body and the following exchange took place:

MR. WYMAN: Mr. Speaker, I want to express myself as being in wholehearted disagreement with the amazing, incredible, and dismaying remarks regarding American foreign policy of the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee made on the Senate floor yesterday wherein he has indicated in regard to Cuba that Castro is here to stay; that we will not fight to oust him because it is not worth it, and has implied that such a policy is called "daring thinking" for America, a policy I might say that invites surrender on the installment plan of the rest of the free world to communism bit by bit and piece by piece.

May the Lord help us should this sort of policy be in effect—

MR. [KEN] HECHLER [of West Virginia]: Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

THE SPEAKER: ⁽¹⁵⁾ The gentleman will state it.

MR. HECHLER: Mr. Speaker, the gentleman's remarks are directed to a Member of the other body, which is a violation of the rules of the House.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will say that under the rules no Member may refer to a Member of the other body, or to a speech another Member has made in that body.

The gentleman from New Hampshire will proceed in order.

MR. WYMAN: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state it.

MR. WYMAN: Mr. Speaker, I had no intention to violate the rules of the House. The speech is a matter of record. It was made by the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate, and I do not know how I could refer to it otherwise. The speech is in the Record, and it is before us at our seats.

May I inquire as to how I may now properly refer to the speech and disassociate myself from its views without referring to its author?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair has stated what the rules of the House are. The Chair did not use the word "violate." The Chair did not go that far. The Chair simply says reference to a Member of the other body is not proper, and is not consistent with the rules of the House. The gentleman was recognized to proceed in order.

MR. WYMAN: Mr. Speaker, I will, of course, accord with the rule and I will therefore refer only to prominently publicized remarks appearing on the front pages of the Nation's newspapers of last night and this morning.

Indirect Reference to the Senate

§ 44.26 It has been held that the restriction against certain references to "the Senate" applies equally to comments critical of "the other body" or members thereof.

On Feb. 17, 1936,⁽¹⁶⁾ Mr. Harold Knutson, of Minnesota, on the floor delivered the following remarks:

^{16.} 80 CONG. REC. 2218, 74th Cong. 2d Sess.

^{15.} John W. McCormack (Mass.).

. . . A very remarkable address was delivered in another body a week ago today that I feel should not go unanswered. In that address the speaker virtually served notice on Japan that if the Japanese do not live up to the obligations which she has assumed in certain treaties this country would go to considerable lengths to compel her to do so. In view of the fact that the speaker to whom I have reference occupies a position unusually close to the administration, I am wondering whether he spoke by the card.

In response to a point of order, Mr. Knutson stated that he did not mention the Senate but simply some remarks that had been made in another body. Speaker Pro Tempore John J. McSwain, of South Carolina, ruled as follows:

The Chair sustains the point of order. The implication is plain that the reference is to the Senate of the United States. The point of order is sustained. The gentleman will please proceed in order.

On May 19, 1948,⁽¹⁷⁾ Mr. Herman P. Eberharter, of Pennsylvania, referred to inaction of "the other body" on H.R. 5852, the subversive activities control bill of 1948. A point of order was made against the reference to the Senate, and Chairman James W.

17. 94 CONG. REC. 6112, 80th Cong. 2d Sess.

Wadsworth, Jr., of New York, ruled that the point of order was well taken and that Mr. Eberharter must proceed in order. Mr. Eberharter stated as follows:

Mr. Chairman, it is my understanding under the rules of the House that a Member of the House is not permitted to refer to the Senate of the United States and is not permitted to refer to any Senator by name. However, it is my understanding, and I think it has been so ruled on many occasions, that it is perfectly within the rules of the House to refer to the other branch of the Congress as "the other Body." I did not mention the word "Senate," Mr. Chairman, nor did I mention the name of any Senator. I submit that the point of order is not well taken, and I hope the Chairman will so rule.

The Chairman then called the attention of Mr. Eberharter to the provision on the subject in Jefferson's Manual and directed Mr. Eberharter to proceed in order.

§ 44.27 A Senator may not be referred to, even indirectly, in debate on the floor of the House.

On Mar. 24, 1961,⁽¹⁸⁾ a point of order was made against remarks in debate by Mr. Neal Smith, of Iowa, who referred indirectly to the Goldwater Department Store in Arizona, in an apparent reference to Senator Barry M. Goldwater, of Arizona. Mr. Smith stated that “some people call it the Goldwater-Ayres Bill because it is an example of exempting multi-million dollar stores in Arizona.” The Committee of the Whole rose and the objectionable words were reported to the House where they were ordered stricken from the record, after Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that a reference to a member of the other body by name is a violation of the rules of the House. Mr. John H. Dent, of Pennsylvania, then raised a parliamentary inquiry:

18. 107 CONG. REC. 4780, 87th Cong. 1st Sess.

If a trade name or the name of a product bears the same name as a Member of the Senate, are we forbidden from mentioning that particular product or chain or store, or whatever the item may be?

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁹⁾ The Chair will pass on that question when it arises. The Chair may say that the gentleman’s inquiry is not a parliamentary inquiry.

§ 44.28 A Member may not in debate refer to a Senator indirectly by the use of the term “senior Senator” from a particular state.

On May 2, 1941,⁽²⁰⁾ after Speaker Pro Tempore Fadjo Cravens, of

19. Eugene J. Keogh (N.Y.).

20. 87 CONG. REC. 3536, 3537, 77th Cong. 1st Sess.

Arkansas, ruled out of order a reference to a Senator, he stated in response to a parliamentary inquiry that such reference would not be corrected by referring to the Senator as the senior Senator from a state. He stated that a Member could not do indirectly what he could not do directly.

Complimentary References to Named Senator

§ 44.29 It is not in order in debate in the House to refer to a Senator by name, even in a complimentary way.

On Mar. 24, 1961,⁽¹⁾ Mr. James Roosevelt, of California, inquired of Chairman Eugene J. Keogh, of New York:

Mr. Chairman, do I correctly understand that the rules of the House do not prevent a Member from mentioning a Senator’s name as long as he does not mention it in a derogatory manner?

Chairman Keogh ruled:

It is the understanding of the Chair that under the rules of the House, the name of a Member of the other body may not be mentioned in any fashion.

The Speaker of the House and the presiding Chairman of the Committee of the Whole have so ruled on numerous occasions.⁽²⁾

1. 107 CONG. REC. 4780, 87th Cong. 1st Sess.

2. For a discussion of the prohibition against naming a Senator, see § 44.2, § 44.30 It is in violation of Jefferson's Manual to quote from Senate proceedings even if the intent is to commend and not to criticize.

On Mar. 31, 1982,⁽³⁾ during consideration of House Resolution 378 (providing investigative funds for House committees), the Speaker Pro Tempore took the initiative to call a Member to order for making improper references to the Senate. The proceedings were as follows:

MR. [FRANK] ANNUNZIO [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on House Administration, I call up a privileged resolution (H. Res. 378) providing amounts from the contingent fund of the House for expenses of investigations and studies by standing and select committees of the House in the 2d session of the 97th Congress, and ask for its immediate consideration. . . .

supra. See also 109 CONG. REC. 1985, 88th Cong. 1st Sess., Feb. 7, 1963; 96 CONG. REC. 3131, 81st Cong. 2d Sess., Mar. 9, 1950; 87 CONG. REC. 3536, 3537, 77th Cong. 1st Sess., May 2, 1941; and 79 CONG. REC. 12011, 74th Cong. 1st Sess., July 29, 1935. For the current practice, which permits certain references to legislative actions by a Senator, see Rule XIV clause 1 as amended in the 100th and 101st Congresses. House Rules and Manual §749 (1995).

3. 128 CONG. REC. 6081, 6083, 97th Cong. 2d Sess.

In answer to a defeated motion to reduce the Senate resolution by an additional $409,000, Senator Mathias informed his colleagues, just like I did several weeks ago:

We will get to the point where we will damage the effectiveness of the committees. I think that we have to ask the Senate what it would cost the taxpayers in not being able to deal efficiently and, most important, effectively with the problems that beset this country.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁴⁾ Will the gentleman suspend momentarily?

The Chair would remind the gentleman that he should not refer to specific debate in the other body.

The gentleman from Illinois will resume.

MR. ANNUNZIO: I am quoting; I am not saying anything derogatory. I am just quoting from the Record, and it is complimentary.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would only remind the gentleman from Illinois of the rules of the House, in which the House should not refer to specific proceedings of the other body, even in a complimentary way.

MR. ANNUNZIO: I appreciate the suggestion from the Chair. But I thought that I was abiding by the rules because I was saying some nice things about a Republican Senator from Maryland.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair respects the respectful nature of the gentleman in the well, but would again only remind the gentleman of the rules of the House and the Chair's responsibility thereunder to take the initiative he has taken.

Reference to Statements Made Off Senate Floor

§ 44.31 It has been held a breach of order in debate to notice what a Senator has said in his official capacity, even if his statements were made for newspaper publication.

On June 26, 1935,⁽⁵⁾ in the Committee of the Whole Mr. Charles V. Truax, of Ohio, quoted a statement made by a Senator and was challenged on a point of order by Mr. Schuyler Otis Bland, of Virginia. Mr. Truax then stated a parliamentary inquiry whether it was against the rules of the House to notice what a Member of the other body had said for a newspaper publication. Chairman Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, stated as follows:

If made as a Senator in his official capacity, yes. The gentleman understands the English language, and the Chair has read the rule of the House. [§371 of Jefferson's Manual.] It was held by Mr. Speaker Clark that it is improper for a Member of the House to refer to a Senator even in complimentary terms.

§ 44.32 It is a breach of order in debate to refer to speeches by Senators made outside of the Senate.

5. 79 CONG. REC. 10189, 10190, 74th Cong. 1st Sess.

On May 2, 1941,⁽⁶⁾ after a point of order was made against a reference by a Member to a certain Senator, Speaker Pro Tempore Fajjo Cravens, of Arkansas, ruled that such reference constituted a violation of the rules. The Member whose remarks were objected to stated that his violation of the rules was unintentional, since he had not realized that the House rules also covered statements made by members of the Senate outside the Capitol walls.⁽⁷⁾

The Speaker Pro Tempore then stated in response to a parliamentary inquiry that a Member could not do indirectly what he could not do directly, and that the violation of the rules would not be corrected by referring to the Senator in such a way as to avoid specifically naming him.

§ 44.33 It is a breach of order in debate for a member to read a letter from a member of the Senate.

On May 25, 1937,⁽⁸⁾ a Member remarked that he had letters from

7. This ruling represents the current line of precedent; for the former practice, see 8 Cannon's Precedents §2519 ("The rule against criticism of Senators in debate applies only to words spoken on the floor and does not extend to speeches and interviews outside the House.").

8. 81 CONG. REC. 5013, 75th Cong. 1st Sess.

members of the Senate voicing their sympathy with a political movement and stated his immediate intention to read one of those letters. Chairman John J. O'Connor, of New York, intervened to rule "the Chair, on its own responsibility, makes the point of order against the reading of the letter from a member of another body."⁽⁹⁾ § 44.34 The principle of comity between the two Houses prohibits any reference in debate to actions of Senators within or outside the Senate.

On June 13, 1974,⁽¹⁰⁾ a Member demanded that another Member's references in debate to a Senator be stricken from the Record, but did not demand that the words be "taken down" (pursuant to Rule XIV clause 5). The Speaker Pro Tempore sustained the point of order against violation of the principle of comity⁽¹¹⁾ but did not submit to the House the question of striking the unparliamentary words. The proceedings were as follows:

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹²⁾
Under a previous order of the House,

9. In earlier practice, reference was permitted to a letter expressing a Senator's views on legislation; see 5 Hinds' Precedents §5112.

12. John J. McFall (Calif.).

the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. Steiger) is recognized for 45 minutes.

MR. [SAM] STEIGER [of Arizona]: Mr. Speaker, with a petulance usually reserved to Secretaries of State, Mo Udall and Henry Jackson have blamed the defeat of the land-use planning bill on "impeachment politics." Mr. Udall states that the President changed his position on land-use planning in order to retain the support of conservative Members of the House regarding impeachment. . . .

We can fully appreciate that the gentleman from Washington, who is an active candidate for President, might be seeking ways to present his case in some kind of a different manner.

MR. [THOMAS S.] FOLEY [of Washington]: Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will suspend for a minute, I would like to make a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

I pose the parliamentary inquiry, whether or not discussion of the motives of a Member of the other body is in order.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman is correct. It is not in order, in view of the rule of comity between the two Houses.

The gentleman will proceed.

MR. STEIGER OF ARIZONA: Mr. Speaker, I would advise the gentleman from California (Mr. Rousselot) that I am about to continue to yield him the time; that I, too, think it is very presumptive of the gentleman from Washington, who is running for President; all I heard the gentleman from California (Mr. Rousselot) say was that the Senator was a candidate for President.

MR. [JOHN H.] ROUSSELOT [of California]: He is a potential candidate for President. If that is impugning his motives, I do not see how it is.

MR. FOLEY: Mr. Speaker, a point of order. The remarks of the gentleman from California and the remarks of the gentleman from Arizona are out of order. I ask that they be stricken.

MR. STEIGER of Arizona: Mr. Speaker, might I be heard on that point of order?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will proceed on the point of order.

MR. STEIGER of Arizona: I would restate what I said, that in my view it is presumptuous of the gentleman from Washington to hold himself up as a candidate for the Presidency of the United States. I fail to see that that is impugning the gentleman's motives.

It is an accepted fact in political life that the gentleman from Washington is, indeed, a candidate for the Presidency, at least in his own eyes.

I suspect, and I am certainly entitled to a view of that candidacy and I have stated that view, with no intent at all of demeaning the gentleman from Washington.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: While the gentleman has not demanded that words be taken down, the Chair will state that under the rules of debate it is not in order for a Member to voice an opinion or cast a reflection on either Members of the House or Members of the other body and it is not in order to refer to Senators by name or in terms of personal criticism, or even for the purpose of complimenting and the inhibition extends to comments of criticism of their actions outside the Senate.

The Chair would also point out to the gentlemen who are carrying on this debate that it is Thursday afternoon and there is no need to get involved in a big political debate.

So the gentleman in the well will proceed in order.

§ 44.35 It is a violation of the rules of parliamentary procedure to refer by name to the remarks or actions of a Senator occurring in the Senate or elsewhere, and where a Member in debate or through an insertion in the Record transgresses this rule the Speaker calls him to order under Rule XIV clause 4.

See the proceedings of Oct. 7, 1975, at § 44.4, supra.

§ 44.36 On one occasion, a Member upon being cautioned by the Chair not to refer to a Senator in debate, obtained unanimous consent to refer to correspondence between the Senator and a federal official.

The following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole on June 25, 1986,⁽¹³⁾ during consideration of H.R. 5052 (military construction appropriations):

MR. [DENNIS M.] HERTEL of Michigan: . . . Let me talk about the defense side of this and read a letter from Barry Goldwater, the chairman of the Armed Services Committee in the Senate. . . .

¹³ 132 CONG. REC. 15492, 99th Cong. 2d Sess.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁴⁾ The Chair would caution the gentleman not to refer to Members of the other body.

MR. HERTEL of Michigan: Mr. Chairman, is it in order to refer to the letter?

THE CHAIRMAN: Without objection, it may be submitted.

There was no objection.

MR. HERTEL of Michigan: Mr. Chairman, I refer to this letter from Mr. Goldwater. He writes: . . .

Hon. Caspar Weinberger,
Secretary of Defense, Department of Defense, Washington, D.C.

Dear Cap: The issue of home-porting for navy ships is soon to come up before the Senate and quite frankly I'm opposed to it. . . .

This is a letter from the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee. This is his opinion.

§ 44.37 It is improper in debate to refer to quotations of Senators appearing in outside publications ("Senator Proxmire was quoted in The American Banker as saying . . .").

During consideration of the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation Revitalization Act of 1987 (H.R. 27) in the Committee of the Whole on May 5, 1987,⁽¹⁵⁾ a Member made reference to a quotation from a Senator that had been published whereupon the

15. 133 CONG. REC. 11214, 100th Cong. 1st Sess.

Chair reminded the Members that it was against the rules to quote a member of the other body. The proceedings were as follows:

MR. [STEPHEN L.] NEAL [of North Carolina]: . . . Furthermore Mr. Chairman, a distinguished Member of the other body was quoted in a publication dated May 5, The American Banker, as saying that the condition of the FSLIC is being deliberately exaggerated by the U.S. Treasury and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board to pressure Congress into acting on a $15 billion "clean FSLIC bill." . . .

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁶⁾ The Chair would like to remind Members that it is not in accordance with our rules to quote an individual Member of the other body.

Reference to Senate Votes

§ 44.38 Reference in debate to Senate votes on a legislative proposition is not in order.

On Aug. 17, 1961,⁽¹⁷⁾ after Mr. Frank Thompson, Jr., of New Jersey, moved to strike out the last word on a pending proposition, he read into his remarks a newspaper editorial referring to the vote of some Republicans on a proposition before Congress. A point of order was made that it was contrary to the rules of the House to mention the vote of a

17. 107 CONG. REC. 16210, 87th Cong. 1st Sess.

Senator and Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, of Arkansas, sustained the point of order.⁽¹⁸⁾

§ 44.39 Under section 371 of Jefferson's Manual, it is not in order in the House to refer to particular votes in the Senate or to the positions taken by individual Senators.

The following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole on July 29, 1981,⁽¹⁹⁾ during consideration of H.R. 4242 (Tax Incentive Act of 1981):

MR. [JACK] KEMP [of New York]: I appreciate the comments of my friend from Georgia. They are very important to all of us and in the same spirit of bipartisanship I am pleased to announce that the Senate, in an overwhelming vote of 89 to 11, passed substantially the same bill as the Conable-Hance substitute. . . .

MR. [GERALD B.] SOLOMON [of New York]: Mr. Chairman, I rise in favor of References to the votes of Senators on legislative propositions are specifically prohibited by Jefferson's Manual: "It is a breach of order in debate to notice what has been said on the same subject in the other House, or the particular votes or majorities on it there. . . ." House Rules and Manual §371 (1995). See §44.14, infra, for current decisions on references to Senate votes.

the Conable-Hance bill, and I bring the Members' attention to a list of 23 more Democratic Senators who have just supported this fine bill.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽²⁰⁾ The gentleman will suspend. As the gentlemen from New York know, the action of the Senate and individual votes in that body may not be mentioned in debate. The Members will keep that in mind.

§ 44.40 Jefferson's Manual prohibits reference in debate to specific votes in the Senate.⁽¹⁾

During consideration of the conference report on S. 1503 (Standby Petroleum Allocation Act) in the House on Mar. 2, 1982,⁽²⁾ the following exchange occurred:

MR. [TIMOTHY E.] WIRTH [of Colorado]: This is a conference report and this has been through the Senate, as the gentleman said. Has this not already been voted on?

MR. [PHILIP R.] SHARP [of Indiana]: The Senate voted for this 86 to 7.

MR. [JAMES T.] BROYHILL [of North Carolina]: Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

MR. WIRTH: The Senate voted for it 86 to 7.

MR. BROYHILL: Mr. Speaker, point of order.

2. 128 CONG. REC. 3117, 97th Cong. 2d Sess.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽³⁾ The gentlemen are reminded that they should not refer to the specific vote in the other body.

§ 44.41 It is a violation of the rule of comity to refer in debate to the votes of particular members of the Senate, and the Chair has called Members to order on his own initiative for quoting the vote totals on a measure when it was before the Senate.

On Apr. 12, 1984,⁽⁴⁾ during consideration of House Concurrent Resolution 290 (expressing the sense of Congress that no appropriated funds be used for the purpose of mining the ports or territorial waters of Nicaragua) in the House, the Chair exercised his initiative in admonishing the Members against references to the Senate:

MR. [HENRY J.] HYDE [of Illinois]: . . . I have this hopelessly old-fashioned notion that as leader of the free world we have an obligation to resist handing Central America over to the Fascists of the left, the Communists. . . .

I would remind you that a few days ago the senior Senator from New York stood on the floor of the other body and reminded his colleagues that as of the moment he was talking, half of the arms and 80 percent of the ammunition being used by the guerrillas to kill and to bomb and to maim and to destroy powerlines and schools and to burn buses in El Salvador was coming through Nicaragua. . . .

MR. [THEODORE S.] WEISS [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, might I remind the distinguished minority leader in this House that the other body, under the leadership of its Republican leader, by a vote of 84 to 12 adopted this identical resolution. The Foreign Affairs Committee, with the dissent of only three members of the minority party, by a vote of 32 to 3 reported out this resolution. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁵⁾ The Chair would remind the Members of the House that it is not within the purview of the rules to state a vote of the other body. That has now been done twice and the Chair would caution the Members of the House not to do that. . . .

MR. [ELLIOTT H.] LEVITAS [of Georgia]: . . . Tonight I will act in a bipartisan way, and I will not repeat the overwhelming bipartisan vote in the other body on this identical resolution, but tonight I will join in a bipartisan way voting with people who have names like Armstrong, Baker, D'Amato, Garn, Grassley, Laxalt, Percy, Simpson, Stevens, and Warner.

This should be a bipartisan vote in this House as well.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would again remind the Members that it is not within the purview of the rules either to state a specific vote on an issue in the other body or to reference specific Members of the other body as to how they vote.

§ 44.42 It is a breach of order in debate to notice particular votes in the Senate, even on a subject related to that under House debate, and it is the duty of the Chair to take the initiative in enforcing this rule.

On July 31, 1984,⁽⁶⁾ during consideration of House Resolution 555 (expressing the sense of the House that it disapproves the appointment of Anne M. Burford) in the House, the Speaker Pro Tempore, in response to a parliamentary inquiry, admonished the Members against references to votes occurring in the other body:

MR. [NORMAN E.] D'AMOURS [of New Hampshire]: . . . I would like to compliment my very good friend from Alaska (Mr. Young) . . . for having completely avoided injecting partisan politics into his approach to this resolution. . . .

The Senate last week voted in a fully bipartisan way to object to the appointment of Anne Burford. As a matter of fact, the Republicans voted overwhelmingly against her appointment. I think the vote was 33 to 19, in the Republican Party 19 supporting her. This truly is bipartisan.

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

6. 130 CONG. REC. 21670, 98th Cong. 2d Sess.

Mr. Speaker, on occasions in the recent past, Members of the minority on the floor have been cautioned about utilizing votes in the Senate or referring to the Senate's deliberations in any way on this floor.

Is that something which is only going to apply to the minority and references such as we just heard used extensively in the debate of the gentleman from New Hampshire go unremanded by the Chair?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁷⁾ The Chair would indicate that those references should not have been made to specific votes in the other body. Members on both sides of the aisle will refrain from those kinds of references.

§ 44.43 Although it is proper to refer to the fact that particular matters have been sent from the Senate, it is not in order in debate to refer to specific votes in the Senate or to criticize members of the Senate who voted a particular way.

During consideration of the conference report on House Joint Resolution 372 (to extend the public debt limit) in the House on Nov. 6, 1985,⁽⁸⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

A message from the Senate by Mr. Sparrow, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 372) entitled "Joint resolution increasing the statutory limit on the public debt." . . .

The message also announced that the Senate concurs in House amendment to Senate amendment No. 2, with an amendment. . . .

MR. [CONNIE] MACK [III, of Florida]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Mack moves to take from the Speaker's table House Joint Resolution 372, with the Senate amendment to the House amendment to Senate amendment No. 2 and to concur in the Senate amendment as follows: . . .

MR. MACK: Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. Lott).

MR. [TRENT] LOTT [of Mississippi]: Mr. Speaker, earlier this afternoon, the other body once again voted on this issue that we have been debating, the deficit reduction package known as the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings-Mack deficit reduction package. The vote was almost identical to the vote that occurred some 3 weeks ago, I guess now, 74 to 24.

I understand from talking to our colleagues in the other body that the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Levin) added an amendment that was an improvement on the bill and that was accepted.

MR. [LES] AU COIN [of Oregon]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁹⁾ The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. AU COIN: Mr. Speaker, is it not against the rules of the House to refer to actions in the other body, either Members of the other body or votes in the other body?

THE SPEAKER: Under normal circumstances, the answer is in the affirmative. But we are referring to a matter that has just been sent over from the other body, so the gentleman may refer to that fact.

MR. AU COIN: Mr. Speaker, does that include that announcement of the actual vote in the other body?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will state to the gentleman that that would not be in order.

§ 44.44 It is not in order in debate to refer to specific votes in the Senate, and the Chair calls to order Members on his or her own initiative for violating the rule of comity.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Mar. 13, 1986:⁽¹⁰⁾

MR. [WILLIAM H.] GRAY [3d] of Pennsylvania: Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the rule allowing for consideration of House Concurrent Resolution 296, the concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 1987. . . .

Last week the Senate Budget Committee considered the President's budget and voted against its adoption. In considering the President's budget, the Senate Budget Committee was able to gain some idea of the level of support for that plan and use that experience in setting out to formulate an alternative. Then after the vote, they started to work on an alternative and they are still working. They did not have an alternative when they voted on the President's budget. They voted and they are now working, and I propose the same thing.

10. 132 CONG. REC. 4636, 99th Cong. 2d Sess.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹¹⁾ The Chair would ask that Members not refer to any specific vote in the other body.

Insertions in the Record

§ 44.45 Inserting references to Senate speeches or proceedings in the Congressional Record Extension of Remarks is a violation of House rules.

On May 2, 1941, Mr. Adolph J. Sabath, of Illinois, inserted in the Extension of Remarks of the Congressional Record extensive references to speeches made by a certain Senator, principally off the floor of the Senate.⁽¹²⁾

On May 5, 1941, Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, raised a question of the privilege of the House.⁽¹³⁾ Mr. Hoffman referred to the extension of remarks of Mr. Sabath and introduced a resolution to have those remarks expunged from the Record since they were in violation of the rules of the House prohibiting reference in debate to Senators and their proceedings.

Mr. Sabath then addressed the House and was granted unanimous consent to withdraw the objectionable remarks from the permanent Record.⁽¹⁴⁾

Critical References to Senate or its Committees

§ 44.46 It is not in order in debate to criticize actions of the Senate or its committees, and it is the duty of the Speaker to call the offending Member to order;⁽¹⁵⁾ thus, where improper reference to the Senate has been made by a Member, the Speaker has called the Member to order.

On Apr. 17, 1975,⁽¹⁶⁾ the proceedings described above, relative to a violation of the principle of 14. See also §44.2, supra (where a Member inquired whether a letter written by him to a Senator could be inserted in the Record as an extension of his remarks, the Speaker stated that a point of order could be based on the objectionable insertion).

comity, occurred in the House, as follows:

(Mr. Cleveland asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute, and to revise and extend his remarks.)

MR. [JAMES C.] CLEVELAND [of New Hampshire]: Mr. Speaker, I am amazed that four Democratic members of the Rules Committee of the other body, reviewing the challenge of Democrat John Durkin to the seating of Senator-elect Louis Wyman, should have yesterday voted to take away from Wyman 10 straight Republican ballots that had been properly counted for him in New Hampshire. These critically important votes belong to Mr. Wyman by settled New Hampshire law in a contest with an existing margin of two votes.

As even Durkin's counsel acknowledged before the committee, the ballots were and would have consistently been counted for Wyman in New Hampshire. On each the voter had voted a cross in the straight Republican circle with no marks on the Democratic side of the ballot. He had also voted a cross in every voting square except Mr. Wyman's. By operation of statute and court decision in New Hampshire for 60 years—as well as in other States having the straight ticket option—a vote in the straight ticket circle is a vote for every candidate under the circle and a vote in every box under the circle by operation of law.

Worse yet, similar ballots for Durkin in the original New Hampshire recount had not been challenged by Wyman because under settled New Hampshire law they were recognized as valid votes. These remain in the totals relied on by the Senate committee, counted for Durkin.

On April 9 in this Record I called for a new election in New Hampshire and surely this has now become a compelling necessity, unless we are to witness a legislative Watergate.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁷⁾ The Chair must ask the gentleman to desist and must call to the attention of the gentleman from New Hampshire that his remarks are in violation of the rules of the House and rules of comity. The Chair has been very lenient, but this goes far beyond the bounds.

It is not proper to criticize the actions of the other body, or any committee of the other body, in any matter relating to official duties.

MR. CLEVELAND: Mr. Speaker, would it be in order for me to quote a Member of the other body who characterized this?

THE SPEAKER: No, it would not be. The Chair was very lenient by letting the gentleman make his point, but the Chair is going to be strict in observing the rules of comity between the two bodies. Otherwise we cannot function as an independent, separate legislative body under the Constitution of the United States.

Removing Remarks Violative of Comity From Record

§ 44.47 The Speaker, upon hearing words in debate which were critical of a Senator, assumed the duty imposed upon him by Jefferson's Manual⁽¹⁸⁾ and in-

18. See House Rules and Manual §374 (1995).

formed the offending Member that his words were in violation of the principle of comity and should be removed from the Record.

On Nov. 18, 1975,⁽¹⁹⁾ the proceedings described above occurred as follows:

(Mr. [R. Lawrence] Coughlin [of Pennsylvania] asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute, to revise and extend his remarks, and include extraneous matter.)

[Mr. Coughlin addressed the House and in his remarks was critical of Senator Proxmire and his support for the Joint Committee on Defense Production.]

THE SPEAKER:⁽²⁰⁾ The Chair, in view of the noise that was in the Chamber, was unable to hear all of the remarks of the gentleman from Pennsylvania which, I understand, referred to activities of the Senate and to Members of the other body. This is in violation of the Rules of the House, and any remarks made by the gentleman from Ohio should not touch upon that subject. Any remarks made by the gentleman from Pennsylvania that touched upon that subject should be removed from the Record and should not be put in the Record.

§ 44.48 It is not in order in debate to refer critically to members of the Senate, and

19. 121 CONG. REC. 37010, 94th Cong. 1st Sess.

20. Carl Albert (Okla.).

the Chair is required on his own initiative by both clause 4, Rule XIV, and section 374 of Jefferson's Manual to call a Member to order for such remarks unless the Member voluntarily withdraws them from the Record (prior to demand by another Member that the words be "taken down").

In the proceedings of Aug. 20, 1980,⁽¹⁾ the Chair, in inquiring whether a Member wished to withdraw his remarks concerning a Senator, referred to section 374 of Jefferson's Manual, which relates to the duty of the Speaker to prevent expressions offensive to the other House. The proceedings were as follows:

MR. [ROBERT K.] DORNAN [of California]: . . . The FEC, through its Office of General Counsel, has allowed an elected Federal official, just like ourselves, to keep for over 1 year, $1,150 of acknowledged illegal corporate campaign contributions. The corporation—whatever it did is somewhat unclear—laundered $13,000 into my opponent's campaign and $23,150 of illegal corporate money into this elected Federal official's campaign coffers. . . .

And now a convicted felon down at the Talladega Prison in Alabama . . . denies that this Federal official ever returned the money to him. I direct my colleagues to read the relevant

1. 126 CONG. REC. 22151–53, 96th Cong. 2d Sess.

Jack Anderson columns. I was told while at the Talladega Federal prison in Alabama in the presence of an FBI agent and an assistant U.S. district attorney from Birmingham that my young opponent merely went through the motions of returning illegal $1,000 corporate campaign contributions. I was told that this $13,000 was returned. The money never left California. It was reloaned to my young opponent by his original Alabama benefactor. . . .

MR. [RONNIE G.] FLIPPO [of Alabama]: . . . I wish the gentleman would refrain from referring to the Senator from Alabama, and give the Senator an opportunity to do what he needs to do to explain the situations. He does not need to be tried by the Jack Andersons of this world. We have a proper court procedure and a way to proceed in that regard.

I would hope that the gentleman would refrain from bringing up the name of any official from Alabama, or any other State official's name up, in a manner that would tend to encourage people to believe that they had done something wrong, when no such thing exists or it has not been proven in a court of law. I know the gentleman's high regard for court proceedings.

MR. DORNAN: If the gentleman will yield, I believe I have discovered a major coverup; a terribly inept, if not illegal obstruction of justice by Justice Department people assigned to the fair State of Alabama. I gave the Senator mentioned before a face-to-face opportunity, alone in his office, to explain his involvement but he would not do so.

MR. FLIPPO: Mr. Chairman, I ask that the gentleman's words be taken down.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽²⁾ The gentleman may not refer to Members of the other body.

MR. FLIPPO: Mr. Chairman, I would ask that the gentleman's words be taken down. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair will state to the gentleman from California (Mr. Dornan) that under the rules of the House it is not in order to refer to Members of the other body and in the light of that the Chair would ask the gentleman from California if he wishes to withdraw his remarks concerning the Member of the other body.

MR. DORNAN: Mr. Chairman, as of about a year-and-a-half ago, videotape records of House proceedings have been made. Taking that into consideration I will accede to the Chair's suggestion and remove all statements in the written Record pertaining to Members of the other body.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will proceed. The gentleman has agreed to remove all the statements in question from the Record. Otherwise the Chair would exercise his authority under section 374 of Jefferson's Manual [relating to the duty of the Speaker to prevent expressions in debate offensive to the other House].

§ 44.49 It is against the rules of order stated in Jefferson's Manual to read into the Record remarks critical of members of the Senate or to the actions of individual Senators, and while the Speaker does not have unilateral authority to expunge improper references from the Record, he may request Members who have made improper references to Senators to omit those references from the Record.

While under section 374 of Jefferson's Manual it is the duty of the Speaker to interfere "so as not to permit expressions to go unnoticed which may give a ground of complaint to the other House," the Speaker has not been presumed to have unilateral authority to expunge improper references from the Record, but merely to request the offending Member to delete the references. The House and not the Speaker controls the Record and the Speaker must rely on the good faith of Members to heed his admonition to delete the offending material. (Of course, the Speaker may deny further recognition to Members violating the prohibition against improper references.)⁽³⁾ A request that offending material be deleted from the Record was made by the Speaker Pro Tempore⁽⁴⁾ on May 8, 1984.⁽⁵⁾ tleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Walker) is recognized for 60 minutes.

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, recently Frank Gregorsky, from the Republican Study Committee, prepared a paper entitled "What's the Matter with Democratic Foreign Policy?" . . . I am going to begin presenting this paper as Mr. Gregorsky has written it.

PART ONE: A WORLD VIEW IN SEARCH OF A WORLD . . .

Everyone knows that Senator Ted Kennedy has a "dovish" voting record on defense and foreign policy matters. . . .

Kennedy chose to write in Rolling Stone on March 15, 1984:

Reagan is the best pretender as president that we have had in modern history. Some White House aides talk of "the peace issue" as if it were mostly a political problem for Ronald Reagan. Others imply that they only need to play for time before launching a wider war in Central America in 1985. . . .

That definitive prose is worth more for insight than a printout of Kennedy's 21 plus years of Senate votes; there's a comprehensive way of viewing America and the world behind it. . . .

To be a rising Democrat today requires a certain view of what shaped the present. It was stated with a flourish by a man elected to the House in 1974 and the Senate in 1978, Paul Tsongas of Massachusetts, in a floor speech January 29, 1980:

Twenty years ago, Mr. President, people stood up on the floor of this Chamber and said, "Well, maybe Batista was not such a great soul after all," but they never said anything about him when he was in power. "And this fellow, Fidel Castro, we do not like the way he combs his beard."

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Would the gentleman pause just a moment. The Chair does request the gentleman to omit those portions of the paper which he is reading which refer to specific sitting Members of the other body and to their actions in that body.

As you know, there is a rule against it, and the Chair is required to take the initiative to enforce that rule.

MR. WALKER: Mr. Speaker, if I am not mistaken, the gentleman to whom I am referring was a Member of the House during the period of the time that this speech was made.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: As long as it is not a reference to his actions in the other body, in the Senate, or critical of him as a Senator.

There are a couple of other references a bit earlier that the Chair would respectfully request the gentleman to omit when he has finished his reading today.

§ 44.50 In response to a point of order, the Speaker Pro Tempore called to order a Member for referring to proceedings in the Senate and ordered the remarks stricken from the Record without objection.

On Dec. 10, 1980,⁽⁶⁾ a point of order was made against the following remarks of Mr. Don Edwards, of California:

MR. EDWARDS of California: Mr. Speaker, yesterday, in a moment that will long be remembered with bitterness by the minorities, women, and the handicapped of America, the Congress sounded the death knell for the Fair Housing Amendments Act of 1980.

We must also fully recognize why the measure failed. Republican leaders, intimidated by a small minority of their own party, aided and abetted this abdication of responsibility. President-elect Reagan himself, asked to reassure minorities, that a Republican administration will not turn its back on their needs, issued meaningless platitudes instead of support for a bill that the House of Representatives adopted by a 3-to-1 margin. . . .

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order against the gentleman's remarks. They are not in keeping with the rule that requires no mention of the other body.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁷⁾ The gentleman from California (Mr. Edwards) is referring to the proceedings of the other body. He will please restrict them. They are out of order and without objection, will be stricken from the Record.

§ 44.51 On his own initiative, the Speaker Pro Tempore called a Member to order for referring to the Senate in a critical manner.

7. Ray Roberts (Tex.).

On Dec. 10, 1980,⁽⁸⁾ Mr. Robert S. Walker, of Pennsylvania, was called to order by the Chair for remarks made in the following statement:

(Mr. Walker asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

MR. WALKER: Mr. Speaker, it appears as though Washington lame-ducks are lining up for one last major rape of the American taxpayer. In the continuing appropriations bill that has emerged, section 155 builds in the potential for severance pay for the Senate staff members displaced by the transition to a Republican majority.

I took a look at the figures and figured out that in one committee, in the Foreign Relations Committee, if everybody draws the maximum permitted under that bill, that one committee will be eligible for $426,500 in severance pay.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁹⁾ The Chair will advise the gentleman from Pennsylvania that the Chair just had to call to order a Member from the other side of the aisle. The gentleman simply cannot refer to the other body in those terms. Will the gentleman please remove these remarks?

MR. WALKER: I thank the Chair for his correction. I thought the Chair ruled in favor of it in the previous instance.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman may proceed.

Historical References to Senate Actions

§ 44.52 The inhibition against referring in debate to members or proceedings of the Senate does not extend to historical discussion of previous members of the Senate; on one occasion, where a point of order was made that a Member was violating the rule of comity by referring to past members of the Senate, the Chair did not directly rule on the point of order but advised the Member having the floor to continue to proceed in order.

On May 18, 1977,⁽¹⁰⁾ the proceedings described above occurred in the Committee of the Whole as follows:

MR. [WILLIAM] CLAY [of Missouri]: Mr. Chairman, I might say that the passage of this act had something to do with the personalities and personal conflict between two Senators from the State of New Mexico, one whose name bears the title of this bill, the Hatch Act. Senator Hatch, even though a Democrat, had not been privy to the political spoils system because he was an opponent of Franklin Roosevelt, so his counterpart in the Senate was the recipient of all of the political jobs under the WPA and other relief programs.

10. 123 CONG. REC. 15388, 95th Cong. 1st Sess.

Consequently, in an effort to get back at this counterpart and at Franklin Delano Roosevelt—

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹¹⁾ The gentleman will state his point of order.

MR. BAUMAN: The gentleman is referring to the other body and actions in the other body. Under our rules, that is forbidden.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman may proceed in order.

MR. CLAY: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I thought I was referring to history. If the other body is not a part of history, I am sorry.

Members Wishing To Discuss Actions of Senate Should Do So Off the Floor

§ 44.53 A Member stated in a one-minute speech that because the rules of comity prohibited him from referring in debate to the actions or statements of a member of the Senate, he would make his comments elsewhere.

On May 10, 1978,⁽¹²⁾ Mr. David R. Obey, of Wisconsin, made the following statement in the House:

(Mr. Obey asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

11. James R. Mann (S.C.).

12. 124 CONG. REC. 13211, 95th Cong. 2d Sess.

MR. OBEY: Mr. Speaker, I wish House rules did not prevent me from saying on this floor what I would like to say about a speech delivered Monday by a certain Member of the other body but, because they do, I will make my comments elsewhere.

Parliamentarian's Note: Mr. Obey objected to statements by Senator Weicker reported in the press, criticizing the administration's policy in the Middle East, but was advised that any statement in debate criticizing or referring to a member of the Senate or his remarks either on or off the Senate floor would violate the rule of comity.

References to Senators Who Are Presidential Candidates

§ 44.54 The rule of comity in debate, which has been strictly construed to prohibit references to the words or actions of members of the Senate, does not prohibit references to Senators in their capacity as candidates for the Presidency or other office, but references attacking the character or integrity of a member of the Senate are improper (and the Chair on his own initiative enforces the rule of comity in debate).

On Oct. 30, 1979,⁽¹³⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House:

(Mr. Dornan asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

MR. [ROBERT K.] DORNAN [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I support what the distinguished gentleman from Florida (Mr. Young) has called for: The resignation of Robert Strange McNamara from the World Bank. Only one Member of the Congress of the United States has ever negotiated the Chapquiddick Channel by swimming it. Only one Member of Congress has ever made it across that channel on his own power. And he was not a Member of the U.S. Senate. That person is this Congressman standing here before this body, me. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁴⁾ It is a violation of the rules of the House to attack the character or integrity of a Member of the other body and the rule of comity also prohibits references either directly or indirectly to words or actions of a Member of the other body, with respect to his actions in that body. There is a delicate line which lies sometimes almost invisibly between a Member in his capacity as a Member of Congress, and that same individual in his capacity as a candidate for the Presidency or other office.

The Chair hopes and trusts that Members will exercise sufficient prudence and sufficient good taste that they will respect that difference.

13. 125 CONG. REC. 30150, 96th Cong. 1st Sess.

14. James C. Wright, Jr. (Tex.).

MR. [JOHN F.] SEIBERLING [of Ohio]: Mr. Speaker, I will not demand that the secretary take down the words of the previous speaker, but in the light of the ruling that the Chair just made, if similar outbursts occur I will make that demand.

§ 44.55 Remarks in debate ordinarily may not include references to members of the Senate other than to identify their sponsorship of legislation; but where a Senator is also a candidate for President or Vice President his official policies, actions, and opinions as a candidate may be criticized in terms not personally offensive.

On Sept. 29, 1988,⁽¹⁵⁾ during the period for one-minute speeches in the House, the following proceedings occurred:

(Mr. Williams asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

MR. [PAT] WILLIAMS [of Montana]: Mr. Speaker, yesterday Republican Vice-Presidential candidate Dan Quayle was in Texas. He visited, he was kind enough to go by and visit a Job Corps center in El Paso, and while there he looked 300 Job Corps students in the eye and said, "We believe in you."

He did not tell them that he had voted to shut that center down. He did not tell them that the Reagan-Bush administration in fact has demanded that every Job Corps center in America, bar none, be closed.

15. 134 CONG. REC. 26683, 26684, 100th Cong. 2d Sess.

This is the same Senator Quayle that supports wars that he won't fight, the same Senator Quayle who got into law school under an entry minority program that he later votes against.

There is a word for it, my colleagues, it is called hypocrisy.

MR. [DAN] LUNGREN [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I ask that the gentleman's words be taken down. . . .

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁶⁾ The Clerk will report the words of the gentleman from Montana.

The Clerk read as follows:

This is the same Senator Quayle that supports wars that he won't fight, the same Senator Quayle who got into law school under an entry minority program that he later votes against.

There is a word for it, my colleagues, it is called hypocrisy.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair has considered closely the question of the use of words to distinguish policies as opposed to individuals. There are precedents touching on proper and improper references in debate and dealing with the preservation of comity between the House and Senate. It is important to recognize that the individual referenced in the remarks not only is a candidate for Vice President of the United States but is a Member of the other body.

The precedents relating to references in debate to the President, Vice President, or to a Member of the other body who is a nominated or declared candidate for President or Vice President permit criticisms of official policy, actions and opinions of that person as a candidate, but do not permit personal abuse, do not permit innuendo and do not permit ridicule, and they do require that the proper rules of decorum must be followed during any debate relating to the President of the United States or a Member of the other body.

It could be argued that there is a distinction between calling an individual a hypocrite, for example, and referring to some policy as hypocrisy, but the Chair has discovered a precedent that seems to be directly in point. In 1945, a Member of the House from Georgia referred to another Member and said, "I was reminded that pretexts are never wanting when hypocrisy wishes to add malice to falsehood or cowardice to stab a foe who cannot defend himself." Speaker Rayburn ruled that this was out of order as an unparliamentary reference to another Member of the body.

By extension, the same identical words should be held out of order in reference to a Member of the other body whether or not he were a candidate for a high office, and under these circumstances and citing this precedent, the Chair would suggest that the gentleman from Montana withdraw the offending remarks, including the particular word "hypocrisy," and either amend his reference in the permanent Record or delete it. . . .

MR. WILLIAMS: Mr. Speaker, do I understand correctly that the Speaker's ruling is based upon my characterization of a U.S. Senator, in this case Senator Quayle, that had the Republican Vice-Presidential candidate not been at this time a U.S. Senator, that my remarks would, in fact, be in order? . . .

16. James C. Wright, Jr. (Tex.).

THE SPEAKER: . . .The Chair would suggest to the gentleman from Montana that there are standards that apply in the Chamber and in the precedents with respect to nominated candidates for President and Vice President. The Chair is not certain if they are precisely the same as applied to a Member of the other body or a Member of this body, but in this instance, it is not necessary to make that hypothetical distinction since the individual involved is a Member of the other body.

MR. WILLIAMS: Further parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker: Would it be within the rules of the House if the last sentence of my 1-minute, the one which characterizes Senator Quayle's actions as hypocrisy, be removed by unanimous consent from my 1-minute statement?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair would suggest to the gentleman from Montana that this might be a satisfactory solution.

MR. WILLIAMS: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the last sentence of my 1-minute statement, the sentence in which I characterized Senator Quayle's actions as hypocrisy, be stricken.

MR. LUNGREN: Mr. Speaker, parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: Please, the Chair will recognize the gentleman for a parliamentary inquiry, but, first, please permit the gentleman from Montana to complete his request. . . .

MR. LUNGREN: I reserve the right to object, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: That is fine. The gentleman may reserve his right to object, but in the interests of orderly procedure, permit the Chair to allow the gentleman from Montana to complete his request.

MR. WILLIAMS: Let me be sure the Chair understands my request: I have asked unanimous consent that the last sentence of my 1-minute statement be stricken. . . .

THE SPEAKER: . . . Has the gentleman from Montana completed his request?

MR. WILLIAMS: No, Mr. Speaker, I have not. Both times I have been interrupted as I have attempted to ask unanimous consent that the last sentence of my 1-minute statement be eliminated. That was the sentence which referred to Senator Quayle's actions as hypocrisy. I seek unanimous consent to strike the last sentence of my 1-minute statement.

THE SPEAKER: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana?

MR. LUNGREN: Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, under normal circumstances and in the interests of comity of this House and the relationship of this House and the other body, I would not object. However, as is very obvious from the statements of the gentleman, the insult, the language that is not to be used under our rules was repeated three times in an effort to make a point which violates, in my judgment, the sense of the rules of the House and, therefore, since it is not, I believe, appropriate to do that, I object.

THE SPEAKER: Objection is heard.

Parliamentarian's Note: On Sept. 29, 1988,⁽¹⁷⁾ Speaker Wright

17. 134 CONG. REC. 26683, 26684, 100th Cong. 2d Sess.

ruled that although it is not in order in debate to criticize a member of the Senate, where the Senator is also a candidate for President or Vice President, his official policies, actions, and opinions as a candidate may be criticized so long as those references are not personally offensive. That ruling was consistent with an earlier ruling of Oct. 30, 1979,⁽¹⁸⁾ also cited in the House Rules and Manual at §371. Similar rulings prohibiting personally abusive references to the President or Vice President are cited in §370 of the Manual. Thus, it is clear that a standard exists under the precedents under which personally offensive references to a sitting President, Vice President, or Senator are out of order although that person may be a candidate for office.

On Sept. 29, 1988,⁽¹⁹⁾ Speaker Wright was asked whether a similar standard applied to references in debate to a candidate who did not happen to hold any of those offices. The Speaker responded that “there are standards that apply in the Chamber and in the precedents with respect to nominated candidates for President and Vice President. The Chair is not certain if they are precisely the same as applied to a member of the other body or a Member of this body . . .” but in that instance it was only a hypothetical question which the Chair declined to answer with any greater specificity.

Referring to Senate Inaction on Subject Under Debate in House

§ 44.56 Jefferson’s Manual⁽²⁰⁾ proscribes references in debate to specific proceedings of the Senate or to Senators by name, and the Chair should take the initiative to prevent such references.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Oct. 29, 1981,⁽¹⁾ during consideration of S. 815 (Department of Defense authorization for fiscal year 1982):

MR. [DUNCAN L.] HUNTER [of California]: . . . Mr. Speaker, I would simply like to say I am a member of the Special Procurement Procedures Panel that was started this year on the Armed Services Committee. In fact, we have held a large number of hearings. . . .

But we have a problem with accepting the Senate recommendations,

18. 125 CONG. REC. 30150, 96th Cong. 1st Sess.

19. 134 CONG. REC. 26683, 26684, 100th Cong. 2d Sess.

20. See House Rules and Manual §§ 371, 374 (1995).

1. 127 CONG. REC. 26051, 97th Cong. 1st Sess.

which I understand came about without benefit of hearings.

I would be happy to yield to the gentleman from Colorado if she could address that point.

Is that true, that Senator Nunn had no hearings on this?

MRS. [PATRICIA] SCHROEDER [of Colorado]: I would be delighted to respond if the gentleman will yield.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽²⁾ The Chair would observe it is not appropriate to refer to the proceedings of the other body. It is not in order to refer to Senators by name. It is not in order to refer to debates, probable action or procedure of the Senate.

§ 44.57 Under Jefferson's Manual,⁽³⁾ the Chair takes the initiative in calling Members to order who make improper references during debate to Senate legislative inaction.

During debate in the House on Mar. 23, 1982,⁽⁴⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [SILVIO O.] CONTE [of Massachusetts]: Mr. Speaker, as the Members know, it is a difficult job to try to bring out these bills responsibly. We are working on a timetable with the administration. There are several bills, the health and education and labor bill and the Post Office and Treasury bill, that have not been passed by the Congress.

2. James L. Oberstar (Minn.).

3. See House Rules and Manual § 374 (1995).

4. 128 CONG. REC. 5014, 97th Cong. 2d Sess.

But it is not the fault of this House. They passed this House early last year. They have been sitting over there in the Senate. If you have a gripe, go over there and tell them to pass those bills.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁵⁾ The gentleman will observe regular order. The gentleman will be advised that such characterizations of the proceedings in the other body are inappropriate on this floor.

§ 44.58 While it is not in order in debate to refer to actual proceedings or debate in the Senate, it is in order to state whether or not the Senate has acted on House-passed legislation; and in making an appropriate reference to the other body, the term "Senate" may be used and is not in itself a violation of the rule of comity.

Although it is traditional in debate to refer to the Senate as "the other body," Jefferson's Manual does not totally proscribe use of the word "Senate" during debate if merely a reference to that body's existence, particularly if the reference is not critical in nature and does not mention specific actions taken by that body nor specific members thereof. A ruling to that effect was made on Oct. 4, 1984:⁽⁶⁾

5. Elliott H. Levitas (Ga.).

6. See 130 CONG. REC. 30046, 30047, 98th Cong. 2d Sess. In an isolated

MR. [JAMES C.] WRIGHT [Jr., of Texas]: . . . Today at the White House in a ceremony the President of the United States was asked why he is shutting down the Government. . . .

“This has been very typical,” said the President, “of what has happened ever since we have been here. You can lay this right on the majority party of the House of Representatives.”

The President went on to say, “Just once it would be great to have a budget on time.”

Now, I think it is important that we recite the chronological facts in order that the honor of the House as an institution may be defended. . . .

Now, that is inaccurate in the extreme. He can have a second simple extension to sign if the Senate will act. The House already has done so, and it is pending in the Senate right now.

The House passed the first continuing resolution on the 25th of September. The other body has not acted upon it yet.

So, in light of that, the House on the 1st of October, Monday, the first day of the new fiscal year, sent a second continuing resolution to the Senate. It was a simple 2-day extension to give the Senate additional time to act upon the first one. This bill was passed and sent to the President on Monday, the 1st of October.

The President allowed the Government to go on and continue operating instance, however, the Chair did sustain a point of order against the use of the word “Senate” in a context descriptive merely of the existence of that body (see 130 CONG. REC. 22270, 98th Cong. 2d Sess., Aug. 2, 1984).

without even signing that bill until 3 o'clock yesterday, 2 days after the lapse of time in which a legalistic interpretation would have required him to close the Government. Then finally he signed that bill and now it is expiring again. So the House on the 4th of October, today, has sent yet another continuing appropriation bill to the other body and we are still awaiting Senate action. . . .

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: A point of order, Mr. Speaker. . . .

Mr. Speaker, is it not against the rules of the House to be referring to the actions of the other body?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁷⁾ The gentleman has not referred to actions of the other body. . . .

MR. WALKER: The other body was just referred to as the Senate. Is that not against the rules of the House?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: According to the precedents, reference can be made to the fact of the legislative product of the other body, which the gentleman from Texas has done.

§ 44.59 While a Member in debate may refer to the pendency of a House-passed bill in the Senate, it is a breach of order in debate to refer to a House bill as “languishing” in the Senate and it is the duty of the Chair to call to order an offending Member.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on July 31, 1986,⁽⁸⁾ during the period allocated for special-order speeches:

7. William R. Ratchford (Conn.).

8. 132 CONG. REC. 18253, 99th Cong. 2d Sess.

MR. [JAMES C.] WRIGHT [Jr., of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, the trade deficit, which is closing American factories and throwing Americans out of work, took another upward bound last month. It is time for the Senate to act on the House-passed trade bill which has been languishing there for 10 weeks. . . .

If the Senate fails to take up H.R. 4800, it will do the Nation a grave injustice and the American people will expect more than a mere apology for its inaction.

MR. [ROBERT W.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

Mr. Speaker, is it not against the rules of the House for someone to refer to legislative action in the Senate and that "the House bill languishing in the Senate" is beyond the scope of the House rules?

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁹⁾ . . . The Chair would respond to the inquiry by reminding Members that a Member may refer to where legislation is in the Senate; that is within the rules. Members cannot be critical of the Senate or name any Senator by name. . . .

MR. WRIGHT: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to amend my statement to say that, "This important legislation has been languishing without action in the honorable Senate for the past 10 weeks."

THE SPEAKER: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection. . . .

MR. WALKER: Mr. Speaker, even in the gentleman's amended version, the gentleman is beyond the scope of the House rules. . . .

Parliamentarian's Note: Although the Speaker did not rule on the latter point, Mr. Walker's observation was correct, in that "languishing" implies suffering neglect or inaction.

Advocating Senate Action on Nomination

§ 44.60 In response to a parliamentary inquiry, the Speaker Pro Tempore indicated that it is a breach of order under section 371 of Jefferson's Manual for a Member to refer in debate to confirmation proceedings in the Senate by advocating that that body take a certain action with regard to a Presidential nominee.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Feb. 7, 1984:⁽¹⁰⁾

MR. [JIM] MOODY [of Wisconsin]: Mr. Speaker, our colleagues in the Senate will soon consider President Reagan's nomination of Edward Meese as Attorney General. I urge our colleagues in the other body to take an extremely close look at the record of this man who would shape our country's policy on Justice-related issues. . . .

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

10. 130 CONG. REC. 1978, 1979, 98th Cong. 2d Sess.

9. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

Mr. Speaker, is it correct that we are not supposed to refer in any way to actions of the Senate on the floor of the House?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹¹⁾ The gentleman is correct.

Parliamentarian's Note: Under section 374 of Jefferson's Manual, the Chair may take the initiative to call a Member to order for attempting to influence the Senate in debate. A mere reference to the fact of confirmation proceedings in the other body, however, in the absence of characterization of those proceedings, would not be out of order.

Referring to Remarks Made by Senator at Time He Was a Member of the House

§ 44.61 References in debate to a former Member of the House who is presently a member of the Senate are permissible only if they merely address prior House service and are not implicitly critical of the individual as a Senator.

On May 8, 1984,⁽¹²⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House:

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹³⁾ Under a previous order of the House,

11. Mario Biaggi (N.Y.).
12. 130 CONG. REC. 11428, 11431, 98th Cong. 2d Sess.
13. Ike Skelton (Mo.).

the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Gingrich) is recognized for 60 minutes.

MR. [NEWT] GINGRICH [of Georgia]: Mr. Speaker, I am going to pick up where the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Walker) left off in the document entitled, "What is the Matter With the Democratic Foreign Policy," by Mr. Frank Gregorsky. . . .

Somehow, some day, this country has got to learn to live with revolution in the Third World. It's endemic. It's relatively easy to suppress revolution in Grenada, so we congratulate ourselves. . . .

Savimbi was quoted in the Washington Post May 29, 1983: . . .

. . . These Westerners say we should not take aid from South Africa for our struggle. But they will never give us aid themselves. They seem to be asking us to commit suicide, to accept being crushed by the Cubans and the Russians in our own country. We do not want to be an African Hungary. To avoid it, we have to take help from wherever it is on offer.

It won't come from a Democratic House. It won't come from Democrats like Chris Dodd, who is more entranced than Jonas Savimbi by the thought of another Hungary.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair is sure the gentleman is aware of the rule that he cannot make reference to sitting Members of the other body or to the activities or proceedings in that body.

MR. GINGRICH: In the body. All right. . . .

Let me ask the Chair for just a moment, to insure the Chair understands what I am now doing, I have a series of quotations from a gentleman who is currently in the other body, but the quotations are from the floor of the House when he was in this body. I presume they are, therefore, legitimate.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: If they are not references to or critical of him as a Senator.

MR. GINGRICH: All right.

Messrs. Dodd and Downey are two who've been saying the same thing since they got to Washington over nine years ago.

Chris Dodd on Cambodia, March 12, 1975: . . .

. . . The greatest gift our country can give to the Cambodian people is not guns but peace. And the best way to accomplish that goal is by ending military aid now.

Chris Dodd on Angola, December 19, 1975:

Mr. Speaker, I am urging my colleagues . . . to denounce equivocally the blatant intrusion on the part of the Ford Administration, the Soviet Union, and the South African and Cuban regimes in the domestic affairs of [Angola].

Speculating on Senate Legislative Action

§ 44.62 It is not in order in debate to refer to legislative actions which might be taken by named members of the Senate, or by Senators designated by position, and the Chair calls Members to order on his own initiative for violating this rule of comity.

On Oct. 11, 1984,⁽¹⁴⁾ Speaker Pro Tempore Steny H. Hoyer, of Maryland, exercised his initiative in calling a Member to order for references to members of the Senate:

MR. [STEPHEN J.] SOLARZ [of New York]: If the gentleman will continue to yield, it is too late in effect, for another rule. It is too late for another bill, too late for another conference, too late for another amendment. It is this or nothing.

Mr. Speaker, if this is adopted, we have reason to believe that it can pass in the Senate. Senator Heinz, who has been one of the key actors in this whole drama in the other body, is committed to moving it forward.

We understand the very distinguished majority leader is looking sympathetically on this approach in the other body.

There is strong support for it, but if this goes down, it is all over.

I know that we are not supposed to mention other names in other bodies, but several Members have done it here today. But I can tell you that the chairman of the Banking Committee, when you have taken away his authority and put something in here, he is not going to accept that. Neither is the majority leader, and neither is—

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman should not refer, as the Chair observed earlier, to possible actions of Members of the other body.

§ 44.63 The Chair admonished Members that statements in debate speculating as to the intent of the Senate or of individual Senators as to action in that body on legislation pending in the House was a violation of the rule of comity.

14. 130 CONG. REC. 32151, 32153, 98th Cong. 2d Sess.

During consideration of the Local Government Antitrust Act of 1984 (H.R. 6027) in the House on Oct. 11, 1984,⁽¹⁵⁾ the Speaker Pro Tempore called Members to order for references to specific Senators:

MR. [MARTIN O.] SABO [of Minnesota]: . . . Are certain Senators serious when they say they would leave all the municipalities in the country subject to antitrust suits unless they can have their way in overriding this rider? I cannot make that judgment.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁶⁾ The Chair would observe that the discussion about the other body, of course, and what they may or may not do is speculation and that is not consistent with the rules and would urge Members to try to refrain from such expressions. . . .

MR. PHILIP M. CRANE [of Illinois]: I respect the statement of the Speaker, but I have before me a letter from the National Association of Counties, signed by Matthew Coffey, who is executive director, indicating that from the standpoint of county government this is the most important issue to come through the 98th Congress and that they reluctantly went along with this FTC provision added to it because, in their own words, the Senate has made it clear that they will not accept protective legislation unless this FTC provision is included.

15. 130 CONG. REC. 32221-23, 98th Cong. 2d Sess.

16. Steny H. Hoyer (Md.).

Senate is a broad term. How can anyone read the mind of the Senate? My interest is that if there is anybody who is conversant, because I certainly know the mechanisms whereby that could be an obstructionist body to passage if this legislation were made, but can anyone provide any insight as to specifics with regard to Senate objections? . . .

MR. [JOHN F.] SEIBERLING [of Ohio]: . . . The problem was not a Senate conferee, but another Member who would exercise his full powers as a Member of that body.

MR. [HENRY J.] HYDE [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, would the gentleman yield further?

MR. [CHARLES] WILSON [of Texas]: I yield.

MR. HYDE: I think the gentleman is talking about a different Member of the other body. This illustrates the terrible confusion on this issue.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentlemen are out of order and should delete specific references to the other body's Members.

§ 44.64 The Chair will call to order Members who make improper references in debate to proceedings in the Senate.

On Feb. 27, 1985,⁽¹⁷⁾ the Speaker admonished a Member not to refer to proceedings in the other body:

17. 131 CONG. REC. 3850, 99th Cong. 1st Sess.

(Mr. Glickman asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

MR. [DAN] GLICKMAN [of Kansas]: Mr. Speaker, reports are that the leadership of the other body, fearing the votes might be there to pass farm credit legislation similar to that which we are taking up today, has been delaying votes.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁸⁾ Under the rules the gentleman is not to refer to proceedings in the other body.

Addressing Remarks to Members of Senate

§ 44.65 It is improper in debate to call on Senators to act or to characterize action or inaction of the Senate.

On Apr. 29, 1986,⁽¹⁹⁾ the Speaker Pro Tempore exercised his initiative in calling to order a Member for references to the Senate. The proceedings were as follows:

(Mr. Schumer asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

MR. [CHARLES E.] SCHUMER [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, it was with some confusion that I read in today's New York Times that a distinguished Member of the other body said that Congress had become "so enmeshed in political maneuvering" that it cannot produce a Federal budget. A little later in the article he said he wanted to wait until he could get a majority of his party to agree on a budget before he would bring one to the floor. And the confusion about this, Mr. Speaker, is very simple. There are 24 Republicans generally on the right side of the other body who are saying that they will not go for a budget unless XYZ is met.

That is no way to produce a budget, Mr. Speaker. If on our side of the aisle we decided that we had to bring every Member along and every Member's specific interest had to be weighed without compromise, we would not have a budget either. . . .

I say to my colleagues in the other body, it is about time you tried to reach a consensus, as some of your Members are starving to do, and move on a budget in the Senate.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽²⁰⁾ The Chair wishes to point out that the gentleman should not refer to proceedings from the other body.

§ 45. —Reference to Gallery Occupants

By standing rule of the House, no Member may introduce or refer to any occupant of the galleries of the House.⁽¹⁾ The rule is strictly enforced, and the Speaker may intervene on his own initiative to prevent infraction thereof.⁽²⁾ The rule may not be suspended by permission to proceed out of order, even for commendations for honored guests.⁽³⁾

Generally; Reference to Guests

§ 45.1 Reference in debate to an honored guest in the gallery is not in order under House rules, even with permission to proceed out of order.⁽⁴⁾

On July 27, 1954,⁽⁵⁾ during debate on a bill, Mr. Clarence Cannon, of Missouri, yielded to Mr. Walter H. Judd, of Minnesota, who stated his purpose to call attention to a “French nurse who is in the gallery.” Chairman Benjamin F. James, of Pennsylvania, ordered Mr. Judd to suspend since the rules of the House prohibited references to persons in the gallery. Mr. Judd then asked for unanimous consent to proceed out of order, and the Chairman answered as follows:

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman may not proceed out of order for the purpose which he manifestly intends to use the time. The Chair regrets extremely that he must so hold under the rules of procedure of the House. We are all conscious of the great heroism of the person to whom the Chair knows that the gentleman wishes to allude, but it is a matter of extreme regret that because of the rules of the House, reference may not be made to anyone in the gallery.

MR. JUDD: I shall not say anything about the gallery. I shall say she is on the Hill today.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair greatly regrets that under the rules of procedure of the House, the gentleman must be denied the privilege of introducing anyone in the gallery which, I know, every Member of the House would greatly appreciate in this instance, if it were possible under the rules.

MR. JUDD: Mr. Chairman, I had no intention of introducing anyone in the gallery. Is it not possible to refer here to persons who are in our country?

THE CHAIRMAN: It is not possible to refer to any person in the gallery.

MR. JUDD: May I not call attention to a most distinguished visitor in our country today?

Speaker John N. Garner (Tex.) independently invoked a prohibition against introducing gallery occupants. 6 Cannon's Precedents § 197.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman may refer to one who is in our country.

MR. JUDD: Well, then, I should like to refer to the distinguished heroine of Dien Bien Phu who we, in the United States, are happy these days to welcome to our shores and to our city, and to pay tribute to her as a person whose heroism is acclaimed by all, and as a symbol of all women of the world who in times of great crisis and peril are faithful to their duty, particularly that of ministering to men wounded in the defense of freedom. We pay tribute to her wherever she may be in our country at the present moment.

Similarly, on Apr. 16, 1940,⁽⁶⁾ Speaker Pro Tempore Sam Rayburn, of Texas, called to order Mr. Bernard J. Gehrman, of Wisconsin, for calling attention to "a couple of children that were rescued in Finland" who were in the gallery, over Mr. Gehrman's protestations that the children were rescued from a war zone through the efforts of the State Department.⁽⁷⁾

§ 45.2 It is a violation of the rules for a Member to call attention to any person or group in the gallery, including his constituents.

MR. [ROBERT F.] RICH [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman and members of the Committee, it so happens that I have some of my constituents come to the House once in awhile and visit me, and they happen to be in the gallery now. I was in the gallery when I heard the statement made by the chairman of the subcommittee, and immediately started down.

MR. [FRANK E.] HOOK [of Michigan]: Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁹⁾ The gentleman will state it.

MR. HOOK: If I understand the rules correctly, no reference is to be made to any parties in the gallery. I make the point of order against the statement of the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Michigan properly understands the rules of the House. The gentleman from Pennsylvania will proceed in order.

Guests Interested in Pending Bill

§ 45.3 Reference to federal officials present in the gallery and interested in pending legislation is a breach of order.

On Feb. 6, 1964,⁽¹⁰⁾ the following exchange and ruling took place:

MR. [PAUL C.] JONES of Missouri: . . . I think this is just another example of how misinformed we have been on some of the features of this bill. . . . [W]hat are you looking at the gallery for? I know the Justice Department is there. Maybe the guy who prepared the figures is up there in the gallery. If he is, he ought to step down here and keep the man posted.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹¹⁾ The gentleman from Missouri, I am sure, knows the rules.

MR. JONES of Missouri: I am not addressing the gallery.

THE CHAIRMAN: You are not to refer to anybody in the gallery. The gentleman will proceed in order.

§ 45.4 It is not in order in debate to refer to or to direct questions regarding pending legislation to persons in the gallery; and the Chair must on his own initiative enforce this rule.

On Oct. 19, 1977,⁽¹²⁾ Chairman Morris K. Udall, of Arizona, exercised his duty to enforce the rule⁽¹³⁾ prohibiting reference to occupants of the gallery during debate. The following proceedings occurred during consideration of the Energy Transportation Security Act of 1977 (H.R. 1037) in the Committee of the Whole:

MR. [PAUL N.] MCCLOSKEY [Jr., of California]: Mr. Chairman, I notice the sole administration spokesman, the Maritime Administrator, is in the gallery. Can we get the administration's position, so that the House can be advised?

It was never discussed in committee. Can we ask the Administrator what the administration's position is?

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will proceed in order. The Chair will inform the gentleman from California (Mr. McCloskey) that the precedents of the House do not permit questions of persons in the House gallery and the rules do not permit reference in debate to persons in the gallery.

§ 45.5 It is a breach of order in debate to refer to the observations of an occupant of the gallery on a bill pending before the House.

On June 4, 1963, the House was considering civil rights legislation which engendered numerous quorum calls and motions to adjourn. During the debate, Mr. Clark MacGregor, of Minnesota, yielded to Mr. William T. Cahill, of New Jersey, who stated that he "thought the House might like to have the observation of a disinterested, objective observer who was sitting up in the gallery and who happens to be a visitor of mine". Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, interrupted Mr. Cahill and ordered him to suspend, since reference to anyone in the gallery or reference to his observations or opinions was not consistent with the rules of the House.⁽¹⁴⁾

References to the Press Gallery

§ 45.6 It is not in order for a Member to refer to or address remarks to the press gallery.

On Apr. 24, 1963,⁽¹⁵⁾ Chairman Eugene J. Keogh, of New York, ruled as follows on a point of order:

MR. [THOMAS B.] CURTIS [of Missouri]: Mr. Chairman, I want to say to my so-called liberal friends who voted the motion up which closed off debate on such a serious matter that you have clearly demonstrated your concern for the basic civil liberties.

I would say to the press that this is a good observation—

MR. [ROSS] BASS [of Tennessee]: Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the gentleman is out of order in addressing the press gallery or any other gallery from the floor of the House.

MR. CURTIS: I am not addressing the press gallery. I am addressing—

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Missouri will suspend. The Chair advises the gentleman that the correct parliamentary procedure is for the gentleman to address the Chair and only the Chair. The gentleman will proceed in accordance with the rules.

Duty of Speaker

§ 45.7 When a Member indicates in debate that he intends to make reference to an occupant of the gallery, the Chair on his own initiative invokes the rule prohibiting such references.

On July 27, 1954,⁽¹⁶⁾ a Member to whom time was yielded stated his purpose to call attention to a person in the gallery who had demonstrated great heroism in foreign combat. Chairman Benjamin F. James, of Pennsylvania, interrupted the remarks of Mr. Walter H. Judd, of Minnesota, to ask him to suspend due to those provisions of House rules which prohibit reference to any occupant of the gallery in House debate.⁽¹⁷⁾

For an occasion where the Speaker did not hear a reference to gallery occupants and therefore did not call the Member speaking to order, see 111 CONG. REC. 6022, 6023, 89th Cong. 1st Sess., Mar. 25, 1965.

(when the rule was not yet adopted) not to recognize any Member for the purpose of calling attention to gallery occupants.

On June 27, 1932,⁽¹⁸⁾ Speaker John N. Garner, of Texas, made an announcement after permission had been requested to address the House:

MR. [JAMES V.] McCLINTIC of Oklahoma: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for one minute to make an announcement.

THE SPEAKER: Is it concerning anyone in the gallery?

MR. McCLINTIC of Oklahoma: No, sir.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair desires to state that after consultation with a great many Members, he believes it is the better policy not to recognize Members to call attention to guests in the gallery. The Chair does not intend to recognize anyone in the future for that purpose.

Acknowledging a Visitor Without Reference to His Presence

§ 45.9 On one occasion, a Member obtained unanimous consent to speak out of order on time yielded him during debate on a motion to suspend the rules, and delivered encomiums to a guest in the gallery, but did not mention the guest's presence or directly address remarks to him.

On Sept. 25, 1978,⁽¹⁹⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House:

MR. [THOMAS S.] FOLEY [of Washington]: I yield to the gentleman from Ohio for the purpose of a unanimous-consent request.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. Luken was allowed to speak out of order.)

MR. [THOMAS A.] LUKEN [of Ohio]: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the fact that the House has given its unanimous consent to take just 1 minute or at the most 2 minutes of the time of the House.

I rise today to salute a man whose accomplishments on the baseball diamond amount to more than most records in National League baseball history. I am talking about my friend and fellow Cincinnati and constituent, Pete Rose.

The Senate has not adopted as part of its rules Jefferson's Manual,⁽¹⁾ which prohibits reference in either the House or in the Senate to Members or proceedings of the other body.⁽²⁾ And it has been said that since the Senate is a self-governing body it is for the Senate to determine how far Senators might go in commenting upon language used or proceedings in the other body.⁽³⁾ Nevertheless, the Senate generally follows the parliamentary principle that it is a breach of order, as interfering with the independence of the two Houses, to allude to what has been done in the other House as a means of influencing the judgment of the one in which a question is pending.⁽⁴⁾ References to the House or its Members have on occasion been ruled out when a point of order was raised, but it is not the custom in the Senate for the Chair to initiate action with respect to such remarks.⁽⁵⁾

Reference to House proceedings on a bill being considered in the Senate has been permitted by unanimous consent,⁽⁶⁾ or where the propriety of House action or procedure on a Senate measure is in issue.⁽⁷⁾

The Presiding Officer of the Senate has ruled that, when referring to a Member of the House, a Senator may not refer to the Member by name⁽⁸⁾ or impute to him unworthy motives or falsehood.⁽⁹⁾

The House has on a very few occasions messaged resolutions to the Senate, characterizing language by a Senator in debate as unparliamentary and as a reflection on the House or on its Members. Pursuant to one such message the Senate ordered the objectionable language expunged from the Record,⁽¹⁰⁾ but more recently the Senate took no action on a similar House resolution.⁽¹¹⁾

The Senate has messaged a resolution to the House concerning objectionable language by a Representative in debate impugning a Senator; although the House returned the resolution to the Senate on the ground that it was a breach of privilege (because declaring a Representative's statement untrue), the House later expunged the objectionable remarks from the Record on the grounds they violated the rules of the House.⁽¹²⁾ rule certain references in debate to Members of the House.

Resolved, That rule XIX be amended to add a new paragraph at the end thereof, as follows:

“8. No Senator in debate shall by any form of words impute to any Member of the House of Representatives any conduct or motive unworthy or unbecoming a Representative.”

The resolution was referred to the Committee on Rules and Administration, but no action was taken in the 88th Congress.

§ 46.2 In contrast to earlier decisions, the President of the Senate ruled in the 71st Congress that since the Senate had not adopted Jefferson’s Manual as a part of its standing rules, references to the proceedings of the House were left to the discretion of Senators.

On Apr. 21, 1930, Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, discussed at length in the Senate the alleged action of the House in retaining a Senate joint resolution for more than 10 months rather than referring it to committee (S.J. Res. 3, the so-called “lame-duck” constitutional amendment).¹⁴ Senator Norris referred extensively to House proceedings and described the action taken on the resolution as “arbitrary.”

14. For Senator Norris’ remarks, see 72 CONG. REC. 7311–13, 71st Cong. 2d Sess.

Senator Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio, then arose to make the point of order that “the rule of the Senate does not permit a Senator on the floor of the Senate to criticize what is said by a Congressman on the floor of the House nor the action of the House.”

Senator Norris challenged Senator Fess to point out any such standing rule, and after intervening debate, Senator Fess cited page 248 of Jefferson’s Manual, prohibiting Members of one House from referring to the proceedings of the other House. Senator Norris responded that the provisions of Jefferson’s Manual stated general parliamentary law but were not binding or adopted by the Senate as part of the rules.

Vice President Charles Curtis, of Kansas, ruled on the question:

The Senate has not adopted Jefferson’s Manual as a part of the rules of the Senate. It is left to the discretion of Senators as to what they may or may not say about the proceedings of the House in connection with the resolution under consideration.

MR. FESS: This is not a rule.

THE VICE PRESIDENT: The Chair makes that ruling now.

Parliamentarian’s Note: In so ruling, the Vice President overruled decisions to the contrary by President Pro Tempore Jacob H.

Gallinger, of New Hampshire, on Aug. 26, 1912,⁽¹⁵⁾ and by Presiding Officer William H. King, of Utah, on July 31, 1917.⁽¹⁶⁾

Discretion of Presiding Officer

§ 46.3 The Presiding Officer of the Senate stated in response to a parliamentary inquiry that the propriety of references to Representatives is a matter of discretion with the Presiding Officer.

On Feb. 20, 1963,⁽¹⁷⁾ Senator Michael J. Mansfield, of Montana, inquired of Presiding Officer Birch E. Bayh, of Indiana, whether reference by name to a Member of the House was proper in Senate debate. The Presiding Officer responded:

The Chair respectfully submits that, according to rule XIX of the Senate, the point which the majority leader raises is not mentioned; that the subject covered in his question to the Chair has been a matter of discretion with the Presiding Officer at the specific time in question. Unless a point of order is made by the majority leader or any other Member of the Senate, the Chair will not call to order the Senator who is speaking in the Senate.

Announcements

§ 46.4 The Senate Majority Leader announced his intention in the 84th Congress to seek enforcement of the rule of comity as to disparaging remarks between the two Houses.

On Jan. 18, 1955,⁽¹⁸⁾ Lyndon B. Johnson, of Texas, the Majority Leader of the Senate, made the following announcement on the floor:

Mr. President, I have a brief announcement I should like to make. Yesterday in the House of Representatives the beloved and respected Speaker, Mr. Rayburn, made an announcement of interest, and I think of tremendous importance, to this body. The Speaker advised that it would be his practice during this Congress to enforce strictly the rule of comity between the Houses when Members of that body arose to make derogatory remarks about either the Senate or any Member of the Senate.⁽¹⁹⁾

18. 101 CONG. REC. 441, 442, 84th Cong. 1st Sess.

19. The announcement of Jan. 17, 1955, by Speaker Sam Rayburn (Tex.) stat-

Mr. President, I should like at this time to announce that, as majority leader, I, too, will follow the long-standing precedents of this body during the coming Congress in the enforcement of this rule of comity. Good relations between the House and the Senate and its Members are of the utmost importance in these critical times. I think it is equally important that the standards of Senate rule XIX which apply in the Senate should, under the precedents of comity between the Houses, be vigorously applied if the occasion arises.

It will be my intention to see that that rule is followed in the Senate while I am sitting in this chair as majority leader.

MR. [WILLIAM F.] KNOWLAND [of California]: Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

MR. JOHNSON of Texas: I yield to the distinguished minority leader.

MR. KNOWLAND: I should like to associate myself with the distinguished majority leader in his remarks. I think the orderly processes of the two Houses will be better served if the precedents of comity as between the two Houses are followed, and I am sure the public business will be expedited if the Senate observes those precedents and adheres to the rule.

MR. JOHNSON of Texas: I am delighted to have the minority leader associate himself with the statement I have made. It is quite in keeping with the course of conduct he has always followed.

ceedings in the House, but not to its character or integrity.

On July 24, 1954,⁽²⁰⁾ Senator Paul H. Douglas, of Illinois, asked the Presiding Officer in the Senate a parliamentary inquiry:

The Senator from Illinois inquires whether the rules of the Senate permit reference to the proceedings of the House of Representatives. I am aware that the rules of the House of Representatives prohibit such references, and I rise to inquire whether the rules of the Senate prohibit such references, or whether they are permitted under our rules.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER: The Chair will state there is no rule to prevent a Senator from referring to the proceedings of the House of Representatives, but a Senator is not permitted to refer to its character, integrity, and so forth.

Senator Douglas then referred to legislative action of the House on the preceding evening.⁽¹⁾

Effect of Unanimous Consent

§ 46.6 By unanimous consent, a member of the Senate may allude to or quote from the proceedings of the House.

By contrast, Members of the House may not in debate mention the Senate even through complimentary remarks (see § 44.1, supra).

On Feb. 28, 1966,⁽²⁾ during consideration of S. 2791, supplemental military and procurement authorization for fiscal 1966, a Senator raised a parliamentary inquiry:

MR. [J. WILLIAM] FULBRIGHT [of Arkansas]: Mr. President, is it in order to read from a report of a committee of the House of Representatives?

THE PRESIDING OFFICER:⁽³⁾ The Chair reads from page 314 of "Senate Procedure":⁽⁴⁾

Under the precedents it has been held not in order in debate for a Senator to make reference to action by the House of Representatives, to read an extract from the proceedings of the House relating to a matter under discussion, to read from a speech made by a Member of the House during that particular Congress on the pending subject, to refer to or make any allusion to or comment upon the proceedings of the House of Representatives, or to make reference to the proceedings in the House on the matter under consideration for the purpose of influencing the action of the Senate.

It is out of order, as interfering with the independence of the two Houses, to allude to what has been done in the other House as a means of influencing the judgment of the one in which a question is pending.

However, if no objection is interposed, the Senator may proceed.

MR. [RICHARD B.] RUSSELL of Georgia: Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senator from Arkansas be permitted to read the report of any House committees.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER: Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Portions of House Report No. 1293 on the pending bill were then read in debate and inserted in the Record.⁽⁵⁾

Reference to Speaker of the House

§ 46.7 It has been held out of order in Senate debate to refer to the actions of the Speaker of the House.

On Aug. 12, 1935,⁽⁶⁾ Senator Huey P. Long, of Louisiana, stated in Senate debate "The Speaker of the House went to the White House, and he gave out a statement on the steps of the White House." Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, rose to the point of order that a Senator had no right to refer to the action of the Speaker of the House in debate. Vice President John N. Garner, of Texas, sustained the point of order. Senator Long then continued:

I may not mention that he is a Representative? Very well; then I will forget that; but once upon a time there was a man of influence in the United States who announced on the White House steps that there would not be anything done about the Black bill, and there was not anything done about it.

§ 46.8 The President of the Senate ruled that a Senator could refer critically to the Speaker of the House when the Senate was considering a resolution to inquire into House inaction on a Senate joint resolution.

On Apr. 21, 1930,⁽⁷⁾ the Senate was considering a resolution to inquire into the failure of the Speaker of the House to take prompt action on Senate Joint Resolution 3, a constitutional amendment passed by the Senate. Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, referred extensively in debate to the action of Speaker Nicholas Longworth, of Ohio, which he described as "arbitrary."

In response to a point of order, Vice President Charles Curtis, of Kansas, ruled that "it is left to the discretion of the Senators as to what they may or may not say about the proceedings of the House in connection with the resolution under consideration."

Naming House Member

§ 46.9 The Senate rules do not specifically prohibit a Senator's reference to a Member of the House by name, but such a reference, if objected to, has been held out of order.

On Feb. 20, 1963,⁽⁸⁾ Senator John J. Williams, of Delaware, had the floor in the Senate and was referring critically and by name to a Member of the House, Adam C. Powell, of New York. Senator Michael J. Mansfield, of Montana, asked Senator Williams to yield for the propounding of a parliamentary inquiry and stated as follows:

Mr. President, at page 265 of the manual entitled "Senate Procedure," the following statement appears in the fifth full paragraph:

It has been held out of order for a Senator to make references to Members of the House—

MR. WILLIAMS of Delaware: Mr. President—

MR. MANSFIELD: The next phrase reads—I am sure the Senator would wish me to keep the continuity—"to refer to a Member of the House by name."

My question is—and I ask this question in my present capacity for clarification: Is the reference to "to refer to a Member of the House by name” out of order?

8. 109 CONG. REC. 2648, 88th Cong. 1st Sess.

Presiding Officer Birch E. Bayh, of Indiana, responded as follows:

The Chair respectfully submits that, according to rule XIX of the Senate, the point which the majority leader raises is not mentioned; that the subject covered in his question to the Chair has been a matter of discretion with the Presiding Officer at the specific time in question. Unless a point of order is made by the majority leader or any other Member of the Senate, the Chair will not call to order the Senator who is speaking in the Senate.

No point of order was made against Senator Williams’ remarks.

On Aug. 26, 1935, the Senate was considering H.R. 9215, a supplemental deficiency appropriation bill. Senator Huey P. Long, of Louisiana, asked whether he would be permitted to read from the Congressional Record portions of House proceedings on the bill, and Vice President John N. Garner, of Texas, ruled that he did have a right to so read from the Record. Senator Long read a lengthy excerpt and then, in commenting upon it, mentioned the name of a Member of the House. The Vice President ruled:

The Chair calls the Senator from Louisiana to order. . . . The Senator has no right to refer to the House of Representatives. The Chair has called his attention to that rule before, and does so now for the second time. The next time the Chair calls the Senator’s attention to it the Senator will have to take his seat.

Senator Long protested that he had been granted permission to read from the Record and the Vice President responded:

The Senator is familiar with the rule of the Senate—it has been called to his attention a number of times—with reference to referring to an individual Member of the House of Representatives, or to the House of Representatives itself in its procedure. The Senator did ask the Chair if he could read the Record of the House of Representatives. The Chair thinks he could; but the Chair does not think the Senator ought to speak with reference to the Membership of the House, or of the House itself, in a derogatory manner. That is in violation of the rule of the Senate.⁽⁹⁾

Reference to Member’s Integrity or Motives

§ 46.10 A Senator introduced a resolution to expunge from the Record certain remarks made in the Senate impugning the integrity of a Member of the House.

On Feb. 6, 1963,⁽¹⁰⁾ Senator Wayne L. Morse, of Oregon, addressed the Senate on the subject of comity between the two Houses. He took exception to a speech made on the Senate floor the previous day by Senator John J. Williams, of Delaware, entitled "The Administration Has Been Shoveling Out the Taxpayers' Money to Congressman Adam Powell."⁽¹¹⁾ Senator Morse discussed the precedents of the Senate on the subject:

9. 79 CONG. REC. 14735, 14736, 74th Cong. 1st Sess.

10. 109 CONG. REC. 1927–29, 88th Cong. 1st Sess.

. . . I rise to take exception to a speech made on the floor of the Senate yesterday by the Senator from Delaware. It contained, in my opinion, such a serious imputation against the character and reputation of a colleague on the House side that in my judgment the speech should not stand, at least without a protest. It should not, in my judgment, stand as a precedent.

Therefore, before finishing my remarks, I shall offer . . . a resolution to expunge the speech of the Senator from Delaware on yesterday from the permanent record of the Congressional Record. . . .

The Senator from Delaware has made clear to me that he does not intend to expunge his speech from the Record, and I respect his attitude. . . .

I am not going to speak at any great length, but I am going to start my discussion by calling attention to rule XIX of the Senate, to be found on page 20 of the Senate Manual. I will read section 2 of it, which is relevant and pertinent to my remarks:

11. Senator Williams' speech, which claimed misuse of government funds for the benefit of Mr. Powell, appears at 109 CONG. REC. 1769-71, 88th Cong. 1st Sess., Feb. 5, 1963.

No Senator in debate shall, directly or indirectly, by any form of words impute to another Senator or to other Senators any conduct or motive unworthy or unbecoming a Senator.

Section 3 reads:

No Senator in debate shall refer offensively to any State of the Union.

Senator Morse then introduced the following resolution (S. Res. 85):

Resolved, That the matter appearing in the daily issue of the Congressional Record of February 5 (legislative day, January 15), 1963, beginning on page 1673, at the top of the second column, under the caption "The Administration Has Been Shoveling Out the Taxpayers' Money to Congressman Adam Powell," and extending down to and including so much of the second column on page 1675 as precedes the matter entitled "The New York City Newspaper Strike," be, and it is hereby, ordered to be expunged from the Record.

No action was taken on the resolution during the 88th Congress.

§ 46.11 It is not in order in Senate debate to impute unworthy motives to Members of the House.

On Feb. 28, 1966,⁽¹²⁾ Senator Stephen M. Young, of Ohio, arose in the Senate to state a question of personal privilege, and concluded by stating a parliamentary inquiry to the Chair:

12. 112 CONG. REC. 4245, 89th Cong. 2d Sess.

Mr. President, I rise to a question of personal privilege. A short time ago my attention was called to some remarks made in the other body on Thursday by Representative Wayne Hays, of the 18th Ohio District, and Robert Sweeney, Ohio Representative at large, as reported on page 4019 of the Congressional Record advertng to the Vietnam conflict.

According to the Congressional Record, the Representative from the 18th Ohio District stated:

Mr. Chairman, there is one matter that I would like to mention. I would like to sort of apologize to the House of Representatives. There have been a lot of remarks made on the other side of this building which I believe have aided our enemies out there, because I believe they are hoping for us to get tired of this war and quit. I further believe that is the reason they think they are winning.

Yesterday the junior Senator from my State made a personal attack upon the Secretary of State and said that he ought to resign. On behalf of the people of my district, I want to apologize because I supported the junior Senator a year ago last fall. . . .

Mr. President, I propound a parliamentary inquiry: Would it be a violation of the rules of the Senate were I to assert in this Chamber at this time that Representative Hays, of Ohio, and one-term Representative Sweeney, of Ohio, are guilty of falsely, viciously, and maliciously making stupid, lying statements assailing the loyalty and patriotism of Senators, including the junior Senator from Ohio, and that they are liars in alleging that we "have aided our enemies"?

Presiding Officer Ernest Gruening, of Alaska, ruled as follows:

In response to the inquiry of the Senator from Ohio, the Chair states that under the precedents it has been held not in order in debate for a Senator to make reference to action by the House of Representatives. Also, it has been held out of order for Senators to make reference to Members of the House or to refer to a Member of the House by name, to criticize the action of the Speaker, to refer in debate to a Member of the House in opprobrious terms, or to impute to him unworthy motives.

MR. YOUNG of Ohio: I, of course, abide by the ruling of the Chair, and I respect it. If, however, on some future occasion a similar contemptible attack is made on me with the insect-like buzzing of lying allegations by either or both of these publicity seekers, I shall surely embalm and embed them in the liquid amber of my remarks.

§ 46.12 It is a breach of order in debate in the Senate to refer to a Representative as a "liar."

On Feb. 28, 1966,⁽¹³⁾ after a Senator had raised a parliamentary inquiry on the subject of references in debate to Representatives and had received a ruling from Presiding Officer Ernest

13. 112 CONG. REC. 4246, 89th Cong. 2d Sess.

Gruening, of Alaska, Senator Everett McKinley Dirksen, of Illinois, raised another parliamentary inquiry on the subject:

Mr. President, for the sake of clarification and a meticulous interpretation of the rules, I should like to inquire whether calling a Member of another body a liar is an imputation of improper motive.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER: Under the precedents, that would not be in order.

House Action on Senate References

§ 46.13 A Senator having assailed a House Member in debate, the House messaged to the Senate a resolution declaring the language a breach of privilege and requesting the Senate to take appropriate action concerning the subject.

On Sept. 27, 1951,⁽¹⁴⁾ Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, arose in the House to state a question of privilege based on critical references in the Senate to a Member of the House and to introduce a resolution to be agreed to and then messaged to the Senate:

It appears from page 12098 of the Congressional Record of yesterday, September 26, 1951, that in the other body, a Member of that body from

14. 97 CONG. REC. 12269, 12270, 82d Cong. 1st Sess.

Michigan, among other things, from the floor of that body made the following statement:

Now, Mr. President, I should like to address myself briefly to the allegations and insinuations of the Representative from the Second District of Michigan, Mr. Meader.

According to the newspaper clippings reaching me from the Republican National Committee, Mr. Meader and others have charged that the Democratic Party in Michigan is selling jobs in the Post Office Department. That, Mr. President, is what I meant by a political smear. Mr. Meader is a lawyer. I am surprised that he is reaching conclusions before the evidence is in. He has reached his conclusion on the basis of the fund-solicitation letter plus one letter from a constituent who complains that, as a veteran, he was passed over unlawfully for a postmaster's appointment. I immediately asked Mr. Meader for the identity of this man.

Mr. Meader refused to let me know the identity of the man.

Mr. Meader must be acquainted with the civil-service and post-office laws and regulations governing these matters. He must know that without cause a veteran cannot possibly be passed over by a nonveteran. The rest of his anonymous correspondent's complaint deals with hearsay.

The foregoing language which assails a Member of the House constitutes a breach of privilege. Inasmuch as the House is without authority to itself act to correct the foregoing, I send to the Clerk's desk the following resolution:

HOUSE RESOLUTION 441

Resolved, That the language published in the daily Congressional Record on Wednesday, September 26, 1951, on page 12377, in the report of an address to the Senate by the Senator from Michigan, Mr. Moody, is improper, unparliamentary, and a reflection on the character of a Member of the House, the gentleman from Michigan, Mr. Meader, and constitutes a breach of privilege and is calculated to create unfriendly relations and conditions between the House of Representatives and the Senate: Therefore be it Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be transmitted to the Senate and that the Senate be requested to take appropriate action concerning the subject.

Mr. Speaker, the precedent for this action is found in Eighth Cannon's Precedents, page 231, section 2516. From that precedent it appears that on August 18, 1921, a Member of the other body made certain remarks referring, though not by name, to a Member of the House, which reflected upon the House Member's integrity in his representative capacity.

On August 22, following, a question of privilege was raised and a resolution, similar to the one which has been sent to the Clerk's desk, was adopted by the House and a copy was sent to the other body. Subsequently, on a unanimous-consent request in the other body, the matter referred to in the resolution was expunged from the Record. The purpose of this resolution, if that be the sense of the Senate, is to call for similar action with reference to the language used yesterday and which, by name, challenged the integrity of the Member of the House from Michigan, Mr. Meader, in his representative capacity.

Mr. Speaker, it will be noted that I have referred to a Member of the other body by name, but I followed word for word, except as to identity, a previous resolution and ruling by a former Speaker of the House to which reference has been made. I send a resolution to the Clerk's desk.

The House adopted the resolution without further debate, but no action was taken by the Senate in the 82d Congress.⁽¹⁵⁾

Reference to Presence of Member of House on Senate Floor

§ 46.14 During debate in the Senate, a member of the Senate introduced and acknowledged the presence on the floor of a Member of the House, discussed actions of and communications between Members of the House, and caused to be inserted in the Record letters from the said Member of the House to the Speaker and to the Majority Leader of the Senate.

On Feb. 10, 1978,⁽¹⁶⁾ during debate in the Senate on the ratification of the Panama Canal Treaty, 15. For a similar occurrence, where a Member of the House rose to a question of privilege based on a Senator's having assailed the House in debate, see 102 CONG. REC. 12522, 12523, 84th Cong. 2d Sess., July 12, 1956. The Senator in question, Hubert H. Humphrey (Minn.) withdrew the objectionable remarks from the permanent Congressional Record.

16. 124 CONG. REC. 3204, 3205, 95th Cong. 2d Sess.

Mr. Orrin G. Hatch, of Utah, made the following statements:

MR. HATCH: Mr. President . . . I would . . . like to call the attention of the Senate to the fact that one of our distinguished colleagues from the House has just brought some, I think, important papers to me.

I would like to just say that this colleague's name is Congressman George Hansen from the Second District of Idaho. Congressman Hansen has been very active of late doing everything he possibly can to justify and to bring about a means whereby the House of Representatives will not be ignored with regard to the Panama Canal treaties, and that the article IV, section 3, clause 2 sections of the Constitution likewise will not be ignored.

Congressman Hansen has put a great deal of time and effort into talking with his colleagues in the House, and he has brought over a list of 219 Members of the House who are basically subscribers or cosponsors of his resolution which states:

That it is the sense of the Congress of the United States that any right to, title to, or interest in the property of the United States Government agencies in the Panama Canal Zone or any real property and improvements thereon located in the Zone should not be . . . disposed of to any foreign government without specific authorization . . . by an Act of Congress.

Two hundred and nineteen of his House Members have cosponsored this resolution [Congressman Hansen] has also brought to me two letters, one written to our own distinguished colleague and friend Senator Robert C. Byrd, the maajority leader, and a letter to the Honorable Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr., Speaker of the House of Representatives.

I would just quote from one aspect of the letter to Speaker O'Neill.

Congressman Hansen states in his letter to Speaker O'Neill.

You will note that the concept of the Resolution is to protect the integrity of the legislative process against default or Executive usurpation. . . .

MR. ROBERT C. BYRD [of West Virginia]: For the Record, my answer was that under the Constitution the Senate has the sole prerogative and responsibility to give its approval to the ratification of a treaty No. 1; and, No. 2, property transfers can be self-executing by treaties that are approved by the Senate. . . .

THE PRESIDING OFFICER:⁽¹⁷⁾ There is a request before this body for a unanimous consent to have printed in the Record certain documents [together with the remarks pertinent thereto]. . . .

Is there objection?

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record. . . .

Reference to President

§47.1 In discussing the President of the United States in debate a Member may not refer to him contemptuously or by surname.

On Jan. 23, 1933,⁽⁶⁾ Mr. James M. Beck, of Pennsylvania, arose to a point of order and stated as follows:

The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. McFadden] who is now addressing the House has on more than one occasion in the course of his address referred to the President of the United States as “Hoover.” My point of order is that it does not accord with the dignity of this House that the President of the United States should be contemptuously referred to by his last name.

Speaker Pro Tempore Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, sustained the point of order.

§ 47.2 A statement in debate that a Member would have no more reason for criticizing the administration than for “shoving the Vice President around” was held not a breach of order.

On June 10, 1964,⁽⁷⁾ Mr. Wayne L. Hays, of Ohio, stated in response to a comment critical of the present administration, “You would not have any more reason for criticizing the administration than you would for shoving the Vice President around in Dallas.” (Addressed to Mr. Edgar Franklin Foreman [Tex.]).

The words were demanded to be taken down, and Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, ruled that there was nothing objectionable or in violation of the rules of the House in the language used, being simply an opinion by Mr. Hays.

Conduct of Government Officials

§ 47.3 In debate Members may arraign in strong terms the conduct of officials of the executive branch of the government.

7. 110 CONG. REC. 13275, 88th Cong. 2d Sess.

On Oct. 1, 1940,⁽⁸⁾ Mr. John C. Schafer, of Wisconsin, delivered the following remarks in debate:

. . . God knows our half-baked nitwits who are handling the foreign affairs have been carrying on a course of conduct which inevitably will plunge us into the new European war. . . .

Mr. Sam Hobbs, of Alabama, demanded that those words be taken down, and Speaker Pro Tempore Jere Cooper, of Tennessee, ruled that the words were not a breach of order since they did not refer to Members of the House but to certain officials in the executive branch of the government.

Characterization of Government Agency

§ 47.4 A statement in debate referring to a federal agency as a socialist and communist experiment was held not to reflect upon the membership of the House and not to be a breach of order.

On Mar. 31, 1954,⁽⁹⁾ Mr. Ralph W. Gwinn, of New York, speaking on an amendment before the Committee of the Whole stated as follows: "Mr. Chairman, we have had 20 years' experience now with America's first, much-touted, great, Socialist, Communist experiment." (Referring to the Tennessee Valley Authority) Mr. James P. Sutton, of Tennessee, demanded that the words be taken down, and Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, ruled, after Mr. Gwinn unsuccessfully attempted to read a definition of communism, that nothing in the language cited reflected upon the membership of the House or would otherwise be considered unparliamentary.

General Criticism of Government

§ 47.5 A statement in debate characterizing the national government as a "labor government, rapidly headed into a labor dictatorship, which, if not checked, will soon run into labor despotism" was held merely an expression of opinion and not a breach of order.

On Feb. 26, 1942,⁽¹⁰⁾ Mr. Edward E. Cox, of Georgia, stated in debate: "We are already living under a labor government, rapidly headed into a labor dictatorship, which, if not checked, will soon run into labor despotism." Mr. Raymond S. McKeough, of Illinois, demanded that the words be taken down and Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled as follows:

10. 88 CONG. REC. 1714, 77th Cong. 2d Sess.

Whatever might be the opinion of anybody who occupies this place, the present occupant would think that it would be going very far, even though words were harsh, if Members were precluded from expressing an opinion with respect to a Government tendency. The Chair sees only in these words the expression of an opinion by the gentleman from Georgia and therefore feels constrained to hold that they are not unparliamentary.

§ 47.6 The Speaker held that language condemning the government as having become "something hated, something oppressive" did not transgress House rules.

On June 14, 1929,⁽¹¹⁾ the following words were used in debate by Mr. Fiorello H. LaGuardia, of New York, "Why, Mr. Speaker, Uncle Sam, the United States Government, was always considered by the American people as something kindly, something to love; instead, now, it has become something hated, something oppressive." Mr. B. Frank Murphy, of Ohio, demanded that the words be taken down, and Speaker Pro Tempore Thomas S. Williams, of Illinois, ruled that “the gentleman from New York was merely condemning a measure that has been enacted into law. That certainly does not transgress any rule of the House and the Chair holds the words to be in order.”

11. 71 CONG. REC. 2924, 71st Cong. 1st Sess.

Debate on Impeachment

§ 47.7 In presenting impeachment charges a Member is not confined to a bare statement of the charges but may supplement them with argumentative statements as to the official in question.

On May 7, 1935,⁽¹²⁾ Mr. Everett M. Dirksen, of Illinois, rose in order to prefer charges of impeachment against a federal judge. During Mr. Dirksen’s address, during which he stated his personal opinion of the judge in question and of other federal judges, Mr. Hatton W. Sumners, of Texas, arose to state as follows:

I am not familiar with the precedents, but I have the impression that in preferring charges of impeachment, argumentative statements should be avoided as much as possible. If I am wrong in that statement with reference to what the precedents and custom have established, I of course withdraw the observation.⁽¹³⁾

12. 79 CONG. REC. 7081, 74th Cong. 1st Sess.

Mr. Dirksen stated that he had no desire to violate the precedents but stated that there were two additional pages of explanatory matter which he desired either to state to the House or to insert into the Record to elaborate the statement of specific charges that had been made. Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, ruled as follows:

The Chair thinks it is entirely up to the gentleman from Illinois so far as the propriety of his statement is concerned.⁽¹⁴⁾

Similarly, on Jan. 14, 1936, Mr. Robert A. Green, of Florida, arose to present impeachment charges against a federal judge.⁽¹⁵⁾ Mr. Carl E. Mapes, of Michigan, rose to state a point of order that Mr. Green was presenting argumentative and personal statements, after Mr. Green had delivered the following remarks:

. . . I am vitally interested in this investigation for two important reasons: First, from a careful study of the evidence I am convinced that Judge Ritter is an ignorant, unjust, tyrannical, and corrupt judge; that a majority of the people in his district have the same convictions that I have; that confidence in him and his court is lacking; that his usefulness as a judge of the southern district of Florida has long since come to an end. Second, a large portion of the district over which Judge Ritter presides is in my congressional district, and my people demand and feel that they are entitled to a judge learned in the law and one who has dignity, honor, and integrity.⁽¹⁶⁾

Speaker Byrns ruled that Mr. Green was entitled to one hour's debate on the charges and that he could use all or any portion of the hour as he saw fit, including a general discussion of the charges.⁽¹⁷⁾

§ 47.8 In debating articles of impeachment a Member may refer to the political, social, and family background of the accused.

On Mar. 2, 1936, Mr. Hatton W. Summers, of Texas, called up for consideration House Resolution 422, presenting articles of impeachment against Federal Judge Halsted L. Ritter.⁽¹⁸⁾ Extensive debate ensued on the resolution, and Mr. Louis Ludlow, of Indiana, arose to present himself as a "character witness" on behalf of Judge Ritter. He began to discuss the family background of the accused and the "outstanding character and personality" of the accused's father.

Mr. Malcolm C. Tarver, of Georgia, arose to state the point of order that Mr. Ludlow was "endeavoring to read into the Record a statement with regard to the progenitors of the gentleman against whom these impeachment proceedings are pending." Mr. Tarver stated that such matters were not properly to be considered by the House and should not be discussed.⁽¹⁹⁾

Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, ruled that within the four and one-half hours of debate provided for on the resolution, Members could address themselves to any subject relating to the articles of impeachment and the accused.⁽²⁰⁾

Application of Rule of Comity

§ 47.9 The Minority Leader stated that the rule of comity, prohibiting any reference in the House to the Senate or to Senators, was not applicable to criticisms in debate of the Vice President as an official of the executive branch, the Vice President not being a member of the Senate.

On July 22, 1971,⁽¹⁾ Mr. John H. Dent, of Pennsylvania, referred critically in debate to Vice President Spiro T. Agnew. The Minority Leader, Gerald R. Ford, of Michigan, responded that Mr. Dent's remarks were inappropriate and in poor taste, and then discussed in the same context a special-order speech made on the preceding day by Mr. William L. Clay, of Missouri:

. . . If I could, let me add another comment at this point: in a special order yesterday one of the gentlemen from the other side of the aisle, on page 26517, used language in reference to a high official in the U.S. Government that I have never seen used or heard used in this Chamber. I have checked it out, and apparently under the rules of the House, that language of the gentleman from Missouri is not subject to the rules of the House because the Vice President is not a Member of the other body.

MR. [WAYNE L.] HAYS [of Ohio]: May I say to the gentleman—

MR. GERALD R. FORD: May I finish my thought? And I appreciate the gentleman giving me this time.

I cannot imagine somebody in this body on either side of the aisle using language of that kind on the floor of the House in reference to the second ranking Member of the U.S. Government in the executive branch. I could appropriately categorize that language in one way or another, but I would have to use language, in my opinion, that would violate the rules of the House.

It seems to me that the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Clay) for having used that language, owes an apology to the House and an apology to the Vice President.

References to Senators, Candidates for President

§ 47.10 Although it is not in order in debate to criticize a member of the Senate, where a Senator is also a candidate for President or Vice President, his official policies, actions, and opinions as a candidate may be criticized in terms not personally offensive.

On Sept. 29, 1988,⁽²⁾ Speaker James C. Wright, Jr., of Texas, set forth the principles governing references to candidates for President or Vice-President, particularly where a candidate is a member of the Senate. On that day, after a demand that words uttered in debate be taken down as unparliamentary, the Speaker ruled that the remarks characterizing the relationship between Senator and Vice-Presidential candidate J. Danforth Quayle's political words and his living deeds as "hypocrisys” were out of order and should be withdrawn:

(Mr. Williams asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

MR. [PAT] WILLIAMS [of Montana]: Mr. Speaker, yesterday Republican Vice-Presidential candidate Dan Quayle was in Texas. He visited, he was kind enough to go by and visit a Job Corps center in El Paso, and while there he looked 300 Job Corps students in the eye and said, “We believe in you.”

He did not tell them that he had voted to shut that center down. He did not tell them that the Reagan-Bush administration in fact has demanded that every Job Corps center in America, bar none, be closed.

This is the same Senator Quayle that supports wars that he won't fight, the same Senator Quayle who got into law school under an entry minority program that he later votes against.

There is a word for it, my colleagues, it is called hypocrisy.

MR. [DAN] LUNGREN [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I ask that the gentleman's words be taken down. . . .

THE SPEAKER: The Clerk will report the words of the gentleman from Montana.

The Clerk read as follows:

This is the same Senator Quayle that supports wars that he won't fight, the same Senator Quayle who got into law school under an entry minority program that he later votes against.

There is a word for it, my colleagues, it is called hypocrisy.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair has considered closely the question of the use of words to distinguish policies as opposed to individuals. There are precedents touching on proper and improper references in debate and dealing with the preservation of comity between the House and Senate. It is important to recognize that the individual referenced in the remarks not only is a candidate for Vice President of the United States but is a Member of the other body.

The precedents relating to references in debate to the President, Vice President, or to a Member of the other body who is a nominated or declared candidate for President or Vice President permit criticisms of official policy, actions and opinions of that person as a candidate, but do not permit personal abuse, do not permit innuendo and do not permit ridicule, and they do require that the proper rules of decorum must be followed during any debate relating to the President of the United States or a Member of the other body.

It could be argued that there is a distinction between calling an individual a hypocrite, for example, and referring to some policy as hypocrisy, but the Chair has discovered a precedent that seems to be directly in point. In 1945, a Member of the House from Georgia referred to another Member and said, “I was reminded that pretexts are never wanting when hypocrisy wishes to add malice to falsehood or cowardice to stab a foe who cannot defend himself.” Speaker Rayburn ruled that this was out of order as an unparliamentary reference to another Member of the body.

By extension, the same identical words should be held out of order in reference to a Member of the other body whether or not he were a candidate for a high office, and under these circumstances and citing this precedent, the Chair would suggest that the gentleman from Montana withdraw the offending remarks, including the particular word "hypocrisy," and either amend his reference in the permanent Record or delete it. . . .

MR. WILLIAMS: Mr. Speaker, do I understand correctly that the Speaker's ruling is based upon my characterization of a U.S. Senator, in this case Senator Quayle, that had the Republican Vice-Presidential candidate not been at this time a U.S. Senator, that my remarks would, in fact, be in order? . . .

THE SPEAKER: . . . The Chair would suggest to the gentleman from Montana that there are standards that apply in the Chamber and in the precedents with respect to nominated candidates for President and Vice President. The Chair is not certain if they are precisely the same as applied to a Member of the other body or a Member of this body, but in this instance, it is not necessary to make that hypothetical distinction since the individual involved is a Member of the other body.

MR. WILLIAMS: Further parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker: Would it be within the rules of the House if the last sentence of my 1-minute, the one which characterizes Senator Quayle's actions as hypocrisy, be removed by unanimous consent from my 1-minute statement?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair would suggest to the gentleman from Montana that this might be a satisfactory solution.

MR. WILLIAMS: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the last sentence of my 1-minute statement, the sentence in which I characterized Senator Quayle's actions as hypocrisy, be stricken.

MR. LUNGREN: Mr. Speaker, parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: Please, the Chair will recognize the gentleman for a parliamentary inquiry, but, first, please permit the gentleman from Montana to complete his request. . . .

MR. LUNGREN: I reserve the right to object, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: That is fine. The gentleman may reserve his right to object, but in the interests of orderly procedure, permit the Chair to allow the gentleman from Montana to complete his request.

MR. WILLIAMS: Let me be sure the Chair understands my request: I have asked unanimous consent that the last sentence of my 1-minute statement be stricken. . . .

THE SPEAKER: . . . Has the gentleman from Montana completed his request?

MR. WILLIAMS: No, Mr. Speaker, I have not. Both times I have been interrupted as I have attempted to ask unanimous consent that the last sentence of my 1-minute statement be eliminated. That was the sentence which referred to Senator Quayle's actions as hypocrisy. I seek unanimous consent to strike the last sentence of my 1-minute statement.

THE SPEAKER: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana?

MR. LUNGREN: Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, under normal circumstances and in the interests of comity of this House and the relationship of this House and the other body, I would not object. However, as is very obvious from the statements of the gentleman, the insult, the language that is not to be used under our rules was repeated three times in an effort to make a point which violates, in my judgment, the sense of the rules of the House and, therefore, since it is not, I believe, appropriate to do that, I object.

THE SPEAKER: Objection is heard.

References to President Made Outside Chamber

§ 47.11 The Minority Leader took the floor to criticize the Speaker for making certain remarks in his daily press conference concerning the President of the United States.

On July 25, 1984,⁽³⁾ the following statement was made on the floor by Minority Leader Robert H. Michel, of Illinois:

MR. MICHEL: Mr. Speaker, a few moments ago the distinguished majority leader referred to the President as "intellectually dishonest."

Mr. Speaker, on July 19, 1984, United Press International reported that the Speaker of the House said the following things about the President of the United States—and I quote:

The evil is in the White House at the present time . . . and that evil is a man who has no care and no concern for the working class . . . He's cold. He's mean. He's got ice water for blood.

In almost 30 years in the House, I have never heard such abusive language used by a Speaker of the House about the President of the United States. . . .

There are precedents in our House rules forbidding personal abuse of a President on the floor of the House.

Surely the spirit of these rules ought to be adhered to by the Speaker off the floor as well as on the floor.

Parliamentarian's Note: While there are precedents indicating that it is a breach of order in debate to refer to the President disrespectfully,⁽⁴⁾ the principle has not been extended to statements made outside the Chamber.

Inserting in Record Remarks Made in Press Critical of President

§ 47.12 In response to a parliamentary inquiry, the Chair, while declining to rule on the propriety in prior debates of certain references to the President, indicated that a more permissive standard than that applicable to references to a sitting Member does not permit language personally abusive of the President.

3. 130 CONG. REC. 20931, 98th Cong. 2d Sess.

4. See 8 Cannon's Precedents §§2497, 2498.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Feb. 25, 1985:⁽⁵⁾

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁶⁾ Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Gingrich) is recognized for 60 minutes.

MR. [NEW] GINGRICH [of Georgia]: Mr. Speaker, I am going to insert in the Record today and read into the Record several editorials, one from the Atlanta Journal and Constitution yesterday, Sunday, February 24, and one this morning from the Wall Street Journal. . . .

Yet twice the House has voted to deny McIntyre the seat while it investigates. . . .

A few Republicans near each election try to remind voters that the Democrats' first vote will be for O'Neill and that vote signals bondage. This year it meant the abandonment of fairness. . . .

MR. GINGRICH: . . . I was asking the Chair to rule in this sort of setting if one is reporting to the House on the written opinion of a columnist in which the columnist has said very strong things, is it appropriate for the House to be informed of this and, if so, what is the correct procedure?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The ruling of the Chair is that the gentleman should not read into the Record things which would clearly be outside the rules of this House. . . .

MR. GINGRICH: If I may continue a moment to ask the gentleman, if we are in a situation where in the view of some people, such as Mr. Williams of the Atlanta Journal-Constitution, very strong things are legitimately being said, and this is obviously his viewpoint, what is the appropriate manner in which to report his language to the House?

That is not me saying these things; he is saying these things.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman knows the rules of the House, I am certain, and he can take out or delete any things that he knows would violate the rules of this House if spoken from the floor. . . .

MR. GINGRICH: If I may reclaim my time and also ask the Chair . . . would the Chair uphold the same precedents on the unparliamentary remarks with respect to the President of the United States?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: If they violate the rules of the House the Chair would certainly do that. If the President is personally being abused on the floor of this House, the Chair would do so. . . .

Anyone could raise a point of order concerning such language, and the Chair cannot now say how the Chair would rule. . . .

MR. GINGRICH: But it is the Chair's—I will yield in just a second—but it would be the Chair's understanding, or the Chair's inclination that the President has the same basic protection as a Member of the House in terms of his name?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman would recognize that it is not quite the same standard, but nonetheless anyone, of course, is capable of making an objection.

In Cannon's Procedure, as to the President, section 370, it says:

5. 131 CONG. REC. 3344-47, 99th Cong. 1st Sess.

6. Sam B. Hall, Jr. (Tex.).

The principles of decorum and courtesy governing the relations of the two Houses should extend to the relations of the House with the President. In referring to the President a Member shall abstain from language personally offensive and shall eschew terms of [opprobrium]. It is the duty of the House to protect the President from personal abuse or innuendo.

MR. GINGRICH: So about a year ago when the very distinguished majority leader referred to him I think 16 times in 1 minute, using words like “untrue” and “lie”——

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: First of all let the Chair say to the gentleman from Georgia that the Chair is not going to rule on something that happened before. . . .

The Chair heard no objection to that speech to which the gentleman is referring.

Addressing President in Debate

§ 47.13 Although Members may discuss past and present Presidential actions and suggest possible future Presidential actions, it is not in order to address remarks in debate directly to the President, as in the second person.

On Oct. 16, 1989,⁽⁷⁾ during the period for one-minute speeches in the House, the Speaker cautioned

7. 135 CONG. REC. 24715, 101st Cong. 1st Sess.

Members against a renewed tendency to address remarks in debate directly to the President.

MR. [ROBERT G.] TORRICELLI [of New Jersey]: Mr. Speaker, George Bush's honeymoon is most assuredly now over. . . .

Mr. President, it is time to get to work, time to decide why is it you sought the Presidency, to tell us where it is you would take America. . . .

Mr. President, listen to this, if you will, from the president of the Chase Manhattan Bank: “There are some very significant issues out there such as the fiscal deficit, our relations with Japan, that have to be the subject of major initiatives. I'd like to see that initiative, and I haven't. There is no agenda.”

Mr. President, listen to not only your critics but to your fans. It is time to lead our country.

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁸⁾ As the Chair announced on July 23, 1987, it is not in order to address the President in debate. Members must address their remarks to the Chair. Although Members may discuss past and present Presidential actions and suggest possible future Presidential actions, they may not directly address the President, as in the second person.⁽⁹⁾

§ 47.14 Under clause 1 of Rule XIV, remarks in debate

8. Thomas S. Foley (Wash.).

9. See also the proceedings of May 17, 1989 (remarks of Mrs. Barbara Boxer, of California); and, in the 101st Cong. 2d Sess., the proceedings of May 8, 1990 (remarks of Mr. Richard J. Durbin, of Illinois) and May 9, 1990 (remarks of Mr. Charles E. Schumer, of New York).

should be addressed to the Chair, and it is not in order to direct remarks outside the Chamber or to address others, including the President, in the second person.

During a one-minute speech in the House on Oct. 11, 1990,⁽¹⁰⁾ the Chair admonished a Member against directing his remarks to any individual other than the Chair. The proceedings were as follows:

MR. [LES] AU COIN [of Oregon]: Mr. Speaker, I am truly amazed at the President's flip-flop on whether the wealthy should pay their fair share of income taxes. . . .

Well, Mr. President, you were elected to know what to do.

The American people are confused. They want you to lead. Let me make a suggestion:

Drop your commitment to no new taxes for your rich friends, and take a stand for the middle class and say, "I am with you. I'm going to make this Tax Code fair for American working families." . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹¹⁾ The Chair is constrained to remind Members that it is not proper directly to address the President from the floor.

Unparliamentary References to President

§ 47.15 Language in debate charging that the President

10. 136 CONG. REC. p. ____, 101st Cong. 2d Sess.

11. Romano L. Mazzoli (Ky.).

has been "intellectually dishonest" is a breach of order connoting an intent to deceive that is personally abusive of the President; the Chair clarified his ruling in this instance by comparing similar words that were distinguishable in connotation.

On May 9, 1990,⁽¹²⁾ following an admonition to a Member to refrain from unparliamentary references to the President, the Chair clarified that earlier ruling, as indicated below:

(Mr. Torricelli asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

MR. [ROBERT G.] TORRICELLI [of New Jersey]: Mr. Speaker, you heard it here today: Republican Member after Republican Member taking the floor, predicting that the President will never raise taxes.

I am here to predict that he will raise taxes. And, Mr. Speaker, we are both right because no doubt, for the President's friends, for those of privilege in America he will never raise taxes.

But for you and for me and for the overwhelming majority of Americans, he is—he says that he is going to, and he is about doing it. It isn't, Mr. Speaker, that the President is intellectually dishonest, though indeed in the last election he was. It is about the fact that he has a $500 billion—

12. 136 CONG. REC. 9828, 9829, 101st Cong. 2d Sess.

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I ask that the gentleman's words be taken down.

[The words in question were held to be unparliamentary, the Speaker Pro Tempore⁽¹³⁾ stating as follows:]

In referring to the President during debate a Member shall abstain from "terms of approbrium," such as calling the President a "liar"—V, 5094, VIII, 2498.

Subsequently in the proceedings, the Chair stated as follows:

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: If the Chair could have order, let the Chair clarify his ruling.

The Chair would like to clarify his earlier ruling on the words of the gentleman from New Jersey.

The Chair does not believe that an allegation of intellectual inconsistency is necessarily unparliamentary.

However, to whatever extent the phrase "intellectual dishonesty" may connote an intent to deceive, the Chair believes that it does tend to be personally offensive and therefore unparliamentary.

§ 47.16 Debate may not include remarks personally offensive toward the President, including references to accusations of sexual misconduct, and the Chair will caution Members against using such personally offensive references.

On May 10, 1994,⁽¹⁴⁾ in response to frequent remarks relative to allegations of sexual misconduct by the President, the Speaker reminded all Members that the rules of comity prevent discussions of the President's personal character.

13. John P. Murtha (Pa.).

14. 140 CONG. REC. p. _____, 103d Cong. 2d Sess.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁵⁾ Under the Speaker's announced policy of February 11, 1994, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Smith) is recognized during morning business for 5 minutes.

MR. [LAMAR S.] SMITH of Texas: Mr. Speaker, a few days ago Newsweek published an article the likes of which I have never seen before concerning a current President. Titled "The Politics of Promiscuity," it examines the basic question of President Clinton's character. . . .

The Newsweek author is not talking about promiscuity's most common meaning, but its fullest meaning—casual or irregular behavior. Whether at home or abroad, this kind of careless, cavalier conduct has been the trademark of this administration. . . .

President Clinton's financial dealings are a case in point. . . .

The President has insisted that he lost money on his financial transactions and he believes that should be the end of the discussion. . . .

The question is not whether money was made, but why was he involved in the first place? And the answer is that he had no business doing business with people whose business it was his business to regulate.

If this fault were the only lapse—or if the administration's faults were only lapses—then there would not be such a cause for concern. But as the administration's faults continue to mount and continue to erode America's foundations, it becomes daily more obvious that they are not lapses. They are not strayings from a shared path of principles, but a new route of questionable rights and values altogether. . . .

15. Thomas S. Foley (Wash.).

The Newsweek article observes President Clinton tells his closest advisers that "character is a journey, not a destination." Klein writes:

This evolutionary notion of character is something of a finesse: it can drift from explaining lapses to excusing them. There is an adolescent, unformed, half-baked quality to it—as there is to the notion of promiscuity itself: an inability to settle, to stand, to commit. It will not suffice in a president. . . .

(Mr. Ballenger asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

MR. [CASS] BALLENGER [of North Carolina]: Mr. Speaker, the President has hired Robert Bennett, the noted defense attorney, to defend him against charges of sexual harassment.

Can Bennett defend the President against charges of factual harassment? This is where the President says one thing, but does another.

His health care plan was supposed to promote health security for all, but in reality would lower health care quality while costing a million jobs.

He promised to end welfare as we know it, but if he has a plan he will not show it. . . .

THE SPEAKER: The Chair wishes to remind Members that comments regarding the President of the United States are covered by House rules of comity, and Members should avoid any references to the President that involve suggestions of a personal character.

The Chair wishes to allow reasonable latitude for debate on subjects of personal interest and importance, but Members will observe the rules of comity with regard to the President, Members of the other body, and their fellow Members.

Parliamentarian's Note: The Speaker, with the concurrence of the Minority Leader, advised the Parliamentarian that extraneous matter inserted in the Record should also be perused for conformity with the Speaker's statement on this matter.

§ 47.17 A Member was disciplined for stating that the President had given "aid and comfort to the enemy," and the Chair indicated that the Member would not be allowed to speak on the floor of the House or to insert remarks in the Record in any manner or form for 24 hours.

On Jan. 25, 1995,⁽¹⁶⁾ a Member was disciplined for remarks relating to the President:

(Mr. Dornan asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

MR. [ROBERT K.] DORNAN [of California]: . . . I was offended by Clinton's speech last night on 15 points.

16. 141 CONG. REC. p. ____, 104th Cong. 1st Sess.

I will do a 5-minute special order tonight I have just signed up for. I can only mention four.

The first one is new covenant. The Ark of the Covenant was the Old Covenant. The New Covenant was the Son of God, Jesus Christ. . . .

No. 2, to put a Medal of Honor winner in the gallery that joined the Marine Corps at 16, fudging his birth certificate, that pulled that second grenade under his stomach, miraculously surviving and saving his four friends, he did that 6 days past his 17th birthday.

Does Clinton think putting a Medal of Honor winner up there is not going to recall for most of us that he avoided the draft three times and put teenagers in his place possibly to go to Vietnam?

No. 3, the line on the cold war. . . .

By the way, Mr. Speaker, the second amendment is not for killing little ducks and leaving Huey and Dewey and Louis without an aunt and uncle. It is for hunting politicians, like Grozny, 1776, when they take your independence away. . . .

MR. [VIC] FAZIO of California: Mr. Speaker, I move the gentleman's words be taken down. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁷⁾ All Members will suspend. The Clerk will report the words spoken by the gentleman. . . .

The Clerk read as follows:

Even Andrea Mitchell of NBC took note that [it] is Ronald Reagan's prerogative, George Bush's and all of us who wore the uniform or served in a civilian capacity to crush the evil empire. Clinton gave aid and comfort to the enemy.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: In the opinion of the Chair, that is not a proper reference to the President. Without objection, the words are stricken from the Record. . . .

MR. FAZIO of California: Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I think the gentleman from California [Mr. Dornan] owes the entire institution, the Congress, and the President an apology.

MR. DORNAN: Hell no; hell, no. . . .

Unanimous consent to proceed for 15 seconds? . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from California [Mr. Fazio] has the floor at this moment.

MR. FAZIO of California: I would be happy to yield to my colleague from California, since I have the time, to hear his response.

MR. DORNAN: Will the gentleman yield?

MR. FAZIO of California: I yield to the gentleman from California.

MR. DORNAN: To my distinguished friend and colleague, Maj. Earl Kolbale, Lt. Comdr. J. J. Connell was beaten to death in Hanoi. I have had friends beaten to death in Hanoi, tortured and beaten. You have not. . . .

I will not withdraw my remarks. I will not only not apologize. . . .

MR. [HAROLD L.] VOLKMER [of Missouri]: I ask that the words of the gentleman from California be taken down.

MR. DORNAN: Good. I will leave the floor, no apology, and I will not speak the rest of the day. The truth is the truth.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The House will be in order. The gentleman's words have already been taken down. . . .

17. John J. Duncan, Jr. (Tenn.).

MR. FAZIO of California: The gentleman is challenging the words that were uttered in response to my question.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair rules that those words as follows "I believe the President did give aid and comfort to the enemy, Hanoi," were also out of order. The Chair has ruled that, based on the precedents of the House, the words of the gentleman from California were out of order, and without objection, both sets of words will be stricken from the Record. . . .

MR. FAZIO of California: I have a parliamentary inquiry of the Speaker at this point.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state his inquiry.

MR. FAZIO of California: When the Speaker rules that the gentleman should not be allowed to speak for 24 hours, does that encompass remarks that might be placed in the Record, participation in special orders, and other activities that might not involve the gentleman speaking on the floor?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: It is the House's determination as to whether or not the Member should be allowed to proceed in order for the remainder of the day. That determination shall not be made by the Chair.

MR. FAZIO of California: In other words, is the House required to vote on whether or not remarks should be placed in the Record?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Unparliamentary remarks cannot be inserted in the Record.

MR. FAZIO of California: But remarks that are not ruled unparliamentary may be placed in the Record if they are not uttered on the floor; is that the ruling of the Speaker?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Unparliamentary remarks should not be inserted in the Record in any manner or form. . . .

MR. FAZIO of California: So in other words, just to confirm the Speaker's ruling, we will not read or hear from the gentleman from California [Mr. Dornan] for the next 24 hours; is that correct?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Unless the House permits him to proceed in order, the gentleman is correct.

MR. FAZIO of California: And for the House to permit that would require a majority vote?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: It would require either unanimous consent or a majority vote of the House to permit the gentleman to proceed in order. . . .

MR. [DAVID E.] BONIOR [of Michigan]: Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from California [Mr. Dornan] is on his feet. Is he not supposed to remain seated until the determination?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman can either be seated or leave the Chamber.

MR. BONIOR: He chose to leave the Chamber; OK. . . .

In a further ruling, the Chair stated that the following words were not unparliamentary:

By the way, Mr. Speaker, the Second Amendment is not for killing little ducks and leaving Huey, Duey and Louie without an aunt and uncle. It is for hunting politicians, like Grozny, 1776, when they take your independence away. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

References to President's Family

§ 47.18 In response to a parliamentary inquiry, the Speaker advised that it is not in order in debate to refer to the President in terms personally offensive; but that the traditional protections (in Jefferson's Manual and the precedents) against unparliamentary references to the President do not necessarily extend to members of his family.

On July 12, 1990,⁽¹⁸⁾ after the Chair had exercised his initiative in cautioning a Member against improper references to individual Senators, he responded to a parliamentary inquiry regarding references to the President. The proceedings in the House were as follows:

MR. [NEWT] GINGRICH [of Georgia]: Mr. Speaker, it is outrageous for the Senate Democratic leader to publicly demand higher taxes and a massive 25-percent increase in the income tax top rate. The Senate Democratic leader is threatening to destroy the budget summit.

Mr. Speaker, Senator Mitchell does not attend summit meetings. He publicly demands tax increases. Senator Mitchell does not offer serious budget reforms. He publicly demands tax increases. . . .

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁹⁾ The Chair will . . . caution the gentleman from Georgia

18. 136 CONG. REC. p. ____, 101st Cong. 2d Sess.

19. Thomas S. Foley (Wash.).

that such references to Members of the other body are not in order. . . .

Debate may include references to actions taken by the Senate or by committees thereof, which are a matter of public record . . . but may not include other references to individual Members of the Senate or other quotations from Senate proceedings.

MR. GINGRICH: Let me then ask the Speaker:

Is the Chair prepared, because there is a similar phrase about protecting the integrity of the President, is the Chair as prepared to rule tightly when members of the Democratic Party describe President Bush and his immediate family? Are we going to have a standard by which I may not refer to the action of the Democratic leader in the Senate, which is a public action in a newspaper, but the members of the Democratic Party may say virtually anything weakening, and defaming and insulting the President of the United States? . . .

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will tell the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Gingrich] that references to the President of the United States that are personally offensive references are not permitted in debate. They are not covered by this particular rule. This rule reflects upon references to the other body and is in a long tradition of comity between the two bodies of the Congress. It has been recently amended to permit references to Senate actions, but the tradition against making references to individual Senators or characterizing their activity on or off the floor is against the rule and traditions of the House. . . .

MR. GINGRICH: . . . I would simply want to serve notice to my colleagues on the Democratic side that we will ask the Chair to be as strict in protecting the President and his immediate family as the Chair is legitimately being with respect to the other body.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Gingrich] has, in effect, cooperated with the Chair on the matter. . . .

MR. [DENNIS E.] ECKART [of Ohio]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

To what extent do the rules of the House extend to individuals who may be related to public officials.

THE SPEAKER: The traditions only go to the references to Members of the other body personally or to the President personally, but do not necessarily go to the matters of the President's family.

Parliamentarian's Note: In some instances, of course, a particular criticism of the President's family might constitute a personal affront to the President himself.

§ 48. Procedure; Calls to Order

Clause 4 of Rule XIV of the House rules provides a procedure for dealing with disorderly words or actions by Members:

If any Member, in speaking or otherwise, transgress the rules of the House, the Speaker shall, or any Member may, call him to order; in which case he shall immediately sit down, unless permitted, on motion of another Member, to explain, and the House shall, if appealed to, decide on the case without debate; if the decision is in favor of the Member called to order, he shall be at liberty to proceed, but not otherwise; and, if the case require it, he shall be liable to censure or such punishment as the House may deem proper.⁽¹⁾

Where the violation of the rules is technical and not willful, a point of order, rather than a demand that words be taken down, is often made, and if sustained the Speaker directs the Member who had the floor to proceed in order.⁽²⁾

Where objectionable words are uttered in debate and are called to the attention of the House, the provisions of the cited rule are followed explicitly. If a Member demands that the offending words "be taken down," the Member must take his seat until the words are reported pursuant to Rule XIV clause 5:

If a Member is called to order for words spoken in debate, the Member calling him to order shall indicate the words excepted to, and they shall be taken down in writing at the Clerk's desk and read aloud to the House; but he shall not be held to answer, nor to be subject to the censure of the House therefor, if further debate or other business has intervened.⁽³⁾

1. House Rules and Manual §760 (1995).
2. See Ch. 31, infra, for points of order.
3. House Rules and Manual §761 (1995).

As clause 4 of the rule indicates, the Speaker may on his own initiative call a Member to order for words spoken in debate or for other acts of disorder and has so done on occasion;⁽⁴⁾ and where a Member has persisted in speaking when not recognized and in spite of repeated calls to order, the Speaker has ordered his microphone turned off.⁽⁵⁾ The Speaker has an affirmative duty to call a Member to order for referring, in violation of the rules, to individual Senators or to proceedings of the Senate.⁽⁶⁾ If the words used in debate refer critically to the Speaker and are taken down, the Speaker leaves the chair after appointing another Member to preside for the purpose of ruling on the words objected to.⁽⁷⁾

A Delegate may call a Member to order (2 Hinds' Precedents § 1295).

4. See, for example, §§ 48.1, 48.2, 48.5–48.7, 48.9, 48.10, infra.
5. See § 48.20, infra.
6. See § 48.3, infra.

“[I]t is the duty of the House, and more particularly of the Speaker, to interfere immediately, and not to permit expressions to go unnoticed which may give a ground of complaint to the other House. . . .” Jefferson’s Manual, House Rules and Manual § 374 (1995).

For announcements by the Chair stating his intention to strictly enforce the rule of comity, see § 44.8, supra.

Because the demand to take down words spoken in debate must come immediately after the words are uttered,⁽⁸⁾ a question of privilege based upon such words may not be raised at a subsequent time.⁽⁹⁾ But the insertion of objectionable words in the Congressional Record by a Member, either under leave to revise and extend, or without such leave, will support a question of privilege.⁽¹⁰⁾

Where objectionable words are uttered in the Committee of the Whole, a demand must be made to take them down, the Committee rises, and the words are reported by the Clerk for a ruling by the Speaker. After the House determines whether to expunge offensive words from the Record, and whether to permit an offending Member to proceed in order, the Committee then resumes sitting without motion.⁽¹¹⁾ House action is strictly limited to the words reported from the Committee,⁽¹²⁾ and the Speaker will not entertain a request that further words spoken in the Committee be taken down.⁽¹³⁾ The Committee of the Whole can take no action on objectionable words, such as expungement from the Record,⁽¹⁴⁾ but both the objectionable words and the demand that words be taken down may be withdrawn in the Committee.⁽¹⁵⁾

The following is the order of precedence of motions if words are sought to be ruled out of order in the House: (1) under Rule XIV clause 4, before the Speaker rules, a motion to explain is in order and is preferential; (2) when the Speaker rules, any appeal from the ruling must come immediately and is not debatable; (3) after the ruling, a motion to strike or expunge from the Record has priority, since permitting a motion to explain at that stage would undermine the Speaker's ruling and a possible appeal; the motion to strike is debatable and the previous question should be moved; (4) a motion to permit the offending Member to proceed in order is debatable and the previous question should be moved, but the motion should be made so that the Member is not prohibited from speaking for the remainder of the day.⁽¹⁶⁾

14. See §49.16, infra.

Authority of Speaker or Chairman

§ 48.1 The Speaker, observing that debate is becoming personal and approaching a violation of the rules, may request Members to proceed in order.

On June 23, 1964,⁽¹⁸⁾ Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, intervened during debate in the House:

MR. [WAYNE L.] HAYS [of Ohio]: The gentleman had better stop right there, or I will have his words taken down, because I am not the head of two national banks. We do not have two charters. You had better either stick to the facts, or you will stop talking; one or the other.

MR. [WRIGHT] PATMAN [of Texas]: If the gentleman will retract his own words, I cannot help that.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will suspend. Both gentlemen will suspend.

MR. HAYS: Will the gentleman yield?

MR. PATMAN: I will not yield until I finish my statement.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair suggests that the rules are established as the law of the House and the Chair is not passing at this time on any question in connection with the rules, but the Chair suggests that there has been a very close approach in more than one way or two ways to a violation of the rules. The Chair suggests that the gentleman from Texas proceed in order and, if he yields, that the gentleman from Ohio make his observations in order.

§ 48.2 The Speaker may call a Member to order for words spoken in debate.

On Jan. 12, 1961,⁽¹⁹⁾ when Mr. H. R. Gross, of Iowa, referred in debate to the "so-called painless method of packing the Rules Committee," Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, called him to order on his own initiative and ruled the language out of order.

§ 48.3 It is the duty of the Chair to interrupt a Member in debate when the Member proposes to refer to the opinions or statements of Senators or to Senate proceedings.

On May 25, 1937,⁽²⁰⁾ when a Member proposed to read a letter from a member of the Senate on the floor of the House, Chairman John J. O'Connor, of New York, on his own responsibility made a point of order against the reading of the letter from a member of the other body.

Similarly, on Apr. 18, 1939,⁽¹⁾ when a Member referred to the action of the Senate on a particular appropriation bill then before the House, Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, stated as follows:

The Chair desires to call the attention of the gentleman from Pennsylvania to the fact that under the rules of the House he is not permitted to refer to any action taken in the Senate of the United States.⁽²⁾

Chair May Take Initiative

§ 48.4 The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole called the Committee to order and stated that he would not hesitate to call Members to order by name if order was not promptly established.

During consideration of House Concurrent Resolution 307 (first concurrent resolution on the congressional budget for fiscal years 1981, 1982 and 1983) in the Committee of the Whole on Apr. 30, 1980,⁽³⁾ the Chair made a statement, as indicated below:

MR. [JOHN W.] WYDLER [of New York]: Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the Committee is not in order.

2. The Chair also intervenes on his own initiative to prevent reference to gallery occupants (see § 45, supra).
3. 126 CONG. REC. 9471, 96th Cong. 2d Sess.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁴⁾ Permit the Chair to say that he believes that every Member has a right to be heard in the Committee of the Whole. It is not a matter of the Chair desiring order. It is a matter of Members deserving order so that there can be a reasonable procedure; and the Chair proposes to see to it that each Member is given an opportunity to express himself. It will be a great deal easier for everybody if the Committee comes to order a little bit more quickly.

The Chair will conclude by saying he does not hesitate to call names if he must.

§ 48.5 The Chair may take the initiative to enforce the prohibition in clause 1 of Rule XIV against Members engaging in personalities during debate and call to order a Member alleging that an identifiable group of sitting Members have committed a crime.

During proceedings in the House on Mar. 21, 1989,⁽⁵⁾ Speaker James C. Wright, Jr., of Texas, exercised his prerogative under Rule XIV, clause 1, in calling a Member to order for use of personalities in debate. The proceedings were as follows:

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, bipartisanship

4. Richard Bolling (Mo.).
5. 135 CONG. REC. 5016, 5017, 101st Cong. 1st Sess.

in the House has taken a curious twist. It now appears that the Democrat leadership is attempting to influence and interfere in the race for Republican whip. . . .

To those Democrats who have been a part of trying to influence the outcome of this election, let it be noted that the last time you played this game, you stole the Indiana seat from the Republican Party. That outrage and this one tell us more than we need to know about your definition of bipartisanship.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman is not proceeding in a parliamentary manner. He used the word "stole." His accusation that Members of the House stole an election is improper, and the gentleman realizes that. . . .

The gentleman is engaging in personalities and when he uses words like the word "stole" with reference to an identifiable group of Members, that has been held improper.

§ 48.6 Instance where the Speaker ignored the demand that words be taken down and exercised his initiative to caution the offending Member.

On July 12, 1990,⁽⁶⁾ it was demonstrated that the range of permissible references to the Senate in debate does not extend to the opinions or policy positions of individual Senators. The proceedings in the House were as follows:

(Mr. Gingrich asked and was given permission to address the House for 1

6. 136 CONG. REC. ____, 101st Cong. 2d Sess.

minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

MR. [NEWT] GINGRICH [of Georgia]: Mr. Speaker, it is outrageous for the Senate Democratic leader to publicly demand higher taxes and a massive 25-percent increase in the income tax top rate. The Senate Democratic leader is threatening to destroy the budget summit.

Mr. Speaker, Senator Mitchell does not attend summit meetings. He publicly demands tax increases. Senator Mitchell does not offer serious budget reforms. He publicly demands tax increases. Senator Mitchell does not offer spending cuts.

MR. [HAROLD L.] VOLKMER [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, I ask that the words of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Gingrich] be taken down.

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁷⁾ The Chair will merely caution the gentleman from Georgia that such references to members of the other body are not in order. . . .

MR. GINGRICH: I would inquire of the Speaker, if it is in reference to a public newspaper account of public activity by a political leader, and I believe in this House we have a remarkably wide range of free speech, and this is not a reference to any action by the Senator of Maine in the Senate.

THE SPEAKER: Under clause 1, rule XIV, it is an improper reference to a Member of the other body.

The Chair would ask the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Gingrich] to observe the traditions of the House.

7. Thomas S. Foley (Wash.).

Speaker Sometimes Takes Initiative Where Improper Remarks Are Uttered

§ 48.7 The Speaker cautioned a Member that it is a breach of order under clause 1 of Rule XIV to allege in debate that a Member has engaged in conduct similar to the subject of a complaint pending before the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct against another Member; and under clause 4 of that rule, the Chair takes the initiative in calling to order Members improperly engaging in personalities in debate.

Speaker Pro Tempore G. V. (Sonny) Montgomery, of Mississippi, called a Member to order in the House on Mar. 22, 1989,⁽⁸⁾ as indicated below:

(Mr. Alexander asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks and to include extraneous material.)

MR. [BILL] ALEXANDER [of Arkansas]: Mr. Speaker, after arriving at the Capitol a few minutes ago on this glorious spring day, I learned that our colleagues on the other side of the aisle have conducted an election for minority whip resulting in the election of the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Gingrich) as minority whip. . . .

I would note to those who are observing that the gentleman from Georgia made his name, so to speak, by a sustained personal attack on the good name of Jim Wright, the Speaker of the House of Representatives who has devoted decades of meritorious service to our country. The gentleman from Georgia alleged that the Speaker has circumvented minimum income limits of Members of Congress by writing a book for which he received a royalty.

Now, it is also to be noted that just this week it was learned that the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Gingrich) also allegedly has a book deal. It is alleged in the Washington Post this week that the gentleman from Georgia received a royalty or a payment in the nature of a royalty. This is apparently similar to the Wright arrangement which is the basis of the gentleman from Georgia's complaint before the Ethics Committee.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would state to the gentleman that he cannot make personal references, as the gentleman has done in his remarks.

§ 48.8 The Chair enforces section 364 of Jefferson's Manual by admonishing Members who attempt to disturb Members who are addressing the House by conversing with them.

In the proceedings of Feb. 21, 1984,⁽⁹⁾ the Chair sought to preserve order by admonishing Members not to converse with a Member attempting to address the House:

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁰⁾ The House will be in order.

The Chair would like to suggest that the rules of the House prohibit the engagement of private conversation with someone who is in the process of speaking or has just concluded speaking and would ask the gentleman on his left and the gentleman on his right to extend to one another the courtesies commonly expected of Members of the House.

§ 48.9 Where a Member transgresses clause 1 of Rule XIV by engaging in personalities in debate, and discusses behavior of a Member where a complaint has been filed with the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct concerning that conduct, the Chair takes the initiative to call him to order pursuant to clause 4 of Rule XIV.

On Nov. 3, 1989,⁽¹¹⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House during a special-order speech:

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹²⁾ Under a previous order of the House,

10. James C. Wright, Jr. (Tex.).

11. 135 CONG. REC. 27077, 27082, 101st Cong. 1st Sess.

the gentleman from California [Mr. Dannemeyer] is recognized for 60 minutes.

MR. [WILLIAM E.] DANNEMEYER [of California]: . . . I want to make clear to my colleagues that at the appropriate time in the near future, I will offer a resolution, in one form or another, to expel [two Members specified]. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will pause. The gentleman is discussing a matter pending before the Ethics Committee. I would remind the gentleman from California that clause 1 of rule XIV prevents Members in debate from engaging in personalities. Clause 4 of that rule provides that if any member transgresses the rules of the House, the Speaker shall, or any Member may, call him to order.

The gentleman may proceed within the rules of the House.

MR. DANNEMEYER: . . . George Washington Law Professor John Banzhaf has done extensive research on a case of Member "X." He concludes that Member "X" has publicly admitted to committing crimes, and a refusal to take any action would undermine the public's confidence in the mechanism set up to ensure that Members of Congress abide by ethical and moral standards at least as high as those to which we currently hold attorneys, cadets at the Nation's military academies, high military officials, and even school principals.

Indeed, since the prostitute was prosecuted and convicted for sodomy and his school principal lover was forced to resign, a failure to take any action against a Congressman who commits the same crimes would lead people to believe that lesser rather than stricter standards were being applied.

The Boston Globe wrote, "Were Member X's transgressions serious enough to warrant his departure from Congress? Yes. For his own good and for the good of his constituents, his causes and Congress"—

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will cease. The Chair would remind the gentleman, and will repeat again, and will read the Speaker's full statement, clause 1 of rule XIV prevents Members in debate from engaging in personalities. Clause 4 of that rule provides that if any Member transgresses the rules of the House, the Speaker shall, or any Member may, call him to order. Members may recall that on December 18, 1987, the Chair enunciated the standard that debate would not be proper if it attempted to focus on the conduct of a Member about whom a report had been filed by the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct or whose conduct was not the subject of a privileged matter then pending before the House. Similarly, the Chair would suggest that debate is not proper which speculates on the motivations of a Member who may have filed a complaint before the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct against another Member.

MR. DANNEMEYER: Madam Speaker, I have no longer made reference to a specific Member. I have merely made reference to "Member X."

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman is referring to newspaper stories which specifically names Members.

§ 48.10 Where a Member transgresses clause 1 of Rule XIV, by engaging in personalities in debate (as by discussing the facts surrounding a disciplinary resolution then pending on the House Calendar), the Chair takes the initiative to call him to order pursuant to clause 4 of Rule XIV.

On July 24, 1990,⁽¹³⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House during a special-order speech:

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁴⁾ Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. Dannemeyer] is recognized for 60 minutes.

MR. [WILLIAM E.] DANNEMEYER [of California]: Mr. Speaker and Members, I have taken this special order this evening for the purpose of talking to my colleagues about the matter that will be coming up on the floor of the House for consideration, probably sometime this week, dealing with our colleague, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. Frank]. The House Ethics Committee submitted a report on July 20, which was just last Friday and that report has now been printed in the Record, and I will make reference to it as I discuss this issue. . . .

I would like briefly to discuss the issue of what was contained in the Ethics Committee report to the House on July 20. I believe that the newspaper accounts of the conduct of Mr. Frank are quite well-known to all of us, but I think it is also appropriate that some discussion be made so that we have the issue before us.

13. 136 CONG. REC. ____, 101st Cong. 2d Sess.

14. Timothy J. Penny (Minn.).

Beginning sometime in 1985, believed to be around April of that year, at least in the statement of—

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: If the gentleman from California [Mr. Dannemeyer] will suspend for a moment, at this point the Chair would caution all Members that it is not in order in debate to engage in personalities. Members should refrain from references in debate to the conduct of other Members, where such conduct is not the subject then pending before the House as a question of the privileges of the House.

When a privileged resolution is offered, it would be appropriate for any Member then to discuss the details of the case. At this point, it would be inappropriate.

MR. DANNEMEYER: Do I understand the Speaker to say that it would be inappropriate for me to discuss the details of the report that has been filed?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: It would be inappropriate to discuss the conduct of other Members, where such conduct is not the subject then pending before the House as a question of privilege.

MR. DANNEMEYER: Well, if I may inquire of the Speaker, the report of the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct was filed July 20. It describes in detail the items that I feel like I am in a position to discuss at this time, by virtue of the fact that this report is now part of the public record.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The report has been filed. The report is not the pending business.

Parliamentarian's Note: It is not in order in debate to refer to the official conduct of a Member where such conduct is not the subject then pending before the House by way of a report of the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct or as a question of the privileges of the House. Moreover, it is the consideration of a disciplinary resolution, not the filing of a report thereon, that is the condition for debate on the conduct of the Member concerned. Any discussion of a Member's conduct should be considered as dealing in "personality" unless the conduct is the subject of the business then pending before the House. When the conduct is the pending business of the House, its relevance under the Constitutional prerogative of the House to punish its Members for disorderly behavior supersedes the prohibition against "personality" in debate and its probative value outweighs its tendency to impair decorum. The only other permissible debate of a Member's conduct would be in the context of debate on another Member's conduct, by way of comparison of contemplated punishments, but within narrower limits than if the conduct being debated were the Member's own in the context of a disciplinary resolution relating to him.

Where Objectionable Words Impugn the Speaker

§ 48.11 Where words used in debate have affected the Speaker and have been taken down, the Speaker has left the Chair after designating another Member to preside.

On Feb. 7, 1935,⁽¹⁵⁾ and on May 31, 1934,⁽¹⁶⁾ when words were used in debate impugning the integrity of the Speaker, the Speaker left the Chair after designating another Member to preside and to rule on the words objected to.

Procedure In the House

§ 48.12 The only method by which the words of the Member having the floor may be challenged is through a demand that his words be taken down.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on June 4, 1984,⁽¹⁷⁾ during consideration of the Oregon Wilderness Act of 1983 (H.R. 1149):

MR. [LES] AUCCOIN [of Oregon]: . . .
The House has had its opportunity to

15. 79 CONG. REC. 1680, 1681, 74th Cong. 1st Sess.

16. 78 CONG. REC. 10167-70, 73d Cong. 2d Sess.

17. 130 CONG. REC. 14805, 98th Cong. 2d Sess.

work its will. The only thing that would be gained now by not voting for this bill as it is would be to delay a final resolution, pushing it off further down the road . . . running this issue up against all the other issues that the Congress is going to be dealing with in its rush toward adjournment and that will guarantee the doom of this bill.

Obviously, no responsible person on either side of this issue wants such a thing to happen.

MR. [DON] YOUNG of Alaska: Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁸⁾ The gentleman will state it.

MR. YOUNG of Alaska: Mr. Speaker, I would like to suggest that the gentleman not use the term "no responsible person."

Both Members from Oregon are very responsible members of the committee that I am ranking member of, and I consider my responsibility very seriously and to say that we are not responsible because we are in opposition to this bill is incorrect.

I would respectfully suggest that the gentleman reconsider his words.

MR. AUCCOIN: Mr. Speaker, this gentleman said that no responsible person wants to see a resolution of this bill delayed to such a date in which no passage of the bill dealing with the Oregon RARE II problem would be possible. . . .

I assume it applies to the gentleman from Alaska. I think he is responsible. I do not think he wants to see a resolution of this bill delayed.

MR. YOUNG of Alaska: The bill is basically wrong. I rose against the bill and to allude to the fact that we are irresponsible does not become the gentleman at all. That disturbs me a great deal. . . .

18. James C. Wright, Jr. (Tex.).

So I would suggest again to the gentleman to choose his words very carefully.

MR. AU COIN: Mr. Speaker, what is the regular order?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman may proceed. The gentleman has not asked the words be taken down. The gentleman may proceed.

—Where Member Has Breached Rules of Decorum

§ 48.13 Upon a timely demand that words spoken in debate be taken down as unparliamentary, the Chair gavel the proceedings to a halt, directs the challenged Member to be seated under clause 4 of Rule XIV and directs the Clerk to report the words; but, while a Member who is held to have breached the rules of decorum in debate is presumptively disabled from further recognition on that day, by tradition the Speaker's ruling and any necessary expungement of the Record are deemed sufficient sanction, and by custom the chastened Member is permitted to proceed in order (usually by unanimous consent).

The proceedings of July 29, 1994,⁽¹⁹⁾ demonstrate procedures following a demand that the words be taken down:

MS. [MAXINE] WATERS [of California]: Madam Speaker, last evening a Member of this House, Peter King, had to be gaveled out of order at the White-water hearings of the Banking Committee. He had to be gaveled out of order because he badgered a woman who was a witness from the White House, Maggie Williams. I am pleased I was able to come to her defense. Madam Speaker, the day is over when men can badger and intimidate women.

MR. [F. JAMES] SENSENBRENNER [Jr., of Wisconsin]: Madam Speaker, I demand the gentlewoman's words be taken down.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁾ The gentlewoman from California [Ms. Waters] must suspend and be seated.

The Clerk will report the words.

MS. WATERS:—

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentlewoman will please desist and take her seat.

MS. WATERS:—

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair is about to direct the Sergeant at Arms to present the mace.

THE SPEAKER:⁽²⁾ The Clerk will report the words.

The Clerk read as follows:

He had to be gaveled out of order because he badgered a woman who

19. 140 CONG. REC. p. ____, 103d Cong. 2d Sess.

1. Carrie Meek (Fla.).
2. Thomas S. Foley (Wash.).

was a witness from the White House, Maggie Williams. I am pleased I was able to come to her defense. Madam Chairwoman, the day is over when men can badger and intimidate women.

THE SPEAKER: While in the opinion of the Chair the word “badgering” is not in itself unparliamentary, the Chair believes that the demeanor of the gentlewoman from California was not in good order in the subsequent period immediately following those words having been uttered.

Accordingly, the Chair rules that without leave of the House, the gentlewoman from California may not proceed for the rest of today. . . . The Chair wishes to advise the gentlewoman from Colorado that it is the opinion of the Chair that the Chair at the time was attempting to insist that the gentlewoman from California desist with any further statements and sit down. She did not accord cooperation to the Chair and follow the Chair’s instructions. Consequently, it is the finding of the Chair that her demeanor at that point in refusing to accept the Chair’s instructions was out of order.

The Chair wishes to ask if there is objection to the gentlewoman from California proceeding in good order.

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, do I understand that the Chair is putting the question to the House under unanimous consent of the gentlewoman being able to proceed for the rest of the day?

THE SPEAKER: That is correct.

MR. WALKER: I thank the Chair.

THE SPEAKER: Without objection, so ordered.

There was no objection.

—Raising Question of Personal Privilege

§ 48.14 A question of personal privilege may not normally be based upon language uttered on the floor of the House in debate, the proper course being the demand that words be taken down before other debate on business intervenes.⁽³⁾

On June 7, 1935,⁽⁴⁾ Mr. Jennings Randolph, of West Virginia, arose to a question of personal privilege, resulting in the following ruling:

MR. RANDOLPH: I wish to answer certain remarks made yesterday by the gentleman from Texas referring to testimony I gave in the district court on two occasions, and also his comment upon my service in the Congress.

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁵⁾ In the opinion of the Chair it is not in order to rise to a question of personal privilege based on matters uttered in debate on the floor of the House. The proper course to be

REC. 2883, 2884, 76th Cong. 1st Sess., Mar. 16, 1939; and 81 CONG. REC. 6309, 6310, 75th Cong. 1st Sess., June 24, 1937.
4. 79 CONG. REC. 8864, 74th Cong. 1st Sess.
5. Joseph W. Byrns (Tenn.).

pursued under such circumstances is to demand that the objectionable words be taken down.

The Chair does not think the gentleman can rise to a question of personal privilege under the circumstances.

§ 48.15 A Member may rise neither to a question of personal privilege nor to a question of privilege of the House based on words uttered in debate on the floor of the House.

On Feb. 6, 1950,⁽⁶⁾ Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, arose to state a “question of the privilege of the House and also a question of personal privilege.” He based his question on a one-minute speech made on the floor of the House on Feb. 2, 1950, by Mr. Anthony Cavalcante, of Pennsylvania, wherein reflections were cast “upon the House as a whole,” upon “more than two-thirds of the Members of the House,” upon an individual Member of the House, and upon a member of “the other body.” Mr. Hoffman then introduced a resolution to strike the allegedly objectionable words from the Congressional Record of Feb. 2.

Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, stated his opinion that a question of privilege coming several days after objectionable words were uttered was improper and impracticable. Mr. Hoffman responded that although the words were uttered on the floor and that he was present in the Chamber at the time, he had not heard all the words spoken. He stated that there were precedents to the effect that a point of order need not necessarily be made at the time the words were uttered.

6. 96 CONG. REC. 1514, 81st Cong. 2d Sess.

Speaker Rayburn ruled as follows:

The Chair will read the rule:

If a Member is called to order for words spoken in debate, the Member calling him to order shall indicate the words excepted to, and they shall be taken down in writing at the Clerk's desk and read aloud to the House; but he shall not be held to answer, nor be subject to the censure of the House therefore, if further debate or other business has intervened.⁽⁷⁾

The Chair, in the interest of orderly procedure, is forced to hold that after the Journal has been read and approved and the Record read and approved, it would be bad practice to go back and open it up.

Parliamentarian's Note: Under normal practice, the only situation where a question of personal privilege can be raised for objectionable words after intervening debate is where the words are insented, not spoken, and appear in the Record or under Extensions of Remarks.

§ 48.16 A question of personal privilege may be based upon unparliamentary language inserted by a Member in his speech under leave to revise and extend his remarks.

On June 24, 1937,⁽⁸⁾ Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, arose to a question of personal privilege. He based his question on remarks printed in the Congressional Record of June 22, 1937, made by Mr. Adolph J. Sabath, of Illinois, and Mr. Maury Maverick, of Texas. Mr. Maverick's remarks had been uttered on the floor in debate, but Mr. Sabath's remarks had not been made on the floor but inserted in the Record under leave to revise and extend.

Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, stated that in his opinion Mr. Hoffman could not base a question of personal privilege on remarks which had been uttered on the floor in debate.

As to the remarks inserted in the Record by Mr. Sabath, the Speaker stated as follows:

If, as a matter of fact, the gentleman from Illinois inserted in the Record matters not actually stated by him upon the floor at the time which gave offense to the gentleman from Michigan, it was then the privilege of the gentleman from Michigan to raise that question, as he has now raised it, as a matter of personal privilege when his attention was called to the offending language. In view of the fact that the gentleman from Illinois has undertaken to make an explanation of the matter and has offered to move to have the offending language stricken from the Record, does the gentleman still insist on the matter of personal privilege? . . .

8. 81 CONG. REC. 6309, 6310, 75th Cong. 1st Sess.

The gentleman would, if he insisted, after the ruling of the Chair on the second point of order involving the language of the gentleman from Illinois, be entitled to discuss that matter.

§ 48.17 Words spoken in the Committee of the Whole may be taken down and ruled on in the House by the Speaker, but they do not give rise to a question of personal privilege.

On Mar. 16, 1949,⁽⁹⁾ while the Committee of the Whole was considering Senate Joint Resolution 36, authorizing a contribution by the United States for the relief of Palestine refugees, Mr. John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, stated in reference to Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, "Before Pearl Harbor the gentleman was opposed to every bill necessary for the defense of our country." The words were demanded to be taken down, the Committee rose, and Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that the language objected to was merely an opinion and not a violation of the rules of the House.

9. 95 CONG. REC. 2651, 2652, 81st Cong. 1st Sess.

The Committee resumed its sitting, and Mr. McCormack proceeded in debate. Mr. Rankin then arose to a question of personal privilege. Chairman John J. Rooney, of New York, ruled as follows:

Such a point may not be raised in the Committee of the Whole.

MR. RANKIN: Oh, yes; where the offense is committed in the Committee of the Whole, it is in order.

THE CHAIRMAN: The proper remedy is to have the words taken down.

MR. RANKIN: The words have been taken down and were read by the Clerk.

THE CHAIRMAN: I may say to the gentleman from Mississippi that the Speaker of the House has already ruled on that.

§ 48.18 Where a Member attempted to raise a question of personal privilege based on objectionable words spoken in debate, the Speaker, while declining to rule on the question presented, recognized him for a one-minute speech to reply to the derogatory remarks.

On Oct. 15, 1969,⁽¹⁰⁾ Mr. William E. Brock, 3d, of Tennessee, made the following one-minute speech in the House:

Mr. Speaker, most of us heard last evening a great plea for honest debate, for free and open discussion of the issues of the tragedy of Vietnam. That debate went on for 5 hours.

Now, today, we have witnessed a turn. Those who spoke so eloquently for freedom and full debate now object to the consideration of a resolution which endorses the right of dissent in this country. I think it is typical of the double standard that is applied in this country by those elements who are so critical of an honest effort of a great Nation to achieve a lasting peace.

Mr. Arnold Olsen, of Montana, then rose to a point of privilege:

Mr. Speaker, my point of personal privilege is the attack just made from the well of the House on the loyalty of so many of us and the right of free speech in this country.

Mr. Speaker, I think that address is entitled to a response of 1 minute.

Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, did not rule on whether a question of personal privilege was presented, but granted Mr. Olsen "under the circumstances" the right to make a one-minute speech in reply to Mr. Brock's remarks.

Interrupting Member Who Declines To Yield; Deleting Remarks of Member Not Recognized

§ 48.19 A Member wishing to interrupt another in debate should address the Chair for permission of the Member speaking who may exercise his own discretion as to whether or not to yield; the Chair will take the initiative in preserving order when a Member declining to yield in debate continues to be interrupted by another Member, and may order that the remarks of the Member interrupting not appear in the Record.

On July 26, 1984,⁽¹¹⁾ the Committee of the Whole had under consideration H.R. 11, the Education Amendments of 1984. Mr. Robert S. Walker, of Pennsylvania, who was discussing prayer in schools, was interrupted by George Miller, of California, who was reading passages aloud from the Bible for purposes of demonstrating his argument that the right to pray is not absolute:

MR. WALKER: . . . It has been referred to by many people on the floor today that they know of no situation in the country where silent prayer has ever been ruled out of order by the courts. That is wrong.

11. 130 CONG. REC. 21247, 98th Cong. 2d Sess.

I have here an article before me from CQ in which it says that in Alabama the silent prayer in Alabama was ruled out of order by the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. . . .

[Mr. Miller of California proceeded to read from the Bible at this point.]

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹²⁾ The gentleman will suspend. The gentleman from California will suspend. The gentleman is out of order.

MR. MILLER of California: Mr. Chairman, I would just like to raise the point—

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman is out of order.

MR. WALKER: Mr. Chairman, I have not yielded to the gentleman.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman has not yielded.

The gentleman's words when he spoke in the well without getting the permission of the Member who had the floor will not appear in the Record.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania may proceed. . . .

MR. WALKER: . . . I must say that the gentleman reading from the Holy Bible in the course of the discussion here I think is somewhat inappropriate. It was far more appropriate in the course of political debate; it was far more appropriate than the so-called prayer uttered earlier by the gentleman from New York.

MR. MILLER of California: Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

MR. WALKER: I would be glad to yield to the gentleman.

12. Abraham Kazen, Jr. (Tex.).

MR. MILLER of California: I think the point is this: That suggesting that this is an absolute right and that in fact to try to prescribe it, whether it is audible, whether it is oral, whether it is loud, whether it is soft, whether it is silent, is a point of real contention, because it is not an absolute right, as the gentleman suggests.

We just saw the rules of the House work against that right. The gentleman raised the point earlier about a teacher—

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

In the House; Turning Off Microphone as Way To Preserve Order

§ 48.20 The rules which direct the Speaker to preserve order and decorum in the House authorize the Chair to take necessary steps to prevent or curtail disorderly outbursts by Members; thus, for example, the Chair may order the microphones turned off if being utilized by a Member, who has not been properly recognized, to engage in disorderly behavior.

On Mar. 16, 1988,⁽¹³⁾ during the period for one-minute speeches in the House, it was demonstrated that, where a Member has been notified by the Chair that his debate time has expired, he is thereby denied further recognition in the absence of the permission of the House to proceed, and he has no right to further address the House after that time. The proceedings were as follows:

13. 134 CONG. REC. 4079, 4084, 4085, 100th Cong. 2d Sess.

(Mr. Dornan of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

MR. [ROBERT K.] DORNAN of California: Mr. Speaker, and I address a different Member of this Chamber from New York, because you have left your chair, and Mr. Majority Whip from California, you have also fled the floor. In 10 years Jim and Tony—I am not using any traditional titles like “distinguished gentleman”—Jim and Tony, in 10 years I have never heard on this floor so obnoxious a statement as I heard from Mr. Coelho, which means “rabbit” in Portuguese, as ugly a statement as was just delivered. Mr. Coelho said that we on our side of the aisle and those conservative Democrats, particularly those representing States which border the Gulf of Mexico, sold out the Contras. That is absurd. . . . Panama is in chaos and Communists in Nicaragua, thanks to the liberal and radical left leadership in this House are winning a major victory, right now.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁴⁾ The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. Dornan] has expired.

MR. DORNAN of California: Wait a minute. On Honduran soil and on Nicaraguan soil.

14. Gary L. Ackerman (N.Y.).

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The time of the gentleman has expired.

MR. DORNAN of California: And it was set up in this House as you set up the betrayal of the Bay of Pigs.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The time of the gentleman has expired.

MR. DORNAN of California: I ask—wait a minute—I ask unanimous consent for 30 seconds. People are dying.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The time of the gentleman has expired.

MR. DORNAN of California: People are dying.

MR. [HAROLD L.] VOLKMER [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, regular order, regular order.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The time of the gentleman has expired. Will the Sergeant at Arms please turn off the microphone?

MR. DORNAN of California: . . . I demand a Contra vote on aid to the Democratic Resistance and the freedom fighters in Central America. In the name of God and liberty and decency I demand another vote in this Chamber next week. . . .

MR. [JUDD] GREGG [of New Hampshire]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

Mr. Speaker, I was just in my office viewing the proceedings here, and during one of the proceedings, when the gentleman from California [Mr. Dornan] was addressing the House, it was drawn to my attention that the Speaker requested that Mr. Dornan's microphone be turned off, upon which Mr. Dornan's microphone was turned off.

Mr. Speaker, my inquiry of the Chair is: Under what rule does the Speaker decide to gag opposite Members of the House? . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair is referring to Mr. Dornan. He requested permission of the Chair to proceed for 1 minute, and that permission was granted by the House. Mr. Dornan grossly exceeded the limits and abused the privilege far in excess of 1 minute, and the Chair proceeded to restore order and decorum to the House. . . .

MR. GREGG: . . . I have not heard the Chair respond to my inquiry which is what ruling is the Chair referring to which allows him to turn off the microphone of a Member who has the floor?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Clause 2 of rule I.

MR. GREGG: Mr. Speaker, I would ask that that rule be read. I would ask that that rule be read, Mr. Speaker. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: It reads, 2. He shall preserve order and decorum, and, in case of disturbance or disorderly conduct in the galleries, or in the lobby, may cause the same to be cleared. . . .

MRS. [LYNN] MARTIN of Illinois: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

The gentlewoman from Illinois would inquire of the Chair, because it was difficult occasionally to hear the rather strained ruling from the Chair, when I heard the Chair read from the rule, and I hope the Chair will recheck that sentence, because the Chair talked about disturbances in the gallery and disturbances outside the floor of the House.

Would the Speaker reread the exact sentence that would indicate why and how a microphone could be turned off of a duly elected Member of the House on the floor of the House? . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Under rule I, clause 2—and I will only read the half of it that applies, so as not to cause confusion in the minds of those who appear to be confused—“He shall preserve order and decorum.”

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, the sentence goes on.

MRS. MARTIN of Illinois: I believe, Mr. Speaker, that you have been requested specifically to quote that rule that affects a Member of the House on the floor, and that is not that sentence. . . . The Chair is not saying that a Member of the House, is subject to the same rule, even though it does not state it, as applied to the gallery, will apply to Members of the House. I do not believe that that can happen in an elected representative body.

Mr. Speaker, would the Chair please quote how it affects an elected Member speaking on the floor?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will read just what he read before.

“He shall preserve order and decorum, and,—” Then it proceeds to speak about in another place.

“Order and decorum is not just in the halls and in the galleries. The word “and” is followed by a comma.

Parliamentarian’s Note: Clause 4 of Rule XIV⁽¹⁵⁾ is, of course, also applicable in situations such as that described above.

Procedure Before Adoption of Rules that, if necessary, he might maintain decorum by directing a Member who had not been recognized in debate beyond an allotted time to be removed from the well, and by directing the Sergeant at Arms to present the mace as the traditional symbol of order.

The following exchange occurred on Jan. 3, 1991, during consideration of House Resolution 5, adopting the rules of the 102d Congress:⁽¹⁶⁾

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁷⁾ The time of the gentlewoman has expired.

MRS. [NANCY L.] JOHNSON of Connecticut: The majority party is proposing a rules change. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The House will operate under proper decorum.

MRS. JOHNSON of Connecticut: Rather through the rule, they are intending to abrogate the content and meaning of the laws. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentlewoman is out of order. . . .

MRS. JOHNSON of Connecticut: . . . I am sorry. I know this is unpleasant.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentlewoman will remove herself from the well within 30 seconds.

MR. [HENRY B.] GONZALEZ [of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order. . . .

16. 137 CONG. REC. 58, 59, 102d Cong. 1st Sess.

17. Steny H. Hoyer (Md.).

The gentlewoman is out of order . . . I am imploring the Chair to exercise its authority to enforce the rules of the House by summoning the Sergeant at Arms and presenting the mace.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair may do that.

§ 49. — The Demand That Words Be Taken Down

Pursuant to clause 5 of Rule XIV, the demand that a Member's words be taken down must be made immediately after they are uttered and comes too late if further debate has intervened.

A demand that words be taken down must indicate with specificity the objectionable words,⁽¹⁸⁾ and must come immediately after the objectionable words were uttered.⁽¹⁹⁾ If made after intervening business or debate, the demand comes too late,⁽²⁰⁾ unless the

19. See §§ 49.6, 49.7, infra.

20. See Rule XIV clause 5, House Rules and Manual § 761 (1995): "If a Member is called to order for words spoken in debate, the Member calling him to order shall indicate the words excepted to, and they shall be taken down in writing at the Clerk's desk and read aloud to the House; but he

Member seeking to make the demand was on his feet seeking recognition at the proper time.⁽¹⁾

The demand should indicate the words excepted to and the identity of the Member who uttered them; it may indicate briefly the grounds for the demand, such as indulging in personalities, referring to a Senator, or impugning the integrity of a colleague. But the Member making the demand may not at that time debate the reasons for making the demand.⁽²⁾ Indeed, following the demand, no debate is in order, and the Speaker does not entertain unanimous-consent requests, other than for withdrawal of the words, or parliamentary inquiries pending the report of the words and a ruling on them.⁽³⁾

Pending disposition of the demand by a ruling of the Chair, the demand may be withdrawn by the Member making it, and unani-shall not be held to answer, nor be subject to the censure of the House therefor, if further debate or other business has intervened."

Where words are not spoken in debate but are inserted in the Record under leave to revise and extend, a question of privilege may be based on the objectionable words after they are published (see § 48.16, supra).

mous consent is not required for withdrawing the demand.⁽⁴⁾ The demand may also be disposed of without a ruling pursuant to a unanimous-consent request of the Member who uttered the words to withdraw his remarks, which are thereby expunged from the Record.⁽⁵⁾

Unless the Member whose words are challenged asks unanimous consent to withdraw his remarks, he is required to take his seat when the demand is made,⁽⁶⁾ and may not be recognized until the Chair has ruled on the words or until he is permitted on motion to explain his remarks pending the Speaker's ruling.⁽⁷⁾ On several occasions, the Speaker has recognized the Member called to order, before definitively ruling on the words, to determine whether the Member was in fact violating the rules of the House.⁽⁸⁾ Under clause 4 of Rule XIV, a motion to permit a Member to explain is, in recent practice, only in order before the Speaker rules.⁽⁹⁾

but does not lose his right to demand either a recorded or non-recorded vote.⁽¹⁰⁾

Where there is a demand that words be taken down, the Clerk reads the words excepted to and the Chair decides if the words are in order; once the words are held out of order the House may, by unanimous consent, strike the words from the Congressional Record and permit the offending Member to proceed in order for the remainder of his time.⁽¹¹⁾

When words are taken down and reported in the Committee of the Whole, the Committee must immediately rise and the Chairman report the words objected to to the House.⁽¹²⁾ Consideration in the House of such words is limited to the words reported.⁽¹³⁾ After the § 49.1 The Speaker drew attention to the overuse of the practice of demanding that words uttered in debate be taken down.

Generally

On July 23, 1935,⁽¹⁶⁾ Mr. Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, demanded that words used in debate by Mr. John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, referring to Mr. Fish as guilty of a crime be taken down. In delivering his ruling on the words objected to, Speaker Pro Tempore John J. O'Connor, of New York, discussed recent overuse of the demand that words be taken down:

The Chair may state, even though it may be gratuitous, that from his personal standpoint there has grown up in this House a ridiculous habit of causing the words of a Member to be taken down, which course often consumes a great deal of time; and, as the Chair said on the floor the other day, it appears to have come to pass recently that a Member cannot even say "boo" to another Member without some Member demanding that the words be taken down. This practice has become reductio ad absurdum.

The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCormack] has just uttered the words reported. The gentleman from New York [Mr. Fish] thereupon demanded that the words be taken down.

For the gentleman from Massachusetts to state that what the gentleman from New York did or said was a "crime", in the opinion of the present occupant of the chair, is but a loose expression—a word commonly used as a mere figure of speech. The word "wrong" in the dictionary is a synonym for "crime", and the Chair holds that the use of the word "crime", under the particular circumstances, is not unparliamentary language; and the gentleman from Massachusetts may proceed.

Identification of Objectionable Words

§ 49.2 A Member calling another to order for words spoken in debate must indicate specifically the words which shall be taken down.

On June 14, 1940,⁽¹⁷⁾ a demand that certain words used in debate be taken down was made:

MR. [ADOLPH J.] SABATH [of Illinois]: I felt these inserts are unjustifiable and unwarranted. They are not founded on facts. You cannot substantiate any of them—I think you should desist—taken from Nazi elements who are feeding you with that stuff.

MR. [JACOB] THORKELSON [of Montana]: What is a Nazi element?

MR. SABATH: I am not going to argue with you.

17. 86 CONG. REC. 8269, 76th Cong. 3d Sess.

MR. THORKELSON: I demand that the remarks be taken down. I want the gentleman to prove what he has said. I resent being called a Nazi by this gentleman here. I want those remarks taken down.

Speaker Pro Tempore Emmet O'Neal, of Kentucky, asked Mr. Thorkelson to state which words he objected to and Mr. Thorkelson responded that he objected to the remarks made in regard to him. The Speaker Pro Tempore stated "The gentleman from Montana will have to be more specific as to the words to which he objects."⁽¹⁸⁾

On July 11, 1945,⁽¹⁹⁾ Mr. Emanuel Celler, of New York, delivered a lengthy speech on the floor in relation to H.R. 3384, offered by Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, relative to honorably discharged veterans and labor unions. Mr. Celler referred to an incident occurring on the prior day when a veteran was allegedly ordered arrested by Mr. Rankin.

Further debate ensued following Mr. Celler's speech and then Mr. Rankin arose to a point of order.

18. Compare 78 CONG. REC. 6947, 6948, 73d Cong. 2d Sess., Apr. 19, 1934, where the words objected to were not specifically indicated and an entire speech made upon offering of a pro forma amendment was reported to the House.

19. 91 CONG. REC. 7409, 7410, 79th Cong. 1st Sess.

He demanded that Mr. Celler's entire speech be taken down as a "deliberate false attack." Mr. Rankin added that he had not been in the Chamber at the time Mr. Celler's speech was delivered. Speaker Pro Tempore Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia, ruled as follows:

The gentleman from Mississippi must specify the words to be taken down.

MR. RANKIN: I cannot get hold of the manuscript, but I know what he was saying when I came in. No veteran was cuffed around. A man who says he was a veteran discharged for nervous disability or mental disorder came to the office and the officer took him downstairs.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will suspend. The rule provides that the gentleman must demand taking down of the words at the time they are spoken, and specify the words.

MR. RANKIN: Mr. Speaker, I demand the words be taken down in which he deliberately and falsely charged that this veteran was cuffed around and abused in the Veterans Committee or in my office. It is a deliberate and dastardly falsehood, and I demand those words be taken down.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair is compelled to rule that the gentleman's point comes too late. He did not demand the words be taken down at the time the words were spoken.

§ 49.3 Consideration in the House of words taken down and reported from the Committee of the Whole is limited to the words reported.

On July 27, 1965,⁽²⁰⁾ Mr. Neal Smith, of Iowa, demanded in the Committee of the Whole that certain words used in debate by Mr. Charles E. Goodell, of New York, be taken down. The Clerk read the words objected to, the Committee rose, and the words were reported to the House. Mr. Smith then stated that the Clerk did not read all of the objectionable remarks.

Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, stated that he could rule only on the words that had been reported to the House as taken down in the Committee of the Whole. The Speaker declined to pass upon what could be done when the Committee of the Whole resumed sitting in relation to additional words not initially reported.

On Feb. 15, 1940,⁽¹⁾ certain words used in debate in the Committee of the Whole were demanded to be taken down. After the Committee rose and the words were reported to the House, Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, made the point of order "that the words to which I objected are not all reported. There was a further statement there containing similar language." Speaker Pro Tempore Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that "It is too late to raise that question now."

20. 111 CONG. REC. 18441, 89th Cong. 1st Sess.

1. 86 CONG. REC. 1529, 76th Cong. 3d Sess.

On Mar. 16, 1939,⁽²⁾ Mr. Lee E. Geyer, of California, described at length the personal characteristics of another Member while on the floor. Mr. John Taber, of New York, demanded that the words be taken down.

The Clerk read one sentence and Mr. Taber stated "Mr. Chairman, there were some other words." The Clerk reported the additional words and the Committee then arose for a ruling by the Speaker.

§ 49.4 The Speaker ordered the Clerk to report words uttered previously to words to which objection was taken.

On July 23, 1935,⁽³⁾ Mr. Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, demanded that certain words used in debate by Mr. John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, be taken down. On the direction of Speaker Pro Tempore John J. O'Connor, of New York, the Clerk read the following words:

The gentleman from New York [Mr. Fish], whether he intended it or not, is

2. 84 CONG. REC. 2871, 76th Cong. 1st Sess.
3. 79 CONG. REC. 11699, 74th Cong. 1st Sess.

guilty of that crime; not only a few days ago, but is again guilty of the same crime on this occasion.

Mr. Edward E. Cox, of Georgia, then made a point of order to insist "in connection with those words, that the previous statement that he had made an unfair argument also be included."

The Speaker Pro Tempore responded:

The Chair was about to make that suggestion. To properly inform the Chair, the words previously uttered should be read in connection with the words just reported.

The Clerk will report the words uttered previously to the words to which objection was taken.

The Clerk read as follows:

I respect men who fight hard. I respect men, members of the Republican Party and the Democratic Party, who fight hard for their party, but who fight clean. I respect men who make constructive criticisms; but my general respect for men is somewhat lost when they depart from what should be and what ordinarily is their general conduct and enter into the field of unnecessary, unfair, and unwarranted attacks and arguments.

The Speaker Pro Tempore ruled that having alleged that a Member had committed a "crime" in the manner used by Mr. McCormack, and when taken in context, was not unparliamentary language.

Method of Challenging Member's Words

§ 49.5 The only method by which the words of the Member having the floor may be challenged is through a demand that his words be taken down.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on June 4, 1984,⁽⁴⁾ during consideration of the Oregon Wilderness Act of 1983 (H.R. 1149):

MR. [LES] AU COIN [of Oregon]: . . . The House has had its opportunity to work its will. The only thing that would be gained now by not voting for this bill as it is would be to delay a final resolution, pushing it off further down the road . . . running this issue up against all the other issues that the Congress is going to be dealing with in its rush toward adjournment and that will guarantee the doom of this bill.

Obviously, no responsible person on either side of this issue wants such a thing to happen.

MR. [DON] YOUNG of Alaska: Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁵⁾ The gentleman will state it.

MR. YOUNG of Alaska: Mr. Speaker, I would like to suggest that the gentleman not use the term "no responsible person."

Both Members from Oregon are very responsible members of the committee that I am ranking member of, and I consider my responsibility very seriously and to say that we are not responsible because we are in opposition to this bill is incorrect.

5. James C. Wright, Jr. (Tex.).

I would respectfully suggest that the gentleman reconsider his words.

MR. AU COIN: Mr. Speaker, this gentleman said that no responsible person wants to see a resolution of this bill delayed to such a date in which no passage of the bill dealing with the Oregon RARE II problem would be possible. . . .

I assume it applies to the gentleman from Alaska. I think he is responsible. I do not think he wants to see a resolution of this bill delayed.

MR. YOUNG of Alaska: The bill is basically wrong. I rose against the bill and to allude to the fact that we are irresponsible does not become the gentleman at all. That disturbs me a great deal. . . .

So I would suggest again to the gentleman to choose his words very carefully.

MR. AU COIN: Mr. Speaker, what is the regular order?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman may proceed. The gentleman has not asked the words be taken down. The gentleman may proceed.

Timeliness of Demand That Words Be Taken Down

§ 49.6 The demand that words used in debate be taken down must be made directly after objectionable language is uttered and comes too late if further debate has ensued.

On Sept. 4, 1969,⁽⁶⁾ Mr. Albert W. Watson, of South Carolina, referred in the Committee of the Whole to another Member who “took a moment under the one-minute rule to praise Ho Chi Minh or to compare him with Washington and Lincoln and other great leaders of the past in this Nation.” Subsequent to those remarks, further debate ensued, including several points of order.

Mr. Richard L. Ottinger, of New York, then arose and demanded that Mr. Watson’s words be taken down and reported to the House. Chairman Cornelius E. Gallagher, of New Jersey, ruled as follows:

The request comes too late. Further debate has continued beyond that point and the gentleman’s demand is not in order.

On Mar. 20, 1947,⁽⁷⁾ Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, rose to a question of personal privilege. He stated that on the preceding Monday, Mar. 17, he made a one-minute speech on the floor of the House. He then stated that later on the same day when he was not present on the floor Mr. Adolph J. Sabath, of Illinois, rose and made insulting and false statements about him on the floor of the House.

Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, ruled as follows

6. 115 CONG. REC. 24372, 24373, 91st Cong. 1st Sess.
7. 93 CONG. REC. 2314, 2315, 80th Cong. 1st Sess.

on the question of personal privilege:

. . . The gentleman has not stated a question of personal privilege. The rules provide that strictures in debate do not give rise to a question of privilege, but are properly contravened by a demand that the words be taken down.

It is too late to make the demand that the words in question be taken down after business has intervened. It is plainly indicated that what transpired was in debate and the remedy of the gentleman from Mississippi at that time was to demand that the words be taken down.⁽⁸⁾

§ 49.7 A demand that words be taken down must be made immediately after the words are uttered, and not “at any time before the Member uttering the words closes his speech.”

On July 11, 1945,⁽⁹⁾ Mr. Emanuel Celler, of New York, addressed the House for 15 minutes on the subject of a bill offered by Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, for the purpose of protecting veterans and their rights with respect to joining labor unions. Mr. Celler referred to an incident on the prior day when Mr. Rankin had allegedly caused a veteran to be arrested.

9. 91 CONG. REC. 7409, 7410, 79th Cong. 1st Sess.

Further debate intervened and then Mr. Rankin rose to a point of order. He demanded that Mr. Celler's entire speech be taken down as a "deliberate false attack." Mr. Rankin acknowledged that he had not been in the Hall for the majority of Mr. Celler's speech.

Speaker Pro Tempore Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia, ruled that Mr. Rankin's point of order came too late since further debate had intervened following the objectionable words.

Mr. Rankin objected to the ruling but was overruled by the Speaker:

MR. RANKIN: Oh, no, Mr. Speaker. At any time before the Member leaves the floor or closes his speech, because I did not know how many times he would repeat it.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair is compelled to hold that the gentleman had to make his demand at the time the words were spoken. Other debate has intervened and the gentleman has yielded to other Members on the floor.

MR. RANKIN: Not other debate. Mr. Speaker, I am within the rules, and any time before he closes his vicious speech I have a right to have his words taken down.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair cannot agree with the gentleman. The Chair overrules the point of order.

§ 49.8 Pursuant to clause 5 of Rule XIV, the demand that a Member's words be taken down must be made immediately after they are uttered and comes too late if further debate has intervened.

On Apr. 29, 1976,⁽¹⁰⁾ during consideration of the first concurrent resolution on the budget,⁽¹¹⁾ the following exchange occurred:

MR. [RONALD V.] DELLUMS [of California]: . . . What does this budget do? Does it reflect human values? . . .

We continue to build monuments to our military madness, spending over $100 billion in this budget for those purposes. . . . Will we be attacked by the Warsaw Pact?

The answer to that is obviously no. However, we are being attacked in this country with lack of attention, cynicism, demagoguery, ineptness, inadequacy, expediency, pontificating, and politicking. . . .

If we need to understand the reality, we are a third-rate power right now in terms of our ability to sustain life. We are a third-rate power in our ability to deal with human conditions in this country. We are a third-rate power in many of the areas that speak to the human misery of people.

This is the Bicentennial Year. Is the Congress of the United States fighting

10. 122 CONG. REC. 11880, 11881, 94th Cong. 2d Sess.

11. H. Con. Res. 611.

valiantly to make sure that democracy is real? No. The Bicentennial has become a sham, a justification for selling red, white, and blue everything. . . .

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: . . . I do not accept in any way, the indictment the gentleman has laid upon the great Nation that is the United States of America. I think his criticism is totally misplaced. I think it comes to this House with particular bad grace because, quite frankly, this Nation over the years has done more to bring freedom to more people than any other nation on the face of the Earth. . . .

MR. DELLUMS: Mr. Chairman, I would like to make a very brief statement. I hope the gentleman's emotional feeling has calmed down. I feel quite calm and rational, at least.

MR. BAUMAN: That is a change from your condition when you last spoke.

MR. DELLUMS: I like to think that I am always rational. I would like to simply state to the gentleman from Maryland, when you talk about shame, and those of you on the right, when you talk about waving the flag, all I know is what has happened. . . .

There is one thing that I am sure of and that is the fact of my right to take that well of the House and make statements and express my own convictions without fear.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Chairman, I do not deny the gentleman the right to speak his convictions but I do have the equal right not to agree with them.

MR. DELLUMS: I appreciate the gentleman's courtesy for telling me that. . . .

MR. [JOHN] CONYERS [Jr., of Michigan]: Mr. Chairman, I would ask that the gentleman from Maryland's words be taken down in his last presentation. I think that they were in violation of the Rules of the House. I think that they insulted the gentleman from California, and I make that request at this time.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹²⁾ Will the gentleman from Michigan inform the Chair precisely what words he has in mind? Were they the last words spoken by the gentleman from Maryland?

MR. CONYERS: No, Mr. Chairman. They were the words spoken during the time that he was speaking.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair will have to advise the gentleman that it is now too late to make any point of order on those words, since there has been intervening debate.

—Intervening Debate

§ 49.9 A point of order may not be made or reserved against remarks delivered in debate after subsequent debate has intervened, the proper remedy being a demand that the words be taken down as soon as they are spoken.

On Aug. 20, 1980,⁽¹³⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House:

The Clerk read as follows:

FEDERAL ELECTION COMMISSION

SALARIES AND EXPENSES

For expense necessary to carry out the provisions of the Federal Election Campaign Act Amendments of 1976, $9,283,000.

MR. [ROBERT K.] DORNAN [of California]: Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Dornan: Page 14, after line 15, insert the following: "For expenses necessary to carry out the provisions of the Federal Election Campaign Act Amendments of 1976, $8,195,000, of which not more than $1,700,000 may be expended by the office of General Counsel."

MR. DORNAN: Mr. Chairman, had this bill been offered in a timely fashion earlier this year, this might have been thoroughly aired as to all the aspects that relate to politics, the FEC, and the pursuit of justice. The amendment I am offering reduces the appropriation to the Federal Election Commission. . . .

The FEC, through its Office of General Counsel, has allowed an elected Federal official, just like ourselves, to keep for over 1 year, $1,150 of acknowledged illegal corporate campaign contributions. The corporation—whatever it did is somewhat unclear—laundered $13,000 into my opponent's campaign and $23,150 of illegal corporate money into this elected Federal official's campaign coffers. Some of this $23,150 may have been given in cash. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁴⁾ The gentleman from California (Mr. Dornan) has . . . asked unanimous consent to withdraw his amendment. . . .

MR. [HENRY A.] WAXMAN [of California]: Mr. Chairman, I reserve an objection. . . .

Mr. Chairman, and my colleagues, I am not familiar with the allegations being made. This amendment has been offered for the purpose of our colleague using the time of the House of Representatives to engage in a good number of accusations attacking the integrity of men in public office and those who would seek to be in public office and those who have assisted them. . . . It does, however, seem to me quite curious to have an amendment offered for the sole purpose of using the time of the House to air all these accusations. If there are accusations of serious moment they ought to be brought to the proper authorities. . . .

Mr. Chairman, I just wanted to take this opportunity to say this strikes me as curious and gives me a great deal of hesitancy to see that an amendment would be offered solely for the purpose of discussing other matters than what is proposed in the amendment and that relates to the gentleman's campaign for reelection. . . .

Mr. Chairman, I will reclaim my time by saying there must be other ways to do what the gentleman proposes. It is awfully self-serving for the gentleman to use the opportunity of the floor of the House of Representatives to make all of these accusations in order to benefit the gentleman's personal reelection.

MR. DORNAN: That is not why I am pursuing this. Were the Members of Congress who used this well for Watergate self-serving?

MR. WAXMAN: Mr. Chairman, I think it is improper. If the gentleman has serious charges he has to make, this is not the place to make them unless one would assume it is being done for demagogic purposes.

14. Richardson Preyer (N.C.).

MR. DORNAN: I assure the gentleman it is not.

MR. WAXMAN: Or for reelection purposes. . . .

MR. DORNAN: I assure the gentleman it was not done for demagogic purposes. I have lived with the knowledge of this scandal for over a year. I sincerely intended to offer this amendment 4 months ago, 3 months ago, 2 months ago. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California (Mr. Dornan) to withdraw his amendment? If not, the amendment is withdrawn.

MR. DORNAN: Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state his point of order.

MR. DORNAN: Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order in opposition to the Member's words against me.

To suggest that someone's remarks are demagogic is impugning the motives of that Member. I could have had my good colleague's words taken down. I reserve the point of order, but add that I am emotionally concerned about a 1-year coverup by the Federal officials who are charged with investigating these matters here. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman has no standing to raise the point of order at this point. Debate has intervened. There is no other amendment before the committee, and the Chair will ask the Clerk to read.

§ 49.10 A demand in Committee of the Whole that words be taken down is in order only if made in a timely manner; where debate has intervened, the demand comes too late.

The following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole on May 5, 1981,⁽¹⁵⁾ during consideration of House Concurrent Resolution 115 (pertaining to the congressional budget):

MR. [PAUL S.] TRIBLE [Jr., of Virginia]: . . . I still oppose the Hefner amendment. I oppose it on two grounds. First, it is wrong to hold the defense of this great Nation hostage to petty political purposes, whatever they might be. Are these funds really being sought to strengthen our Nation's defense or to strengthen the prospects for passage of the Jones budget proposal?

The flawed approach of the majority cannot be saved. It ought not to be saved. . . .

MR. [W. G.] HEFNER [of North Carolina]: I would just like to repeat, did the gentleman refer to this as cheap, petty politics, is that what the gentleman said? I am just curious.

MR. TRIBLE: Those were not my words, but I said that I questioned whether today's effort was dictated by a requirement to save this flawed package. I believe it is obvious from the maneuvers of the last few minutes where the gentleman's amendment was once again changed. It is a last-ditch effort to save this flawed program, a program that will not be saved, a program that will not generate the economic growth and recovery so vital to this land, a program that cannot support the substantial increases in defense spending required in the context of this dangerous world.

15. 127 CONG. REC. 8496, 97th Cong. 1st Sess.

MR. HEFNER: Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

MR. TRIBLE: I would be happy to yield to my friend.

MR. HEFNER: Well, is the gentleman suggesting that I deliberately—that the gentlewoman from California has suggested earlier, it kind of makes me feel a little bit bad when the gentleman would insinuate that I would deliberately miss a vote, had I been there, I would have voted for the gentleman, that I have no strong desires for defense spending and this is a last minute ploy on the gentleman from North Carolina?

MR. TRIBLE: At no time did I suggest the motives of my friend, the gentleman from North Carolina. The gentleman is in a far better position to speak for his intentions than I am.

MR. HEFNER: I am the author of the amendment. . . .

MR. [PARREN J.] MITCHELL of Maryland: Mr. Chairman, a point of inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁶⁾ The gentleman will state it.

MR. MITCHELL of Maryland: I, too, thought I heard some words spoken that might constitute a personal attack on the motives of a Member. I would not like to proceed until such time as we have had a clarification of what those words were. Is that possible?

THE CHAIRMAN: Is the gentleman asking that words be taken down?

MR. [ED] BETHUNE [of Arkansas]: Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Arkansas.

MR. BETHUNE: Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Arkansas makes a point of order that the gentleman's parliamentary inquiry and his question comes too late.

THE CHAIRMAN: Debate has intervened. The point is well taken.

Parliamentarian's Note: Mr. Tribble's words as carried in the Record did not violate the rules, since not referring to a specific Member or his motives.

§ 49.11 Pursuant to clause 5 of Rule XIV, a demand during debate that a Member's words be taken down comes too late if further debate has intervened.

During consideration of the military procurement authorization for fiscal year 1985 (H.R. 5167) in the Committee of the Whole on May 23, 1984,⁽¹⁷⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [HENRY J.] HYDE [of Illinois]: Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word. . . .

I am sorry that our members of the Armed Services Committee accepted this blatantly cowardly and political amendment, and I reject it, and I am proud to vote no.

MR. [THOMAS S.] FOLEY [of Washington]: Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the necessary number of words. . . .

17. 130 CONG. REC. 13941, 98th Cong. 2d Sess.

16. Martin Frost (Tex.).

MR. [DAN] DANIEL [of Virginia]: Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

MR. FOLEY: I yield to the gentleman from Virginia.

MR. DANIEL: Mr. Chairman, I rise to a point of personal privilege.

MR. HYDE: Would the gentleman let me respond before he makes his point of personal privilege?

MR. FOLEY: I yield first to the gentleman from Virginia.

MR. DANIEL: Mr. Chairman, if it is not too late, I demand that the words of the gentleman from Illinois be taken down.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁸⁾ The Chair will advise the Member that a point of personal privilege is not in order in the Committee of the Whole, and the request that words be taken down comes too late.

MR. HYDE: Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me for a moment?

MR. DANIEL: Mr. Chairman, the gentleman referred to members of the Armed Services Committee as cowards.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Washington (Mr. Foley) has the floor. . . .

MR. FOLEY: I yield to the gentleman for the purpose of responding.

Parliamentarian's Note: As noted by the Chairman, a question of personal privilege under Rule IX may not be raised in the Committee of the Whole.

§ 49.12 Papers read during debate are subject to a timely demand that words be "taken down" as an unparliamentary reference to other sitting Members, but the demand must be made before subsequent reading intervenes.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Feb. 25, 1985:⁽¹⁹⁾

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽²⁰⁾ Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Gingrich) is recognized for 60 minutes.

MR. [NEWT] GINGRICH [of Georgia]: Mr. Speaker, I am going to insert in the Record today and read into the Record several editorials, one from the Atlanta Journal and Constitution yesterday, Sunday, February 24, and one this morning from the Wall Street Journal. . . .

Yet twice the House has voted to deny McIntyre the seat while it investigates. . . .

The technicalities aside, the case is interesting for what it says about the Congress. The votes on the McIntyre matter went right along party lines. In the second vote only five Democrats dared abandon O'Neill and the leadership. . . .

A few Republicans near each election try to remind voters that the Democrats' first vote will be for O'Neill and that vote signals bondage. This year it meant the abandonment of fairness.

It didn't use to happen this way. The 1966 election in the Georgia 4th District saw Ben Blackburn nip Rep. James A. Mackay by 360 votes. The Republican Blackburn was certified 18. Frank Harrison (Pa.).

by state officials and sent to Washington.

There, a little-known congressman was chairing a little-known subcommittee. The congressman tried to deny Blackburn his seat, but was overruled harshly by the speaker of those days, Rep. John McCormack. . . .

MS. [MARY ROSE] OAKAR [of Ohio]: Mr. Speaker, parliamentary inquiry. . . .

MR. GINGRICH: Mr. Speaker, the gentlewoman has not asked me to yield, and I was in fact making an inquiry myself to the Chair. I was asking the Chair to rule in this sort of setting if one is reporting to the House on the written opinion of a columnist in which the columnist has said very strong things, is it appropriate for the House to be informed of this and, if so, what is the correct procedure?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The ruling of the Chair is that the gentleman should not read into the Record things which would clearly be outside the rules of this House. . . .

MR. GINGRICH: Let me continue to ask the Chair, because I am a little confused, in other words, if a columnist writing in the largest newspaper in the State of Georgia says very strong things about his concern about the House's behavior, would the House in effect censor a report of that concern?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: No; the House does not censor any report of that kind. The gentleman does take the responsibility, however, for words uttered on the floor, and he is certainly capable of leaving out those items which he knows would be outside the rules of this House. . . .

MS. OAKAR: My primary inquiry is this, Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Georgia has already read into the House proceedings what I consider to be a possible violation of the rules of the House when he made reference to the Speaker of the House. I am wondering if the Chair will rule on that, whether or not that item violates the rules of the House.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair cannot rule on remarks that have already been made. They have already been made and they are now part of the Record. As the gentleman knows, she has to make those objections timely.

Multiple Demands

§ 49.13 The words of two Members engaged in a colloquy have been taken down in the House and ruled out of order.

On Feb. 12, 1946,⁽¹⁾ language used by two Members in debate were demanded to be taken down and were reported and ruled on simultaneously:

MR. [HUGH] DE LACY [of Washington]: Mr. Speaker, if there is no parliamentary means of stopping the use of such language as "slime-mongering kike," which appears in yesterday's Record, then certainly we who believe in the right of people to stand up and express their opinions should protest it visibly and audibly upon this floor.

I am standing here today to state to the gentleman from Mississippi that we do not propose to permit this kind of language to be indulged in on this floor. It is disgraceful.

1. 92 CONG. REC. 1241, 79th Cong. 2d Sess.

MR. [JOHN E.] RANKIN [of Mississippi]: Mr. Speaker, I demand that those words be taken down. I am not going to sit here and listen to these communistic attacks made on me.

MR. [JOHN M.] COFFEE [of Washington]: Mr. Speaker, I demand that those words be taken down.

MR. [ADOLPH J.] SABATH [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, I demand that the words of the gentleman from Mississippi be taken down.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽²⁾ The gentlemen will both take their seats, and the words will be taken down.

The Clerk will report the words objected to.

The Clerk read as follows:

I am standing here today to state to the gentleman from Mississippi that we do not propose to permit this kind of language to be indulged in on this floor. It is disgraceful.

MR. RANKIN: Mr. Speaker, I demand that those words be taken down. I am not going to sit here and listen to these communistic attacks made on me.

MR. COFFEE: Mr. Speaker, I demand that those words be taken down.

THE SPEAKER:⁽³⁾ The Chair will be compelled to hold that both gentlemen used language that was unparliamentary.

Motions and Requests Pending Demand

§ 49.14 The Chair does not entertain a unanimous-consent

2. John J. Sparkman (Ala.).
3. Sam Rayburn (Tex.).

request that a Member be allowed to proceed for one minute pending a demand that another Member's words be taken down.

On Jan. 21, 1964,⁽⁴⁾ certain words used in debate in the Committee of the Whole were demanded to be taken down and reported to the House. Before the Committee rose, Mr. James Roosevelt, of California, asked unanimous consent to proceed for one minute, but Chairman William S. Moorhead, of Pennsylvania, refused to entertain the request.

§ 49.15 The Speaker does not entertain a parliamentary inquiry pending a demand that words be taken down.

On Oct. 31, 1963,⁽⁵⁾ after the words of a Member used in debate were demanded to be taken down, Mr. Bruce R. Alger, of Texas, attempted to state a parliamentary inquiry, but Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, ruled that it could not be entertained pending the demand that words be taken down.

§ 49.16 Where a demand is made that certain words in debate be taken down in the Committee of the Whole, such words must be reported to the House and a motion to expunge words from the Record is not in order in the Committee.

5. 109 CONG. REC. 20742, 88th Cong. 1st Sess.

On Feb. 18, 1941,⁽⁶⁾ Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, stated in debate in the Committee of the Whole in reference to a Member "You are going to skin us." Mr. Robert F. Rich, of Pennsylvania, demanded that the words be taken down.

Before the Committee rose, Mr. Rich asked that the words he had objected to be expunged from the Record. Chairman Warren G. Magnuson, of Washington, ruled that expungement was "a matter for the House to decide."

§ 49.17 Upon a timely demand that the words uttered in debate be taken down as unparliamentary, the Speaker ruled that remarks characterizing the relationship between Senator and Vice-Presidential candidate J. Danforth Quayle's political words and his living deeds as "hypocrisy" were out of order and should be withdrawn; subsequently, objection was made to a unanimous-consent request that the offending language be stricken.

On Sept. 29, 1988,⁽⁷⁾ during the period for one-minute speeches in the House, the following proceedings occurred:

(Mr. Williams asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

MR. [PAT] WILLIAMS [of Montana]: Mr. Speaker, yesterday Republican Vice-Presidential candidate Dan Quayle was in Texas. He visited, he was kind enough to go by and visit a Job Corps center in El Paso, and while there he looked 300 Job Corps students in the eye and said, "We believe in you."

He did not tell them that he had voted to shut that center down. He did not tell them that the Reagan-Bush administration in fact has demanded that every Job Corps center in America, bar none, be closed.

This is the same Senator Quayle that supports wars that he won't fight, the same Senator Quayle who got into law school under an entry minority program that he later votes against.

There is a word for it, my colleagues, it is called hypocrisy.

MR. [DAN] LUNGREN [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I ask that the gentleman's words be taken down. . . .

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁸⁾ The Clerk will report the words of the gentleman from Montana.

6. 87 CONG. REC. 1126, 77th Cong. 1st Sess.

7. 134 CONG. REC. 26683, 26684, 100th Cong. 2d Sess.

8. James C. Wright, Jr. (Tex.).

The Clerk read as follows:

This is the same Senator Quayle that supports wars that he won't fight, the same Senator Quayle who got into law school under an entry minority program that he later votes against.

There is a word for it, my colleagues, it is called hypocrisy.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair has considered closely the question of the use of words to distinguish policies as opposed to individuals. There are precedents touching on proper and improper references in debate and dealing with the preservation of comity between the House and Senate. It is important to recognize that the individual referenced in the remarks not only is a candidate for Vice President of the United States but is a Member of the other body.

The precedents relating to references in debate to the President, Vice President, or to a Member of the other body who is a nominated or declared candidate for President or Vice President permit criticisms of official policy, actions and opinions of that person as a candidate, but do not permit personal abuse, do not permit innuendo and do not permit ridicule, and they do require that the proper rules of decorum must be followed during any debate relating to the President of the United States or a Member of the other body.

It could be argued that there is a distinction between calling an individual a hypocrite, for example, and referring to some policy as hypocrisy, but the Chair has discovered a precedent that seems to be directly in point. In 1945, a Member of the House from Georgia referred to another Member and said, "I was reminded that pre-texts are never wanting when hypocrisy wishes to add malice to falsehood or cowardice to stab a foe who cannot defend himself." Speaker Rayburn ruled that this was out of order as an unparliamentary reference to another Member of the body.

By extension, the same identical words should be held out of order in reference to a Member of the other body whether or not he were a candidate for a high office, and under these circumstances and citing this precedent, the Chair would suggest that the gentleman from Montana withdraw the offending remarks, including the particular word "hypocrisy," and either amend his reference in the permanent Record or delete it. . . .

MR. WILLIAMS: Mr. Speaker, do I understand correctly that the Speaker's ruling is based upon my characterization of a U.S. Senator, in this case Senator Quayle, that had the Republican Vice-Presidential candidate not been at this time a U.S. Senator, that my remarks would, in fact, be in order? . . .

THE SPEAKER: . . . The Chair would suggest to the gentleman from Montana that there are standards that apply in the Chamber and in the precedents with respect to nominated candidates for President and Vice President. The Chair is not certain if they are precisely the same as applied to a Member of the other body or a Member of this body, but in this instance, it is not necessary to make that hypothetical distinction since the individual involved is a Member of the other body.

MR. WILLIAMS: Further parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker: Would it be within the rules of the House if the last sentence of my 1-minute, the one which characterizes Senator Quayle's actions as hypocrisy, be removed by unanimous consent from my 1-minute statement?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair would suggest to the gentleman from Montana that this might be a satisfactory solution.

MR. WILLIAMS: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the last sentence of my 1-minute statement, the sentence in which I characterized Senator Quayle's actions as hypocrisy, be stricken.

MR. LUNGREN: Mr. Speaker, parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: Please, the Chair will recognize the gentleman for a parliamentary inquiry, but, first, please permit the gentleman from Montana to complete his request. . . .

MR. LUNGREN: I reserve the right to object, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: That is fine. The gentleman may reserve his right to object, but in the interests of orderly procedure, permit the Chair to allow the gentleman from Montana to complete his request.

MR. WILLIAMS: Let me be sure the Chair understands my request: I have asked unanimous consent that the last sentence of my 1-minute statement be stricken. . . .

THE SPEAKER: . . . Has the gentleman from Montana completed his request?

MR. WILLIAMS: No, Mr. Speaker, I have not. Both times I have been interrupted as I have attempted to ask unanimous consent that the last sentence of my 1-minute statement be eliminated. That was the sentence which referred to Senator Quayle's actions as hypocrisy. I seek unanimous consent to strike the last sentence of my 1-minute statement.

THE SPEAKER: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Montana?

MR. LUNGREN: Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, under normal circumstances and in the interests of comity of this House and the relationship of this House and the other body, I would not object. However, as is very obvious from the statements of the gentleman, the insult, the language that is not to be used under our rules was repeated three times in an effort to make a point which violates, in my judgment, the sense of the rules of the House and, therefore, since it is not, I believe, appropriate to do that, I object.

THE SPEAKER: Objection is heard.

Debating Reasons for Demand

§ 49.18 When a Member demands that certain words spoken in debate be taken down, he may not at that time debate his reasons for making such a demand.

On July 26, 1951,⁽⁹⁾ in the Committee of the Whole, Mr. John J. Rooney, of New York, referred in debate to other Members as following "slippery, snide, and sharp practices." Following those remarks, Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, demanded that the words be taken down and added that he wanted to "state the grounds." Chairman Jere Cooper, of Tennessee, ruled that Mr. Hoffman could not "state reasons when he makes the demand."

⁹ 97 CONG. REC. 8968, 8969, 82d Cong. 1st Sess.

Speaking Member To Take His Seat

§ 49.19 Where a demand is made that the words of a Member be taken down, such Member must immediately resume his seat.

On Mar. 24, 1961,⁽¹⁰⁾ words used in debate by Mr. Neal Smith, of Iowa, were demanded to be taken down. When Mr. Smith rose to object to the demand on the grounds that he had not violated the rules of the House, Chairman Eugene J. Keogh, of New York, ruled pursuant to a point of order that Mr. Smith was required to take his seat pursuant to a demand that his words be taken down.

On Oct. 9, 1940,⁽¹¹⁾ Mr. Sol Bloom, of New York, objected to certain words used in debate by Mr. John C. Schafer, of Wisconsin,

10. 107 CONG. REC. 4780, 87th Cong. 1st Sess.

11. 86 CONG. REC. 13477, 76th Cong. 3d Sess.

and demanded that they be taken down. When Mr. Schafer attempted to explain his remarks and to contend that he was proceeding in order, Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled pursuant to a point of order by Mr. Bloom that Mr. Schafer was required to take his seat.

After the words were reported to the House and prior to the Chair's ruling, Speaker Rayburn recognized Mr. Schafer for the purpose of explaining to the Chair whether he was referring to a Member of the House or to another person.

On Feb. 7, 1935,⁽¹²⁾ when Mr. Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, demanded that certain words used in debate by Mr. George H. Tinkham, of Massachusetts, be taken down, Mr. Tinkham interjected some further remarks in relation to the demand.

Chairman William N. Rogers, of New Hampshire, directed Mr. Tinkham to take his seat.

§ 49.20 When the demand is made that certain words be taken down, the Member uttering such words must take his seat and may not be recognized until the Chair has ruled.

12. 79 CONG. REC. 1680, 1681, 74th Cong. 1st Sess.

On May 4, 1943,⁽¹³⁾ while Mr. Harold Knutson, of Minnesota, had the floor in the Committee of the Whole, Mr. Wright Patman, of Texas, asked him to yield, and Mr. Knutson replied, "No. I do not yield to any more demagogues."

After Mr. Patman demanded that the words be taken down, Chairman Alfred L. Bulwinkle, of North Carolina, ruled that Mr. Knutson was required to take his seat when such a demand was made.

After Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that the words objected to were a violation of the rules of the House, he recognized Mr. Knutson for the purpose of withdrawing the words by unanimous consent.⁽¹⁴⁾

MR. PATMAN: Mr. Chairman, I ask that the words of the gentleman be taken down.

MR. KNUTSON: I withdraw them.

MR. PATMAN: I object to that, Mr. Chairman. I ask that the gentleman's words be taken down.

13. 89 CONG. REC. 3915, 3916, 78th Cong. 1st Sess.

14. But see 86 CONG. REC. 13477, 76th Cong. 3d Sess., Oct. 9, 1940 (before ruling on objectionable words, Speaker inquired of Member called to order whether he had been referring to a Member of the House). Under clause 4 of Rule XIV, a Member may, on motion or at the request of the Speaker, explain the words objected to prior to the Chair's ruling (see §52, infra).

Mr. Chairman, I ask that the gentleman take his seat under the rules.

MR. KNUTSON: Mr. Chairman, I ask that the gentleman from Texas take his seat.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Clerk will report the words objected to.

The Clerk read as follows:

MR. KNUTSON: No; I do not yield to any more demagogues.

MR. KNUTSON: Mr. Chairman—

MR. [JOHN E.] RANKIN [of Mississippi]: Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state it.

MR. RANKIN: The gentleman from Minnesota has no right to speak until this matter is disposed of. I demand that the gentleman take his seat until the matter is disposed of.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will please be seated.

Business Suspended Until Words Are Reported

§ 49.21 Pending a demand that words spoken in debate be taken down and read by the Clerk, debate is suspended and no business is in order.

On Feb. 8, 1978,⁽¹⁵⁾ during proceedings related to H.R. 6805, the Consumer Protection Act of 1977, Mr. Benjamin S. Rosenthal, of New York, stated, in reference to statements previously made in debate by Mr. Robert E. Bauman, of Maryland: "I think that is really an unfair statement, and I myself am sorry that I did not stand up to have Mr. Bauman's words taken down earlier today. I regret that I hesitated, because they impugned the motives of Members and groups supporting the bill. It not only is extraordinarily bad taste, it is violative of the Rules of the House."⁽¹⁶⁾ The following exchange then occurred:

15. 124 CONG. REC. 2831, 2832, 95th Cong. 2d Sess.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Chairman, a point of order, Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁷⁾ The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Chairman, I made the point of order while the gentleman from New York was speaking, before the gentleman's time expired.

THE CHAIRMAN: There was so much noise the Chair did not hear the gentleman from Maryland. The gentleman from Maryland will state his point of order.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Chairman, I demand that the words of the gentleman from New York be taken down.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Maryland is referring to which words?

MR. BAUMAN: To the entire series of words of the gentleman from New York, from the first reference to the gentleman from Maryland to the last.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Clerk will report the words the gentleman from Maryland wishes taken down.

MR. [PAUL N.] MCCLOSKEY [Jr., of California]: Mr. Chairman, a point of parliamentary inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from California will state the parliamentary inquiry.

MR. MCCLOSKEY: Mr. Chairman, is it possible, while we are waiting for the reporter, to continue in this dialog?

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

The committee cannot proceed under the rules.

MR. MCCLOSKEY: That is the point of my inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair will state we cannot proceed, not until we have resolved the demand of the gentleman from Maryland that the words be taken down.

Business Suspended Pending Speaker's Ruling on Words

§ 49.22 When a demand is made that words spoken in debate in Committee of the Whole be taken down, the words are reported by the Clerk, the Committee rises and the words are reported again to the House, and the Speaker rules whether the words are in order; no business or debate is in order after the demand that the words be taken down and before the words are reported to the House for a ruling by the Speaker, except unanimous-consent requests such as requests to withdraw or modify the words or parliamentary inquiries regarding the procedure to be followed.

16. Note: The words in question would probably not in fact have been ruled to be unparliamentary.

The following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole on May 26, 1983,⁽¹⁸⁾ during consideration of H.R. 2969 (Department of Defense authorization for fiscal year 1984):

MR. [THOMAS F.] HARTNETT [of South Carolina]: . . . The gentleman from California, for whom I have a great deal of respect, is, through his proposals, through his amendment, advocating unilateral disarmament on behalf of the United States. . . .

MR. [RONALD V.] DELLUMS [of California]: . . . Mr. Chairman, I object and I move that the gentleman's words be taken down. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁹⁾ . . . Does the gentleman from South Carolina seek to modify his previous statement?

MR. HARTNETT: Mr. Chairman, I would have to read exactly what I said.

Mr. Chairman, I believe I said that there is an element here in this Congress—it has been referred to as the peace community, the freeze community, the progressive community, or whatever, who advocates unilateral disarmament, if that is what I said, sir.

MR. [JOHN F.] SEIBERLING [of Ohio]: Mr. Chairman, I ask that those words also be taken down.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The Clerk will report the words objected to. . . .

MR. [KENNETH B.] KRAMER [of Colorado]: Mr. Chairman, would the Chair kindly tell us when a parliamentary inquiry would be in order?

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. KRAMER: The parliamentary inquiry is: Can the Chair tell us the procedure that relates to taking down words and what will follow?

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The procedure is as follows: After the Clerk reports the words, the Speaker will review the words of the gentleman from South Carolina, making a ruling thereon; unless, of course, the gentleman from South Carolina wishes, by unanimous consent, to withdraw his words.

MR. KRAMER: Mr. Chairman, I have a further parliamentary inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state it.

MR. KRAMER: Mr. Chairman, is the ruling of the Speaker the final word on that or is there an appeal process or how does that work exactly?

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would inform the gentleman that the Speaker would rule on that but that after the Speaker has ruled it would be in order to dictate the consequences of the ruling of the Chair by proper motions in the House.

Rights of Member Called to Order To Vote or To Request Votes

§ 49.23 Although a Member when called to order must take his seat and refrain from debate he is not prevented by the rules from voting or from demanding a division vote, a teller vote, or the yeas and nays.

19. Thomas J. Downey (N.Y.).

On May 31, 1934,⁽²⁰⁾ Mr. Harold McGugin, of Kansas, was called to order during debate in the Committee of the Whole for impugning the integrity of the Speaker. The Committee rose, and Speaker Pro Tempore Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, ruled that the language used was out of order.

When the previous question was moved on a motion to expunge the remarks from the Record, Mr. John J. O'Connor, of New York, objected that Mr. McGugin was standing and voting although he had been called to order. The Speaker Pro Tempore ruled that he retained the right to vote.

The Committee of the Whole resumed sitting, and a motion that Mr. McGugin be allowed to proceed in order was rejected on a teller vote. The Chairman then put the question on a motion to limit debate on a pending amendment, and Mr. McGugin demanded a division vote thereon. Following the vote Mr. McGugin demanded tellers. Mr. O'Connor then stated a parliamentary inquiry:

20. 78 CONG. REC. 10167-70, 73d Cong. 2d Sess.

Under the rule a Member who has been compelled to take his seat after his words have been taken down can vote, and he can demand the yeas and nays. I wish the Chair to rule whether or not he can go further than that and demand divisions and demand tellers.

MR. [BERTRAND H.] SNELL [of New York]: Oh, he is not out of Congress yet. That does not preclude him from doing anything the rest of the session, does it?

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁾ The Chair holds that the gentleman has a right to demand a division and to demand tellers.

Withdrawing the Demand

§ 49.24 A demand that words spoken in debate in the House or in the Committee of the Whole be taken down may be withdrawn without unanimous consent.

On July 3, 1946,⁽²⁾ Chairman Wright Patman, of Texas, ruled that a demand that words spoken in debate be taken down could be withdrawn without unanimous consent in the Committee of the Whole:

MR. [CLARENCE J.] BROWN of Ohio: Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last three words.

Mr. Chairman, I have just finished listening to two political tirades by two political tyros, and I say to those gentlemen that they cannot—

1. John H. Kerr (N.C.).
2. 92 CONG. REC. 8295, 79th Cong. 2d Sess.

MR. [MATTHEW M.] NEELY [of West Virginia]: Mr. Chairman, I demand that those words be taken down.

MR. BROWN of Ohio: If the gentleman knows what the word "tyro" means he can have it taken down.

MR. NEELY: The gentleman knows that that statement is not true and that the statement is not justified. I demand that the words be taken down and stricken from the Record.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Clerk will report the words objected to.

MR. NEELY: Mr. Chairman, for fear that this procedure will delay the final vote on the bill, I withdraw my request.

MR. [EARL] WILSON [of Indiana]: I object, Mr. Chairman.

THE CHAIRMAN: It does not require unanimous consent to withdraw the request.

On June 14, 1940,⁽³⁾ Speaker Pro Tempore Emmet O'Neal, of Kentucky, ruled that unanimous consent was not required to withdraw a demand that words spoken in debate in the House be taken down:

MR. [JACOB] THORKELSON [of Montana]: Mr. Speaker, I will withdraw the request that the remarks be taken down, because I do not believe they are worth recording.

MR. [JOHN D.] DINGELL [of Michigan]: Mr. Speaker, that will have to be done by unanimous consent, and I object, and, Mr. Speaker, I demand recognition.

3. 86 CONG. REC. 8269, 8270, 76th Cong. 3d Sess.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: For what purpose does the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Dingell] rise?

MR. DINGELL: The remarks of the gentleman cannot now be withdrawn without unanimous consent.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Does the gentleman make that as a point of order?

MR. DINGELL: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The point of order is overruled, and the gentleman from Illinois is recognized.

On Feb. 10, 1964,⁽⁴⁾ Mr. John J. Rooney, of New York, demanded in the Committee of the Whole, during consideration of the Civil Rights Act of 1963, that a reference in debate by Mr. Albert W. Watson, of South Carolina, to other Members as "bleeding hearts" be taken down. Mr. Rooney then withdrew his demand:

Mr. Chairman, in the interest of expediting passage of this civil rights bill and although I feel that no Member has the right to characterize another Member or Members as the gentleman from South Carolina has done, I withdraw my demand that his words be taken down.

§ 49.25 A demand that words spoken in debate be taken down may be withdrawn by the Member making the demand, and unanimous consent is not required for that purpose.

4. 110 CONG. REC. 2780, 88th Cong. 2d Sess.

The following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole on Aug. 3, 1978,⁽⁵⁾ during consideration of the foreign aid appropriation bill (H.R. 12931):

MR. [JOHN M.] ASHBROOK [of Ohio]: . . . You use very good grounds as an umbrella and a cover for some of the greatest travesties, some of the greatest wastes. . . .

The programs are a travesty.

MR. [MICHAEL T.] BLOUIN [of Iowa]: Mr. Chairman, I demand that the gentleman's words be taken down. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁶⁾ Does the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. Blouin) insist on his demand?

MR. BLOUIN: Mr. Chairman, I withdraw my request.

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: I object.

THE CHAIRMAN: The request does not take unanimous consent to be withdrawn.

MR. BAUMAN: Did the gentleman not object to the words and demand that they be taken down?

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman can withdraw his objection, and it does not take a unanimous-consent request to do that. The gentleman can automatically withdraw his request. That is what the gentleman is doing.

§ 49.26 Prior to a ruling by the Chair, unanimous consent is not required for a Member to withdraw his demand that another Member's words spoken in debate be "taken down."

6. Abraham Kazen, Jr. (Tex.).

On June 18, 1986,⁽⁷⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole during consideration of H.R. 4868 (Anti-Apartheid Act of 1986):

MR. [MARK] SILJANDER [of Michigan]: . . . Mr. Chairman, there are two dominating issues I would say about this debate. The first one, which granted is less important than the overall concern of apartheid, is the way this bill has been handled. The Subcommittee on Africa has been holding hearings on apartheid, the implications of the system, and how America can best influence change in that country. . . .

It is quite obvious that one of the major motivations of the ramrodding of this legislation was not so much because it was imperative because of the deaths and the concerns in South Africa, but rather to coincide the debate with the 10th anniversary of the Soweto riots, seizing the political and media opportunities in a manipulative way. So I think that is an important issue that the membership of this body needs to understand. . . .

MR. [RONALD V.] DELLUMS [of California]: Mr. Chairman, I would like to move that the gentleman's words be taken down on the grounds that the gentleman is challenging the motives of Members of Congress, and as this gentleman understands, it is inappropriate to challenge the motives of

7. 132 CONG. REC. 14231, 14232, 99th Cong. 2d Sess.

Members of Congress. One can challenge the political position asserted by Members of Congress, but I do not believe that it is within the purview or the prerogatives of any Member to challenge the motives. The gentleman has mischaracterized the motives of Members of Congress. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁸⁾ The Chair would make an inquiry of the gentleman: does he insist upon his demand?

MR. DELLUMS: Yes, Mr. Chairman. I think one gentleman earlier said that this debate ought to move on a higher level. This gentleman wants to insist upon it.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair, under the rules, will ask that the Clerk take down the words in question.

MR. DELLUMS: Mr. Chairman, in order to allow the debate to proceed, I will withdraw my point of order. The gentleman from California has made his point.

I wish that this debate go forward on the merits of the issue, rather than on impugning the motives or integrity of any Member of Congress on either side of the aisle. I think I have made that point. It is not necessary to rule, and I withdraw it.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from California withdraws his demand.

MR. SILJANDER: Mr. Chairman, I object, if that is appropriate, because I would like to have a ruling. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will suspend.

The Chair would observe that under the rules, unanimous consent is not required for the gentleman to withdraw his request. The gentleman's request is withdrawn.

8. Bob Traxler (Mich.).

§ 49.27 A demand that words spoken in debate in the Committee of the Whole be taken down may be withdrawn without unanimous consent.

On July 3, 1946,⁽⁹⁾ Mr. Clarence J. Brown, of Ohio, stated in debate in the Committee of the Whole in reference to other Members "I have just finished listening to two political tirades by two political tyros." Mr. Matthew M. Neely, of West Virginia, demanded that the words be taken down and Chairman Wright Patman, of Texas, directed that the Clerk report the words objected to.

Mr. Neely then withdrew his demand that the words be taken down "for fear that this procedure will delay the final vote on the bill." When Mr. Earl Wilson, of Indiana, objected to such withdrawal, Chairman Patman ruled that it did not require unanimous consent to withdraw the demand that the words be taken down.

Withdrawal of Offending Words

§ 49.28 A demand that certain words spoken in debate be taken down must be made before further debate intervenes, but a Member may by unanimous consent withdraw from the Record words he had previously spoken.

During debate on H.R. 11⁽¹⁰⁾ in the Committee of the Whole on Feb. 24, 1977,⁽¹¹⁾ the proceedings described above occurred as follows:

MR. [E. G.] SHUSTER [of Pennsylvania]: I would like to call the attention of the Committee to the very significant point just made by the gentleman from Puerto Rico, which was that, in effect, Puerto Rico received under the previous jobs bill $127 million—more than almost any State of the Union.

Under the Shuster amendment, certainly Puerto Rico would not be left out. They would receive $47 million. The gentleman has made a good point. . . .

MR. [ROBERT A.] ROE [of New Jersey]: Madam Chairman, I am glad that came up. I am very glad that came up. So let us deal with that [demagogic] approach.

In every other piece of legislation that we have had, so far as I know, out of the public works end of it, what we are faced with is that we treat Puerto Rico as a State.

MR. SHUSTER: Madam Chairman, I ask that his words be taken down.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹²⁾ The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Shuster) asks

11. 123 CONG. REC. 5349, 95th Cong. 1st Sess.

that the words of the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Roe) be taken down. The demand comes too late, since debate has proceeded beyond that point.

MR. ROE: Madam Chairman, if I have used the wrong words, I apologize right here and now. I did not mean anything personal.

MR. SHUSTER: Madam Chairman, I was on my feet.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman was not seeking recognition.

Does the gentleman from New Jersey ask unanimous consent to withdraw his words?

MR. ROE: Madam Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that I may be allowed to withdraw any words that I may have used inappropriately.

MR. SHUSTER: I thank the gentleman.

THE CHAIRMAN: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

§ 49.29 Where a demand is made that words uttered in debate be taken down, the Member using those words may, by unanimous consent, withdraw them before the Chair rules on their propriety.

On Mar. 2, 1977,⁽¹³⁾ during consideration of House Resolution 287 (amending the rules of the House) in the Committee of the Whole, the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [DAVID R.] OBEY [of Wisconsin]: Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words, and I oppose the amendment.

13. 123 CONG. REC. 5937, 95th Cong. 1st Sess.

Mr. Chairman, speeches like the one we just heard from the gentleman from Minnesota are the reason that we have wound up with so many Members of the House having the very kind of slush funds that we are trying to abolish today. What we are trying to do is to meet official expenses in an official, honest, aboveboard, open fashion. That is all we are trying to do. The gentleman can toss around all of the words he wants and all of the inflammatory words he wants.

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Chairman, I demand the gentleman's words be taken down.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁴⁾ Does the gentleman from Wisconsin ask to withdraw the words that were objected to?

MR. OBEY: I have no idea which words he objected to, but to satisfy the gentleman from Maryland, I will withdraw them.

MR. BAUMAN: To clarify, Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Obey) has referred to the language used by the gentleman from Minnesota as "phony words." He has also referred to his remarks as "baloney."

I hardly think that the words do anything, I would say to the Chairman, except impugn the motives of the gentleman from Minnesota.

THE CHAIRMAN: Does the gentleman from Wisconsin ask to withdraw those words?

MR. OBEY: Mr. Chairman, since it is necessary for someone around here to be responsible in the interest of getting things done, surely I withdraw those words.

THE CHAIRMAN: Without objection it is so ordered. The gentleman may continue.

§ 49.30 Clause 1 of Rule XIV proscribes Members in debate from engaging in personalities, including allegations that an identifiable group of sitting Members have committed a crime; thus, a Member by unanimous consent withdrew a statement in debate that the majority Members of the House had "stolen" a seat, pending a demand that those words be taken down.

On Feb. 27, 1985,⁽¹⁵⁾ Mr. Andrew Jacobs, Jr., of Indiana, demanded that words spoken by Mr. John Rowland, of Connecticut, be taken down:

MR. JACOBS: Mr. Speaker, I demand the gentleman's words be taken down in that he said "stolen." . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁶⁾ The Clerk will read the words taken down. The Clerk read as follows:

The scary thing about it, as a person who served in the legislature for 4 years, and as a person who happens to be sitting as the youngest Member of Congress, I find it difficult that the first situation that we run into in this House, the first class project, as we may call it, is trying to retain a seat that has been stolen from the Republican side of the aisle, and I think it is rather frustrating.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Would the gentleman care to modify his remarks before the Chair rules?

MR. ROWLAND of Connecticut: Yes, I would, Mr. Speaker. . . . I would like to ask unanimous consent that the words objected to be withdrawn.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: That what word be withdrawn?

MR. ROWLAND of Connecticut: The word "stolen," Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Connecticut?

There was no objection. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Georgia is recognized.

MR. [NEWT] GINGRICH [of Georgia]: I would yield in just a moment, after asking the Chair if in fact Members were convinced an action were being taken which involved a word which was ruled by the Chair to be inappropriate, how could a Member report to the House on that action? Should we substitute the word "banana"? What is it one should say if in fact—not just as a joke, but if in fact—Members of the Republican side honestly believed strongly something is being done? In other words, is "unconstitutional" an acceptable term but "illegal" not acceptable?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is the gentleman asking the Chair?

MR. GINGRICH: I am asking the Chair.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Simply put, Members should not accuse other

Members of committing a crime. When the majority is accused of "stealing," that may suggest illegality. Other words could be used but not those accusing Members of committing a crime.

MR. GINGRICH: What if one honestly believes, for a moment, that a crime is being committed? Would it in fact be against the rules—

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Members may not engage in personalities.

MR. GINGRICH: But he did not talk in personalities. . . .

MR. ROWLAND of Connecticut: . . . Mr. Speaker, I would simply point out that I did not refer to anybody stealing an election. I just referred to the frustration that we as freshmen are exhibiting and fearing as we go through the deliberations. I did not refer to anybody.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman seemed to refer to the majority of the House, that it had stolen the election.

§ 49.31 After a demand was made that certain words used in debate in the Committee of the Whole be taken down, the words were withdrawn by unanimous consent.

On Feb. 10, 1964,⁽¹⁷⁾ Mr. Emanuel Celler, of New York, stated in debate in the Committee of the Whole in reference to another Member "I want to state that the gentleman from Missouri has spoken longer and more often than any other Member in the Chamber and contributed less." Mr. Paul C. Jones, of Missouri, demanded that those words be taken down and Chairman Eugene J. Keogh, of New York, directed that the Clerk report the words objected to. Mr. Celler then withdrew his remarks by unanimous consent "in the interests of expediency."

17. CONG. REC. (daily ed.), 88th Cong. 2d Sess.

Parliamentarian's Note: The permanent Record was corrected to show that the words were actually withdrawn pursuant to the request.

Words Ruled Unparliamentary

§ 49.32 Where the demand is made that certain words used in debate be taken down in the House, the business of the House is suspended until the words are reported to the House.

The procedure (under Rule XIV clause 5) for taking down words in the House was demonstrated on Aug. 21, 1974,⁽¹⁸⁾ as indicated below:

MR. [THOMAS P.] O'NEILL [Jr., of Massachusetts]: Mr. Speaker, I take this time so I may direct my remarks to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Bauman).

18. 120 CONG. REC. 29652, 29653, 93d Cong. 2d Sess.

Yesterday, Mr. Speaker, by mutual consent of the leadership on both sides of the aisle and by the members of the Judiciary Committee, I offered to this House a resolution. At the completion of the resolution, Mr. Speaker, I asked that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to extend their remarks and it was objected to, Mr. Speaker, by the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Bauman). He gave a reason at that particular time.

I told him that I thought he should have cleared it with the leadership on his own side of the aisle; but nevertheless, Mr. Speaker, when all the Members had left last night, the gentleman came to the well and asked unanimous consent of the then Speaker of the House who was sitting there, if he may insert his remarks in the Record, with unanimous consent, following the remarks where he had objected.

So, Mr. Speaker, in today's Record on page H8724 you will find the remarks of Mr. Bauman. You will not find the remarks of Mr. McClory, one of the people who had asked me to do this. You will not find the remarks of other members of the Judiciary Committee, who were prepared at that time to put their remarks in the Record; but you will find the remarks of Mr. Bauman and Mr. Bauman alone.

[I just want to say that I think in my opinion it was a cheap, sneaky, sly way to operate.]

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, I demand that the gentleman's words be taken down.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁹⁾ The gentleman demands that the words be taken down.

The Clerk will report the words objected to. . . .

19. Carl Albert (Okla.).

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, does the gentleman ask unanimous consent to withdraw his remarks?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair did not understand that.

MR. BAUMAN: Does he not have to request that, or does not the Chair have to rule?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will rule when the Clerk reports the words taken down.

MR. BAUMAN: Then, I demand the regular order.

THE SPEAKER: Regular order is underway. . . .

The Clerk will report the words objected to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. O'Neill: Mr. Speaker, I take this time so I may direct my remarks to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Bauman). . . .

I just want to say that I think in my opinion it was a cheap, sneaky, sly way to operate.

THE SPEAKER: The words in the last sentence are not parliamentary. Without objection, the offending words will be stricken from the Record.

Speaker Sometimes Takes Initiative Where Improper Remarks Are Uttered

§ 49.33 The Speaker cautioned a Member that it is a breach of order under clause 1 of Rule XIV to allege in debate that a Member has engaged in conduct similar to the subject of a complaint pending before the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct against another Member; and under clause 4 of that rule, the Chair takes the initiative in calling to order Members improperly engaging in personalities in debate.

Speaker Pro Tempore G. V. (Sonny) Montgomery, of Mississippi, called a Member to order in the House on Mar. 22, 1989,⁽²⁰⁾ as indicated below:

(Mr. Alexander asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks and to include extraneous material.)

MR. [BILL] ALEXANDER [of Arkansas]: Mr. Speaker, after arriving at the Capitol a few minutes ago on this glorious spring day, I learned that our colleagues on the other side of the aisle have conducted an election for minority whip resulting in the election of the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Gingrich) as minority whip. . . .

I would note to those who are observing that the gentleman from Georgia made his name, so to speak, by a sustained personal attack on the good name of Jim Wright, the Speaker of the House of Representatives who has devoted decades of meritorious service to our country. The gentleman from Georgia alleged that the Speaker has circumvented minimum income limits of Members of Congress by writing a book for which he received a royalty.

Now, it is also to be noted that just this week it was learned that the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Gingrich) also allegedly has a book deal. It is alleged in the Washington Post this week that the gentleman from Georgia received a royalty or a payment in the nature of a royalty. This is apparently similar to the Wright arrangement which is the basis of the gentleman from Georgia's complaint before the Ethics Committee.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would state to the gentleman that he cannot make personal references, as the gentleman has done in his remarks.

Chair's Request That Member Proceed in Order

§ 49.34 The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole requested Members to proceed in order when a Member objected to remarks delivered in debate impugning the honesty and motives of another Member but did not demand that the words be taken down.

On May 10, 1978,⁽¹⁾ during debate in the Committee of the Whole, the following exchange occurred:

MR. [PARREN J.] MITCHELL of Maryland: Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words, and I rise in opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Krueger). . . . I would suggest . . . that this amendment strains my tolerance and engenders emotions in me because of the unintended evil that it does.

What is this unintended evil? For the first time—and I repeat—for the first time during our consideration of this issue we have an amendment that will tend to pit one group against another, one segment against another, one class against another.

I suggest that this kind of an amendment is, unwittingly, an evil amendment, because that is what this cut is all about, this cut that is proposed is about to pit one class against another. That is what the amendment does. . . .

MS. [ELIZABETH] HOLTZMAN [of New York]: . . . I want to compliment my colleague for his eloquent statement with which I wholeheartedly agree. I just want to point out that I think he does the gentleman from Texas an injustice when he says that he acts unwittingly or that the evil effects of the amendment are unintended. I think that the gentleman from Texas, who is a distinguished scholar, certainly knows well the effects of this amendment. When he comes on the floor and says the people of the United States want us to adopt this amendment, I do not know what people he is talking about because this amendment would cut back social security benefits and would affect over 80 million people in this country who receive annual cost-of-living increases in their social security checks. Surely there are old people who live in Texas. I understand it is a paradise, but surely there are people who receive social security benefits there and would be harmed by this amendment. . . .

1. 124 CONG. REC. 13214, 13215, 95th Cong. 2d Sess.

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽²⁾ The gentleman will state the point of order.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Chairman, it may well be the desire of the gentleman from Maryland to demand that words be taken down if this type of debate continues.

MR. MITCHELL of Maryland: Demand all you want.

MR. BAUMAN: The gentleman from Maryland has listened closely to the debate. It is not the intent of the gentleman from Maryland to defend the honor of the gentleman from Texas; it needs no defense; but the rules of the House do forbid certain types of words and they require decorum.

The gentleman from Maryland has listened to characterizations of "lies" and "dishonesty" and the use of amendments for the promotion of political campaigns, none of which the gentleman from Maryland feels fall within proper conduct in the House.

Now, I may well not be disposed to demand that the words be taken down, including the words just spoken, but if this continues and the Chair does not admonish those responsible, the gentleman from Maryland will demand they be taken down.

I know passions are high on this issue. Neither the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Mitchell) or the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Krueger) need have their motives impugned or questioned. I grant the best of motives to all Members.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Maryland, Mr. Bauman, has not made a point of order; but, the Chair feels sure all Members participating in the debate on this bill will proceed in order. That is the way it should be and that is the way it will be.

Parliamentarian's Note: Mr. Mitchell deleted from his remarks the reference to Mr. Krueger's amendment as "wittingly or unwittingly a lie." Ms. Holtzman's suggestion that Mr. Krueger had wittingly lied was also subject to a demand that the words be taken down.

—Chair May Take Lead in "Calming" Debate

§ 49.35 A demand that words be taken down is untimely if further debate has intervened.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Mar. 4, 1985,⁽³⁾ during consideration of House Resolution 97 (to seat Richard D. McIntyre as a Member from Indiana):

MR. [ROBERT H.] MICHEL [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of privilege.

Mr. Speaker, I send to the desk a privileged resolution (H. Res. 97) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 97

Whereas a certificate of election to the House of Representatives always carries with it the presumption that the State election procedures have been timely, regular, and fairly implemented; and . . .

3. 131 CONG. REC. 4277, 4283–85, 99th Cong. 1st Sess.

Whereas the presumption of the validity and regularity of the certificate of election held by Richard D. McIntyre has not been overcome by any substantial evidence or claim of irregularity: Now, therefore be it

Resolved, That the Speaker is hereby authorized and directed to administer the oath of office to the gentleman from Indiana, Mr. Richard D. McIntyre. . . .

MR. [WILLIAM V.] ALEXANDER [of Arkansas]: Mr. Speaker, I move that the resolution be referred to the Committee on House Administration. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁴⁾ The gentleman is entitled to 1 hour under that motion, during which time the gentleman from Arkansas controls the time. . . .

MR. [WILLIAM D.] FORD of Michigan: . . . Mr. Speaker, this issue is being handled now in a manner being allowed in this House that does not meet the dignity of this body which is very much needed at the moment. At the time that the people of this country are wondering whether or not the Congress is going to do the things that are necessary, some of them painful, to protect our country, we have Members playing petty politics over there in a way that is calculated to do nothing except destroy public confidence in this body.

I can see how people would lose confidence in the House, which is put into this kind of mess by this bushwhacking method of causing a vote. . . . [W]e count on assertions from our leaders on both sides that on particular days you can take care of other important matters because there will not be rollcalls. They know that many of the Members are being deprived, who have been seated, of representing their districts because of the way in which this vote is called up. And if they want to show good faith at this point, Mr. Speaker, then the gentleman should withdraw his motion and move to take it up at a time when due notice has been given so that my constituents and all of the districts in Michigan will have their representative here to vote on them. . . .

MR. [CARROLL] CAMPBELL [Jr., of South Carolina]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

Mr. Speaker, am I correct in saying that we do not seek to impugn the motives of a Member when they bring a matter to the floor? Is that correct under the way this House operates? And that when a Member's motives have been impugned that that Member or others on their behalf would have a right to ask that words be stricken? Is that a correct assumption?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman is correct that no Member's motive is to be impugned by another Member in the course of orderly debate on the House floor.

MR. CAMPBELL: Well, Mr. Speaker, my concern lies with the fact that with the previous speaker that the motivation of those of us who are concerned with this matter may have been impugned when the accusation was made that this was being done under petty politics and that it was bushwhacking and instead of the motivation of trying to protect legitimately the rights of a

4. James C. Wright, Jr. (Tex.).

Member of the minority party who had been denied, though being certified, his seat.

To make that charge I raise the point of order does impugn the motivation of those of us who seek to seat Mr. McIntyre. I ask that the gentleman's words be stricken.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman's point of order in this particular instance comes too late. Intervening debate has proceeded.

MR. CAMPBELL: The gentleman who previously spoke, Mr. Speaker, I was on my feet asking to be recognized on a point of order, who had made those accusations.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will state the Chair expects all Members to maintain the dignity of the Chamber, and that includes the proper use of language in reference to their colleagues of either political party.

The Chair will state that the point of order made by the gentleman at this time is not timely made. But the Chair will instruct all Members with the expectation that parliamentary language will be observed.

§ 49.36 While the Chair will not rule on the propriety of words used in debate and not challenged by a timely demand that they be "taken down," the Chair may caution all Members not to question the integrity or motivation of other Members in debate.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Apr. 22, 1985:⁽⁵⁾

MR. [CONNIE] MACK [3d, of Florida]: Possibly the reason he is not here tonight is that this is too open a session, I mean it is too much of an opportunity for people to question him as to what happened during that discussion. . . .

Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

Mr. Speaker, there was a reference by a colleague that maybe I violated the rules of the House, and suggested that maybe my words ought to be taken down.

Is that an idle threat that is being posed, or did I in fact violate the rules? I certainly have no intention of violating the rules of the House

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁶⁾ The Chair has received no request from the floor to have the gentleman's words taken down.

MR. MACK: So as far as the Chair is concerned, anything that I have said so far this evening certainly would be within the rules?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would caution the Members not to question the integrity of other Members or to impugn the motivation of individual Members.

MR. MACK: Mr. Speaker, when you say the "motivation" does that mean a negative or a positive motivation? If I make a statement about the positive motivation on the part of the Members, does that certainly fall within the rules, I would take it?

5. 131 CONG. REC. 8692, 8693, 99th Cong. 1st Sess.

6. Kenneth J. Gray (Ill.).

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would rule as each particular incident is brought to its attention. We ought to be cautious as to our personal comments about our colleagues.

§ 49.37 On one occasion, upon a demand that certain words used in debate (characterizing unnamed Members as taking “potshots” at the Nicaraguan resistance and as lacking judgment) be taken down, the Chair suggested that the words only questioned the judgment of unspecified Members in a manner not in violation of House rules, and the demand was withdrawn prior to a ruling thereon.

During the proceedings in the House on Mar. 18, 1986,⁽⁷⁾ the following occurred:

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I just got back from Nicaragua, and in light of what I saw and heard, I find today's speeches by the left wing of the Democratic Party astonishing.

For Members of Congress to stand safely on this floor and take potshots at men and women of tremendous courage who are struggling against great odds to oppose Communist tyranny in Nicaragua is, indeed, astonishing. That questions no one's patriotism; it questions their judgment.

7. 132 CONG. REC. 5200, 5201, 99th Cong. 2d Sess.

MR. [PARREN J.] MITCHELL [of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, I request the gentleman's words be taken down. He is questioning the judgment of other Members of the House.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁸⁾ The gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Mitchell) requests that the words of the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Walker) be taken down. The Chair would inquire as to which words the gentleman refers to.

MR. MITCHELL: He questions the judgment of the Members of the House who oppose the Reagan proposition.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would suggest that the gentleman did not refer to any specific Member in violation of the rules of the House. Does the gentleman insist on his request?

MR. MITCHELL: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I do because it followed a statement that I just made where I indicated that I oppose the President's position, and certainly by inference he is questioning my judgment and I resent it.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman insists, and the Clerk will report the words. . . .

MR. MITCHELL: If the Speaker so desires, I will not press the point of order, but with the indulgence of the Speaker, I will state that I personally resent any attempt to impugn my motives.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman withdraws his demand.

Chair's Role in Interpreting Proceedings

§ 49.38 It is appropriate for the Chair to interpret a point of order to determine whether it is being raised under a particular rule of the House; and a Member's point of order (that remarks just made in debate impugn another Member's motives), and the Chair's determination as to whether the point of order constitutes a demand that those words be "taken down," is not such intervening debate or business as to render the demand untimely.

On Oct. 2, 1984,⁽⁹⁾ during consideration of the balanced budget bill (H.R. 6300), Mr. John V. Weber, of Minnesota, stated that another Member had come to the floor with a gimmick "which he thinks will fool the people of Tulsa."⁽¹⁰⁾ A point of order was made:

MS. [MARY ROSE] OAKAR [of Ohio]: Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹¹⁾ The gentlewoman will state her point of order.

MS. OAKAR: Mr. Speaker, I question the speaker regarding impugning the motives of the chairman who has introduced this legislation.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Does the gentlewoman insist that the gentleman's words be taken down?

9. 130 CONG. REC. 28522, 98th Cong. 2d Sess.

10. The words were stricken from the Record.

11. Richard A. Gephardt (Mo.).

MS. OAKAR: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I do.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Clerk will report the words.

MR. [GUY V.] MOLINARI [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. MOLINARI: Mr. Speaker, as an observer of what transpired here, it was my impression that the point of order raised by the gentlewoman was raised too late, and I would ask the Chair to make a ruling that in fact a point of order was made too late.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would state that at the time the point of order was made further debate had not taken place and therefore the point is entertained.

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. WALKER: It was my impression that the gentlewoman never asked that the words be taken down, that the Chair guided her into that.

MS. OAKAR: I asked.

MR. WALKER: The gentlewoman never made that point in her language. Is that usual procedure?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair was simply attempting to understand the intent and the motive of the gentlewoman's point of order.

Words Not Taken Down and Reported

§ 49.39 A demand for the reporting of certain additional words uttered in the Committee of the Whole but not reported to the House is not in order in the House, and the Speaker will not pass upon what can be done in the Committee of the Whole regarding a new demand.

On July 27, 1965,⁽¹²⁾ Mr. Neal Smith, of Iowa, demanded that certain words used in debate in the Committee of the Whole by Mr. Charles E. Goodell, of New York, be taken down. In the House, Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, directed the Clerk to read the words that had been objected to, and the Clerk read two sentences that were reported from the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Smith then rose and objected that "there was another sentence following that. He did not read the last sentence." Speaker McCormack ruled that the Chair could pass only on the words that had been reported. After the Speaker delivered a ruling on the words, Mr. Smith again rose to demand that the sentence following the words ruled on be taken down. Speaker McCormack responded "The Chair will state that the Chair can only pass upon the words presented to the Chair and which were taken down in the Committee of the Whole." Mr. Smith then raised a parliamentary inquiry:

Are we not entitled to have the words taken down that were objected to in the Committee of the Whole so that Members can exercise their rights?

The Speaker stated that he was "confronted with the words actually reported by the Clerk." Mr. Smith then asked:

Then when we go back into the Committee of the Whole, am I entitled to demand that the words be taken down that I objected to and report them back?

Speaker McCormack ruled:

The Chair will not pass upon what can be done in the Committee of the Whole. Of course, if the gentleman desires to renew his request, that would be a matter for the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole to consider on the question of whether or not the words were taken down as demanded by the gentleman from Iowa.

The Committee will resume its sitting.

When the Committee resumed its sitting, Mr. Smith made a further demand that additional words not reported in the House be taken down and reported therein. The Clerk read the additional words objected to, and Mr. Smith stated "That is not all of it, Mr. Chairman. That is not all of the words.” Chairman Leo W. O’Brien, of New York, responded that the words reported were “all that the Clerk was able to furnish the Chairman.” Mr. Smith then withdrew his objection to the words.

12. 111 CONG. REC. 18441, 89th Cong. 1st Sess.

References to Motives of Senators

§ 49.40 Where a Member demanded that another Member’s references in debate to a Senator be stricken from the Record but did not demand that the words be “taken down” (pursuant to Rule XIV clause 5), the Speaker Pro Tempore sustained the point of order against violation of the principle of comity (under section 374 of Jefferson’s Manual) but did not submit to the House the question of striking the unparliamentary words.

On June 3, 1974,⁽¹³⁾ it was demonstrated that the principle of comity between the two Houses prohibits any reference in debate in the House to actions of Senators within or outside the Senate. The proceedings were as follows:

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁴⁾ Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. Steiger) is recognized for 45 minutes.

MR. [SAM] STEIGER [of Arizona]: Mr. Speaker, with a petulance usually reserved to Secretaries of State, Mr. Udall and Henry Jackson have blamed the defeat of the land-use planning bill on “impeachment politics.” Mr. Udall states that the President changed his position on land-use planning in order to retain the support of conservative Members of the House regarding impeachment. . . .

We can fully appreciate that the gentleman from Washington, who is an active candidate for President, might be seeking ways to present his case in some kind of a different manner.

MR. [THOMAS S.] FOLEY [of Washington]: Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will suspend for a minute, I would like to make a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

I pose the parliamentary inquiry, whether or not discussion of the motives of a Member of the other body is in order.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman is correct. It is not in order, in view of the rule of comity between the two Houses.

The gentleman will proceed.

MR. STEIGER of Arizona: Mr. Speaker, I would advise the gentleman from California (Mr. Rousselot) that I am about to continue to yield him the time; that I, too, think it is very presumptuous of the gentleman from Washington, who is running for President;

13. 120 CONG. REC. 19083, 19085, 19086, 93d Cong. 2d Sess.

14. John J. McFall (Calif.).

all I heard the gentleman from California (Mr. Rousselot) say was that the Senator was a candidate for President.

MR. [JOHN H.] ROUSSELOT [of California]: He is a potential candidate for President. If that is impugning his motives, I do not see how it is.

MR. FOLEY: Mr. Speaker, a point of order. The remarks of the gentleman from California and the remarks of the gentleman from Arizona are out of order. I ask that they be stricken.

MR. STEIGER of Arizona: Mr. Speaker, might I be heard on that point of order?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will proceed on the point of order.

MR. STEIGER of Arizona: I would restate what I said, that in my view it is presumptuous of the gentleman from Washington to hold himself up as a candidate for the Presidency of the United States. I fail to see that that is impugning the gentleman's motives.

It is an accepted fact in political life that the gentleman from Washington is, indeed, a candidate for the Presidency, at least in his own eyes.

I suspect, and I am certainly entitled to a view of that candidacy and I have stated that view, with no intent at all of demeaning the gentleman from Washington.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: While the gentleman has not demanded that words be taken down, the Chair will state that under the rules of debate it is not in order for a Member to voice an opinion or cast a reflection on either Members of the House or Members of the other body and it is not in order to refer to Senators by name or in terms of personal criticism, or even for the purpose of complimenting and the inhibition extends to comments of criticism of their actions outside the Senate.

The Chair would also point out to the gentlemen who are carrying on this debate that it is Thursday afternoon and there is no need to get involved in a big political debate.

So the gentleman in the well will proceed in order.

Procedure in House When Committee Rises

§ 49.41 Where the Speaker has ruled upon words taken down in the Committee of the Whole and reported to the House, and has ordered the Committee to resume its sitting, a point of order of no quorum in the House comes too late and is not in order.

On Nov. 10, 1971,⁽¹⁵⁾ the Committee of the Whole rose in order that words used in debate by Mr. John H. Dent, of Pennsylvania, demanded taken down by Mr. John N. Erlenborn, of Illinois, be reported to the House. Speaker Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, ruled that the words were not unparliamentary, after Mr. Dent explained that he had not been referring to a Member of the House. The Speaker ordered the Committee to resume its sitting. Mr. Durward

15. 117 CONG. REC. 40442, 40443, 92d Cong. 1st Sess.

G. Hall, of Missouri, then attempted to make a point of order that a quorum was not present, and the Speaker ruled that the point of order could not be made at that time.

Committee of Whole Resumes Sitting Automatically

§ 49.42 When the demand is made that certain words used in debate be taken down in Committee of the Whole, the business of the Committee is suspended until the words are reported to the House; after the Speaker has ruled on words reported from the Committee of the Whole, and after disposition of any motion that the Member whose words are ruled out of order may proceed in order, the House automatically resolves back into the Committee of the Whole.

During consideration of the Department of Education Organization Act of 1979 (H.R. 2444) in the Committee of the Whole, certain words used in debate were reported to the House, the Speaker ruled on those words and the Committee resumed its deliberations. The proceedings on June 12, 1979,⁽¹⁶⁾ were as follows:

MR. [HENRY B.] GONZALEZ [of Texas]: Mr. Chairman, I expected resistance to this amendment and not necessarily my getting involved. I am not a member of this committee. But this amendment is probably the most detrimental to the main purposes of equal opportunity of education to the most needed segments of our society that has been presented thus far and probably could ever be presented. The insidiousness of the amendment is compounded by the sponsor's deceptive—I should say hypocritical—presentation of this amendment, disguising it as a quota prohibition.

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Chairman, I demand that the words be taken down.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁷⁾ The Clerk will report the words objected to. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: The Committee will rise. . . .

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁸⁾ The Clerk will report the words objected to.

The Clerk read as follows: . . .

The insidiousness of the amendment is compounded by the sponsor's deceptive—I should say hypocritical—presentation of this amendment, disguising it as a quota prohibition.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair is ready to rule.

The Chair, having read the references concerning deception and hypocrisy, will state that there have been previous opinions by the Chair that there is nothing wrong with using the word, "deceptive," or the word, "hypocritical," in characterizing an amendment's effect but when a Member so characterizes the motivation of a Member in offering an amendment that is not in order.

18. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

Consequently, the words in the last sentence read by the Clerk are unparliamentary and without objection, the offensive words are stricken from the Record. . . .

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Brooks).

MR. [JACK] BROOKS [of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, I move that the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Gonzalez) be allowed to proceed in order.

The motion was agreed to.

THE SPEAKER: The Committee will resume its sitting.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill, H.R. 2444, with Mr. Nedzi in the chair.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Texas (Mr. Gonzalez) has the floor, and the gentleman will proceed in order.

§ 49.43 When a demand is made in Committee of the Whole that words spoken in debate be taken down, the words are transcribed by the Official Reporters of Debate to be read by the Clerk, and the Committee then rises automatically and reports the words to the House; following a decision by the Speaker that the words reported to the House by the Committee of the Whole are in order, the Committee resumes its sitting without motion.

The following proceedings occurred during consideration in the Committee of the Whole of H.R. 2760 (prohibition on covert aid to Nicaragua) on July 28, 1983:⁽¹⁹⁾

MR. [DAVID R.] OBEY [of Wisconsin]: I am concerned, as I said, about the statements that I have heard on the floor today, because I believe that what they have a tendency to do, even though that may not be the intention, I think they have the tendency to try to assassinate the character of the person making the statement rather than to effectively assassinate the argument.

MR. [C. W. BILL] YOUNG of Florida: Mr. Chairman, I demand that the gentleman's words be taken down.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽²⁰⁾ Words will be taken down.

MR. [ROBERT H.] MICHEL [of Illinois]: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

[W]hy could we not have the words read back promptly? . . .

Mr. Chairman, are we not taking down the proceedings of the House verbatim?

THE CHAIRMAN: As soon as the words can be transcribed, as the gentleman knows, the Speaker will then pass upon the words that are being taken down.

19. 129 CONG. REC. 21461, 21462, 98th Cong. 1st Sess.

20. William H. Natcher (Ky.).

The Clerk will report the words.

The Clerk read as follows:⁽¹⁾ . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: The Committee will rise.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. Natcher, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 2760) to amend the Intelligence Authorization Act for fiscal year 1983 . . . certain words used in debate were objected to and on request were taken down and read at the Clerk's desk, and he herewith reported the same to the House.

THE SPEAKER:⁽²⁾ . . . The Clerk will report the words objected to in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

The Clerk read as follows: . . .

THE SPEAKER: The words having been read, and the gentleman from Wisconsin having very definitely included in his statement a disclaimer that he does not impugn the motives or intentions of any Member of the House, in the opinion of the Chair, in his legislative argument the words of the gentleman from Wisconsin are not unparliamentary and the gentleman may proceed.

The Committee will resume its sitting.

1. It is still required, under the customs and traditions of the House, for the Clerk to read the transcript, which, whether it has been taken electronically or taken in shorthand, must be reduced to writing.
2. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill, H.R. 2760, with Mr. Natcher in the chair.

§ 50. —Ruling by the Speaker

The Speaker or Speaker Pro Tempore has the sole power to rule whether words objected to violate the rules and precedents of the House.⁽³⁾ The question is not open to debate.⁽⁴⁾ Appeals may be taken from the Speaker's ruling on objectionable words but such appeals are rare.⁽⁵⁾

In ruling on words, the Speaker considers not only past precedents

3. See § 50.9, infra; 2 Hinds' Precedents § 1249; 5 Hinds' Precedents §§ 5163, 5169, 5187.

The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole does not rule on objectionable words (see Rule XIV clause 4, House Rules and Manual § 760 (1995)).

4. See § 50.7, infra.
5. See § 50.8, infra. Under clause 4 of Rule XIV, appeals are in order from the Speaker's ruling. The rule provides that: "the House shall, if appealed to, decide the case without debate." On a past occasion where an appeal was not allowed (see 5 Hinds' Precedents § 6944), the appeal was demanded on a ruling on words taken down in debate on a pending appeal. In that situation, appeals could be multiplied indefinitely.

on exact or similar words,⁽⁶⁾ but also weighs the importance of preserving free debate and expression of opinion in the House.⁽⁷⁾ The Speaker has consulted a dictionary where he was in doubt as to the meaning of colloquial expressions.⁽⁸⁾ The Speaker may seek further information than the exact words reported in order to deliver an informed ruling. For example, the Speaker has inquired of the Member called to order whether he was in fact referring to certain persons or proceedings,⁽⁹⁾ and has directed the Clerk to report words uttered in the House in addition to those objected to in order to judge the words in context.⁽¹⁰⁾

Speaker gives weight to past precedent.

On Feb. 5, 1940,⁽¹¹⁾ a Member referred to another Member in debate as "President of the Demagogue Club." The words were demanded to be taken down and Speaker Pro Tempore Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled the language out of order.

On May 4, 1943,⁽¹²⁾ when one Member called another Member in debate a demagogue, Speaker Rayburn ruled that he had passed upon identical language in the past and would conform to his prior ruling, holding that words accusing a Member of demagoguery was a breach of order.

On Dec. 13, 1973,⁽¹³⁾ a Member termed an amendment offered by another as "demagogic or racist because it is only demagoguery or racism which impels an amendment like this."

Speaker Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, cited Speaker Rayburn's ruling of May 4, 1943, ruling the use of the word "demagogue" or "demagoguery" in reference to another Member out of order. In reliance on that ruling, Speaker Al-

§ 50.2 In ruling on words objected to in debate, the Speaker gives weight to the preservation of free debate in the House.

On Mar. 7, 1942,⁽¹⁴⁾ Mr. Vito Marcantonio, of New York, stated "since the gentleman from Texas raised the question here of dereliction of duty, I say that dereliction in this matter rests at the doorstep of his committee."

A point of order was made and the words were taken down. Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled as follows:

The Chair thinks that if he were to hold upon as fine a point as that, at some time free debate in the House of Representatives might cease. The Chair holds that the language does not violate the rules of the House.

On July 26, 1951,⁽¹⁵⁾ Mr. Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, demanded that words used in debate by Mr. John J. Rooney, of New York, in reference to the Republican Conference be taken down. Speaker Rayburn ruled as follows:

The Chair in every instance of this kind has been most liberal with the Member who uttered the words objected to, because he has always thought that great liberality must be indulged in so that we may have free and full debate. On very few occasions has the present occupant of the chair held that remarks were a violation of the rules of the House.

The Chair can hardly agree, however, that the words, applied to the meeting of the Republicans in caucus yesterday were quite proper. . . .⁽¹⁶⁾

Explanation of Member Called to Order

§ 50.3 The Speaker has relied on the assurance of a Member called to order that in using a word which was also the name of a Member he was not referring to the other Member.

On Oct. 9, 1940,⁽¹⁷⁾ Mr. Sol Bloom, of New York, objected to the alleged use by Mr. John C. Schafer, of Wisconsin, of Mr. Bloom's name in debate rather than referring to him as the gentleman from New York. Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled, on the assurance of Mr. Schafer that he was not referring to his colleague Mr. Bloom, that he was not speaking out of order.⁽¹⁸⁾ Dictionary Definitions§ 50.4 The Speaker has consulted a dictionary in ruling on colloquial expressions which have been objected to in debate.

On July 16, 1935,⁽¹⁹⁾ Mr. Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, referred to Mr. Wright Patman, of Texas, in debate as a “snooper.” The words were taken down, and Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, held that the use of the term violated the rules of the House, after consulting Webster’s Dictionary and reading the following definition to the House: “to look or pry about or into others’ affairs in a sneaking way. One who snoops; a prying sneak.”

On June 16, 1934,⁽²⁰⁾ Speaker Henry T. Rainey, of Illinois, ruled that the word “yapping”, used by Mr. George E. Foulkes, of Michi-(Speaker inquired of Member called to order whether he was in fact quoting executive proceedings of a House committee).

Under normal practice, a Member whose words have been objected to must take his seat and may not debate the demand that his words be taken down or explain his words except on motion pursuant to clause 4 of Rule XIV (see § 52, infra).

gan, in debate to refer to addresses on the floor by Mr. John Taber, of New York, was not unparliamentary. The Speaker had consulted the dictionary and stated that the term meant “to talk loudly; chatter; scold” and was not objectionable.⁽¹⁾

Speaker Rules on Propriety of Words Objected to§ 50.5 When there is a demand that certain words used in debate be taken down, the words objected to may be withdrawn by unanimous consent by the Member using them, but where the words are not withdrawn, the Speaker will rule on the propriety of the words.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Mar. 19, 1985:⁽²⁾

MR. [HARRY] REID [of Nevada]: Mr. Speaker, on February 26 of this year one of my constituents traveled nearly 3,000 miles to Washington specifically to see me about a critical issue, but he did not. . . . I was called away from something very important to become captive, once again, to an abusive practice, an abuse inflicted upon the entire House of Representatives and the legislative process itself, voting on the Journal.

Mr. Reid made further comments, indicated below, which were the subject of a demand that the words be taken down:

MR. [VIN] WEBER [of Minnesota]: Mr. Speaker, I demand that the gentleman's words be taken down. . . .

Mr. Speaker, would it be in order, in view of the gentleman's statement a minute ago, for me to ask unanimous consent that he be permitted to withdraw his words?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽³⁾ Yes. The Chair would entertain such a motion. . . .

MR. REID: Mr. Speaker, I respectfully submit that I appreciate the request of the gentleman from Minnesota, but I do not think I said anything offensive, and I would ask for a ruling on that.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will rule.

The Clerk will report the words.

The Clerk read as follows:

One of the most important things to remember is that those Members who call for these wasteful votes are led by my distinguished colleague from Pennsylvania, Mr. Walker, who speaks constantly of the need to do away with government waste, and he is literally speaking out of both sides of his mouth.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would announce that it is not proper to impugn the motive of another Member. We have precedents here in the House. Mr. Knutson, of Minnesota: "I cannot believe that the gentleman from Mississippi is sincere in what he has just said." And that was held not in order on November 2, 1942.

The Chair must state that the words of the gentleman from Nevada have, in his opinion, an unparliamentary connotation and shall be stricken.

Without objection, the gentleman from Nevada may proceed. Do I hear an objection?

MR. WEBER: Yes, Mr. Speaker. . . .

Would the Chair clarify the parliamentary situation in which the gentleman from Nevada finds himself?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: . . . The Chair has ruled that the gentleman from Nevada misspoke on the words "speaking out of both sides of his mouth," and therefore those words shall be stricken.

The Member only can proceed by permission of the House.

Context of Words Used

§ 50.6 The Speaker ordered the Clerk to report words uttered previously to words to which objection was taken in order to deliver an informed ruling.

On July 23, 1935,⁽⁴⁾ Mr. Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, demanded that certain words used in debate by Mr. John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, be taken down. On the direction of Speaker Pro Tempore John J. O'Connor, of New York, the Clerk read the following words:

The gentleman from New York [Mr. Fish], whether he intended it or not, is guilty of that crime; not only a few days ago, but is again guilty of the same crime on this occasion.

Mr. Edward E. Cox, of Georgia, then made a point of order to insist "in connection with those words, that the previous statement that he had made an unfair argument also be included."

The Speaker Pro Tempore responded:

The Chair was about to make that suggestion. To properly inform the Chair, the words previously uttered should be read in connection with the words just reported.

The Clerk will report the words uttered previously to the words to which objection was taken.

The Clerk read as follows:

I respect men who fight hard. I respect men, members of the Republican Party and the Democratic Party, who fight hard for their party, but who fight clean. I respect men who make constructive criticisms; but my general respect for men is somewhat lost when they depart from what should be and what ordinarily is their general conduct and enter into the field of unnecessary, unfair, and unwarranted attacks and arguments.

The Speaker Pro Tempore ruled that the word "crime" used by

Mr. McCormack, when taken in context, was not unparliamentary language.⁽⁵⁾

Debate

§ 50.7 The question of whether words taken down violate the rules is for the Speaker to decide and is not debatable.

On Jan. 15, 1948,⁽⁶⁾ Mr. Emanuel Celler, of New York, referred in debate to a statement by Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, as "damnable." Mr. Rankin demanded that the words be taken down. After the words were read to the House, Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, inquired of Mr. Rankin whether the word "damnable" was the word objected to. Mr. Rankin responded in the affirmative and Mr. Celler interjected the inquiry "Mr. Speaker, may I be heard?"

The Speaker ruled "This is not debatable. The Chair will pass on the question."

On Mar. 9, 1948,⁽⁷⁾ after Mr. Rankin had demanded that certain words used in debate be taken down and Speaker Martin had ruled them not a breach of order, the following exchange occurred:

MR. RANKIN: Mr. Speaker, I would like to be heard.

THE SPEAKER: It is a matter for the Chair to determine.

MR. RANKIN: I understand; but I would like to be heard on the matter. We have a right to be heard.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair has held that the words are not unparliamentary. The gentleman from New York [Mr. Celler] is merely expressing his own opinion. The gentleman from New York will proceed.

Parliamentarian's Note: Clause 4 of Rule XIV specifies that this question of order is not debatable on appeal. On infrequent occasions, the Chair has declined to rule directly on the propriety of words but has implicitly ruled them out of order by entertaining a debatable motion to expunge the words from the Record. See 8 Cannon's Precedents §2539. See also 6 Cannon's Precedents §617.

Appealing the Chair's Ruling

§ 50.8 Appeals have been permitted from rulings of the Chair that certain words spoken in debate were out of order or in order.

On Dec. 20, 1943,⁽⁸⁾ Speaker Pro Tempore John W. McCormack, of

8. 89 CONG. REC. 10922, 78th Cong. 1st Sess.

Massachusetts, ruled that a statement in debate that remarks of another Member were "false and slanderous" was a breach of the rules of the House.

Following the ruling, Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, who had uttered the objectionable words, entered an appeal from the ruling of the Chair on the ground the ruling was "so one-sided I do not think the House will sustain it." The House voted to sustain the ruling of the Speaker Pro Tempore.

On July 23, 1935,⁽⁹⁾ Mr. John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, was proceeding in House debate, and certain words were deemed offensive by Mr. Hamilton Fish, of New York. The challenge was to an allegation that a Member "was guilty of that crime." The words which were taken down were as follows:

I respect men who fight hard. I respect men, members of the Republican Party and the Democratic Party, who fight hard for their party, but who fight clean. I respect men who make constructive criticisms; but my general respect for men is somewhat lost when they depart from what should be and what ordinarily is their general conduct and enter into the field of unnecessary, unfair, and unwarranted attacks and arguments.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Clerk will again report the words to which objection was taken.

The Clerk read as follows:

The gentleman from New York [Mr. Fish], whether he intended it or not, is guilty of that crime; not only a few days ago, but is again guilty of the same crime on this occasion.

The Speaker Pro Tempore, Mr. John J. O'Connor, of New York, ruled as follows:

The Chair may state, even though it may be gratuitous, that from his personal standpoint there has grown up in this House a ridiculous habit of causing the words of a Member to be taken down, which course often consumes a great deal of time; and, as the Chair said on the floor the other day, it appears to have come to pass recently that a Member cannot even say "boo" to another Member without some Member demanding that the words be taken down. This practice has become reductio ad absurdum.

The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. McCormack] has just uttered the words reported. The gentleman from New York [Mr. Fish] thereupon demanded that the words be taken down.

For the gentleman from Massachusetts to state that what the gentleman from New York did or said was a "crime", in the opinion of the present occupant of the chair, is but a loose expression—a word commonly used as a mere figure of speech. The word "wrong" in the dictionary is a synonym for "crime", and the Chair holds that the use of the word "crime", under the particular circumstances, is not unparliamentary language; and the gentleman from Massachusetts may proceed.

Mr. John Taber, of New York, appealed the ruling and, on a division vote of 165–35, the Chair's ruling was upheld.

Speaker's Ruling, Challenges to § 50.9 The Speaker, and not the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole, rules on whether words spoken and objected to in the Committee of the Whole are in order; and the House may by proper motion dictate the consequences of the Chair's ruling the words out of order, such as whether the words should be expunged from the Record and whether the Member called to order may proceed in debate.

The following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole on May 26, 1983,⁽¹⁰⁾ during consideration of H.R. 2969 (Department of Defense authorization for fiscal year 1984):

MR. [THOMAS F.] HARTNETT [of South Carolina]: . . . The gentleman from California, for whom I have a great deal of respect, is, through his proposals, through his amendment, advocating unilateral disarmament on behalf of the United States. . . .

10. 129 CONG. REC. 14048, 14049, 98th Cong. 1st Sess.

I would say to my colleague from Indiana that when we are told by the gentleman from California that we go beyond a deterrence to a war-fighting capability, that when your deterrence is no longer a deterrence it is probably time that you build that deterrence at least to a war-fighting capability.

I do not want my colleague from Indiana to be ashamed whatsoever or to let this element over here who advocates unilateral disarmament to brow-beat you into thinking they know more than you do.

MR. [RONALD V.] DELLUMS [of California]: . . . Mr. Chairman, I object and I move that the gentleman's words be taken down. . . .

MR. [KENNETH B.] KRAMER [of Colorado]: The parliamentary inquiry is: Can the Chair tell us the procedure that relates to taking down words and what will follow?

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹¹⁾ The procedure is as follows: After the Clerk reports the words, the Speaker will review the words of the gentleman from South Carolina, making a ruling thereon; unless, of course, the gentleman from South Carolina wishes, by unanimous consent, to withdraw his words. . . .

MR. KRAMER: Mr. Chairman, is the ruling of the Speaker the final word on that or is there an appeal process or how does that work exactly?

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would inform the gentleman that the Speaker would rule on that but that after the Speaker has ruled it would be in order to dictate the consequences of the ruling of the Chair by proper motions in the House. . . .

MR. HARTNETT: Mr. Chairman, I am not certain as to which of my remarks struck such a sensitive chord among my colleagues here this afternoon. My words that have been now requested to have been taken down were to the point that there is an element here in the House that would advocate unilateral disarmament. Now it is my understanding, Mr. Chairman, and I would like a ruling on this, that the element means a section, a portion, a fraction or a part or less than the whole and my statement was that there was an element or a less than the whole membership of this House who would advocate a unilateral disarmament and I would like the Chair to rule.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: It is neither the intention nor the privilege of the current presiding officer of the Committee of the Whole to make such a ruling. That is the prerogative of the Speaker and when the gentleman's words are read to the House, the Speaker will so rule.

Rulings on Words Reported From Committee of the Whole

§ 50.10 Where words uttered in the Committee of the Whole are taken down and reported to the House, the Speaker will not rule on other words that may have been used in the Committee.

On July 27, 1965,⁽¹²⁾ Mr. Howard W. Smith, of Virginia, demanded that certain words used in debate in the Committee of the Whole by Mr. Charles E. Goodell, of New York, be taken down. Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, directed the Clerk to read the words that had been objected to, and the Clerk read two sentences that were reported from the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Smith rose and objected that the Clerk had failed to read all of the language used. Speaker McCormack ruled that the Chair could pass only on the words that had been reported. After the Speaker delivered a ruling on the words, Mr. Smith arose to demand that the sentence following the words ruled out be taken down. Speaker McCormack responded "The Chair will state that the Chair can only pass upon the words presented to the Chair and which were taken down in the Committee of the Whole."

Senate Practice

§ 50.11 Where a Senator is called to order for words spoken in debate, the Presiding Officer makes a determination as to whether the words transgress the rules; an appeal from his decision is in order and is debatable within any time limitations adopted by the Senate.

On May 14, 1964,⁽¹³⁾ Senator Spessard L. Holland, of Florida, asked unanimous consent to interrupt pending business for the consideration of Senate Resolution 330, such consideration not to exceed 40 minutes (the resolution extended the time and scope of a committee investigation). Senator Michael J. Mansfield, of Montana, made some remarks on the resolution and was called to order by Senator Clifford P. Case, of New Jersey, for stating: "The intemperate inference, the thinly veiled implication in which some have indulged."

Presiding Officer Edward M. Kennedy, of Massachusetts, ruled that the words indicated did not violate the rules of debate, and Senator Case appealed that ruling and suggested the appeal was debatable. The Presiding Officer responded:

Under paragraph 4 of rule XIX, the appeal from the ruling of the Chair is debatable. The rule provides that if any Senator, in speaking or otherwise, in the opinion of the Presiding Officer transgress the rule, such Senator may appeal from the ruling of the Chair, which appeal shall be open to debate.

The Presiding Officer then stated that the time limitation had expired, and that the question was on the consideration of the resolution. Senator Case asked for recognition on his appeal, but the Presiding Officer ruled that the expiration of the time limitation, and the intervening motion of Senator Mansfield to lay the resolution on the table, precluded further debate.⁽¹⁴⁾

¹³ 110 CONG. REC. 10926-31, 88th Cong. 2d Sess.

§ 51. — Withdrawal or Expungement of Words; Disciplinary Measures

Rule XIV clause 4 provides for action by the House where a Member is called to order:

If any Member, in speaking or otherwise, transgress the rules of the House, the Speaker shall, or any Member may, call him to order . . . if the decision is in favor of the Member called to order, he shall be at liberty to proceed, but not otherwise; and, if the case requires it, he shall be liable to censure or such punishment as the House may deem proper.⁽¹⁵⁾

Under the rule, a Member whose words are taken down must take his seat and may not be recognized until the House permits him to proceed in order⁽¹⁶⁾ or unless the House by motion permits him to explain the words before a ruling. But he may be recognized in the discretion of the Speaker, either before or after the words have been reported, for the limited purpose of requesting unanimous consent to withdraw the words in question.⁽¹⁷⁾ Where such request is granted, the objectionable words are no longer before the House and the Member called to order may proceed without the consent of the House.⁽¹⁸⁾

Where the words are not withdrawn and are ruled unparliamentary by the Speaker, the fol-is subject to the censure of the House; and offenses of this kind have been severely punished by calling the person to the bar to make submission, committing him to the tower, expelling the House, etc."

—debatable motion that the Member called to order be allowed to proceed in order;

—resolution to punish the Member for the offense of uttering unparliamentary words, which can take the form of a reprimand, censure, or even expulsion.⁽¹⁹⁾

Although the Speaker has ordered unparliamentary remarks stricken from the Record,⁽²⁰⁾ a motion is usually made by a Member and voted upon by the House to determine whether objectionable words shall be expunged. The motion is privileged after the words have been ruled out of order.⁽¹⁾

In past Congresses, the House has censured Members for disorderly words.⁽⁵⁾ On a recent occasion, a resolution of censure was introduced and later withdrawn.⁽⁶⁾ Censure or other disciplinary action is a matter for the House and not the Chair to decide,⁽⁷⁾ but no action is in order until the Chair has ruled on the words objected to.⁽⁸⁾

Withdrawal of Words Before Ruling

§ 51.1 When a demand is made that certain words used in debate be taken down, such words may be withdrawn by unanimous consent in the House or in the Committee of the Whole before being reported to the House.⁽¹⁷⁾

REC. 11516, 11517, 76th Cong. 3d Sess., Sept. 4, 1940.

§ 51.2 Although a Member's words have been taken down on demand and read to the House, the Speaker may recognize the Member who uttered the words to ask unanimous consent to withdraw or modify the words.

On June 5, 1962,⁽¹⁸⁾ Mr. John D. Dingell, Jr., of Michigan, referred to another Member as a “mouthpiece” for the American Medical Association. Mr. Thomas B. Curtis, of Missouri, demanded those words be taken down, and the Clerk read them to the House on the direction of Speaker Pro Tempore Arnold Olsen, of Missouri.

Mr. Dingell then asked unanimous consent to change the words complained of to “self-appointed spokesman” instead of “mouthpiece.” There was no objection to the request, and Mr. Curtis withdrew his point of order.

On June 12, 1947,⁽¹⁹⁾ Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, objected to certain words used in debate by Mr. Chet Holifield, of California. Before the Clerk could report the words objected to, Mr. Holifield attempted to address the House and Mr. Rankin objected that he could not speak until his objectionable words were disposed of. Mr. Rankin stated that Mr. Holfield could not even make a unanimous-consent request in relation to the words. Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, responded:

The Chair can always recognize anyone to propound a unanimous-consent request. Of course, it would be within the province of the gentleman from Mississippi to object, but the Chair can put unanimous-consent requests at any time.

§ 51.3 The Speaker suggested that a Member who had uttered unparliamentary words request unanimous consent to withdraw them.

On July 29, 1948,⁽²⁰⁾ Mr. Abraham J. Multer, of New York, characterized the remarks of Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, in debate as offensive. Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, stated that the language used was a reflection upon Mr. Rankin and requested that Mr. Multer ask unanimous consent to strike the words from his remarks.

Mr. Multer asked unanimous consent to so strike the words and there was no objection.

§ 51.4 Where a demand is made that words uttered in debate be taken down, the Member using those words may, by unanimous consent, withdraw them before the Chair rules on their propriety.

On Mar. 2, 1977,⁽¹⁾ during consideration of House Resolution 287 (amending the rules of the House) in the Committee of the Whole, the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [DAVID R.] OBEY [of Wisconsin]: Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words, and I oppose the amendment.

Mr. Chairman, speeches like the one we just heard from the gentleman from Minnesota are the reason that we have wound up with so many Members of the House having the very kind of slush funds that we are trying to abolish today. What we are trying to do is to meet official expenses in an official, honest, aboveboard, open fashion. That is all we are trying to do. The gentleman can toss around all of the words he wants and all of the inflammatory words he wants.

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Chairman, I demand the gentleman's words be taken down.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽²⁾ Does the gentleman from Wisconsin ask to withdraw the words that were objected to?

MR. OBEY: I have no idea which words he objected to, but to satisfy the gentleman from Maryland, I will withdraw them.

1. 123 CONG. REC. 5937, 95th Cong. 1st Sess.
2. Edward P. Boland (Mass.).

MR. BAUMAN: To clarify, Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Obey) has referred to the language used by the gentleman from Minnesota as “phony words.” He has also referred to his remarks as “baloney.”

I hardly think that the words do anything, I would say to the Chairman, except impugn the motives of the gentleman from Minnesota.

THE CHAIRMAN: Does the gentleman from Wisconsin ask to withdraw those words?

MR. OBEY: Mr. Chairman, since it is necessary for someone around here to be responsible in the interest of getting things done, surely I withdraw those words.

THE CHAIRMAN: Without objection it is so ordered. The gentleman may continue.

§ 51.5 On one occasion, two Members demanded that each other’s words be taken down and then, by unanimous consent, withdrew their remarks in Committee of the Whole before they were reported to the House.

On Apr. 29, 1976,⁽³⁾ during consideration of the first concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal 1977,⁽⁴⁾ remarks were exchanged in which one Member characterized remarks made by another as racist, and the latter Member referred to the other as a “pip-squeak.” (The remarks in question do not appear in the Record, because both Members received permission to withdraw their remarks before they were reported to the House.) The following exchange occurred during the proceedings:

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Chairman, I demand that the gentleman’s words be taken down. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁵⁾ The Clerk will report the words.

MR. [RICHARD L.] OTTINGER [of New York]: Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my remark.

THE CHAIRMAN: Does the Chair understand that the gentleman desires to withdraw the remark?

MR. OTTINGER: That is correct, the remarks that the gentleman made, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw the remarks.

THE CHAIRMAN: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Chairman, I likewise make a similar request. I ask unanimous consent that my characterization of the gentleman be withdrawn.

THE CHAIRMAN: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland that his remark be withdrawn from the record?

There was no objection.

Parliamentarian’s Note: Under the precedents,⁽⁶⁾ where a Member

6. See, for example, 110 CONG. REC. 13254, 88th Cong. 2d Sess., June 10, is granted permission to withdraw disorderly remarks from the Record, he must personally delete the words from the transcript, and the Official Reporters of Debate will not assume that responsibility.

§ 51.6 Words objected to in Committee of the Whole may be withdrawn by unanimous consent.

On Feb. 8, 1978,⁽⁷⁾ during proceedings related to H.R. 6805, the Consumer Protection Act of 1977, Mr. Benjamin S. Rosenthal, of New York, stated, in reference to statements previously made in debate by Mr. Robert E. Bauman, of Maryland: "I think that is really an unfair statement, and I myself am sorry that I did not stand up to have Mr. Bauman's words taken down earlier today. I regret that I hesitated, because they impugned the motives of Members and groups supporting the bill. It not only is extraordinarily bad taste, it is violative of the rules of the House."⁽⁸⁾ The following exchange then occurred:

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Chairman, a point of order, Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

1964, where the Member did not take the necessary action to delete.

7. 124 CONG. REC. 2831, 2832, 95th Cong. 2d Sess.

8. Note: The words in question would probably not in fact have been ruled to be unparliamentary.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁹⁾ The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Chairman, I made the point of order while the gentleman from New York was speaking, before the gentleman's time expired.

THE CHAIRMAN: There was so much noise the Chair did not hear the gentleman from Maryland. The gentleman from Maryland will state his point of order.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Chairman, I demand that the words of the gentleman from New York be taken down.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Maryland is referring to which words?

MR. BAUMAN: To the entire series of words of the gentleman from New York, from the first reference to the gentleman from Maryland to the last.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Clerk will report the words the gentleman from Maryland wishes taken down. . . .

MR. ROSENTHAL: Mr. Chairman, in the interest of expediency, I would ask unanimous consent that the words the gentleman from Maryland thought offensive be withdrawn.

THE CHAIRMAN: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Chairman, do I understand that all reference made by the gentleman from New York to the gentleman from Maryland will be withdrawn completely from the remarks of the gentleman from New York as they will appear in the Record?

MR. ROSENTHAL: Yes, in this particular case.

THE CHAIRMAN: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

9. Frank E. Evans (Colo.).

There was no objection.

§ 51.7 Words in debate demanded to be taken down were withdrawn by unanimous consent.

On July 13, 1978,⁽¹⁰⁾ Mr. Ronald V. Dellums, of California, made the following remarks with reference to House Resolution 1267, a resolution to impeach Andrew Young, United States Ambassador to the United Nations, on the basis of statements made by Mr. Young concerning “political prisoners” in the United States:

[Any] citizen of America has a right to free speech. So, Andrew Young exercised that.

It seems to me that there is no legal justification for offering a resolution of impeachment of Andrew Young.

Mr. Dellums further stated:

It seems to me folly and absolute madness, total insanity, totally devoid of intellectual capability, no legal backup, to offer a resolution of impeachment of Andrew Young, for there is no treason for making a statement. That is a violation of freedom.

A demand was made that these words be taken down:

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order against the last remarks made by the gentleman, and I demand that his words be taken down.

10. 124 CONG. REC. 20714–15, 95th Cong. 2d Sess.

MR. DELLUMS: Which points is the gentleman responding to?

MR. BAUMAN: I would say to the Chair that the Chair well knows the precedents of the House to require Members to respect the motives of other Members. . . .

MR. DELLUMS: Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the term “madness” and “insanity” and make my case without those two words. . . .

MR. BAUMAN: Is my understanding correct that unanimous consent has been granted to withdraw those words from the Record?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹¹⁾ Without objection.

§ 51.8 Words objected to in debate may be withdrawn by unanimous consent, but no debate is in order pending such a request.

During consideration of the foreign aid authorization bill (H.R. 12514) in the Committee of the Whole on Aug. 2, 1978,⁽¹²⁾ the following exchange occurred:

MR. [JOHN J.] CAVANAUGH [of Nebraska]: . . . I am highly offended and irritated by much of the language presented here by Mr. Bauman and by our colleague from Minnesota concerning the administration support.

[Mr. Cavanaugh further characterized Mr. Bauman’s language as “outrageous,” the characterization in question.]

11. John Joseph Moakley (Mass.).

12. 124 CONG. REC. 23944, 23945, 95th Cong. 2d Sess.

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the language of the gentleman from Nebraska if he cannot conduct himself civilly in debate. . . . I demand his words be taken down. . . .

MR. CAVANAUGH: Mr. Chairman, insofar as the characterization that I used regarding the gentleman's language could in any way be construed to impugn the gentleman's character, I would ask unanimous consent to withdraw it. It was an attempt to simply convey my feelings of the inappropriateness of the language that the gentleman had used in putting forth his argument.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Chairman, a point of order.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹³⁾ The gentleman will state his point of order.

MR. BAUMAN: Is not the only request the gentleman from Nebraska (Mr. Cavanaugh) can make, under the rules of the House, a unanimous-consent request to withdraw his remarks, and not to make a speech?

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Bauman) is correct.

Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Nebraska?

There was no objection.

§ 51.9 Words objected to in debate were withdrawn by unanimous consent prior to being reported to the House.

The following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole on Aug. 3, 1978,⁽¹⁴⁾ during

13. Don Fuqua (Fla.).

14. 124 CONG. REC. 24238, 95th Cong. 2d Sess.

consideration of the foreign aid appropriation bill (H.R. 12931):

MR. [JOHN F.] SEIBERLING [of Ohio]: Mr. Chairman, I just want to say I think it is too bad all the Members of the House are not here. I think we have heard from the gentleman from Wisconsin one of the most outstanding and refreshing statements I have heard on the subject of foreign affairs in many, many months. We heard a voice of reason and responsibility bringing us all back to our senses and asking us whether or not the American people are still ready to assert leadership in the world, to work through to a more sane and rational world state of affairs, or whether we are going to heed all the extreme voices that would tear apart the structure we have so painstakingly built up over the last 30 years to try to make sense out of the world.

[Mr. Seiberling further characterized some discussion of the subject as "hysterical."]

MR. [C. W. BILL] YOUNG of Florida: Mr. Chairman, I demand the gentleman's words be taken down. I just do not think my remarks should be considered as hysterical and I demand the gentleman's words be taken down. . . .

MR. SEIBERLING: Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw whatever the remarks are that the gentleman from Florida found objectionable. They were not addressed to him or against any other Member. I did not mention his name. Whatever the words are that he finds objectionable, then, in the interest of an amicable debate, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw them.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁵⁾ Is there objection to the unanimous-consent request of the gentleman from Ohio?

15. Abraham Kazen, Jr. (Tex.).

There was no objection.

Parliamentarian's Note: The words in question, characterizing some discussion of the issues as "hysterical", would probably not have been ruled out of order, since not in the context used referring to any Member.

§ 51.10 By unanimous consent, the Speaker was permitted to withdraw remarks he delivered from the floor in debate in reference to a specific Member, following a demand that the words be taken down.

During consideration of H.R. 7542 (supplemental appropriations and rescission bill for fiscal year 1980) in the House on July 2, 1980,⁽¹⁶⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [THOMAS P.] O'NEILL [Jr., of Massachusetts]: Mr. Speaker, I have served in legislative bodies for . . . years. In my legislative lifetime I have never seen a Speaker ever make a wrong ruling. . . .

I was 16 years in the Massachusetts Legislature, and only once did I ever see anybody appeal the Chair's ruling. . . .

I am sorry that the gentlewoman from Massachusetts was duped the way she was. I am sorry, in my opinion—

16. 126 CONG. REC. 18361, 96th Cong. 2d Sess.

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, I demand that the gentleman's words be taken down. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁷⁾ Does the gentleman from Massachusetts withdraw the word that was used?

MR. O'NEILL: The Speaker will withdraw the word. . . .

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman be permitted to withdraw the word "duped."

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Maryland?

There was no objection.

Parliamentarian's Note: The word "duped," used to mean "fooled," was arguably not out of order.

§ 51.11 Pending a demand that words spoken in debate be taken down and ruled unparliamentary, the Chair may inquire whether the Member whose remarks are challenged wishes to request unanimous consent to modify his remarks before directing the Clerk to read them.

On Dec. 8, 1982,⁽¹⁸⁾ during consideration of the Defense appropriation bill (H.R. 7355) in the Committee of the Whole, demand was made that the following

17. Paul Simon (Ill.).

18. 128 CONG. REC. 29466, 97th Cong. 2d Sess.

words of Mr. Robert K. Dornan, of California, be taken down:

MR. DORNAN of California: . . . When I overheard Mr. Harkin in Communist China as he put on a Mao hat say, and he did not realize I could hear him, "It is an honor to wear a worker's hat"; that is the hat of Mao who killed 30, 40, maybe 50 million people, I realized what is Mr. Harkin's terrorist is my freedom fighter, and what is my freedom fighter is his terrorist.

I implore the Members to vote down this mischievous amendment. . . .

MR. JOHN L. BURTON [of California]: Mr. Chairman, I demand the gentleman's words be taken down about our colleague, Mr. Harkin supporting terrorists.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁹⁾ Does the gentleman from California (Mr. Burton) withdraw his request?

MR. JOHN L. BURTON: No, Mr. Chairman.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: Is the gentleman from California (Mr. Dornan) willing to request that his remarks be modified in any way?

MR. DORNAN of California: Did you ask, Would I modify my remarks, Mr. Chairman?

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: Yes.

MR. DORNAN of California: No; it is a matter of personal perception. I repeat, what is Mr. Harkin's terrorist is my freedom fighter. What is my freedom fighter is obviously his terrorist. I may be wrong. He may be wrong. That is up to the judgment of the Members, but my perception about his misperceptions stands.

19. Don Bailey (Pa.).

MR. JOHN L. BURTON: I have seen people crawfish. That is good enough for me.

Mr. Chairman, I withdraw my request.

§ 51.12 Clause 1 of Rule XIV proscribes Members in debate from engaging in personalities, including allegations that an identifiable group of sitting Members have committed a crime; thus, a Member by unanimous consent withdrew a statement in debate that the majority members of the House had "stolen" a seat, pending a demand that those words be taken down.

On Feb. 27, 1985,⁽²⁰⁾ Mr. Andrew Jacobs, Jr., of Indiana, demanded that words spoken by Mr. John Rowland, of Connecticut, be taken down:

MR. JACOBS: Mr. Speaker, I demand the gentleman's words be taken down in that he said "stolen." . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁾ The Clerk will read the words taken down. The Clerk read as follows:

The scary thing about it, as a person who served in the legislature for 4 years, and as a person who happens to be sitting as the youngest Member of Congress, I find it difficult that the first situation that we run into in this House, the first class project, as we may call it, is trying to retain a seat that has been stolen from the Republican side of the aisle, and I think it is rather frustrating.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Would the gentleman care to modify his remarks before the Chair rules?

MR. ROWLAND of Connecticut: Yes, I would, Mr. Speaker. . . . I would like to ask unanimous consent that the words objected to be withdrawn.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: That what word be withdrawn?

MR. ROWLAND of Connecticut: The word "stolen," Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Connecticut?

There was no objection. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Georgia is recognized.

MR. [NEWT] GINGRICH [of Georgia]: I would yield in just a moment, after asking the Chair if in fact Members were convinced an action were being taken which involved a word which was ruled by the Chair to be inappropriate, how could a Member report to the House on that action? Should we substitute the word "banana"? What is it one should say if in fact—not just as a joke, but if in fact—Members of the Republican side honestly believed strongly something is being done? In other words, is "unconstitutional" an acceptable term but "illegal" not acceptable?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is the gentleman asking the Chair?

MR. GINGRICH: I am asking the Chair.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Simply put, Members should not accuse other

Members of committing a crime. When the majority is accused of "stealing," that may suggest illegality. Other words could be used but not those accusing Members of committing a crime.

MR. GINGRICH: What if one honestly believes, for a moment, that a crime is being committed? Would it in fact be against the rules—

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Members may not engage in personalities.

MR. GINGRICH: But he did not talk in personalities. . . .

MR. ROWLAND of Connecticut: . . . Mr. Speaker, I would simply point out that I did not refer to anybody stealing an election. I just referred to the frustration that we as freshmen are exhibiting and fearing as we go through the deliberations. I did not refer to anybody.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman seemed to refer to the majority of the House, that it had stolen the election.

§ 51.13 Words taken down may be withdrawn only by unanimous consent.

In the 100th Congress, upon a timely demand that certain words uttered in debate be taken down as unparliamentary, the Speaker ruled that the remarks characterizing the relationship between Senator and Vice-Presidential candidate J. Danforth Quayle's political words and his living deeds as "hypocrisy" were out of order and should be withdrawn. Subsequently, objection was made to a unanimous-consent request that the offending language be stricken. The proceedings of Sept. 29, 1988, are discussed in § 47.10, supra.

§ 51.14 A Member, by unanimous consent, withdrew a statement in debate that the majority members of the House had “stolen” a seat, pending a demand that those words be taken down.

The proceedings of Feb. 27, 1985, concerning remarks alleging that certain Members of the House had “stolen” an election, are discussed in § 53.7, infra.

—Modifying Words

§ 51.15 Where a demand is made that a Member’s words be taken down, he may by unanimous consent be allowed to proceed in debate if permission is first granted to modify the words in order to delete the objectionable matter.

On Oct. 2, 1984,⁽²⁾ during consideration of the balanced budget bill (H.R. 6300), Mr. John V. Weber, of Minnesota, stated that another Member had come to the floor with a gimmick “which he thinks will fool the people of Tulsa.”⁽³⁾ A point of order was made:

Ms. [MARY ROSE] OAKAR [of Ohio]: Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁴⁾ The gentlewoman will state her point of order.

Ms. OAKAR: Mr. Speaker, I question the speaker regarding impugning the motives of the chairman who has introduced this legislation.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Does the gentlewoman insist that the gentleman’s words be taken down?

Ms. OAKAR: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I do.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Clerk will report the words.

After several parliamentary inquiries, the following occurred:

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Does the gentleman have a unanimous-consent request?

Mr. [GUY V.] MOLINARI [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, I repeat my request that the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. Weber) be permitted to speak in order

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Does the gentleman from Minnesota first ask unanimous consent to modify his words?

Mr. WEBER: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to modify my words.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection?

3. The words were stricken from the Record.
4. Richard A. Gephardt (Mo.).

MS. OAKAR: Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to know what his words are going to be that he is going to modify. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The words that were uttered just prior to the gentlewoman's demand.

MS. OAKAR: Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. Weber) may proceed in order.

Parliamentarian's Note: Permission for a Member to proceed in debate should not be granted until the words have been ruled on, or modified or withdrawn.

Withdrawal of Demand That Words Be Taken Down

§ 51.16 On one occasion, upon a demand that certain words used in debate (characterizing unnamed Members as taking "potshots" at the Nicaraguan resistance and as lacking judgment) be taken down, the Chair suggested that the words only questioned the judgment of unspecified Members in a manner not in violation of House rules, and the demand was withdrawn prior to a ruling thereon.

During the proceedings in the House on Mar. 18, 1986,⁽⁵⁾ the following occurred:

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I just got back from Nicaragua, and in light of what I saw and heard, I find today's speeches by the left wing of the Democratic Party astonishing.

For Members of Congress to stand safely on this floor and take potshots at men and women of tremendous courage who are struggling against great odds to oppose Communist tyranny in Nicaragua is, indeed, astonishing. That questions no one's patriotism; it questions their judgment.

MR. [PARREN J.] MITCHELL [of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, I request the gentleman's words be taken down. He is questioning the judgment of other Members of the House.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁶⁾ The gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Mitchell) requests that the words of the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Walker) be taken down. The Chair would inquire as to which words the gentleman refers to.

MR. MITCHELL: He questions the judgment of the Members of the House who oppose the Reagan proposition.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would suggest that the gentleman did not refer to any specific Member in violation of the rules of the House. Does the gentleman insist on his request?

MR. MITCHELL: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I do because it followed a statement that

5. 132 CONG. REC. 5200, 5201, 99th Cong. 2d Sess.

6. Bill Alexander (Ark.).

I just made where I indicated that I oppose the President's position, and certainly by inference he is questioning my judgment and I resent it.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman insists, and the Clerk will report the words. . . .

MR. MITCHELL: If the Speaker so desires, I will not press the point of order, but with the indulgence of the Speaker, I will state that I personally resent any attempt to impugn my motives.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman withdraws his demand.

Striking Words From Record

§ 51.17 Where allegedly unparliamentary words were used in debate but not objected to nor taken down, the House rejected a later resolution called up by unanimous consent proposing to strike those words from the Record.

On May 10, 1948, the House granted unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of House Resolution 587, to strike from the Record allegedly unparliamentary words made on the floor of the House on May 6, 1948.⁽⁷⁾ When the words were uttered, they were not objected to nor taken down and ruled upon by the Speaker.

The House rejected the resolution proposing to strike the words from the Record and the sponsor of the resolution objected to a unanimous-consent request of the Member who uttered the words that he be permitted to withdraw them. A discussion ensued as to the practice to be followed when alleged unparliamentary words are used in debate but not taken down, and whether the unanimous-consent consideration of the resolution proposed by Mr. Clarence Cannon, of Missouri, furnished a precedent to permit future Members to move to strike out words in the Record because allegedly not heard at the time of utterance.⁽⁸⁾

7. 94 CONG. REC. 5507, 80th Cong. 2d Sess.

§ 51.18 The Speaker having ruled out of order certain words used by a Member in debate, the House expunged from the Record his entire speech.

On Feb. 11, 1941,⁽⁹⁾ Mr. Samuel Dickstein, of New York, was recognized for five minutes and was granted permission to revise and extend his remarks. Following Mr. Dickstein's address, Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, demanded that certain words used in debate by Mr. Dickstein be taken down. The Clerk read the following words:

MR. DICKSTEIN: I also charge, Mr. Speaker, that 110 facist organizations in this country had the back key, and have now the back key to the backdoor of the Dies committee.

Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that the language reported was a breach of order and Mr. Rankin moved to expunge the entire speech of Mr. Dickstein from the Record. Following debate by Mr. Rankin, the House agreed to the motion.

§ 51.19 On one occasion, the proceedings under which a Member's remarks were taken down were by unanimous consent deleted from the Record and the Member was granted the privilege of revising and extending his remarks.

On May 31, 1939,⁽¹⁰⁾ Mr. Sam Rayburn, of Texas, asked unanimous consent that "the proceedings under which the remarks of the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. Sam C. Massingale], in reference to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Carl E. Mapes], were taken down may be deleted from the Record and that the gentleman from Oklahoma may have the right to revise and extend his own remarks."

10. 84 CONG. REC. 6465, 76th Cong. 1st Sess.

The request was granted after Mr. Rayburn gave assurances that the request was made with the approval of both Mr. Mapes and Mr. Massingale.

§ 51.20 A Member, having been called to order for words spoken in debate and those words having been held unparliamentary may not proceed without the permission of the House; and, on motion, the unparliamentary words may be stricken from the Record by the House.

On Aug. 21, 1974,⁽¹¹⁾ it was demonstrated that where the demand is made that certain words used in debate be taken down in the House, the business of the House is suspended until the situation is properly resolved. The proceedings were as follows:

MR. [THOMAS P.] O'NEILL [Jr., of Massachusetts]: Mr. Speaker, I take this time so I may direct my remarks to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Bauman).

Yesterday, Mr. Speaker, by mutual consent of the leadership on both sides of the aisle and by the members of the Judiciary Committee, I offered to this

11. 120 CONG. REC. 29652, 29653, 93d Cong. 2d Sess.

House a resolution. At the completion of the resolution, Mr. Speaker, I asked that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to extend their remarks and it was objected to, Mr. Speaker, by the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Bauman). He gave a reason at that particular time.

I told him that I thought he should have cleared it with the leadership on his own side of the aisle; but nevertheless, Mr. Speaker, when all the Members had left last night, the gentleman came to the well and asked unanimous consent of the then Speaker of the House who was sitting there, if he may insert his remarks in the Record, with unanimous consent, following the remarks where he had objected.

So, Mr. Speaker, in today's Record on page H8724 you will find the remarks of Mr. Bauman. You will not find the remarks of Mr. McClory, one of the people who had asked me to do this. You will not find the remarks of other members of the Judiciary Committee, who were prepared at that time to put their remarks in the Record; but you will find the remarks of Mr. Bauman and Mr. Bauman alone.

[I just want to say that I think in my opinion it was a cheap, sneaky, sly way to operate.]

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, I demand that the gentleman's words be taken down.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹²⁾ The gentleman demands that the words be taken down.

The Clerk will report the words objected to. . . .

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. O'Neill: Mr. Speaker, I take this time so I may direct my remarks to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Bauman). . . .

I just want to say that I think in my opinion it was a cheap, sneaky, sly way to operate.

THE SPEAKER: The words in the last sentence are not parliamentary. Without objection, the offending words will be stricken from the Record.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would only like to say to the gentleman from Massachusetts and to the House that as for the gentleman from Massachusetts, I can understand his concern about my objection yesterday. It was the only possible way in which I or any other Member could have actually spoken on the resolution pending.

If he will look at the page numbers he cited, he will find subsequent to that, that the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Devine), the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. Dennis), and the gentleman from California (Mr. Wiggins), all in my presence asked permission and did extend their remarks. And, of course, the gentleman from Massachusetts got 5 legislative days to extend on his special order. I did not object to any of these requests.

MR. O'NEILL: Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield on that point?

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Massachusetts cannot proceed at this point.

MR. BAUMAN: And, Mr. Speaker, a number of other Members did extend their remarks, and I did not object.

THE SPEAKER: Is there objection? . . .

MR. [WAYNE L.] HAYS [of Ohio]: Mr. Speaker, I do object. . . .

MR. [B. F.] SISK [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

12. Carl Albert (Okla.).

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Sisk moves that the words of the gentleman from Massachusetts, Mr. O'Neill, be stricken from the Record.

MR. SISK: Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion.

The previous question was ordered.

THE SPEAKER: The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California.

The motion was agreed to.

Parliamentarian's Note: 8 Cannon's Precedents §2546 seems to support the proposition that the restriction imposed upon a Member whose words are held unparliamentary, which prevents that Member from proceeding further in debate, extends only to further debate on the "immediately pending question" and not to subsequent debate during that day. But on Jan. 29, 1946,⁽¹³⁾ it was held that a Member may not again proceed the same day without the permission of the House. The prohibition should in any case extend for the entire day unless permission of the House to proceed in order is granted, in order to properly enforce the Chair's ruling holding the words to be unparliamentary.

—Time To Strike Words

§ 51.21 When objectionable words are reported to the

13. 92 CONG. REC. 533, 79th Cong. 2d Sess.

House from the Committee of the Whole it is the duty of the Chair first to determine whether the words violate the rules of the House before motions are in order for the disposition of the matter.

On May 13, 1932,⁽¹⁴⁾ certain words used in debate in the Committee of the Whole were demanded to be taken down. The Committee rose and the Clerk read to the House the words reported from the Committee. After the words were reported, Mr. Homer C. Parker, of Georgia, addressed Speaker Pro Tempore William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, in order to make a motion with respect to the words objected to:

MR. PARKER of Georgia: Mr. Speaker, I move that the words that have been taken down—

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will state to the gentleman from Georgia that the preliminary question for the Chair to decide is whether or not the words taken down are opprobrious or in contravention of the rules of the House and of orderly debate. The statement made by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Blanton] has been reported by the Clerk and is now before the House for consideration.

The present occupant of the chair, of course, regrets personally that he is called upon to make a decision affecting this matter, because the Chair can readily understand how the words in question may have been construed to disparage the gentleman from Georgia, but it is only the duty of the Chair, under the circumstances, to undertake to construe, from a parliamentary standpoint, whether or not the words used are offensive in their nature or tend to bring the gentleman from Georgia into contempt or disrepute before the House.

14. 75 CONG. REC. 10135, 10136, 72d Cong. 1st Sess.

However much the Chair would like to have an expression of the House on this language⁽¹⁵⁾ that has been taken down, the Chair is compelled to come to the conclusion that the language in itself does not offend the rules.

§ 51.22 A motion to exclude words from the Record is not privileged until the Chair has decided that the words are out of order.

On June 14, 1929,⁽¹⁶⁾ Mr. B. Frank Murphy, of Ohio, demanded that certain words used in debate by Mr. Fiorello H. LaGuardia, of New York, condemning the government as having become "something hated, something oppressive" be taken down. Speaker Pro Tempore

15. The words objected to involved the characterization by one Member (Mr. Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas) of another (Mr. Parker, of Georgia) as "the general who won the war."

16. 71 CONG. REC. 2924, 71st Cong. 1st Sess.

Thomas S. Williams, of Illinois, directed the Clerk to report the words objected to. Immediately following the reading of the words, Mr. Murphy moved to exclude the words taken down from the Congressional Record.

The Speaker Pro Tempore ruled that the motion was not in order:

The Chair will say to the gentleman from Ohio that his motion is not in order until the Chair has ruled as to whether the words objected to and demanded to be taken down are out of order.

On Jan. 17, 1933,⁽¹⁷⁾ Mr. Louis T. McFadden, of Pennsylvania, sought to impeach President Herbert C. Hoover for high crimes and misdemeanors and introduced a resolution impeaching the President. After the resolution was read, Mr. Henry T. Rainey, of Illinois, moved to lay the resolution of impeachment on the table. Mr. Fred A. Britten, of Illinois, then raised a parliamentary inquiry: "Is a motion to expunge the language which has just transpired in the House in order at this time?"

Speaker John N. Garner, of Texas, indicated that the request could be made at that time only by unanimous consent.

§ 51.23 A motion to expunge a Member's remarks from the Record, the Chair having held them to be unparliamentary, is in order even though the House by vote has authorized the Member to proceed.

On June 7, 1933,⁽¹⁸⁾ Mr. Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, was called to order for referring to Mr. Bertrand H. Snell, of New York, by name in debate and for holding him up to ridicule. Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, then moved that Mr. Blanton be permitted to proceed in order, and the House by vote so authorized Mr. Blanton to proceed.

Mr. Frederick R. Lehlbach, of New Jersey, then arose to move that the words spoken by Mr. Blanton be expunged from the Record. Mr. Rankin made the point of order that the motion came too late. Speaker Henry T. Rainey, of Illinois, ruled that the motion to expunge was in order since no business intervened between the vote on the motion to proceed in order and the entering of the motion to expunge words from the Record.

venes, but a Member may by unanimous consent withdraw from the Record words he had previously spoken.

During debate on H.R. 11⁽¹⁹⁾ in the Committee of the Whole on Feb. 24, 1977,⁽²⁰⁾ the proceedings described above occurred as follows:

MR. [E. G.] SHUSTER [of Pennsylvania]: I would like to call the attention of the Committee to the very significant point just made by the gentleman from Puerto Rico, which was that, in effect, Puerto Rico received under the previous jobs bill $127 million—more than almost any State of the Union.

Under the Shuster amendment, certainly Puerto Rico would not be left out. They would receive $47 million. The gentleman has made a good point. . . .

MR. [ROBERT A.] ROE [of New Jersey]: Madam Chairman, I am glad that came up. I am very glad that came up. So let us deal with that [demagogic] approach.

In every other piece of legislation that we have had, so far as I know, out of the public works end of it, what we are faced with is that we treat Puerto Rico as a State.

MR. SHUSTER: Madam Chairman, I ask that his words be taken down.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁾ The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Shuster) asks that the words of the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Roe) be taken down. The demand comes too late, since debate has proceeded beyond that point.

MR. ROE: Madam Chairman, if I have used the wrong words, I apologize right here and now. I did not mean anything personal.

MR. SHUSTER: Madam Chairman, I was on my feet.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman was not seeking recognition.

Does the gentleman from New Jersey ask unanimous consent to withdraw his words?

MR. ROE: Madam Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that I may be allowed to withdraw any words that I may have used inappropriately.

MR. SHUSTER: I thank the gentleman.

THE CHAIRMAN: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

§ 51.25 When there is a demand that certain words used in debate be taken down, the words objected to may be withdrawn by unanimous consent by the Member using them, but where the words are not withdrawn, the Speaker will rule on the propriety of the words.

The proceedings of Mar. 19, 1985, concerning the propriety of words spoken in debate by Mr. Harry Reid, of Nevada, are discussed in § 51.36, infra.

—Debate on Motion To Strike

§ 51.26 Debate on a motion to expunge from the Record certain remarks used in debate and ruled out of order is under the hour rule.

On Feb. 11, 1941,⁽²⁾ Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, demanded that certain words used in debate by Mr. Samuel Dickstein, of New York, impugning the motives and actions of a House committee be taken down. After Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that the words used were a breach of order in debate, Mr. Rankin moved to expunge the entire speech of Mr. Dickstein from the Record, and asked for recognition on his motion.

When Mr. Rankin asked whether he was recognized for one hour, the Speaker responded in the affirmative.

On June 12, 1947,⁽³⁾ Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, ruled that words used in debate referring to the Committee on Un-American Activities as “the Un-American Committee” were a breach of order. Following the Speaker’s ruling, Mr. Rankin moved to strike those words from the Record and asked for recognition.

The Speaker responded to a question by Mr. Rankin as to the time of debate allowed him on the motion to strike words from the Record:

MR. RANKIN: Mr. Speaker, I am recognized now for 1 hour and I have a right to yield to any other Member I desire in this discussion?

THE SPEAKER: As long as the gentleman retains the floor he may yield, of course, but he must retain the floor for 1 hour, if he so desires.

Discipline of Member for Unparliamentary Words

§ 51.27 When words used in debate are taken down on demand, ruled out of order and stricken from the Record by the House, it is for the House and not for the Chair to decide what further action by way of discipline or censure shall be taken by motion or resolution.

On Feb. 22, 1945,⁽⁴⁾ Mr. Frank E. Hook, of Michigan, used allegedly blasphemous language in relation to Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, in House debate. The words were demanded to be taken down and Speaker Pro Tempore Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia, ruled the words out of order and by unanimous consent ordered that they be stricken from the Record.

4. 91 CONG. REC. 1371, 1372, 79th Cong. 1st Sess.

Mr. Howard W. Smith, of Virginia, then stated a parliamentary inquiry whether "it is in order for this House to enforce some discipline or whether the mere striking of such outrageous language from the Record is all that is going to occur today."

Speaker Pro Tempore Ramspeck responded "The Chair thinks that is a matter for the House to determine by proper action." A resolution to censure Mr. Hook for his disorderly language was later offered but withdrawn.⁽⁵⁾

§ 51.28 A Member having introduced a resolution to censure another for words spoken in debate later withdrew the resolution by unanimous consent.

On Feb. 22, 1945,⁽⁶⁾ Mr. Frank E. Hook, of Michigan, used allegedly blasphemous language in criticism of Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi. Speaker Pro Tempore Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia, ruled that the words were a breach of order and directed the language to be stricken from the Record. The Speaker Pro Tempore then stated in response to a parliamentary inquiry by Mr. Howard W. Smith, of Virginia, that the House could take further action by way of enforcing discipline.

On Feb. 23, the following day,⁽⁷⁾ both Mr. Hook and Mr. Rankin apologized to the House for their actions on the preceding day. Mr. Smith addressed the House in relation to a resolution of the censure against Mr. Hook:

. . . I feel today as I felt yesterday, that there should be a resolution of censure. I think that, regardless of who the person may be, when language of the type that was used yesterday on the floor of this House is used by a Member, the House cannot ignore it without lowering the dignity and the standing of the House in the Country.

Mr. Smith introduced House Resolution 147, to censure Mr. Hook; the resolution was referred to the Committee on Rules.

The resolution read as follows:

Whereas during a discussion in the House of Representatives on the twenty-second day of February, 1945, while Mr. Hoffman of Michigan had the floor, a colloquy occurred between the Member from Mississippi, Mr. Rankin, and the Member from Michigan, Mr. Hook; and

Whereas the Member from Michigan, Mr. Hook, in response to a remark by the Member from Mississippi, Mr. Rankin, used the following words, "You are a God damn liar when you say Communist Party."; and

Whereas the language of the Member from Michigan, Mr. Hook, flagrantly violated the rules of order of the House, and was unbecoming a gentleman and a Member of this body; and

Whereas the conduct of the Member from Michigan, Mr. Hook, impinged the dignity and reflected upon the good repute and orderly conduct of the House of Representatives in a manner tending to lower the public regard for the proceedings of the House, and merits the severe censure of the House for the same: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the said Frank Hook be now brought to the bar of the House by the Sergeant at Arms, and be there publicly censured by the Speaker in the name of the House.

On Feb. 26, 1945,⁽⁸⁾ Mr. Smith obtained unanimous consent to "withdraw" the resolution (Speaker Pro Tempore John McCormack, of Massachusetts, presiding).

Parliamentarian's Note: It is technically not in order, even by unanimous consent, to "withdraw" a measure which has been introduced and referred.

§ 51.29 Words uttered by a Member when not under recognition by the Chair are excluded from the Record; and while a Member who is held to have breached the rules of decorum in debate is presumptively disabled from further recognition on that day, by tradition the Speaker's ruling and any necessary expungement of the Record are deemed sufficient sanction, and by custom the chastened Member is permitted to proceed in order (usually by unanimous consent).

The proceedings of July 29, 1994,⁽⁹⁾ demonstrate the procedures following a breach of decorum in the House:

MS. [MAXINE] WATERS [of California]: Madam Speaker, last evening a Member of this House, Peter King, had to be gavelled out of order at the White-water hearings of the Banking Committee. He had to be gavelled out of order because he badgered a woman who was a witness from the White House, Maggie Williams. I am pleased I was able to come to her defense. Madam Speaker, the day is over when men can badger and intimidate women.

MR. [F. JAMES] SENSENBRENNER [Jr., of Wisconsin]: Madam Speaker, I demand the gentlewoman's words be taken down.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁰⁾ The gentlewoman from California [Ms. Waters] must suspend and be seated.

9. 140 CONG. REC. p. _____, 103d Cong. 2d Sess.

10. Carrie Meek (Fla.).

The Clerk will report the words.

MS. WATERS:—

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentlewoman will please desist and take her seat.

MS. WATERS:—

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair is about to direct the Sergeant at Arms to present the mace.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹¹⁾ The Clerk will report the words. . . .

While in the opinion of the Chair the word "badgering" is not in itself unparliamentary, the Chair believes that the demeanor of the gentlewoman from California was not in good order in the subsequent period immediately following those words having been uttered.

Accordingly, the Chair rules that without leave of the House, the gentlewoman from California may not proceed for the rest of today. . . .

MR. [GERALD B. H.] SOLOMON [of New York]: Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, does that mean that all of the words will be taken down subsequent to the point that she was ruled out of order and stricken from the Record?

THE SPEAKER: None of those words will be in the Record, the Chair will state to the gentleman. None of the words will be in the Record subsequent to that since she was not recognized. . . .

MRS. [PATRICIA] SCHROEDER [of Colorado]: Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I am a little puzzled by the word "demeanor." I was in the Chamber at the time, and I did see the Chair try to gavel the gentlewoman down, but I can understand why she could not hear, because there were so many people at mikes and I think she was confused by that. So I am a little troubled about that. How can you challenge "demeanor"?

11. Thomas S. Foley (Wash.).

THE SPEAKER: The Chair wishes to advise the gentlewoman from Colorado that it is the opinion of the Chair that the Chair at the time was attempting to insist that the gentlewoman from California desist with any further statements and sit down. She did not accord cooperation to the Chair and follow the Chair's instructions. Consequently, it is the finding of the Chair that her demeanor at that point in refusing to accept the Chair's instructions was out of order.

The Chair wishes to ask if there is objection to the gentlewoman from California proceeding in good order.

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, do I understand that the Chair is putting the question to the House under unanimous consent of the gentlewoman being able to proceed for the rest of the day?

THE SPEAKER: That is correct.

MR. WALKER: I thank the Chair.

THE SPEAKER: Without objection, so ordered.

There was no objection.

§ 51.30 A Member was disciplined for stating that the President had given "aid and comfort to the enemy," and the Chair indicated that the Member would not be allowed to speak on the floor of the House or to insert remarks in the Record in any manner or form for 24 hours.

On Jan. 25, 1995,⁽¹²⁾ a Member was disciplined for remarks relating to the President:

(Mr. Dornan asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

MR. [ROBERT K.] DORNAN [of California]: . . . I was offended by Clinton's speech last night on 15 points.

I will do a 5-minute special order tonight I have just signed up for. I can only mention four.

The first one is new covenant. The Ark of the Covenant was the Old Covenant. The New Covenant was the Son of God, Jesus Christ. . . .

No. 2, to put a Medal of Honor winner in the gallery that joined the Marine Corps at 16, fudging his birth certificate, that pulled that second grenade under his stomach, miraculously surviving and saving his four friends, he did that 6 days past his 17th birthday.

Does Clinton think putting a Medal of Honor winner up there is not going to recall for most of us that he avoided the draft three times and put teenagers in his place possibly to go to Vietnam?

No. 3, the line on the cold war. . . .

By the way, Mr. Speaker, the second amendment is not for killing little ducks and leaving Huey and Dewey and Louie without an aunt and uncle. It is for hunting politicians, like Grozny, 1776, when they take your independence away. . . .

12. 141 CONG. REC. p. ____, 104th Cong. 1st Sess.

MR. [VIC] FAZIO of California: Mr. Speaker, I move the gentleman's words be taken down. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹³⁾ All Members will suspend. The Clerk will report the words spoken by the gentleman. . . .

The Clerk read as follows:

Even Andrea Mitchell of NBC took note that [it] is Ronald Reagan's prerogative, George Bush's and all of us who wore the uniform or served in a civilian capacity to crush the evil empire. Clinton gave aid and comfort to the enemy.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: In the opinion of the Chair, that is not a proper reference to the President. Without objection, the words are stricken from the Record. . . .

MR. FAZIO of California: Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I think the gentleman from California [Mr. Dornan] owes the entire institution, the Congress, and the President an apology.

MR. DORNAN: Hell no; hell, no. . . .

Unanimous consent to proceed for 15 seconds? . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from California [Mr. Fazio] has the floor at this moment.

MR. FAZIO of California: I would be happy to yield to my colleague from California, since I have the time, to hear his response.

MR. DORNAN: Will the gentleman yield?

MR. FAZIO of California: I yield to the gentleman from California.

MR. DORNAN: To my distinguished friend and colleague, Maj. Earl Kolbile, Lt. Comdr. J. J. Connell was beaten to death in Hanoi. I have had friends beaten to death in Hanoi, tortured and beaten. You have not. . . .

I will not withdraw my remarks. I will not only not apologize. . . .

MR. [HAROLD L.] VOLKMER [of Missouri]: I ask that the words of the gentleman from California be taken down.

MR. DORNAN: Good. I will leave the floor, no apology, and I will not speak the rest of the day. The truth is the truth.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The House will be in order. The gentleman's words have already been taken down. . . .

MR. FAZIO of California: The gentleman is challenging the words that were uttered in response to my question.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair rules that those words as follows "I believe the President did give aid and comfort to the enemy, Hanoi," were also out of order. The Chair has ruled that, based on the precedents of the House, the words of the gentleman from California were out of order, and without objection, both sets of words will be stricken from the Record. . . .

MR. FAZIO of California: I have a parliamentary inquiry of the Speaker at this point.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state his inquiry.

MR. FAZIO of California: When the Speaker rules that the gentleman should not be allowed to speak for 24 hours, does that encompass remarks that might be placed in the Record, participation in special orders, and other activities that might not involve the gentleman speaking on the floor?

13. John J. Duncan, Jr. (Tenn.).

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: It is the House's determination as to whether or not the Member should be allowed to proceed in order for the remainder of the day. That determination shall not be made by the Chair.

MR. FAZIO of California: In other words, is the House required to vote on whether or not remarks should be placed in the Record?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Unparliamentary remarks cannot be inserted in the Record.

MR. FAZIO of California: But remarks that are not ruled unparliamentary may be placed in the Record if they are not uttered on the floor; is that the ruling of the Speaker?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Unparliamentary remarks should not be inserted in the Record in any manner or form. . . .

MR. FAZIO of California: So in other words, just to confirm the Speaker's ruling, we will not read or hear from the gentleman from California [Mr. Dornan] for the next 24 hours; is that correct?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Unless the House permits him to proceed in order, the gentleman is correct.

MR. FAZIO of California: And for the House to permit that would require a majority vote?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: It would require either unanimous consent or a majority vote of the House to permit the gentleman to proceed in order. . . .

MR. [DAVID E.] BONIOR [of Michigan]: Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from California [Mr. Dornan] is on his feet. Is he not supposed to remain seated until the determination?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman can either be seated or leave the Chamber.

MR. BONIOR: He chose to leave the Chamber; OK. . . .

In a further ruling, the Chair stated that the following words were not unparliamentary:

By the way, Mr. Speaker, the Second Amendment is not for killing little ducks and leaving Huey, Duey and Louie without an aunt and uncle. It is for hunting politicians, like Grozny, 1776, when they take your independence away. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Motion To Strike Words

§ 51.31 A motion to table is a preferential motion which may be raised to dispose of a motion to expunge certain words from the Record.

On June 16, 1947,⁽¹⁴⁾ certain words used in debate characterizing a committee report as containing "lies and half-truths" were demanded to be taken down. Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, ruled that the words used were unparliamentary. Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, moved to strike the entire statement from the Record. On that motion he asked for recognition.

Mr. Vito Marcantonio, of New York, moved to lay the motion to strike words on the table. Mr. Rankin objected that he had already been recognized. Speaker Martin ruled that the motion to table was “preferential and not debatable.” The House rejected the motion to table.

14. 93 CONG. REC. 7065, 80th Cong. 1st Sess.

—Subject to Germane Amendment

§ 51.32 Where a motion was made to expunge the remarks of a Member, an amendment to it proposing to expunge the remarks of another Member was held not germane.

On June 7, 1933,⁽¹⁵⁾ Mr. Frederick R. Lehlbach, of New Jersey, made a motion to expunge from the Record certain words used in debate by Mr. Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, which had been ruled out of order by Speaker Henry T. Rainey, of Illinois. Before the question was put on the motion to expunge, Mr. William B. Oliver, of Alabama, offered an amendment to the motion:

Mr. Speaker, I move to amend the motion of the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Lehlbach] by including in the language to be stricken out the language used by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Snell], which reflects on the President.

15. 77 CONG. REC. 5205, 73d Cong. 1st Sess.

Mr. Lehlbach made the point of order that Mr. Oliver’s amendment was not germane since the House was “dealing with language reported to the House and uttered by the gentleman from Texas, and language spoken in committee by anybody else is not a germane amendment, to my motion.”

Speaker Rainey sustained the point of order.

—Question of Privilege—To Strike Words

§ 51.33 On occasion, a resolution seeking to expunge unparliamentary words from the Record has been offered as a question of privilege of the House and agreed to.

A resolution offered on Sept. 5, 1940,⁽¹⁶⁾ sought to expunge from the Record certain unparliamentary remarks uttered on Sept. 4. Timely objection to the remarks had been made, and there had subsequently been some dispute as to whether unanimous consent had been given for the withdrawal of some or all of the remarks in question. The proceedings of Sept. 5 were as follows:

MR. [CLARE E.] HOFFMAN [of Michigan]: Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of the privilege of the House.

16. 86 CONG. REC. 11552, 11553, 76th Cong. 3d Sess.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁷⁾ The gentleman will state his question of privilege.

MR. HOFFMAN: Mr. Speaker, I will not make a lengthy statement—

MR. [JOHN E.] RANKIN [of Mississippi]: Mr. Speaker, a point of order. In order to get recognition on the question of the privilege of the House it is necessary for a Member to offer a resolution first?

THE SPEAKER: That is the rule. . . .

MR. HOFFMAN: Must I offer the resolution before I state my question?

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman must offer his resolution first, under the rule.

MR. HOFFMAN: Very well, but I desire to be heard on the question. However, I will not take more than 5 minutes.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will hear the gentleman. The Clerk will report the resolution.

HOUSE RESOLUTION 591

Whereas the gentleman from the Second District of Kentucky [Mr. Vincent], referring to the gentleman from the Twentieth District of Ohio [Mr. Sweeney], stated on the floor of the House on September 4, 1940, as appears in the [daily] Record on page 17450, "I said I did not want to sit by a traitor to my country;" and

Whereas such words were a violation of the rules of the House and, as reprinted in the Record, charge the Member from Ohio with a lack of patriotism, and with disloyalty to his country, reflect upon him in his representative capacity and upon the dignity of the House: Therefore, be it

Resolved, That the words, "I said I did not want to sit by a traitor to my country," be expunged from the Record. . . .

17. William B. Bankhead (Ala.).

MR. HOFFMAN: Mr. Speaker, the Record this morning contains that statement. Most of the Members of the House are familiar with what occurred last night. It is not my purpose to take the time of the House to discuss the question of the privilege of the House. I will present the resolution, and then move the previous question. The facts upon which the question of the privilege of the House which I raise are these:

Yesterday, September 4, 1940, on the floor of the House, the following occurred:

The gentleman from the Second District of Kentucky rose and made the following statement, as appears from the official transcript of the reporter:

Mr. Vincent of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I served in the World War, and the World War, as I understood it then and as I understand it now, was fought because we were being attacked by submarines and women and children murdered on the high seas. To say that my President of that time brought on that war to me was an untruth. . . .

When he came down to sit with me, I got up and moved. . . . I said I did not want to sit by a traitor to my country. Then he attacked me and you know what happened.

Following the word "happened," the gentleman from the Second District of Kentucky continued:

I have no apology to make—

And followed that by a sentence consisting of 18 words, which were subsequently deleted from the stenographer's copy sent to the printer.

Then the following occurred:

Mr. Hoffman. Mr. Speaker, I demand recognition on a point of order.

The Speaker pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. Hoffman. Mr. Speaker, I demand that the words of the gentleman who just left the floor be taken down, because they violate the rules of the House.

The Speaker pro tempore. The Clerk will report the words complained of.

Mr. Vincent of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw the last sentence of my statement.

Mr. Dworshak. I object, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker pro tempore. The gentleman from Kentucky asks unanimous consent to withdraw the statement. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. Bradley of Michigan. I object, Mr. Speaker. . . .

Later, the following occurred: . . .

Mr. Hoffman. Mr. Speaker, a moment ago certain words were uttered by the gentleman on the floor of the House which I demanded be taken down. No report was made of those words. I demand the regular order—the taking down of the words, the report of the words, and the reading by the Clerk.

The Speaker pro tempore. Subsequently, unanimous consent was granted for the words to be withdrawn.

Mr. Hoffman. Oh, no, Mr. Speaker; three Members were on their feet—I was one of them—and objecting to that.

The Speaker pro tempore. That was the ruling of the Chair. . . .

If it be true that there was no objection to the unanimous-consent request of the gentleman from the Second District of Kentucky, that consent, according to the printed Record and according to the reporter's record, was as follows:

Mr. Vincent of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw the last sentence of my statement.

The last sentence of the statement was the sentence consisting of 18 words and, had unanimous consent been granted to withdraw the last sentence of the previous statement made by the gentleman from the Second District of Kentucky, there was no consent to withdraw the words, "I have no apology to make."

The striking out of those words from the official transcript furnished by the reporter and the failure to print them in the record of the House renders the Record inaccurate and untrue.

The words, as they now appear in the daily printed Record, September 4, page 17450—

I said I did not want to sit by a traitor to my country—

Were a violation of the rules of the House and, as reprinted in the Record, charge the Member from Ohio with a lack of patriotism, and with disloyalty to his country, reflect upon him in his representative capacity and upon the dignity of the House.

These words were objected to; a demand was made that they be taken down; and, under the rules of the House, they should either have been taken down or unanimous consent should have been obtained to withdraw them from the Record.

Unanimous consent to withdraw these words just quoted—that is—

I said I did not want to sit by a traitor to my country—

Was not given. The words were not taken down and read to the House.

They now appear in the Record. They reflect upon the Member from Ohio. They bring disrepute upon the House and reflect upon the integrity of the House, if permitted to remain in the Record.

Mr. Speaker, I therefore move the adoption of the resolution, and, upon that, move the previous question.

THE SPEAKER: The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

§ 51.34 The House, on a question of privilege of the House, ordered expunged from the Record unparliamentary remarks after the Member using them failed to withdraw them pursuant to a leave to revise.

The proceedings of Sept. 5, 1940, are discussed in § 51.33, supra.

§ 51.35 The House considered as a question of privilege of the House and adopted a resolution expunging from the Record unparliamentary remarks inserted by a Member without permission to revise and extend.

On Aug. 27, 1940,⁽¹⁸⁾ Mr. Jacob Thorkelson, of Montana, arose to a question of personal privilege and to a question of the privilege of the House. He introduced the following resolution:

18. 86 CONG. REC. 11046-49, 76th Cong. 3d Sess.

Whereas the gentleman from the Fifth District of Illinois, Mr. Sabath, caused to be inserted in the Congressional Record of August 14, 1940, on page 10342, the following remarks:

"The House will recall that in Appendix of the Record, pages 3006-3010, I showed that he had placed in the Record up to that time 210 full pages of scurrilous matter at a cost of $9,400 to taxpayers. I showed that he had imposed upon the House by inserting in one of his leaves to print a forged letter of Col. E. M. House, confidant of the late Woodrow Wilson, in which Colonel House was placed in the false position of being in a conspiracy to restore the American Colonies to Great Britain. After that performance, and before, I lost all confidence in him."

And whereas such insertion is a violation of the privilege of the House, in that said remarks charge a Member of the House with having inserted in the Record a forged letter; and

Whereas the insertion of said remarks results in the Record being inaccurate, in that the Record as printed contains statements which from the Record appear to have been made on the floor of the House, but for which permission for insertion in the Record was not obtained; and

Whereas said remarks, as so inserted, were not in order and were an abuse of the privilege of the House: Therefore, be it

Resolved, That the remarks appearing on page 15814 of the Congressional Record under date of August 14, 1940, to wit: "The House will recall that in the Appendix of the Record, pages 3006–3010, I showed that he had placed in the Record up to that time 210 full pages of scurrilous matter at a cost of $9,400 to taxpayers. I showed that he had imposed upon the House by inserting in one of his leaves to print a forged letter of Col. E. M. House, confidant of the late Woodrow Wilson, in which Colonel House was placed in the false position of being in a conspiracy to restore the American Colonies to Great Britain. After that performance, and even before, I lost all confidence in him” be, and they hereby are, expunged from the Congressional Record, and are declared to be not a legitimate part of the official Record of the House.

Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, first ruled that a statement by a Member that another Member had introduced a forged letter into the Record was not grounds for a question of personal privilege. However, the Speaker requested Mr. Thorkelson to withhold his question of privilege of the House for the time being so that the Chair could have the opportunity to find out from the reporters’ notes whether Mr. Adolph J. Sabath had been granted permission to revise and extend his remarks in the Record.

On the following day, Aug. 28, 1940,⁽¹⁹⁾ the question of privilege presented by Mr. Thorkelson was considered in the House as the unfinished business from the preceding day. Speaker Bankhead ruled that extension of remarks in the Record by a Member without first obtaining permission of the House to revise and extend was grounds for a question of privilege of the House. The House then adopted the resolution offered by Mr. Thorkelson expunging from the Record remarks inserted by Mr. Sabath without such permission.

19. 86 CONG. REC. 11150–58, 76th Cong. 3d Sess.

Motion To Proceed in Order

§ 51.36 Where unparliamentary words used in debate have been stricken from the Record, the offending Member may be permitted to proceed in order by unanimous consent or by nondebatable motion; but a Member who is not permitted by the House to proceed in order loses the floor and may not participate in debate on the same day even on time yielded to him by another Member.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Mar. 19, 1985:⁽²⁰⁾

MR. [HARRY] REID [of Nevada]: Mr. Speaker, on February 26 of this year one of my constituents traveled nearly

20. 131 CONG. REC. 5532, 5533, 5537, 99th Cong. 1st Sess.

3,000 miles to Washington specifically to see me about a critical issue, but he did not. . . . I was called away from something very important to become captive, once again, to an abusive practice, an abuse inflicted upon the entire House of Representatives and the legislative process itself, voting on the Journal.

Mr. Reid made further comments, indicated below, which were the subject of a demand that the words be taken down:

MR. [VIN] WEBER [of Minnesota]: Mr. Speaker, I demand that the gentleman's words be taken down. . . .

Mr. Speaker, would it be in order, in view of the gentleman's statement a minute ago, for me to ask unanimous consent that he be permitted to withdraw his words?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁾ Yes. The Chair would entertain such a motion. . . .

MR. REID: Mr. Speaker, I respectfully submit that I appreciate the request of the gentleman from Minnesota, but I do not think I said anything offensive, and I would ask for a ruling on that.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will rule.

The Clerk will report the words.

The Clerk read as follows:

One of the most important things to remember is that those Members who call for these wasteful votes are led by my distinguished colleague from Pennsylvania, Mr. Walker, who speaks constantly of the need to do away with government waste, and he is literally speaking out of both sides of his mouth.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would announce that it is not proper to impugn the motive of another Member. We have precedents here in the House. Mr. Knutson, of Minnesota: "I cannot believe that the gentleman from Mississippi is sincere in what he has just said." And that was held not in order on November 2, 1942.

The Chair must state that the words of the gentleman from Nevada have, in his opinion, an unparliamentary connotation and shall be stricken.

Without objection, the gentleman from Nevada may proceed. Do I hear an objection?

MR. WEBER: Yes, Mr. Speaker. . . .

Would the Chair clarify the parliamentary situation in which the gentleman from Nevada finds himself?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: . . . The Chair has ruled that the gentleman from Nevada misspoke on the words "speaking out of both sides of his mouth," and therefore those words shall be stricken.

The Member only can proceed by permission of the House. . . .

MR. [THOMAS S.] FOLEY [of Washington]: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Nevada may be permitted to proceed.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington that the gentleman from Nevada be allowed to finish his remarks?

MR. [DANIEL E.] LUNGREN [of California]: Reserving the right to object—

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from California reserves the right to object. . . .

1. Kenneth J. Gray (Ill.).

Let the Chair restate what has occurred here.

The gentleman has propounded a parliamentary inquiry, and the Chair has responded that the Chair has ruled that those words are offensive and shall be stricken. It is not a matter of further debate.

MR. LUNGREN: I understand. I am still proceeding under my reservation, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The question occurs now on whether or not the gentleman is allowed to proceed with the understanding that those words have been stricken. . . .

MR. LUNGREN: . . . Mr. Speaker, under my reservation, I ask the gentleman at this point in time whether he would agree to withdraw his remarks. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: It is not in the parliamentary procedures or rules of the House for any further debate on this matter. The Chair has ruled affirmatively that the words shall be stricken.

The only question now before this House is whether or not—

MR. LUNGREN: Mr. Speaker, you have constrained me to object, and I do object at this time. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Objection is heard.

Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. Alexander) is recognized for 5 minutes. . . .

MR. [WILLIAM V.] ALEXANDER [of Arkansas]: Mr. Speaker, I recognize the gentleman from Nevada (Mr. Reid). I yield to the gentleman from Nevada. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman cannot be yielded to at this time. . . .

Is there objection to the gentleman from Arkansas yielding further to the gentleman from Nevada?

MR. ALEXANDER: . . . Do I not have a right to yield to any Member of this House? . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will rule that if a Member in this particular case has been precluded from continuing, he cannot be yielded to on this subject without unanimous consent.

If the gentleman wants to propound the unanimous-consent request, and hearing no objection, he could yield.

Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas to yield to the gentleman from Nevada? . . .

MR. LUNGREN: . . . I will be constrained to object, and I do object at this time. . . .

MR. ALEXANDER: Mr. Speaker, I have not announced the subject which I intend to address. How can the Chair rule against me yielding to another Member when the Chair does not know the subject that I intend to address?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would announce to the distinguished gentleman from Arkansas that, under the rules of the House, at any time a Member's words are taken down, under the rules he is not permitted on that particular legislative business day to speak to the House without permission of the body. An objection was heard to the unanimous-consent request. . . .

MR. WEBER: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Nevada (Mr. Reid) be allowed to proceed.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

§ 51.37 The motion that a Member ruled out of order for words spoken in debate be permitted to proceed in order is not inconsistent with the prohibition in clause 4 of Rule XIV that the offending Member may not automatically proceed, since it permits the House to determine the extent of the sanction for the breach of order.

On May 9, 1990,⁽²⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House:

(Mr. Torricelli asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

MR. [ROBERT G.] TORRICELLI [of New Jersey]: Mr. Speaker, you heard it here today: Republican Member after Republican Member taking the floor, predicting that the President will never raise taxes.

I am here to predict that he will raise taxes. And, Mr. Speaker, we are both right because no doubt, for the President's friends, for those of privilege in American, he will never raise taxes.

But for you and for me and for the overwhelming majority of Americans, he is—he says that he is going to, and he is about doing it. It isn't, Mr.

2. 136 CONG. REC. 9828, 9829, 101st Cong. 2d Sess.

Speaker, that the President is intellectually dishonest, though indeed in the last election he was. It is about the fact that he has a $500 billion—

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I ask that the gentleman's words be taken down.

[The words in question were held to be unparliamentary, the Speaker Pro Tempore⁽³⁾ stating as follows:]

In referring to the President during debate a Member shall abstain from "terms of approbrium," such as calling the President a "liar"—V, 5094, VIII, 2498.

Without objection the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Torricelli] may proceed in order.

[Objection was heard.]

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Does any Member move that the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Torricelli] may proceed in order? . . .

MR. [SIDNEY R.] YATES [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, I make that motion.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Yates]. . . .

So the motion was agreed to. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: . . . The House has voted to allow the gentleman to proceed in order. The gentleman has 16 seconds remaining. . . .

MR. WALKER: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Pennsylvania will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. WALKER: If I understand correctly what just happened in the course of events, it was that the Chair did rule that the gentleman's words were inappropriate, is that correct?

3. John P. Murtha (Pa.).

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair did so rule.

MR. WALKER: And the penalty for such a ruling would normally be that the gentleman would not be allowed to speak for the rest of the day in the House Chamber, is that not correct?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The House permitted him to proceed in order.

MR. WALKER: Under the rules, Mr. Speaker, the rules state that someone having had the Chair so rule is not permitted to speak in the House for the rest of the day, is that not correct?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman is correct.

MR. WALKER: So by taking the action which the party did a few minutes ago, the majority party did, what they did was basically overrule the rules with regard to the penalty for having words taken down.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The motion to allow the gentleman to proceed is a proper parliamentary motion under the same rule.

MR. WALKER: Yes. I understand. But the effect of the action, the effect of the motion, was to override the rules of the House.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Under the rules of the House the Chair cannot say that one part of the rule has precedence over the practice of the House paramount to that rule.

MR. WALKER: Well, I have a further parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. WALKER: If the motion had not been made, the gentleman would not have been permitted to speak for the rest of the day, is that correct?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman is correct.

MR. WALKER: So the effect of the motion was to allow the gentleman to do something which the rules would otherwise not permit him.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The House has followed the normal practice. There are two aspects to the rule. The House proceeded under the rules, and both procedures are proper. The House voted and the gentleman was allowed to proceed for 16 seconds.

MR. WALKER: I have a further parliamentary inquiry. So in other words what the Chair is saying is that the will of the majority can prevail, even though it is over and above the rules that are adopted by the—

MR. YATES: Mr. Speaker, regular order.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Yates] is absolutely correct. That is not a parliamentary inquiry.

Parliamentarian's Note: Where the House has voted to allow a Member called to order to proceed in order, the offending Member is recognized for the remainder of his debate time, as indicated above.

§ 52. —Permission To Explain or To Proceed in Order

A Member whose words are demanded to be taken down must take his seat and if his words are held unparliamentary may not proceed on the same day without the consent of the House.⁽⁴⁾ But he may be recognized to ask unanimous consent to modify or withdraw his remarks before a ruling is made, and, if granted, he thereby retains the right to proceed in debate.⁽⁵⁾

The rules provide for motions to allow the Member to explain and to proceed in order, which motions must be made by another Member before the Speaker rules on the words.⁽⁶⁾

On occasion, the Speaker has recognized the Member called to order, before ruling on the words, to ask unanimous consent to make a limited explanation of his remarks. And the Speaker has permitted explanation, by unanimous consent, after ruling the words out of order.⁽⁷⁾ Generally, however, the Member called to order may not debate the demand that his words be taken down or explain his remarks pending a ruling in the absence of a motion to that effect.⁽⁸⁾

Under clause 4 of Rule XIV in recent practice, the motion to permit the Member to explain must be disposed of prior to the Chair's ruling, and should not be used in the absence of unanimous consent, to question the Chair's ruling.⁽⁹⁾

After the words have been ruled out of order, the Member may be permitted to proceed in order either by motion⁽¹⁰⁾ or by unanimous consent,⁽¹¹⁾ but this is generally preceded by the motion to expunge the words from the Record.⁽¹²⁾

Although the motion to allow the Member to explain is not normally made in contemporary practice, that motion has precedence over the motion to allow the Member to proceed in order since it should be made prior to the Chair's ruling.⁽¹³⁾

If the House declines to grant permission to proceed in order, the Member may not proceed in Parliamentarian's Note: The dicta of the Speaker Pro Tempore in 8 Cannon's Precedents §2546 that a Member called to order can proceed without the consent of the House after the disposition of the pending question is at variance with the other rulings of the Chair that the disability remains throughout the legislative day.

debate on the same day,⁽¹⁴⁾ but does not lose the right to demand either a recorded or unrecorded vote in subsequent proceedings.⁽¹⁵⁾

Modification of Objectionable Words

§ 52.1 Where words are demanded to be taken down, the Member uttering them may by unanimous consent modify his remarks before a ruling is made.

On June 5, 1962,⁽¹⁶⁾ Mr. John D. Dingell, Jr., of Michigan, accused another Member as speaking as “a mouthpiece for the AMA and as a mouthpiece for the house of delegates of the AMA [American Medical Association].” Mr. Thomas B. Curtis, of Missouri, demanded that the words be taken down and the Clerk reported the words objected to.

Mr. Dingell then asked unanimous consent to change the words complained of to “self-appointed spokesman” instead of “mouthpiece.” There was no objection to the request, and Mr. Curtis withdrew his point of order.

§ 52.2 Where a demand is made that a Member’s words be taken down, he may by unanimous consent be allowed to proceed in debate if permission is first granted to modify the words in order to delete the objectionable matter.

On Oct. 2, 1984,⁽¹⁷⁾ during consideration of the balanced budget bill (H.R. 6300), Mr. John V. Weber, of Minnesota, stated that another Member had come to the floor with a gimmick “which he thinks will fool the people of Tulsa.”⁽¹⁸⁾ A point of order was made:

MS. [MARY ROSE] OAKAR [of Ohio]: Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁹⁾ The gentlewoman will state her point of order.

MS. OAKAR: Mr. Speaker, I question the speaker regarding impugning the motives of the chairman who has introduced this legislation.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Does the gentlewoman insist that the gentleman’s words be taken down?

MS. OAKAR: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I do.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Clerk will report the words.

After several parliamentary inquiries, the following occurred:

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Does the gentleman have a unanimous-consent request?

17. 130 CONG. REC. 28522, 98th Cong. 2d Sess.

18. The words were stricken from the Record.

19. Richard A. Gephardt (Mo.).

MR. [GUY V.] MOLINARI [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, I repeat my request that the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. Weber) be permitted to speak in order. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Does the gentleman from Minnesota first ask unanimous consent to modify his words?

MR. WEBER: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to modify my words.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection?

MS. OAKAR: Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to know what his words are going to be that he is going to modify. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The words that were uttered just prior to the gentlewoman's demand.

MS. OAKAR: Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. Weber) may proceed in order.

Parliamentarian's Note: Permission for a Member to proceed in debate should not be granted until the words have been ruled on, or modified or withdrawn.

Withdrawal of Words

§ 52.3 Where a Member is granted unanimous consent to withdraw words ruled out of order by the Speaker, the Member may proceed in debate without the consent of the House, provided his time has not expired.

On Mar. 16, 1939,⁽²⁰⁾ Mr. Lee E. Geyer, of California, moved to strike out the last two words of a pending bill and then described in critical terms the personal characteristics of another Member while on the floor. The critical words were demanded to be taken down, the Committee of the Whole rose, and the words were reported to the House. Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, ruled that the words objected to violated the rules of the House because directed to personality.

Mr. John C. Schafer, of Wisconsin, to whom Mr. Geyer's objectionable remarks had referred, then asked if the words could not be withdrawn by unanimous consent since Mr. Geyer was "just carried away by the debate." The Speaker responded that the words could so be withdrawn, and Mr. Geyer was granted unanimous consent to withdraw the words in question.

The Committee resumed its sitting and Chairman Frank H. Buck, of California, then ruled that the granting of the unanimous-consent request permitted Mr. Geyer to proceed in order without a motion provided his time had not expired:

20. 84 CONG. REC. 2871, 76th Cong. 1st Sess.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from California is recognized for 3½ minutes.

MR. [JAMES W.] MOTT [of Oregon]: Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN: Does the gentleman from California yield for a parliamentary inquiry?

MR. GEYER of California: I do not yield, Mr. Chairman.

MR. MOTT: A point of order, Mr. Chairman.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state it.

MR. MOTT: As I understand, Mr. Chairman, the proceeding just had takes the gentleman off the floor, and he may proceed only by unanimous consent.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair may state that, by unanimous consent, the House permitted the gentleman to withdraw his words. That leaves the gentleman in the position he was before the words were uttered.

The gentleman from California will proceed.

MR. MOTT: Mr. Chairman, a further parliamentary inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN: Does the gentleman yield for a parliamentary inquiry?

MR. GEYER of California: I do not care to yield for another one, Mr. Chairman.

MR. MOTT: A point of order, Mr. Chairman.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state it.

MR. MOTT: Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the time of the gentleman has expired.

THE CHAIRMAN: The time of the gentleman has not expired. The point of order is overruled.

Consent of House To Proceed in Order

§ 52.4 Where a Member is called to order for words spoken in debate, and such words are held unparliamentary, he may not proceed without the consent of the House.

On Oct. 31, 1963,⁽¹⁾ Mr. Edgar Franklin Foreman, of Texas, was called to order for referring to another Member of the House as a "pinko." Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, ruled that "to characterize any Member of the House as a 'pinko' is in violation of the rules."

Objection was then made to unanimous-consent requests to explain the remarks objected to and to allow Mr. Foreman to proceed in order:

MR. [BRUCE R.] ALGER [of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, I ask to be recognized.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Alger].

1. 109 CONG. REC. 20742, 88th Cong. 1st Sess.

MR. ALGER: Mr. Speaker, I have a copy of the statement the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Foreman] was attempting to deliver. If I understand this copy which he has not been permitted to continue with, the gentleman from Texas was just about to add something which would make the gentleman's objection to what he has had to say really out of order, if he knew what next followed.

THE SPEAKER: Does the gentleman ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute?

MR. ALGER: I do, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

MR. [JOHN J.] ROONEY of New York: Mr. Speaker, I object.

MR. [CHARLES A.] HALLECK [of Indiana]: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.

THE SPEAKER: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

MR. HALLECK: Mr. Speaker, I desire to propound a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state it.

MR. HALLECK: Mr. Speaker, I understand that the ruling of the Chair was that the use of the word "pinko" involves a violation of the rules of the House.

THE SPEAKER: That is correct.

MR. HALLECK: Under those circumstances may not the gentleman from Texas be permitted to continue with the balance of his statement?

THE SPEAKER: Only by permission of the House.

MR. HALLECK: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Foreman] be permitted to continue with the balance of his statement.

THE SPEAKER: In order?

MR. HALLECK: Yes, sir.

THE SPEAKER: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

MR. ROONEY of New York: Mr. Speaker, I object.

On Feb. 22, 1945,⁽²⁾ Mr. Frank E. Hook, of Michigan, was called to order for using blasphemous words in debate in reference to another Member. After Speaker Pro Tempore Robert Ramspeck, of Georgia, ruled that the words were a violation of the rules of the House and the House ordered them stricken from the Record, Mr. Hook sought recognition to propose a parliamentary inquiry. The Speaker Pro Tempore ruled that Mr. Hook was required to take his seat and could not proceed in debate without the permission of the House:

MR. HOOK: Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a parliamentary inquiry?

MR. [JOHN E.] RANKIN [of Mississippi]: Mr. Speaker, a point of order. The Member from Michigan [Mr. Hook] must keep his seat the rest of the day and keep his mouth shut, under the Rules of the House.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Hoffman] will proceed.

2. 91 CONG. REC. 1371, 1372, 79th Cong. 1st Sess.

MR. RANKIN: Mr. Speaker, my point of order must be ruled on. I am speaking about the Member from Michigan [Mr. Hook] on my left. He has just said he used the word "—— liar," and I do not intend for him to speak in this House again today.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair sustains the point of order made by the gentleman from Mississippi. That is the rule. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Hook] will be seated.

§ 52.5 A Member whose words are taken down and ruled out of order may not again proceed on the same day (even for a previously granted special order) without consent of the House.

On Jan. 29, 1946,⁽³⁾ Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, demanded that words used in debate referring to certain Senators by Mr. Emanuel Celler, of New York, be taken down. The words were reported to the House. Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, recognized Mr. Celler, over the objection of Mr. Rankin, to ask unanimous consent to withdraw the remarks objected to. Mr. Rankin objected to that request, and the Speaker held that the words uttered by Mr. Celler were unparliamentary in referring to the action of the membership of another body.

Parliamentarian's Note: Although Mr. Celler had a special order to address the House later in the day the Speaker did not recognize him, thereby holding in effect that Mr. Celler could not again proceed that day without the consent of the House.

On Aug. 14, 1967,⁽⁴⁾ certain words used in debate by Mr. F. Edward Hébert, of Louisiana, accusing another Member of having prejudicial and bigoted views were demanded to be taken down. Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, ruled that the words used were a breach of the rules of the House.

The Speaker then stated as follows: "Without objection, the gentleman from Louisiana is recognized for the remainder of his one minute and the words will be stricken." There was no objection, and Mr. Hébert concluded his remarks. Further debate took place, and Mr. Hébert delivered remarks in response to an inquiry by another Member. Mr. William F. Ryan, of New York, then stated a point of order that Mr. Hébert had lost the right to proceed in debate on the same day, his remarks having been ruled out of order. The Speaker overruled the point of order, since no objection had been voiced to the unanimous-consent request that Mr. Hébert be allowed to proceed in order.⁽⁵⁾

§ 52.6 A Member, having been called to order for words spoken in debate and those words having been held unparliamentary, may not proceed without the permission of the House.

On Aug. 21, 1974,⁽⁶⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House:

MR. [THOMAS P.] O'NEILL [Jr., of Massachusetts]: Mr. Speaker, I take this time so I may direct my remarks to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Bauman). . . .

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, I demand that the gentleman's words be taken down.

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁷⁾ The gentleman demands that the words be taken down. . . .

The Clerk will report the words objected to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. O'Neill. Mr. Speaker, I take this time so I may direct my remarks to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Bauman).

Yesterday, by mutual consent of the leadership on both sides of the aisle and by the Members of the Judiciary Committee, I offered to this House a resolution. At the completion of the resolution, Mr. Speaker, I asked that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to extend their remarks and it was objected to, Mr. Speaker, by the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Bauman). He gave a reason at that particular time.

I told him that I thought he should have cleared it with the leadership on his own side of the aisle; but nevertheless, Mr. Speaker, when all the Members had left last night, the gentleman came to the well and asked unanimous consent of the then Speaker of the House who was sitting there, if he may insert his remarks in the Record, with unanimous consent, following the remarks where he had objected. . . .

I just want to say that I think in my opinion it was a cheap, sneaky, sly way to operate.

THE SPEAKER: The words in the last sentence are not parliamentary. Without objection, the offending words will be stricken from the Record.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would only like to say to the gentleman from Massachusetts and to the House that as for the gentleman from Massachusetts, I can understand his concern about my objection yesterday. It was the only possible way in which I or any other Member could have actually spoken on the resolution pending.

If he will look at the page numbers he cited, he will find subsequent to that, that the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Devine), the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. Dennis), and the gentleman from California (Mr. Wiggins), all in my presence asked permission and did extend their remarks. And, of course, the gentleman from Massachusetts got 5 legislative days to extend on his special order. I did not object to any of these requests.

Philip P. Campbell (Kans.), held that a Member called to order was not precluded from demanding the yeas and nays, and stated that in his opinion the disability from debate remained only until the disposition of the pending question.

6. 120 CONG. REC. 29652, 29653, 93d Cong. 2d Sess.

7. Carl Albert (Okla.).

MR. O'NEILL: Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield on that point?

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Massachusetts cannot proceed at this point. . . .

Is there objection? . . .

MR. [WAYNE L.] HAYS [of Ohio]: Mr. Speaker, I do object. . . .

MR. [B. F.] SISK [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Sisk moves that the words of the gentleman from Massachusetts, Mr. O'Neill, be stricken from the Record.

MR. SISK: Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion.

The previous question was ordered.

THE SPEAKER: The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California.

The motion was agreed to.

§ 52.7 A Member may be allowed to proceed in order by motion or by unanimous consent where the Speaker has ruled that words spoken by the Member in debate were unparliamentary.

On Mar. 24, 1961,⁽⁸⁾ Mr. Neal Smith, of Iowa, referred in debate to the "Goldwater-Ayres bill because it is an example of exempting multimillion dollar stores in Arizona" [Where Goldwater was the name of a Senator from Arizona]. Mr. Thomas B. Curtis, of ⁸ 107 CONG. REC. 4780, 87th Cong. 1st Sess.

Missouri, demanded that the words be taken down, the Committee of the Whole arose, and the words were reported to the House. Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that the words were out of order as "a reference to a member of the other body by name." Speaker Rayburn then ruled that the House could by unanimous consent permit the Member called to order to proceed in order:

MR. [JAMES] ROOSEVELT [of California]: Would it be in order at this time to ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Iowa be allowed to proceed in order?

THE SPEAKER: It would.

MR. [CARROLL D.] KEARNS [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I object to that.

THE SPEAKER: Let the Chair first state the request.

Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California that the gentleman from Iowa be allowed to proceed in order?

MR. CURTIS of Missouri: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state it.

MR. CURTIS of Missouri: The ruling means that these words will be stricken from the Record?

THE SPEAKER: If a motion is made to strike them from the Record.

MR. CURTIS of Missouri: I would make such a motion and then I would not object.

THE SPEAKER: The question is on the motion.

The motion was agreed to.

THE SPEAKER: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California that the gentleman from Iowa be allowed to proceed in order?

There was no objection.

On Apr. 19, 1934,⁽⁹⁾ certain words used in the Committee of the Whole in reference to another Member were demanded to be taken down. The Committee arose, the words were reported to the House, and Speaker Henry T. Rainey, of Illinois, ruled the words objectionable as impugning the motives of another Member. The House agreed to a motion to strike the words from the Record. The Speaker then ruled that a motion to allow the Member called to order to proceed could be made:

MR. [WRIGHT] PATMAN [of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, I move that the gentleman from Texas be allowed to proceed in order.

MR. [JOHN] TABER [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, should not that motion be made in the Committee rather than in the House?

MR. PATMAN: It can be made either in the House or in the Committee. The motion was agreed to.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair has now permitted the gentleman from Texas to proceed in order in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

The Committee will resume its session. . . .

9. 78 CONG. REC. 6947, 6948, 73d Cong. 2d Sess.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁰⁾ The gentleman from Texas is recognized to proceed in order.

§ 52.8 A Member having uttered objectionable words in debate and such words having been ruled unparliamentary, the Chair may recognize the Member to proceed in order by unanimous consent.

On Aug. 14, 1967,⁽¹¹⁾ certain words used in debate by Mr. F. Edward Hébert, of Louisiana, accusing another Member of having prejudicial and bigoted views were demanded to be taken down. Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, ruled that the words used were a breach of the rules of the House.

The Speaker then stated as follows: "Without objection, the gentleman from Louisiana is recognized for the remainder of his one minute and the words will be stricken." There was no objection, and Mr. Hébert concluded his remarks.

Thereafter, Mr. Hébert delivered some remarks in debate in response to another Member. The Speaker ruled that he had the right to proceed in order pursuant to the unanimous-consent request:

10. William J. Sears (Fla.).

11. 113 CONG. REC. 22443, 22444, 90th Cong. 1st Sess.

MR. [WILLIAM F.] RYAN [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Louisiana is out of order. His words have been taken down, and the Speaker has ruled that they were of an unparliamentary nature.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair has already recognized the gentleman without objection. The gentleman from Louisiana is properly addressing the House. The point of order is overruled.

Motion To Proceed in Order

§ 52.9 A motion that a Member be permitted to proceed in order is a privileged motion after the Chair has held the Member to be out of order.

On June 7, 1933,⁽¹²⁾ Mr. Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, referred to another Member of the House, Bertrand H. Snell, of New York, critically and by name in debate. Mr. Frederick R. Lehlbach, of New Jersey, demanded that the words be taken down, and Speaker Henry T. Rainey, of Illinois, ruled that the words were a violation of the rules of the House in that they referred to a Member by name and held him up to ridicule.

Mr. Rankin then moved that Mr. Blanton be permitted to proceed in order and the question was immediately put on the motion.

§ 52.10 After words taken down in debate in Committee of the Whole have been reported to the House and ruled out of order by the Speaker, a privileged motion that the Member whose words were ruled out of order be permitted to proceed in order may be made.

12. 77 CONG. REC. 5203-05, 73d Cong. 1st Sess.

During consideration of the Department of Education Organization Act of 1979 (H.R. 2444) in the Committee of the Whole, certain words used in debate were reported to the House, the Speaker ruled on those words and a motion to allow the Member whose words were ruled out of order to proceed in order was agreed to. The proceedings of June 12, 1979,⁽¹³⁾ were as follows:

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁴⁾ The Clerk will report the words objected to.

The Clerk read as follows:

MR. [HENRY B.] GONZALEZ [of Texas]: . . . The insidiousness of the amendment is compounded by the sponsor's deceptive—I should say hypocritical—presentation of this amendment, disguising it as a quota prohibition.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair is ready to rule.

The Chair, having read the references concerning deception and hypocrisy, will state that there have been previous opinions by the Chair that there is nothing wrong with using the word, “deceptive,” or the word, “hypocritical,” in characterizing an amendment’s effect but when a Member so characterizes the motivation of a Member in offering an amendment that is not in order.

13. 125 CONG. REC. 14461, 96th Cong. 1st Sess.

14. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

Consequently, the words in the last sentence read by the Clerk are unparliamentary and without objection, the offensive words are stricken from the Record. . . .

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Brooks).

MR. [JACK] BROOKS [of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, I move that the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Gonzalez) be allowed to proceed in order.

The motion was agreed to.

THE SPEAKER: The Committee will resume its sitting.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill, H.R. 2444, with Mr. Nedzi in the chair.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁵⁾ The gentleman from Texas (Mr. Gonzalez) has the floor, and the gentleman will proceed in order.

§ 52.11 While clause 4 of Rule XIV provides that a Member whose words are ruled out of order may not automatically proceed in debate, the precedents of the House authorize a motion to permit the offending Member to proceed in order.

On May 9, 1990,⁽¹⁶⁾ it was demonstrated that the motion that a

16. 136 CONG. REC. 9828, 9829, 101st Cong. 2d Sess.

Member ruled out of order for words spoken in debate be permitted to proceed in order is not inconsistent with the prohibition in clause 4 of Rule XIV that the offending Member may not automatically proceed, since it permits the House to determine the extent of the sanction for the breach of order. The proceedings in the House were as follows:

(Mr. Torricelli asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

MR. [ROBERT G.] TORRICELLI [of New Jersey]: Mr. Speaker, you heard it here today: Republican Member after Republican Member taking the floor, predicting that the President will never raise taxes.

I am here to predict that he will raise taxes. And, Mr. Speaker, we are both right because no doubt, for the President’s friends, for those of privilege in America, he will never raise taxes.

But for you and for me and for the overwhelming majority of Americans, he is—he says that he is going to, and he is about doing it. It isn’t, Mr. Speaker, that the President is intellectually dishonest, though indeed in the last election he was. It is about the fact that he has a $500 billion—

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I ask that the gentleman’s words be taken down.

The words in question were held to be unparliamentary, the Speaker Pro Tempore⁽¹⁷⁾ stating as follows:

17. John P. Murtha (Pa.).

In referring to the President during debate a Member shall abstain from “terms of approbrium,” such as calling the President a “liar”—V, 5094, VIII, 2498.

Without objection the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Torricelli] may proceed in order.

[Objection was heard.]

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Does any Member move that the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. Torricelli] may proceed in order? . . .

MR. [SIDNEY R.] YATES [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, I make that motion.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Yates]. . . .

So the motion was agreed to. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: . . . The House has voted to allow the gentleman to proceed in order. The gentleman has 16 seconds remaining. . . .

MR. WALKER: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Pennsylvania will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. WALKER: If I understand correctly what just happened in the course of events, it was that the Chair did rule that the gentleman’s words were inappropriate, is that correct?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair did so rule.

MR. WALKER: And the penalty for such a ruling would normally be that the gentleman would not be allowed to speak for the rest of the day in the House Chamber, is that not correct?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The House permitted him to proceed in order.

MR. WALKER: Under the rules, Mr. Speaker, the rules state that someone having had the Chair so rule is not permitted to speak in the House for the rest of the day, is that not correct?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman is correct.

MR. WALKER: So by taking the action which the party did a few minutes ago, the majority party did, what they did was basically overrule the rules with regard to the penalty for having words taken down.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The motion to allow the gentleman to proceed is a proper parliamentary motion under the same rule.

MR. WALKER: Yes. I understand. But the effect of the action, the effect of the motion, was to override the rules of the House.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Under the rules of the House the Chair cannot say that one part of the rule has precedence over the practice of the House paramount to that rule.

MR. WALKER: Well, I have a further parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. WALKER: If the motion had not been made, the gentleman would not have been permitted to speak for the rest of the day, is that correct?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman is correct.

MR. WALKER: So the effect of the motion was to allow the gentleman to do something which the rules would otherwise not permit him.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The House has followed the normal practice. There are two aspects to the rule. The House proceeded under the rules, and both procedures are proper. The House voted and the gentleman was allowed to proceed for 16 seconds.

MR. WALKER: I have a further parliamentary inquiry. So in other words what the Chair is saying is that the will of the majority can prevail, even though it is over and above the rules that are adopted by the—

MR. YATES: Mr. Speaker, regular order.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Yates] is absolutely correct. That is not a parliamentary inquiry.

Parliamentarian's Note: Where the House has voted to allow a Member called to order to proceed in order, the offending Member is recognized for the remainder of his debate time, as indicated above.

§ 52.12 When a Member is called to order for words used in debate, he may be permitted to proceed in order by unanimous consent, or by a motion “that the gentleman be allowed to proceed in order” which may be stated on the initiative of the Chair.

The proceedings of Mar. 29, 1995,⁽¹⁸⁾ where Speaker Pro Tempore Peter G. Torkildsen, of Massachusetts, took the initiative in moving that a Member called to order for words used in debate be permitted to proceed in order, were as follows:

18. 141 CONG. REC. p. ____, 104th Cong. 1st Sess.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: . . . The Clerk will report the words objected to in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

The Clerk read as follows:

I had specific conversation with the gentleman from Michigan, and he stated to me very clearly that it is his intention to vote against this bill on final. Now, if that is not a cynical manipulation and exploitation of the American public, then what is? What could be more cynical? What could be more hypocritical?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: In the opinion of the Chair, ascribing hypocrisy to another Member has been ruled out of order in the past, and is unparliamentary.

Without objection, the words are stricken from the record.

There was no objection.

Without objection, the gentleman may proceed in order.

MR. [JOHN D.] DINGELL [of Michigan]: Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker. I have been waiting for an apology from the gentleman. I know he wants to apologize and does not want to leave these things on the record, because I am sure he realizes that it reflects unfavorably upon him, as it does upon me, so I am waiting for the apology. I know the gentleman wants to give it to me.

MR. [MARTIN R.] HOKE [of Ohio]: Mr. Dingell, I very clearly stated that I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my words, and I requested that that be done. You objected to that.

I have told you on the Record that I will not apologize.

MR. DINGELL: Mr. Speaker. I object.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Objection is heard.

The question is: Shall the gentleman be allowed to proceed in order?

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

MR. [JOHN] CONYERS [Jr., of Michigan]: Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the grounds that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 212, nays 197, answered “present” 2, not voting 23, as follows: . . .

So the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Hoke] was allowed to proceed in order.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

MR. [RICHARD J.] DURBIN [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state the nature of his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. DURBIN: Mr. Speaker, I would like the Chair to clarify the vote that was just taken. It is my understanding that words were taken down, words uttered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Hoke] and those words were determined by the Speaker to be out of order. At which point, if I recall correctly, the words were stricken, and the Chair stated a unanimous-consent request that the gentleman be able to proceed.

There was objection to that unanimous-consent request, at which point, if I am not mistaken, the Chair then stated a motion to give the gentleman the opportunity to proceed and speak.

Is my recollection correct, is that the motion which we just voted on?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman’s recollection is correct.

MR. DURBIN: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask this of the Chair then; it is my understanding that the Chair has the right under the rules to make a unanimous-consent request that an individual be allowed to proceed after his words have been stricken, but in this case I wonder if it is the prerogative of the Chair to make such a motion, or whether it should have been made by a Member of the body?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair has the right to entertain unanimous-consent requests. Under previous rulings of the Chair in 1991, the Chair does have the right to put that question to the body.

MR. DURBIN: Beyond the unanimous-consent request?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Beyond the unanimous-consent request, since it is ultimately the House’s decision, no Member sought to question the ruling of the Chair, the question was put to the House.

Parliamentarian’s Note: While under section 394 of Jefferson’s Manual no motion can be made without rising and addressing the Chair (5 Hinds’ Precedents §§4984, 4985), in the circumstance where the House must decide whether to permit a Member who has been ruled out of order in debate to proceed in order, the Speaker has put that question to a vote without necessarily entertaining a motion from the floor. See § 52.13, infra.

§ 52.13 The motion to permit a Member called to order to proceed in order is debatable (and as such may be laid on the table under clause 4 of Rule XVI).

As demonstrated by the proceedings of Oct. 8, 1991,⁽¹⁹⁾ the motion “shall (a Member) be permitted to proceed in order?” may be put by the Chair sua sponte and is debatable under the hour rule. Since the motion is debatable, it is subject to the motion to table. Where the Chair states the motion on his own initiative, the Chair has discretion in recognition of a Member to control one hour of debate. Debate is limited to the question of whether to permit the offending Member to proceed in order. Finally, adoption of the motion permits the offending Member to proceed in order for the remainder of his/her debate time.

MS. [ROSA L.] DELAURO [of Connecticut]: Mr. Speaker, the Senate is about to embark on a misguided journey.

MR. [F. JAMES] SENSENBRENNER [Jr., of Wisconsin]: Mr. Speaker, point of order.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽²⁰⁾ The gentlewoman will refrain from direct reference to the other body.

MS. DELAURO: How can there be a vote to place Judge Thomas in a lifetime appointment to the Supreme Court under this cloud? To be sure, a person is innocent until proven guilty, but without a full and public hearing about the veracity of these very serious charges of sexual harassment, a decision this evening to elevate Judge Thomas to the Supreme Court casts doubt on the entire process.

MR. SENSENBRENNER: Mr. Speaker, I demand the gentlewoman's words be taken down.

MS. DELAURO: The actions of the Committee on the Judiciary say loud and clear—

MR. SENSENBRENNER: Mr. Speaker, I demand the words of the gentlewoman be taken down.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentlewoman will suspend.

The Chair has repeatedly asked Members to refrain from specific reference to the other body and would admonish the gentlewoman to do so.

Does the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Sensenbrenner] insist on his request?

MR. SENSENBRENNER: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I do. I think the precedent ought to be set and put in the precedents of the House on what the extent of the prohibition against discussing the proceedings in the other body are.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair's rulings previously today are consistent with and constitute the precedents of the House. The Chair

¹⁹. See 137 CONG. REC. 25757–25760, 102d Cong. 1st Sess.

²⁰. Michael R. McNulty (N.Y.).

will insist upon compliance with those precedents.

Under those circumstances, does the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Sensenbrenner] still insist?

MR. SENSENBRENNER: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I do.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Clerk will report the words that are objected to. . . .

The Clerk read as follows:

. . . to be sure a person is innocent until proven guilty, but without a full and public hearing about these very serious charges a decision this evening to elevate Judge Thomas to the Supreme Court casts doubt on the entire process.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁾ It is the Chair's opinion that the words inevitably relate to an action to be taken by the Senate with respect to a nomination by the President subject to the confirmation of the Senate and, accordingly, are not in order, and the words, accordingly without objection, will be stricken from the Record.

There was no objection.

Without objection the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Ms. DeLauro] may proceed in order.

MR. SENSENBRENNER: Mr. Speaker, I object.

THE SPEAKER: Objection is heard.

The question is: Shall the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Ms. DeLauro] be permitted to proceed in order?

MR. SENSENBRENNER: Mr. Speaker, I offer a preferential motion.

THE SPEAKER: The Clerk will report the preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Sensenbrenner moves to table the motion.

THE SPEAKER: The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. Sensenbrenner] to lay on the table the motion to proceed in order. . . .

So the motion to table was rejected.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table. . . .

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: This is my parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker: Is the motion now before the House a motion which is debatable?

THE SPEAKER: The motion now before the House is subject to debate, the gentleman is correct, within the narrow limits of the motion.

MR. WALKER: Mr. Speaker, who would control the time?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair intends to recognize the majority leader, Mr. Gephardt, to control the time, since the Chair put the question sue sponte on the motion when objection was heard.

MR. WALKER: And the subject matter would be strictly—

THE SPEAKER: The question is whether the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Ms. DeLauro] should be permitted to proceed in order.

MR. WALKER: I thank the Chair.

If the gentlewoman was permitted to proceed in order, would she be allowed to continue the remarks that she was engaged in at the time that she was called to order by the Chair?

THE SPEAKER: The gentlewoman from Connecticut will be permitted to proceed in order as long as her remarks are in order. Members are allowed to proceed as long as their remarks are in order. . . .

1. Thomas S. Foley (Wash.).

The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Gephardt] is recognized for 1 hour. . . .

MR. [RICHARD A.] GEPHARDT [of Missouri]: . . . Mr. Speaker, I would say to the Members that the resolution we have before us makes it clear that the gentlewoman's words are to be taken down. The resolution calls for her being allowed to proceed with her statement. . . .

MR. WALKER: . . . Mr. Speaker, our concern I think is that we are developing a pattern where the taking down of words carries with it no penalty. I think the gentleman from Pennsylvania is correct in stating that taking down of words is supposed to carry with it the penalty that the Member of Congress who utters the unparliamentary words is to be taken off their feet for the rest of that legislative day. . . .

MR. GEPHARDT: The motion that is in front of us is to take words down and to proceed, obviously with the admonition that the precedents which are now clear will be followed.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion.

THE SPEAKER: Without objection, the previous question is ordered.

There was no objection.

THE SPEAKER: The question is, Will the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Ms. DeLauro] be allowed to proceed in order?

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

MR. SENSENBRENNER: Mr. Speaker, I demand a recorded vote.

A recorded vote was ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—ayes 260, noes 145, answered "present" 2, not voting 26. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentlewoman from Connecticut is recognized for the balance of her 1 minute which shall constitute 28 seconds.

MS. DELAURO: I thank the Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, allegations of sexual harassment are serious charges which deserve serious consideration. The Justices of the Supreme Court must demonstrate respect for law and for individual rights. To impugn the integrity of Professor Hill, to elevate that of Judge Thomas, is not appropriate nor is it a credible tactic. The American people deserve more than a dismissal of Professor Hill's charges. They deserve to know the truth.

Mr. Speaker, let us take the time to uncover the truth.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The time of the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Ms. DeLauro] has expired.

Parliamentarian's Note: While clause 4 of Rule XIV suggests that a Member whose words are ruled out of order may not automatically proceed in debate, traditionally the Speaker's ruling is sufficient sanction and the chastized Member is permitted to proceed in order by unanimous consent; however the House may dictate the further consequences of the ruling by proper motions under clauses 4 or 5 of Rule XIV to strike the unparliamentary remarks from the Record and to proceed in order.

Striking Words From Record§ 52.14 Where a unanimous-consent request that a Member be permitted to proceed in order is pending, the Speaker having held certain words unparliamentary, a motion to strike those words from the Record is in order.

On Mar. 24, 1961,⁽²⁾ certain words used in debate in the Committee of the Whole and objected to were reported to the House. Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that the words were a violation of the rules of the House. A unanimous-consent request that the Member called to order be allowed to proceed in order was then made and stated by the Chair. Pending the request, a parliamentary inquiry was stated and Speaker Rayburn ruled that pending the unanimous-consent request a motion to strike the words from the Record was in order:

MR. [JAMES] ROOSEVELT [of California]: Would it be in order at this time to ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Iowa be allowed to proceed in order?

THE SPEAKER: It would.

MR. [CARROLL D.] KEARNS [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I object to that.

THE SPEAKER: Let the Chair first state the request.

2. 107 CONG. REC. 4780, 87th Cong. 1st Sess.

Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California that the gentleman from Iowa be allowed to proceed in order?

MR. [THOMAS B.] CURTIS of Missouri: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state it.

MR. CURTIS of Missouri: The ruling means that these words will be stricken from the Record?

THE SPEAKER: If a motion is made to strike them from the Record.

MR. CURTIS of Missouri: I would make such a motion and then I would not object.

THE SPEAKER: The question is on the motion.

The motion was agreed to.

THE SPEAKER: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California that the gentleman from Iowa be allowed to proceed in order?

There was no objection.

Explanation by Member Called to Order§ 52.15 When a demand is made that the words of a Member be taken down, such Member may not debate the demand or explain his remarks absent special permission from the House.

On Mar. 24, 1961,⁽³⁾ words used in debate by Mr. Neal Smith, of Iowa, were demanded to be taken down. When Mr. Smith rose to object to the demand on the ground that he had not violated the rules of the House, Chairman Francis E. Walter, of Pennsylvania, ruled pursuant to a point of order that Mr. Smith was required to take his seat pursuant to a demand that his words be taken down.

On Oct. 9, 1940,⁽⁴⁾ Mr. Sol Bloom, of New York, objected to certain words used in debate by Mr. John C. Schafer, of Wisconsin, and demanded that they be taken down. When Mr. Schafer attempted to explain his remarks and to contend that he was proceeding in order, Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled pursuant to a point of order by Mr. Bloom that Mr. Schafer was required to take his seat.⁽⁵⁾

§ 52.16 When words are taken down, the Speaker may, without objection, permit the offending Member to explain his words, following which the Speaker may make his final ruling on whether the remarks are in violation of the rules.

H. Dent, of Pennsylvania, were demanded to be taken down by Mr. John N. Erlenborn, of Illinois, and reported to the House, whereupon Speaker Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, ruled them out of order. The Speaker allowed Mr. Dent, by unanimous consent, to explain the objectionable words and on the basis of the explanation ruled that the words were not in fact unparliamentary:

THE SPEAKER: The Clerk will report the words objected to.

The Clerk read as follows:

MR. DENT: The second lie which is deliberate, in my opinion, and ought not to be brought back time after time into this controversy, is that there is no such thing—

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will state that the words "second lie" are not parliamentary, and without objection will be stricken from the Record.

MR. DENT: Mr. Speaker, what part of that was being stricken?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will state that the words are "the second lie."

MR. DENT: Mr. Speaker, I have not said what the second lie is. How can you strike it?

THE SPEAKER: The manner in which the gentleman referred to the words in the following statement: "the second lie which is deliberate." Without objection, 76th Cong. 3d Sess., Feb. 1, 1940, in which the Chair overruled a point of order that a Member was quoting testimony taken before an executive session of a committee, upon the Member's assurance that he was not.

the gentleman may explain his statement.

MR. DENT: But I have not said what the lie is. I have not accused anybody here of lying. I have accused the second lie of being propagandized all over the State, and through different individuals, and the third lie and the fourth lie. I have not accused the gentleman. There have been many persons on this floor—not many on the floor—but many persons who have put out the word that this deliberately wipes out X-rays as a means of determining pneumoconiosis, and the bill does not do that. And if it does not do that it is all untrue.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will request the gentleman from Pennsylvania to state whether the gentleman was referring to any Member of the Congress.

MR. DENT: Absolutely not, Mr. Speaker. I will be glad to have that cleared up. But I have not said or named a Member's name yet.

THE SPEAKER: If the gentleman was not referring to a Member of the House—

MR. DENT: I was not. I was referring to two lies, and they are lies, and they have been put out all over the State in letters and newspaper items.

THE SPEAKER: But the gentleman from Pennsylvania states that he was not referring to a Member of the House?

MR. DENT: The Record will show that I did not refer to a Member of the House.

THE SPEAKER: Does the gentleman state again that he was not referring to a Member of the House?

MR. DENT: Yes; if I said it, it would have been in the Record.

THE SPEAKER: Then the Chair will state that the gentleman's words are not unparliamentary, and the Committee will resume its sitting.⁽⁷⁾

Member Cannot Proceed for Balance of Day

§ 52.17 Where unparliamentary words used in debate have been stricken from the Record, the offending Member may be permitted to proceed in order by unanimous consent or by motion; but a Member who is not permitted by the House to proceed in order loses the floor and may not participate in debate on the same day even in time yielded to him by another Member.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Mar. 19, 1985:⁽⁸⁾

MR. [HARRY] REID [of Nevada]: Mr. Speaker, on February 26 of this year one of my constituents traveled nearly 3,000 miles to Washington specifically to see me about a critical issue, but he did not. . . . I was called away from something very important to become captive, once again, to an abusive practice, an abuse inflicted upon the entire House of Representatives and the legislative process itself, voting on the Journal.

Mr. Reid made further comments, indicated below, which were the subject of a demand that the words be taken down:

MR. [VIN] WEBER [of Minnesota]: Mr. Speaker, I demand that the gentleman's words be taken down. . . .

Mr. Speaker, would it be in order, in view of the gentleman's statement a minute ago, for me to ask unanimous consent that he be permitted to withdraw his words?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁹⁾ Yes. The Chair would entertain such a motion. . . .

MR. REID: Mr. Speaker, I respectfully submit that I appreciate the request of the gentleman from Minnesota, but I do not think I said anything offensive, and I would ask for a ruling on that.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will rule.

The Clerk will report the words.

The Clerk read as follows:

One of the most important things to remember is that those Members who call for these wasteful votes are led by my distinguished colleague from Pennsylvania, Mr. Walker, who speaks constantly of the need to do away with government waste, and he is literally speaking out of both sides of his mouth.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would announce that it is not proper to impugn the motive of another Member. We have precedents here in the House. Mr. Knutson, of Minnesota: "I cannot believe that the gentleman from Mississippi is sincere in what he has just said." And that was held not in order on November 2, 1942.

The Chair must state that the words of the gentleman from Nevada have, in his opinion, an unparliamentary connotation and shall be stricken.

Without objection, the gentleman from Nevada may proceed. Do I hear an objection?

MR. WEBER: Yes, Mr. Speaker. . . .

Would the Chair clarify the parliamentary situation in which the gentleman from Nevada finds himself?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: . . . The Chair has ruled that the gentleman from Nevada misspoke on the words "speaking out of both sides of his mouth," and therefore those words shall be stricken.

The Member only can proceed by permission of the House. . . .

MR. [THOMAS S.] FOLEY [of Washington]: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Nevada may be permitted to proceed.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Washington that the gentleman from Nevada be allowed to finish his remarks?

MR. [DANIEL E.] LUNGREN [of California]: Reserving the right to object—

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from California reserves the right to object. . . .

Let the Chair restate what has occurred here.

9. Kenneth J. Gray (Ill.).

The gentleman has propounded a parliamentary inquiry, and the Chair has responded that the Chair has ruled that those words are offensive and shall be stricken. It is not a matter of further debate.

MR. LUNGREN: I understand. I am still proceeding under my reservation, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The question occurs now on whether or not the gentleman is allowed to proceed with the understanding that those words have been stricken. . . .

MR. LUNGREN: . . . Mr. Speaker, under my reservation, I ask the gentleman at this point in time whether he would agree to withdraw his remarks. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: It is not in the parliamentary procedures or rules of the House for any further debate on this matter. The Chair has ruled affirmatively that the words shall be stricken.

The only question now before this House is whether or not—

MR. LUNGREN: Mr. Speaker, you have constrained me to object, and I do object at this time. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Objection is heard.

Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. Alexander) is recognized for 5 minutes. . . .

MR. [WILLIAM V.] ALEXANDER [of Arkansas]: Mr. Speaker, I recognize the gentleman from Nevada (Mr. Reid). I yield to the gentleman from Nevada. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman cannot be yielded to at this time. . . .

Is there objection to the gentleman from Arkansas yielding further to the gentleman from Nevada?

MR. ALEXANDER: . . . Do I not have a right to yield to any Member of this House? . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will rule that if a Member in this particular case has been precluded from continuing, he cannot be yielded to on this subject without unanimous consent.

If the gentleman wants to propound the unanimous-consent request, and hearing no objection, he could yield.

Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arkansas to yield to the gentleman from Nevada? . . .

MR. LUNGREN: . . . I will be constrained to object, and I do object at this time. . . .

MR. ALEXANDER: Mr. Speaker, I have not announced the subject which I intend to address. How can the Chair rule against me yielding to another Member when the Chair does not know the subject that I intend to address?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would announce to the distinguished gentleman from Arkansas that, under the rules of the House, at any time a Member's words are taken down, under the rules he is not permitted on that particular legislative business day to speak to the House without permission of the body. An objection was heard to the unanimous-consent request. . . .

MR. WEBER: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Nevada (Mr. Reid) be allowed to proceed.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Minnesota?

There was no objection.

§ 52.18 While a Member who is held to have breached the rules of decorum in debate is presumptively disabled from further recognition on that day, by tradition the Speaker's ruling and any necessary expungement of the Record are deemed sufficient sanction, and by custom the chastened Member is permitted to proceed in order (usually by unanimous consent).

See the proceedings of July 29, 1994, discussed in § 48.13, supra.

G. REFERENCES TO HOUSE, COMMITTEES, OR MEMBERS

§ 53. Criticism of House or Party

In order that free debate not be hindered in the deliberations of the House, Members are permitted to voice critical opinions of Congress, of the House, and of the political parties.⁽¹⁰⁾ In this regard, a wider latitude is permitted Members today than in early Congresses.⁽¹¹⁾ However, critical opinions in debate of the House or of its membership may not extend to gross misstatements of motive⁽¹²⁾ or to descriptions employing language objectionable in itself.⁽¹³⁾

Congress

§ 53.1 Statements that are critical of Congress will not be ruled out of order for that reason alone; thus, a statement in debate claiming that the campaign expenses of Members were paid by certain interests was held not to be a personal reflection on any Member of the House and to be in order.

On Mar. 16, 1939,⁽¹⁴⁾ Mr. Francis D. Culkin, of New York, demanded that the following

11. In early Congresses it was held not in order to cast reflections on the House or its membership present or past, 5 Hinds' Precedents §§ 5132–5138, 5161, 5162, and the Speaker would intervene on his own initiative to prevent objectionable references. 5 Hinds' Precedents §§ 5132, 5137, 5163. words used in debate be taken down:

Mr. Chairman, I will tell you what is behind all this. You need not camouflage it. The Power Trust that paid a lot of campaign expenses last year. That is what is behind it.

The Committee rose and the words objected to were reported to the House whereupon Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, ruled that since the language was not a personal reflection upon any individual Member of the House, the words did not violate the rules or proprieties of debate.

On Sept. 25, 1961,⁽¹⁵⁾ Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, asked unanimous consent that at the conclusion of the business of the House he be permitted to proceed for five minutes on the topic "Is the Congress Mentally Ill?". Mr. Frank T. Bow, of Ohio, raised a parliamentary inquiry as to whether that was a proper subject for debate on the floor of the House, and Speaker Pro Tempore John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, declined to rule in advance as to whether the speech would be unparliamentary.

Political Parties

§ 53.2 A statement in debate referring to "irresponsible actions by members of the President's own party" was held in order as not reflecting on the character of any House Member.

15. 107 CONG. REC. 21466, 87th Cong. 1st Sess.

On Mar. 27, 1957,⁽¹⁶⁾ Mr. B. F. Sisk, of California, delivered the following words in debate which were demanded to be taken down:

I could not help but admire him [Mr. John E. Fogarty, of Rhode Island] for his courage and for his devotion to the American people to get up here time after time after time to defend the administration's budget against irresponsible actions by members of the President's own party.

Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that the words were not unparliamentary since they did not reflect on the character of any House Member. The Speaker added that objections to words in debate could reach the point where a Member could not criticize, thereby restricting debate in the House.

§ 53.3 A statement in debate referring to members of the Republican Conference as avoiding an issue and describing lynching as a "proper means of justice" was held to be in violation of the rules of debate.

16. 103 CONG. REC. 4557, 4558, 85th Cong. 1st Sess.

On July 26, 1951,⁽¹⁷⁾ Mr. Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, demanded that words used in debate by Mr. John J. Rooney, of New York, in reference to the Republican Conference be taken down. Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled as follows:

The Chair in every instance of this kind has been most liberal with the Member who uttered the words objected to, because he has always thought that great liberality must be indulged in so that we may have free and full debate. On very few occasions has the present occupant of the chair held that remarks were a violation of the rules of the House.

The Chair can hardly agree, however, that the words, applied to the meeting of the Republicans in caucus yesterday were quite proper.

Parliamentarian's Note: The words used, which were stricken from the Record, read as follows: "The way to handle the situation is to work up to it squarely, unashamedly, and straight forwardly, and not peek through keyholes, hide behind doors, and tremble at the first sign of opposition as you did yesterday [referring to the Republican Conference]; they are saying nothing less than lynching is a proper means of justice."

§ 53.4 It was not out of order to ask in debate whether it was a proper parliamentary inquiry to ask that a bill be printed in such a way that the Republicans could understand it.

On Mar. 31, 1938,⁽¹⁸⁾ Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, demanded that the following words used in debate by Mr. Thomas F. Ford, of California, be taken down: "Mr. Chairman, is it a parliamentary inquiry then to ask that the bill be reprinted in words of one syllable so that the Republicans can understand it?"

Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, ruled that the language was not objectionable under the House rules.

§ 53.5 A statement in debate that a Member was leading the Republican party in a policy of opportunism was held not to transgress the rules of the House or reflect upon the integrity of Members and therefore to be in order.

On Feb. 8, 1941,⁽¹⁹⁾ the following words used by Mr. John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, in debate were demanded to be taken down by Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan:

18. 83 CONG. REC. 4484, 4485, 75th Cong. 3d Sess.

19. 87 CONG. REC. 796, 77th Cong. 1st Sess.

The gentleman from New York who was leading the Republican Party in the policy of opportunism that is being engaged in in connection with a bill serious to the fate of our country relating to our national defense.

The Committee of the Whole rose and the words were reported to the House, where Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that the words did not reflect upon the integrity of any Members and were therefore not violative of the rules of the House.

§ 53.6 Reference in debate to the minority party as “having some motivation other than fully objective concern for the House in the timing of a resolution” and the assertion that the House could proceed with “greater dignity and honor” at another time, together with the disclaimer that the minority leader did not necessarily share that motivation, was held not to impugn the motives of any Member and to be parliamentary.

During consideration of House Resolution 578 (directing the Committee on Rules to make certain inquiries) on Feb. 13,

1980,⁽²⁰⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House:

MR. [RICHARD] BOLLING [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, I send to the desk a privileged resolution (H. Res. 578) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 578

Resolved, Whereas it was reported in the public press on February 9, 1980, that, “The House of Representatives this week lost a secret effort in court to obtain a ruling that congressmen do not have to respond to federal grand jury subpoenas for House records;” . . .

Therefore be it resolved, That the Committee on Rules be instructed to inquire into the truth or falsity of the newspaper account and promptly report back to the House its findings and any recommendations thereon. . . .

MR. BOLLING: . . . The gentleman from Missouri has not felt more strongly about a matter in a very long time than he does about this. . . . The gentleman from Missouri obviously has no difficulty with the content of the resolution and feels that he could in honor offer it. The gentleman from Missouri has a very, very strong feeling about the timing of the offering of this proposal by the minority, and the gentleman from Missouri has carefully differentiated between what he has said earlier about the minority leader and what he is now saying about the minority.

I fear me, and I do not suspect the gentleman from Arizona of having this view, I fear me that there is some motivation other than fully objective concern for the House in the timing of the resolution, not in the content. And that is the reason that the gentleman from Missouri took the unusual course of offering the minority's proposition. He feels that it is appropriate for the House, through the Rules Committee initially, to look into this matter. But he thinks it might be done with greater dignity, and one might say with greater honor, if it were not done at this particular time of confusion. . . .

20. 126 CONG. REC. 2768, 2769, 96th Cong. 2d Sess.

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, I demand that the words of the gentleman from Missouri be taken down. . . .

If the record is read back by the Clerk, I believe the Chair will find that the gentleman from Missouri referred to the motivation behind the offering of this resolution at this time and referred to the minority leader and the members of the minority party. Subsequent to that the gentleman from Missouri referred to that motivation being dishonorable. I think this falls within the rules of the House that clearly say that a Member of the House cannot question the motivation of other Members of the House in their actions. The gentleman from Missouri did refer to the minority leader, and all of the Members of the minority and their motivation.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁾ The Clerk will report the words. . . .

The gentleman from Missouri has referred in his remarks that he feels that it is appropriate for the House, through the Rules Committee, initially to look into this matter, and he thinks it might be done with greater dignity and, one might say, with greater honor if done by the committee or considered at another time.

The Chair, in its opinion, feels that he has not transgressed on the honor or the dignity of the minority party or the minority leader, and the point of order is not well taken.

The gentleman from Missouri.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, would the Chair address himself to the issue of motivation the gentleman from Missouri raised, as to whether that is a correct use of parliamentary language.

THE SPEAKER: In the opinion of the Chair the gentleman did not talk about or refer to the dishonor of any Member of the House, nor did he characterize the motives of any specific Member in an unparliamentary way.

The Chair repeats, the point of order is not well taken.

Stealing an Election

§ 53.7 In response to a parliamentary inquiry, the Chair indicated that it was not in order in debate to refer to an identifiable group of sitting Members as having committed a crime, such as "stealing" an election.

The prohibition in Rule XIV, clause 1,⁽²⁾ against Members' engaging in "personality" during debate, applies to allegations that an identifiable group of sitting

1. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

2. See House Rules and Manual § 749 (1995).

Members have committed a crime. Such application of the rule is shown by the proceedings of Feb. 27, 1985,⁽³⁾ in which a statement made by Mr. John Rowland, of Connecticut, as indicated below, concerning an allegedly “stolen” election, was the subject of a demand that the words be taken down:

MR. [ANDREW] JACOBS [Jr., of Indiana]: Mr. Speaker, I demand the gentleman’s words be taken down in that he said “stolen.”

THE CHAIRMAN: Words will be taken down.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁴⁾ The Clerk will read the words taken down. The Clerk read as follows:

The scary thing about it, as a person who served in the legislature for 4 years, and as a person who happens to be sitting as the youngest Member of Congress, I find it difficult that the first situation that we run into in this House, the first class project, as we may call it, is trying to retain a seat that has been stolen from the Republican side of the aisle, and I think it is rather frustrating.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Would the gentleman care to modify his remarks before the Chair rules?

MR. ROWLAND of Connecticut: Yes, I would, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: In what way does the gentleman care to modify?

MR. ROWLAND of Connecticut: I would like to ask unanimous consent

3. 131 CONG. REC. 3898, 3899, 99th Cong. 1st Sess.

4. Tommy F. Robinson (Ark.).

that the words objected to be withdrawn. . . .

The word “stolen,” Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Connecticut?

There was no objection. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Georgia is recognized.

MR. [NEWT] GINGRICH [of Georgia]: I would yield in just a moment, after asking the Chair if in fact Members were convinced an action were being taken which involved a word which was ruled by the Chair to be inappropriate, how could a Member report to the House on that action? Should we substitute the word “banana”? What is it one should say if in fact—not just as a joke, but if in fact—Members of the Republican side honestly believed strongly something is being done? In other words, is “unconstitutional” an acceptable term but “illegal” not acceptable? . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Simply put, Members should not accuse other Members of committing a crime. When the majority is accused of “stealing,” that may suggest illegality. Other words could be used but not those accusing Members of committing a crime.

MR. GINGRICH: What if one honestly believes, for a moment, that a crime is being committed? Would it in fact be against the rules—

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Members may not engage in personalities.

MR. GINGRICH: But he did not talk in personalities.

MR. ROWLAND of Connecticut: Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

MR. GINGRICH: I will be glad to yield to the gentleman.

MR. ROWLAND of Connecticut: I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I would simply point out that I did not refer to anybody stealing an election. I just referred to the frustration that we as freshmen are exhibiting and fearing as we go through the deliberations. I did not refer to anybody.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman seemed to refer to the majority of the House, that it had stolen the election.

§ 54. Criticism of Committees or Their Members

Although a Member may generally criticize the action or inaction of a House committee or subcommittee or a member thereof,⁽⁵⁾ he may not impugn the motives or honesty of committee members⁽⁶⁾ such as charging that a committee proceeding is motivated by a desire to violate House rules in order to defame a witness.⁽⁷⁾

Particular Allegations; Abuse of Committee Power

§ 54.1 Although improper charges of unlawful committee activity have been stricken from the Record, a Member in debate may generally criticize the actions of a committee, as by alleging an abuse of its powers.

On Jan. 17, 1949,⁽⁸⁾ Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, objected to the following language used in debate by Mr. Chet Holifield, of California, in reference to a House committee: “The gentleman from California [Mr. Havenner] has been the victim of the abusive, vicious, and irresponsible use of the power of a congressional committee twice.”

Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled as follows:

The Chair thinks that the gentleman would be going quite far afield if he said a Member of the House would not have the right to criticize the actions of a committee of the House. The gentleman from California will proceed in order.

On June 24, 1958,⁽⁹⁾ during a discussion on the floor of the House about the proceedings in a subcommittee hearing, allegations were made that the subcommittee was deliberately trying to defame certain individuals. The precise words (which do not appear in the Record) were: “There is no question but that this procedure is the very thing that the House sought to forbid in Rule XI, paragraph m. and o. [now Rule XI, clause 2(k)]. Indeed the purpose of the tactics of the subcommittee on this measure demonstrate that its real purpose was to use the forum of the subcommittee to defame and degrade a person.”

The words were objected to and taken down; and Speaker Rayburn held the words unparliamentary, stating:

The Chair thinks it is very clear that this is a reflection on a committee of the House of a very serious type and, therefore, holds that the language is not parliamentary.

The words were expunged by unanimous consent from the Congressional Record.

§ 54.2 A statement in debate charging an investigative committee with “unlawful prying” was held unparliamentary and on motion stricken from the Record.

On Apr. 16, 1946,⁽¹⁰⁾ the following words by Mr. Herman P. Kopplemann, of Connecticut, in relation to the Committee on Un-American Activities were objected to and ordered taken down:

This would mean that all of our institutions up to and including our churches would be exposed to the unlawful prying of a committee.

10. 92 CONG. REC. 3761, 79th Cong. 2d Sess.

Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled as follows:

The Chair does not want it to be understood that he is ever going to hold out of order proper words that express the opinion of a Member of the House of Representatives.

Two words, especially one in this statement, are very strong words. . . .

The Chair holds that the words “unlawful prying” attributed to a committee of the House are improper words and therefore unparliamentary.

The words were then on motion stricken from the Congressional Record.

External Influence

§ 54.3 A statement by a Member that certain fascist organizations exercised extensive influence on a special House committee was held to impugn the motives and actions of a committee and of the individual members and was ruled a breach of order.

On Feb. 11, 1941, during consideration of House Resolution 90 to continue investigation by a special committee [the Dies Committee] on un-American activities, Mr. Samuel Dickstein, of New York, asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.⁽¹¹⁾

11. 87 CONG. REC. 894, 77th Cong. 1st Sess.

Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, interrupted Mr. Dickstein's remarks and demanded that the following words be taken down as a violation of the rules of the House:

I also charge, Mr. Speaker, that 110 Fascist organizations in this country had the back key, and have now the back key to the back door of the Dies committee.

Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that the language noted "certainly impugns the motives and actions of a committee and the individual members thereof." The House then expunged Mr. Dickstein's entire speech from the Congressional Record.

Charges Reflecting on Integrity; Falsehood

§ 54.4 Language in a telegram read in debate in the House which repudiated "lies and half-truths" of a House committee report was held out of order as reflecting on the integrity of committee members.

On June 16, 1947,⁽¹²⁾ Mr. Chet Holifield, of California, read in the House a telegram from the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mis-issippi, made a point of order against certain words in the telegram and demanded that they be taken down: "We completely repudiate the lies and half-truths of the report that was issued and consider it un-American" (in reference to a report of the Committee on Un-American Activities).

Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, ruled that the words objected to were unparliamentary, since they "reflect upon the character and integrity of the membership of a committee." The words were stricken by motion from the Congressional Record.

§ 54.5 A statement in debate in reference to a House committee "I cannot respect the actions or even the sincerity of some of the committee members" was ruled out of order.

On June 26, 1946,⁽¹³⁾ Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, demanded that the following words used by Mr. Donald L. O'Toole, of New York, in reference to a House committee be taken down: "I cannot respect the actions or even the sincerity of some of the committee members." Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that the words objected to were clearly offending remarks and improperly used in debate.

The objectionable words were stricken by motion from the Record.

Committee Inaction

§ 54.6 An editorial read by a Member charging a committee with “pigeon-holing” certain legislation was held in order as not reflecting on the personal conduct of any Member but rather criticizing committee procedure.

On May 6, 1940,⁽¹⁴⁾ Mr. C. Arthur Anderson, of Missouri, quoted the following language from a newspaper editorial:

Unadulterated, self-seeking politics cast the vote that pigeon-holed the supplementary Hatch measure in the House Judiciary Committee Wednesday. Election-year jitters had solons by the napes of their necks. Rather than risk crippling State machines they chose to sink a harpoon into this excellent Government reform.

Objection was made to the language by Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, and the words were taken down. Speaker Pro Tempore Jere Cooper, of Tennessee, ruled that the “words reported do not go to the personal conduct of any

14. 86 CONG. REC. 5628, 76th Cong. 3d Sess.

Member of the House and are rather a criticism of procedure that may have been employed. Therefore the point of order is overruled.”

§ 54.7 A statement by a Member in debate that “somebody is going to have the idea that the action of that committee was more or less pusillanimous” was held in order.

On May 31, 1939,⁽¹⁵⁾ Mr. Sam C. Massingale, of Oklahoma, in discussing a general welfare bill stated of the Committee on Ways and Means “somebody is going to have the idea that the action of that committee was more or less pusillanimous, because that committee . . . has done nothing.” Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, raised a point of order against Mr. Massingale and asked that the allegedly objectionable words be taken down. The Committee of the Whole rose and the words were reported to the House, but Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, ruled that he could find nothing objectionable in the words reported.

§ 54.8 A statement in debate accusing a committee of dereliction was held not to violate the rules of the House.

15. 84 CONG. REC. 6445, 76th Cong. 1st Sess.

On Mar. 7, 1942,⁽¹⁶⁾ Mr. Vito Marcantonio, of New York, stated “since the gentleman from Texas raised the question here of dereliction of duty, I say that dereliction in this manner rests at the doorstep of his committee.”

A point of order was made and the words were taken down. Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled as follows:

The Chair thinks that if he were to hold upon as fine a point as that, at some time free debate in the House of Representatives might cease. The Chair holds that the language does not violate the rules of the House.

§ 54.9 A statement in debate, “When this committee investigates the recent wave of policy lynch murder in Mississippi” was held in order.

On Mar. 9, 1948,⁽¹⁷⁾ the following words in debate, referring to the Committee on Un-American Activities, were objected to by Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, and demanded taken down: “When this committee investigates the recent wave of policy lynch murder in Mississippi, in the area of Jackson, and in the capital itself—”

Mr. Rankin based his point of order on the fact that the Member speaking was accusing Mr. Rankin’s home state of an act of murder. Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, ruled that the words were not unparliamentary and that the Member speaking was merely expressing his opinion.

17. 94 CONG. REC. 2408, 80th Cong. 2d Sess.

“Packing” a Committee

§ 54.10 A statement referring to the “painless method of packing the Rules Committee” received the disapproval of the Speaker (against whom the allegation was directed) but the House adjourned before a decision was reached on the question.

On Jan. 12, 1961,⁽¹⁸⁾ Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, on his own initiative called Mr. H. R. Gross, of Iowa, to order for referring in debate to the “so-called painless method of packing the Rules Committee.”

Impugning Motives

§ 54.11 A reference in debate to the Committee on Un-American Activities as “the Un-American Committee” was held out of order.

18. 107 CONG. REC. 650, 87th Cong. 1st Sess.

On June 12, 1947,⁽¹⁹⁾ Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, demanded the taking down of the reference by Mr. Chet Holifield, of California, in debate to the Committee on Un-American Activities as the “Un-American Committee.”

Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, ruled that the reference impugned the motives of the committee in question and were used in debate in violation of the rules of the House.

§ 54.12 The asking of the question “Did the gentleman’s committee also find paid agents of Hitler on the congressional payroll?” was held not in violation of House rules.

On Mar. 31, 1943,⁽²⁰⁾ the following question by Mr. Howard J. McMurray, of Wisconsin, in debate was ordered taken down as a violation of the rules of the House:

Did the gentleman’s committee also find paid agents of Hitler on the congressional payroll?

Speaker Pro Tempore William M. Whittington, of Mississippi, ruled as follows:

The gentleman from Wisconsin asked a question. The mere asking of the question propounded by the gentleman from Wisconsin is not in violation of any rule of the House so far as the Chair has been advised.

20. 89 CONG. REC. 2787, 2788, 78th Cong. 1st Sess.

§ 54.13 It is not a personality to characterize as “badgering” a colleague’s questioning of a witness in a committee hearing.

On July 29, 1994,⁽¹⁾ the Chair, while ruling that words objected to were not unparliamentary, ruled that a Member’s subsequent behavior was a breach of decorum:

MS. [MAXINE] WATERS [of California]: Madam Speaker, last evening a Member of this House, Peter King, had to be gaveled out of order at the White-water hearings of the Banking Committee. He had to be gaveled out of order because he badgered a woman who was a witness from the White House, Maggie Williams. I am pleased I was able to come to her defense. Madam Speaker, the day is over when men can badger and intimidate women.

MR. [F. JAMES] SENSENBRENNER [Jr., of Wisconsin]: Madam Speaker, I demand the gentlewoman’s words be taken down. . . .

THE SPEAKER:⁽²⁾ The Clerk will report the words. . . .

While in the opinion of the Chair the word “badgering” is not in itself unparliamentary, the Chair believes that the demeanor of the gentlewoman from

2. Thomas S. Foley (Wash.).

California was not in good order in the subsequent period immediately following those words having been uttered.

Accordingly, the Chair rules that without leave of the House, the gentleman from California may not proceed for the rest of today.

§ 55. References to Unreported Committee Proceedings; Discussion of Ethics Committee Deliberations

Under parliamentary law and under the practice of the House, it has been held a breach of order in debate to refer to committee proceedings which have not been formally reported to the House.⁽³⁾ Under the more modern practice, where committee meetings and hearings are open to the public, the rationale for not permitting floor discussion of committee proceedings is tenuous. However, it is still true that the minutes of executive committee sessions may not be read, quoted from, or paraphrased in debate, unless the committee has voted to make the minutes public.⁽⁴⁾

A point of order must be made, however, and the Speaker does

3. See Jefferson's Manual, House Rules and Manual §§ 319, 360 (1995).

4. See §§ 55.2–55.4, infra.

not on his own initiative call a Member to order for violating the rule.⁽⁵⁾

Clause 4(e)(2)(F) of Rule X requires a vote of the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct to authorize the public disclosure of the content of a complaint or the fact of its filing. That rule applies only to members of that committee and its staff; however, references in floor debate to the content of a complaint or the fact of its filing are nevertheless governed by the rules of order in debate. Unlike the calling up of a resolution of censure, the filing of a complaint does not embark the House on consideration of a proposition to which such references would be relevant. That a complaint may be pending in its own right rather than only as the assertion of a Member in debate does not legitimize reference even to the mere fact of its pendency much less to its content.⁽⁶⁾

Where the House has under consideration a resolution involving the conduct of a Member, a wider range of debate is permitted. In the context of a specific legislative proposal involving censure, reprimand, or expulsion, or a proposal advocating an investigation of misconduct, the facts surrounding the resolution may be discussed, but even in these situations debate personally offensive has not been permitted.

References Prohibited

§ 55.1 Where improper references are made to committee proceedings not yet reported to the House, the remedy is to lodge a point of order against the reference.

On Feb. 7, 1935,⁽⁷⁾ Mr. Sam D. McReynolds, of Tennessee, was discussing the manner in which the Committee on Appropriations, of which he was a member, had voted on H.R. 5255, an appropriations bill, then before the Committee of the Whole. Mr. Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, arose to make the point of order that Mr. McReynolds was speaking out of order in stating how a member of his committee voted, where the committee proceedings were not formally reported to the House. Chairman William N. Rogers, of New Hampshire, sustained the point of order.

Mr. McReynolds then raised a parliamentary inquiry:

Mr. Chairman, when a member of a committee appears before this House and undertakes to state how he or she voted and says that the chairman of the committee misrepresented the matter, would the present occupant of the chair hold that the chairman of the committee could not say what the records show?

7. 79 CONG. REC. 1690, 74th Cong. 1st Sess.

THE CHAIRMAN: As the Chair understands it, the action to be taken is to make a point of order against the statement being made originally. This is the Chair's understanding of the rules.

§ 55.2 If a committee has not voted to make the proceedings of an executive session public, it is not in order in debate to read or quote from the minutes thereof.

On Apr. 5, 1967,⁽⁸⁾ during debate on a resolution funding the Committee on Science and Astronautics, Mr. Joe D. Waggoner, Jr., of Louisiana, a member of the committee, began referring to proceedings of the committee and quoting dialogue from a session thereof. Mr. John W. Wydler, of New York, whose words were being quoted, stated a point of order that quotation in debate of minutes of an executive committee session was improper.

Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, ruled as follows:

The Chair would like to inquire of either the gentleman from Louisiana or

8. 113 CONG. REC. 8411, 8412, 90th Cong. 1st Sess.

the gentleman from Texas whether the gentleman from Louisiana is reading from the executive session record? . . .

MR. [OLIN E.] TEAGUE of Texas: Mr. Speaker, it is my remembrance that what he is quoting was what took place at an executive session.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair would like to make the further inquiry as to whether or not the members in the executive session voted to make public what took place in the executive session?

MR. TEAGUE of Texas: It is my memory that we did not vote on that and it was not discussed.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair would suggest to the gentleman from Louisiana that he refrain from referring to what took place in the executive session.

Similarly, on Apr. 25, 1930,⁽⁹⁾ when Mr. S. Wallace Dempsey, of New York, attempted to read from the minutes of his committee on a certain bill, Chairman William P. Holaday, of Illinois, sustained a point of order that Mr. Dempsey was out of order in bringing to the House floor the minutes of his committee and reading from them.⁽¹⁰⁾

Paraphrase of Minutes

§ 55.3 It is not in order in debate to paraphrase the minutes of the executive proceedings of a committee.

On June 26, 1961,⁽¹¹⁾ Mr. Bruce R. Alger, of Texas, stated that he had an exhibit consisting of the transcript of the record of the Committee on Public Works in executive session. He stated that since reading the transcript would be a violation of the House rules, he intended to paraphrase it. A point of order was made that the paraphrasing of a transcript of an executive session as well as the reading of it was prohibited by House rules. Speaker Pro Tempore Wilbur D. Mills, of Arkansas, sustained the point of order.⁽¹²⁾

Necessity of Point of Order

§ 55.4 While a Member may by unanimous consent divulge matters which occurred in a committee which have not been reported to the House, the Chair will not interpose restrictions on such remarks absent a point of order.

On July 28, 1939,⁽¹³⁾ Mr. Matthew A. Dunn, of Pennsylvania,

11. 107 CONG. REC. 11233, 87th Cong. 1st Sess.
12. See also 113 CONG. REC. 8411, 8412, 90th Cong. 1st Sess., Apr. 5, 1967; and 86 CONG. REC. 954, 76th Cong. 3d Sess., Feb. 1, 1940.
13. 84 CONG. REC. 10352, 76th Cong. 1st Sess.

was granted unanimous consent to proceed for an additional minute. He proceeded to divulge matters which occurred on the previous day in the Committee on Labor, of which he was a member. Mr. Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, made a point of order that Mr. Dunn could not divulge such matters. Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, sustained the point of order, although Mr. Dunn objected that the Member speaking before him had similarly divulged matters occurring in a committee whose proceedings were not formerly reported to the House. The Speaker ruled as follows:

The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. Gross] did divulge matters which occurred before the committee, but no point of order was made, and, therefore, the Chair could not act on his own motion.⁽¹⁴⁾

Reliance on Statement of Speaking Member

§ 55.5 The Chair may rely on the statement of a Member that he is not quoting the proceedings of an executive session of a House committee.

On Feb. 1, 1940,⁽¹⁵⁾ a point of order was made against the remarks of Mr. Frank B. Keefe, of Wisconsin, on the grounds that he was quoting testimony taken before an executive meeting of a House committee. The following exchange then took place:

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁶⁾ If the gentleman from Wisconsin purports to discuss the executive proceedings of a committee it will not be in order.

MR. KEEFE: I am not discussing the executive proceedings.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: But if he is just quoting on his own responsibility—

MR. [FRANK E.] HOOK [of Michigan]: He has referred to the testimony.

MR. KEEFE: I am quoting on my own responsibility.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Does the gentleman purport to quote the proceedings of a committee in executive session?

MR. KEEFE: No.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: If that is what the gentleman undertakes to do, the point of order will be sustained.

MR. HOOK: Mr. Speaker, a point of order. I will have to ask, then, that the remarks, if any, referring to the testimony taken in the executive meeting be stricken.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: All the Chair knows is that the gentleman says he is not purporting to quote the proceedings of an executive session of a committee of this House. If that be true, the point of order is overruled.

Reference to Committee Action Permitted

§ 55.6 Where a Member introduced a resolution providing for an inquiry into the actions of a House subcommittee, another Member was permitted to refer to subcommittee proceedings to justify his point of order that the resolution was not privileged.

16. R. Ewing Thomason (Tex.).

On June 30, 1958,⁽¹⁷⁾ House Resolution 610, establishing a special committee to inquire into proceedings of the Subcommittee on Legislative Oversight of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, was introduced in the House; the resolution alleged that the subcommittee had allowed the dissemination of defamatory testimony in violation of House rules.

Mr. Oren Harris, of Arkansas, made a point of order against the resolution, on the ground that it was not privileged. He referred to the proceedings of the subcommittee, in executive session, to justify his point of order.

Mr. Timothy P. Sheehan, of Illinois, arose to object to Mr. Harris' reference under the principle that a Member could not in debate refer to executive proceedings of committees and subcommittees. Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled as follows:

. . . [H]ere is a question of privilege of the House being raised by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Curtis], and in order for the gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. Harris] to justify his point of order, he has got to discuss these matters. And, they are in the printed record.

§ 55.7 Where a question of House privilege involving the procedure of a conference committee is stated in debate, it is in order to state what occurred in the committee session but not in order to refer in a critical way to a named Senate conferee.

On July 29, 1935,⁽¹⁸⁾ where a point of order was made against a Member who was discussing a question of privilege of the House involving the procedure of a conference committee, Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, ruled that the Member could state what occurred in the conference committee but could not refer to or criticize a member of the Senate by name.

References to Matters Pending Before Committee on Standards of Official Conduct

§ 55.8 The Chair cautioned all Members to refrain from references in debate to the official conduct of other Members where the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct had not filed a report on the conduct of a particular Member or where that Member's conduct was not the subject of a question of the privilege of the House then pending before the House, and similarly not to refer to the motivations of Members who may have filed complaints before that committee.

On June 14, 1988,⁽¹⁹⁾ several one-minute speeches contained references to charges made by a Member against the Speaker:

MR. [NEWT] GINGRICH [of Georgia]: Mr. Speaker, every Member of the House should be offended by a June 10 letter sent to Members by the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee. That letter says, "You were apparently duped by Newt." It goes on to suggest, "It has become obvious his actions are generated by self-serving partisan political motives."

That letter from the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee insults the Committee on Ethics which voted unanimously to investigate the Speaker. It insults Common Cause, the Wall Street Journal, the Washington Post, the New York Times, and 35 other newspapers which have called for an investigation.

19. 134 CONG. REC. 14317, 14318, 100th Cong. 2d Sess.

Frankly, this House is rapidly dividing up between those who favor openness, honesty and ethics and those who delay, obscure and defend unethical behavior.

The Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee has apparently chosen to cover up rather than clean up. . . .

MR. [WILLIAM M.] THOMAS of California: Mr. Speaker, I really do not understand what all the controversy is over the book, if we were talking about the book itself, the book, of course, being "Reflections of a Public Man." It only costs $6. I mean, what can one buy for $6 today? Not much. That is what it is—not much. . . .

The question is not over the book. It is over the procedures involved with the book. On that point, I totally agree with the Washington Post editorial this morning that said that if the procedures surrounding the book are not against the rules of the House of Representatives, then we ought to change the rules. . . .

MR. [MERVYN M.] DYMALLY [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I believe it was last Friday that the New York Times carried a story on the so-called Gingrich charges against the Speaker. In that article the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Gingrich) openly admits that some of the charges were not founded, but he "just threw them in there for curiosity," recognizing very well that it would make partisan news. . . .

The politics involved in these charges, in my judgment, are shameful.

On June 15, 1988,⁽²⁰⁾ Speaker Pro Tempore Thomas S. Foley, of

20. 134 CONG. REC. 14623, 100th Cong. 2d Sess.

Washington, made the following announcement:

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Before the Chair recognizes the distinguished gentleman from Kentucky, the Chair has an announcement.

The Chair wishes to announce that clause 1 of rule XIV prevents Members in debate from engaging in "personalities." Clause 4 of that rule provides that if any Member transgress the rules of the House, the Speaker shall, or any Member may, call him to order.

Members may recall that on December 18, 1987, the Chair enunciated the standard that debate would not be proper if it attempted to focus on the conduct of a Member about whom a report had not been filed by the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct or whose conduct was not the subject of a privileged matter then pending before the House. Similarly, the Chair would suggest that debate is not proper which speculates as to the motivations of a Member who may have filed a complaint before the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct against another Member.

Thus, the Chair would caution all Members not to use the 1-minute period or special orders, as has already happened, to discuss the conduct of Members of the House in a way that inevitably engages in personalities.

Parliamentarian's Note: A complaint against the conduct of the Speaker should be presented directly for the action of the House and not by way of debate on other matters. On one occasion, Speaker Thomas B. Reed, of Maine, in sustaining a call to order, stated that criticism of past conduct of the Chair is out of order, not because the Chair is above criticism but because such piecemeal criticism is not conducive to the good order of the House.⁽¹⁾ Indeed, an insult to the Speaker has been held to raise a question of privilege not governed by the ordinary rule that disorderly words, to be actionable, need be taken down as soon as uttered.⁽²⁾

§ 55.9 Reference should not be made in debate to pending investigations undertaken by the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, including suggestions of courses of action, nor should critical characterizations be made of members of that committee who have investigated a Member's conduct.

On Mar. 3, 1995,⁽³⁾ the Chair responded to inquiries made about the propriety of remarks made by a Member with reference to certain investigations:

MR. [HAROLD L.] VOLKMER [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, last year Members

1. 5 Hinds' Precedents § 5188.
2. 2 Hinds' Precedents § 1248.
3. 141 CONG. REC. p. ____, 104th Cong. 1st Sess. See also the proceedings of Apr. 1, 1992 (138 CONG. REC. p. ____, 102d Cong. 2d Sess.).

of the present majority complained about the investigation by Special Counsel Robert Fiske. They claimed that Fiske was a friend of the White House and that his investigation of Whitewater was not going far enough.

I ask the Members of the House to consider these facts. The current chairman of the House Ethics Committee cast the deciding vote for the Speaker in the 1989 whip's race. The chairman of the Ethics Committee seconded the nomination for Speaker this year. The chairman of our Ethics Committee last year tried to help our current Speaker by closing the pending Ethics Committee complaint against him.

Two other majority members of the House Ethics Committee have had personal dealings with the personal PAC of the Speaker, GOPAC, one of them as a contributor, and another as a recipient for his reelection.

Given these facts, I am sure those who call for a replacement of Special Counsel Fiske will now join me in calling for a special counsel to investigate the allegations against Speaker Gingrich, and it should not take 100 days.

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁴⁾ The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. WALKER: Mr. Speaker, was not the entire speech of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Volkmer], just a moment ago, out of order, because it was a direct reference to Members of this body? . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Members should not refer to pending Standards Committee investigations.

MR. WALKER: I have a further parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state it.

MR. WALKER: Beyond the pending ethics investigation, he also may have had personal references to the chairman of the Ethics Committee. Is that also not out of order?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Members should not so refer to the Standards Committee or any Members thereof.

MR. WALKER: A further parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker. My understanding is that what the gentleman has just done in the House was a speech which was entirely out of order before the body; is that correct?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair is responding in a general way to the proper debate in the House with respect to ethics investigations.

MR. WALKER: I thank the Chair.

MR. VOLKMER: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. VOLKMER: Is the Chair ruling that it is improper for any Member to request a special counsel in an investigation being conducted by the Ethics Committee, which action has not been taken by the Ethics Committee?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Members should not refer to pending Standards Committee investigations, or suggest courses of action within that committee.

MR. VOLKMER: I thank the Chair.

§ 56. Form of Reference to Members

In delivering remarks on the floor, Members must refer to other Members—not by name or by personal pronoun—but by the third-person form, “the gentleman/gentlewoman from _____ [state]”.⁽⁵⁾

Form; References to Members by Name

§ 56.1 Reference in debate to another Member by name is not in order and Members must be referred to as “the gentleman from” or “the gentlewoman from” a certain state.

On Feb. 27, 1946,⁽⁶⁾ Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled in answer to a parliamentary inquiry that in referring to another Member in debate Members should “refer to the gentleman from a certain state or the gentlewoman from a certain state.”

The Speaker has so ruled on numerous occasions,⁽⁷⁾ and the Speaker or the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole may on his own initiative call a Member to order for violating the rule,⁽⁸⁾ although the Presiding Officer normally waits for a point of order on the subject.⁽⁹⁾

On Mar. 21, 1938 [83 CONG. REC. 3768, 3769, 75th Cong. 3d Sess.], while the House was discussing the proper form of reference to Members, Mr. Fritz G. Lanham (Tex.), inquired whether it would be proper to mention the name of a Member in debate in order to differentiate between two Members from the same state who had addressed themselves to the same proposition. Speaker William B. Bankhead (Ala.), in discussing that inquiry and several others, stated that a Member could not be referred to by name in debate.

§ 56.2 It is not in order in debate to address remarks to an individual Member in his seat by use of the personal pronoun “you.”

On Apr. 7, 1936,⁽¹⁰⁾ Mr. Marion A. Zioncheck, of Washington, was challenging the revision of his remarks by Mr. Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, in the Congressional Record. In the course of challenging Mr. Blanton, Mr. Zioncheck interrogated him and repeatedly addressed Mr. Blanton as “you.” “Did you write this in or did you not? Did you or did you not?” Mr. John J. O’Connor, of New York, arose to make the point of order that the person who has the floor and who is addressing the House has no right to address a Member in his seat. Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, sustained the point of order and stated that “the Member who is speaking does not have the right to address his remarks to any individual Member in his seat.”⁽¹¹⁾

§ 56.3 A Member in debate may not refer to another by name even though he preface it by referring to him as “the gentleman from . . .”

On June 7, 1933,⁽¹²⁾ Mr. Bertrand H. Snell, of New York, made the point of order that Mr. Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, was referring to him by name. Speaker Henry T. Rainey, of Illinois, sustained the point of order, ruling that Mr. Blanton could not refer to Mr. Snell by name even if he used the form “the gentleman from New York, Mr. Snell.”

§ 56.4 A statement in debate using a word which was also the name of a Member was held not to be a breach of the rule requiring Members to address colleagues in the third person where the Member speaking assured the Speaker that he was not referring to a Member of the House.

On Oct. 9, 1940,⁽¹³⁾ Mr. Sol Bloom, of New York, objected to the alleged use by Mr. John C. Schafer, of Wisconsin, of Mr.

1945; and 80 CONG. REC. 3286, 74th Cong. 2d Sess., Mar. 4, 1936.

Bloom's name in debate rather than referring to him as the gentleman from New York. Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled, on the assurance of Mr. Schafer he was not referring to his colleague Mr. Bloom, that he was not speaking out of order.

§ 56.5 In referring to another Member in debate the proper reference is "the gentleman from 'the state from which he comes'" and not "the Jewish gentleman from New York."

On Oct. 24, 1945,⁽¹⁴⁾ Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, in debate referred to Mr. Emanuel Celler, of New York, as "the Jewish gentleman from New York." The words were demanded to be taken down by Mr. Celler, and Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled as follows:

If the gentleman will allow the Chair, there is one way to refer to a Member of the House of Representatives and that is, "the gentleman from" the State from which he comes. Any other appellation is a violation of the rules.

The Speaker then ruled that Mr. Rankin could refer to Mr. Celler as a member of a minority group without violating House rules.

14. 91 CONG. REC. 10032, 79th Cong. 1st Sess.

§ 56.6 Where a Member referred in debate to a Member as "another guy," a question of personal privilege was stated, the reference was stricken from the Record, and the phrase "the gentleman from Massachusetts" substituted therefor.

On Aug. 4, 1970,⁽¹⁵⁾ Mr. Page H. Belcher, of Oklahoma, referred to Mr. Silvio O. Conte, of Massachusetts, in debate as "another guy" who was "horning in on the act" in relation to a certain measure before the House. Rather than demand that the words be taken down, Mr. Conte rose to a point of personal privilege and requested a definition from Mr. Belcher of "another guy" and "horning in." After some discussion, Mr. Thomas G. Abernethy, of Mississippi, stated the point of order that the proper procedure was to take the words down and have a ruling by the Chair on whether they were in order. Speaker Pro Tempore Edward P. Boland, of Massachusetts, ruled that the point of order came too late and entertained a unanimous-consent request that the words "another guy" used by Mr. Belcher be stricken from the Record and be replaced by “the gentleman from Massachusetts.”

Responding to a “Colleague”

§ 56.7 The Speaker advised a Member as to the use of the term “colleague” in replying to the question of a Member.

On Mar. 1, 1940,⁽¹⁶⁾ Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, ruled that certain words used in debate by Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, in relation to Mr. Frank E. Hook, of Michigan, were out of order, being directed to personality. Mr. Hoffman stated that he had been attempting to reply to a question of Mr. Hook and submitted the parliamentary inquiry to the Speaker as to how he could reply to a question by another Member without referring to him personally.

Speaker Bankhead ruled as follows:

In reply to the question, the Chair suggests that the gentleman might say, “In response to the inquiry of my colleague from Michigan.”

§ 56.8 Under section 361 of Jefferson’s Manual, it is not in order in debate to refer to or to address a Member by his or her first name.

The Chairman⁽¹⁷⁾ made the following statement on Sept. 29,

17. John Brademas (Ind.).

1977,⁽¹⁸⁾ during consideration of H.R. 6566 (the ERDA military authorization for fiscal 1978) in the Committee of the Whole:

THE CHAIRMAN: . . . The Chair would advise the Members it is against the rules to use first names and would advise the Members not to further use first names.

§ 56.9 Clause 1 of Rule XIV and section 361 of Jefferson’s Manual prohibit a Member from engaging in personalities in debate and specifically require references to another Member only “by his seat in the House, or who spoke last, or on the other side of the question”, and not by name or in the second person.

During debate on the Military Procurement Authorization for fiscal year 1983 (H.R. 6030) in Committee of the Whole on July 21, 1982,⁽¹⁹⁾ the following exchange occurred:

MR. [SAMUEL S.] STRATTON [of New York]: Mr. Chairman, the gentleman is in a sense remaking his speech again and not responding to my point.

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE:⁽²⁰⁾ The Chair will state to the gentleman that references to Members should not be by familiar name but by reference to the gentleman from the State of New York or the gentleman from the State of Massachusetts, rather than their familiar names. . . .

The Chair will . . . advise all Members that references to Members shall not be by their familiar names, under House rules. . . .

The Chair is not addressing the gentleman from New York. The Chair is addressing all Members, on the basis of what he has heard in the discussion.

§ 56.10 The proper form of reference to another Member is to the “gentleman (or gentlewoman) from (state),” and not any other appellation or characterization.

On Oct. 2, 1984,⁽¹⁾ during consideration of the balanced budget bill (H.R. 6300) in the House, the Chair, in responding to a parliamentary inquiry, reminded the Members of the proper form of reference to other Members:

MR. [DANIEL E.] LUNGREN [of California]: Well, Mr. Speaker, thank God this is not a medical research center, because if you believe laetrile cures cancer, you think that Dr. “Feelgood’s” bill here on the floor is going to do something, but the fact of the matter is that it has nothing to do with the legislation on the floor; it has to do with the will of the Members of Congress. . . .

MR. [RONALD V.] DELLUMS [of California]: Mr. Speaker, is it a violation of the comity and custom of the House to refer to a Member of this body in terms other than as the gentleman from a particular State?

The Chairman of this committee was referred to as “Dr. Feelgood Jones,” and I would think that is in violation of the comity and custom of the House. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽²⁾ The gentleman is correct in stating that it is the custom and practice and tradition of the body that Members of the body should be referred to as the gentleman or gentlewoman from a certain State.

§ 56.11 Members in debate should not refer to other Members by their first names; rather such references should be in the third person, by state delegation.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Mar. 7, 1985:⁽³⁾

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁴⁾ Will the gentleman refrain from using personal names and use formal address in addressing another Member.

§ 57. Criticism of Speaker

It is not in order to refer invidiously or discourteously to the Speaker or the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole.⁽⁵⁾ If words impugning the Speaker are uttered, the Speaker does not rule on the words himself but customarily appoints a Member to occupy the Chair and to deliver a decision.

In recent Congresses, more explicit standards have been enunciated relating to debate regarding ethics charges against the Speaker.⁽⁶⁾

Criticism of Speaker's Performance of Duty

§ 57.1 It is out of order in debate for a Member to charge that the Speaker committed a dishonest act or that the Speaker repudiated and ignored the rules of the House.

On Feb. 7, 1935, Mr. George H. Tinkham, of Massachusetts, addressed the House as follows:

Mr. Chairman, before beginning the argument I want to say that this is an opportunity not only for this House but for the country to see who in this House are international eunuchs, who in this House wish to put us into Europe, who in this House wish us to sit down with Fascist Italy, sit down with national socialistic Germany, with murderous, homicidal communistic Russia. That is the issue in its largest aspect in relation to this appropriation [H.R. 5255].⁽⁷⁾

Mr. Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, then demanded that certain words of Mr. Tinkham, made as part of the above statement and referring to former Speaker Henry T. Rainey, of Illinois, and present Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, be taken down. The Committee rose, and Chairman William N. Rogers, of New Hampshire, reported the words objected to to the House. Speaker Byrns left the Chair and Mr. John J. O'Connor, of New York, assumed the Chair as Speaker Pro Tempore. The Speaker Pro Tempore then ruled, relying on a former ruling on words critical of the Speaker of the House, that Mr. Tinkham's words violated the rules of the House and were out of order. The words were then ordered "expunged from the Record." On an appeal from the ruling of the Speaker Pro Tempore, the House affirmed the decision.

§ 57.2 Language used in debate charging that the Speaker dishonestly resolved the House into a Committee of the Whole, and that he repudiated and ignored the rules of the House, was held out of order.

On May 31, 1934, Mr. Harold McGugin, of Kansas, was called to order and certain words used by him in debate were ordered taken down:

I take the position I am in order because I am charging that the House is not lawfully or honestly, under the rules of this House, in Committee of the Whole . . . for the good and sufficient reason that this House is not now honestly, fairly, truthfully, and within the rules of the House, in the Committee of the Whole, for the good and sufficient reason that the Speaker completely repudiated and ignored the rules of this House.⁽⁸⁾

After the Committee rose and Chairman John H. Kerr, of North Carolina, reported the objectionable words to the House, the Speaker left the chair and Speaker Pro Tempore Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, ruled that the words were clearly out of order. The House ordered that the objectionable words be stricken from the Congressional Record.⁽⁹⁾

§ 57.3 The Speaker is addressed as "the Speaker" or as "the gentleman from — (his state)" and not by his nickname or surname ("Tip O'Neill") and it is improper to refer to him in a manner personally critical.

On June 25, 1981,⁽¹⁰⁾ the following exchange occurred in the House:

(Mr. Smith of Oregon asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

MR. [DENNY] SMITH of Oregon: Mr. Speaker, today we in the House face a test of the courage of our convictions. We will vote up or down on a motion that is much more than just a procedural vote. It is a motion that pits Tip O'Neill and his backroom political flim-flam against one of the most strongly supported American Presidents in history.

If you vote with Mr. O'Neill, you vote against President Reagan, against the American people, and against what is best for our country. If you vote with Mr. O'Neill, you are voting for higher taxes and higher Government spending.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹¹⁾ The Chair will remind the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. Smith)—the Chair appreciates the fact that he is a new Member—that under the precedents which govern conduct in debate in the House, it is not proper to refer to another Member by his name in that manner.

MR. SMITH of Oregon: I apologize, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The Speaker knows that the gentleman is not fully acquainted with all the rules and this time will let it pass.

MR. SMITH of Oregon: Yes, sir.

§ 57.4 It is not in order to speak disrespectfully in debate of the Chair by charging dishonesty or disregard of the rules, and pending a point of order, the Speaker Pro Tempore has admonished a Member who had improperly criticized the count of a previous occupant of the chair; but the Member's subsequent assertion of a personal belief that a sufficient number had been standing to demand a recorded vote was held parliamentary as not necessarily charging the Chair with disregard of the rules.

11. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

On July 11, 1985,⁽¹²⁾ the House had under discussion a motion to instruct conferees on the Defense Authorization bill⁽¹³⁾ to insist on the House position on an amendment relating to the creation of a peacetime espionage offense with a death penalty in the Uniform Code of Military Justice. Several Members questioned an earlier count by Speaker Pro Tempore James C. Wright, Jr., of Texas, of Members standing when a recorded vote was demanded on a motion to recommit which included the same amendment.⁽¹⁴⁾

MR. [DANIEL E.] LUNGREN [of California]: I appreciate the remarks of the gentleman from Wisconsin, and I do not attribute any conspiracy to him or to anybody else. I will state emphatically, however, I was on the floor when we made the second attempt on a separate vote on the gentleman's amendment, and I will tell him that I believe absolutely there were more than 44 people standing. I know one Member did a quick count on our side and counted 50, at least 50; our staff counted 60 back there.

14. The "McCollum" amendment, by Mr. Ira W. McCollum, of Florida. On June 27, 1985, also, several Members had taken the floor during special orders to complain about counts by the Chair on related demands for record votes. See 131 CONG. REC. 17893 et seq., 99th Cong. 1st Sess. The debate on that occasion was similarly unparliamentary.

I understand what the gentleman is saying. But I will not take lightly what occurred to us on our side. When our side feels that we cannot get a proper vote. It goes to the very fundamental questions of this House, because, frankly, there is a certain amount of comity that is necessary in this House.

MR. [THEODORE S.] WEISS [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, I wish to make a point of order. . . .

I think that this last statement of the gentleman impugns the motives of the Members of this body. I do not want to ask for the words to be taken down, but I think that maybe the gentleman would want to withdraw whatever insinuation along those lines that he has made. . . .

Mr. Speaker, I raise a point of order that motives of a Member of this body have been impugned by the suggestion that there was a deliberate miscount of votes by the Chair.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁵⁾ The Chair will make a general response to the point of order. Under the precedents of the House, it is not in order in debate to speak disrespectfully of the Chair, to charge dishonesty or disregard of the rules. May 31, 1934, Speaker pro tempore Burns; February 7, 1935, Speaker pro tempore O'Connor; Hinds' Volume V, 5192, 5188; Cannon's Volume VIII, 2531.

The Chair believes that any Member assigned to perform the duties of the Chair does so in a nonpartisan and forthright way, and the Chair will not permit to go unchallenged any improper references to the performance or motives of the Chair.

MR. WEISS: I thank the Speaker.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair is making this as a general admonition.

The point of order is withdrawn.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California.

MR. LUNGREN: I respect the gentleman's statement, because I would not withdraw those words even if a point of order were raised against me. I tried to state a fact as to what occurred, which I believe, and I said I believed there were, and I cited the number of people that were standing. I will be glad to stand on that at any point in time. I do not think the rules of the House prevent me from saying what I believe actually occurred or stating the truth. . . .

MR. WEISS: Mr. Speaker, I wish to state a point of order. . . .

Mr. Speaker, my point of order is that once again the distinguished gentleman from California has, in fact, impugned the motives and behavior of a Member of this body, particularly the Member sitting in the chair at the time that that vote was taken.

MR. LUNGREN: Mr. Speaker, if I might be heard on the point of order—

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will state that he has read a general statement. The Chair would hope that the gentleman from California would adhere to the principles as contained within that general admonition to the House.

MR. LUNGREN: Mr. Speaker, if the Speaker would look at the words that I said, he would see that I spoke very carefully about what I said I observed occurred, what I thought occurred, from my perception. And I do not appreciate the fact that on our side of the aisle we are told that we are to accept everything that happens in this House and if we bring to the attention of our other Members what we believe occurred that somehow rules will be interpreted such that we are not even allowed to utter what we thought occurred.

I did not cast aspersions on anybody's motivations. I stated what I thought occurred. I stated facts as I saw them. I said that I believe there were more than 44 people standing. I stated that a Member on our side counted at least 50. I stated that several members of our staff counted 60 Members. That is what I stated.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair cannot comment on something that occurred previously. The Chair has the ability to regulate the debate as it occurs today. The gentleman from New York (Mr. Weiss) should consider the comment of the gentleman from California (Mr. Lungren) at the present time.

MR. WEISS: If the Speaker will allow, I have no problem with what the gentleman believes. I have a problem that he states as a matter of fact that there were x number of people standing when the Speaker, the Member who was in the chair, ruled otherwise and counted otherwise. That is not belief. That is in fact questioning the honesty of the vote count. That is what I am objecting to.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: It is the opinion of the Chair that while the gentleman from California (Mr. Lun-gren) may not in debate charge the Chair with disregard of the rules, he has only stated his personal belief as to something that may have occurred factually.

Parliamentarian's Note: Allegations of impropriety by the Chair, such as a charge of deliberate disregard of the rules, may be raised as questions of the privilege of the House, but may not be permitted during debate.

§ 57.5 Where several Members had improperly engaged in personalities during debate by references to the Speaker and to a Member who had filed a complaint regarding the Speaker's official conduct, the Speaker Pro Tempore (the Majority Leader) took the Chair to announce to the House that Members should not engage in such debate.

On June 14, 1988,⁽¹⁶⁾ several one-minute speeches contained references to charges made by a Member against the Speaker:

MR. [NEWT] GINGRICH [of Georgia]: Mr. Speaker, every Member of the House should be offended by a June 10 letter sent to Members by the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee. That letter says, "You were apparently duped by Newt." It goes on to suggest, "It has become obvious his actions are generated by self-serving partisan political motives."

16. 134 CONG. REC. 14317, 14318, 100th Cong. 2d Sess.

That letter from the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee insults the Committee on Ethics which voted unanimously to investigate the Speaker. It insults Common Cause, the Wall Street Journal, the Washington Post, the New York Times, and 35 other newspapers which have called for an investigation.

Frankly, this House is rapidly dividing up between those who favor openness, honesty and ethics and those who delay, obscure and defend unethical behavior.

The Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee has apparently chosen to cover up rather than clean up. . . .

MR. [WILLIAM M.] THOMAS of California: Mr. Speaker, I really do not understand what all the controversy is over the book, if we were talking about the book itself, the book, of course, being "Reflections of a Public Man." It only costs $6. I mean, what can one buy for $6 today? Not much. That is what it is—not much. . . .

The question is not over the book. It is over the procedures involved with the book. On that point, I totally agree with the Washington Post editorial this morning that said that if the procedures surrounding the book are not against the rules of the House of Representatives, then we ought to change the rules. . . .

MR. [MERVYN M.] DYMALLY [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I believe it was last Friday that the New York Times carried a story on the so-called Gingrich charges against the Speaker. In that article the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Gingrich) openly admits that some of the charges were not founded, but he "just threw them in there for curiosity," recognizing very well that it would make partisan news. . . .

The politics involved in these charges, in my judgment, are shameful.

On June 15, 1988,⁽¹⁷⁾ Speaker Pro Tempore Thomas S. Foley, of Washington, made the following announcement:

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Before the Chair recognizes the distinguished gentleman from Kentucky, the Chair has an announcement.

The Chair wishes to announce that clause 1 of rule XIV prevents Members in debate from engaging in "personalities." Clause 4 of that rule provides that if any Member transgress the rules of the House, the Speaker shall, or any Member may, call him to order.

Members may recall that on December 18, 1987, the Chair enunciated the standard that debate would not be proper if it attempted to focus on the conduct of a Member about whom a report had not been filed by the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct or whose conduct was not the subject of a privileged matter then pending before the House. Similarly, the Chair would suggest that debate is not proper which speculates as to the motivations of a Member who may have filed a complaint before the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct against another Member.

17. 134 CONG. REC. 14623, 100th Cong. 2d Sess.

Thus, the Chair would caution all Members not to use the 1-minute period or special orders, as has already happened, to discuss the conduct of Members of the House in a way that inevitably engages in personalities.

Parliamentarian's Note: A complaint against the conduct of the Speaker should be presented directly for the action of the House and not by way of debate on other matters. On one occasion, Speaker Thomas B. Reed, of Maine, in sustaining a call to order, stated that criticism of past conduct of the Chair is out of order, not because the Chair is above criticism but because such piecemeal criticism is not conducive to the good order of the House.⁽¹⁸⁾ Indeed, an insult to the Speaker has been held to raise a question of privilege not governed by the ordinary rule that disorderly words, to be actionable, need be taken down as soon as uttered.⁽¹⁹⁾

§ 57.6 The Minority Leader took the floor to criticize the Speaker for making certain remarks in his daily press conference concerning the President of the United States.

the floor by Minority Leader Robert H. Michel, of Illinois:

MR. MICHEL: Mr. Speaker, a few moments ago the distinguished majority leader referred to the President as "intellectually dishonest."

Mr. Speaker, on July 19, 1984, United Press International reported that the Speaker of the House said the following things about the President of the United States—and I quote:

The evil is in the White House at the present time . . . and that evil is a man who has no care and no concern for the working class . . . He's cold. He's mean. He's got ice water for blood.

In almost 30 years in the House, I have never heard such abusive language used by a Speaker of the House about the President of the United States. . . .

There are precedents in our House rules forbidding personal abuse of a President on the floor of the House.

Surely the spirit of these rules ought to be adhered to by the Speaker off the floor as well as on the floor.

Parliamentarian's Note: While there are precedents indicating that it is a breach of order in debate to refer to the President disrespectfully,⁽¹⁾ the principle has not been extended to statements made outside the Chamber.

§ 57.7 The Chair has reaffirmed that it is not in order to speak disrespectfully of

1. See 8 Cannon's Precedents §§ 2497, 2498.

the Speaker or to arraign the personal conduct of the Speaker, and that under the precedents the sanctions for such violations transcend the ordinary requirements for timeliness of challenges.

On Jan. 4, 1995,⁽²⁾ the Chair made the following announcement:

THE SPEAKER:⁽³⁾ The Chair would like all Members to be on notice that the Chair intends to strictly enforce time limitations on debate. . . . Furthermore, the Chair may immediately interrupt Members in debate who transgress rule XIV by failing to avoid "personalities" in debate with respect to references to the Senate, the President, and other Members, rather than wait for Members to complete their remarks.

Finally, it is not in order to speak disrespectfully of the Speaker, and under the precedents the sanctions for such violations transcend the ordinary requirements for timeliness of challenges. This separate treatment is recorded in volume 2 of Hinds' Precedents, at section 1248.

On Jan. 18, 1995,⁽⁴⁾ remarks pertaining to the Speaker were ordered to be taken down, and discussion ensued as to the proper limits of references to the Speaker and other Members:

for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

MRS. [CARRIE P.] MEEK of Florida: Mr. Speaker, the Speaker's unbelievably good book deal, after all these secret meetings and behind the scenes deal-making, which each day brings to light new and more startling revelations, I am still not satisfied with the answers I am getting about this very large and lucrative deal our Speaker has negotiated for himself.

Now more than ever before the perception of impropriety, not to mention the potential conflict of interest, still exists and cannot be ignored. . . .

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I demand the gentlewoman's words be taken down. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁵⁾ The Clerk will read the gentlewoman's words.

The Clerk read as follows:

News accounts tell us that while the Speaker may have given up the $4.5 million advance, he stands to gain that amount and much more. That is a whole lot of dust where I come from. If anything now, how much the Speaker earns has grown much more dependent on how hard his publishing house hawks his book.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: It is the Speaker's opinion that innuendo and critical references to the Speaker's personal conduct are not in order.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

MR. [HAROLD L.] VOLKMER [of Missouri]: I have a parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state his inquiry.

5. Cliff B. Stearns (Fla.).

MR. VOLKMER: Is the Speaker now saying it is the ruling of the Chair that any statements as to activity, whether it is illegal or not, by the Speaker of the House in his private actions cannot be brought to the floor of this House? Is that the Chair's ruling? It appears that it is. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: In answer to the gentleman's question, first, it has been the Chair's ruling, and the precedents of the House support this, a proper level of respect is due to the Speaker. . . .

MR. VOLKMER: Mr. Speaker, I appeal the ruling of the Chair.

MOTION TO TABLE OFFERED BY MR.
LINDER

MR. [JOHN] LINDER [of Georgia]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Clerk will report the motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Linder moves to lay the Volkmer motion on the table. . . .

So the motion to table was agreed to. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Without objection, the words will be stricken from the Record.

MR. [JOHN D.] DINGELL [of Michigan]: Mr. Speaker, I object. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: . . . The question is: Shall the words be stricken from the Record? . . .

So the motion to strike the words was agreed to. . . .

MRS. MEEK of Florida: Mr. Speaker, may I be recognized?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Without objection, the gentlewoman from Florida [Mrs. Meek] may proceed in order.

(There was no objection.)

MRS. MEEK of Florida: Mr. Speaker, I have reviewed my statement carefully. I do not see anything in my statement that should be so objectionable and obnoxious. I have been elected to this House to speak the truth. . . .

MR. [ROBERT E.] WISE, [Jr., of West Virginia]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. Speaker, my parliamentary inquiry is based upon the Speaker's recent ruling and the action by this Chair and by this body. The question I have may involve several Members about to speak.

Is the Speaker entitled to a higher level of avoidance than other Members? That seems to be the issue raised in the Speaker's response on this. . . .

Does the body refrain from raising certain questions about the Speaker that it could raise about other Members in the Chamber?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: All Members are entitled to have no personal references made about them when that question is brought up.

MR. WISE: Mr. Speaker, continuing my parliamentary inquiry, then the Speaker is not entitled to any higher standard than any other Member in regard to personal references, is that correct, or any lower standard?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair has already ruled, but the Speaker as a Member and as presiding officer is entitled to the respect of all Members.

MR. WISE: But what about the Speaker? Is the Speaker as Speaker entitled to any different level of attention or respect than any other Member in the Chamber?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Speaker is entitled to respect. . . .

MR. WISE: Is it the Chair's position that no questions can be raised about the Speaker's personal financial dealings?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: There are proper channels in the House for questioning the conduct of Members, including the Speaker. . . .

MR. WISE: With a privileged resolution or an ethics resolution not pending, is it appropriate to question any of the financial dealings of the Speaker in the context of 1-minute speeches or other activities?

MR. [TOM] DELAY [of Texas]: Regular order.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair is entertaining a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

Simply put, in debate references personally to the Speaker are not in order. . . .

MR. [ROBERT G.] TORRICELLI [of New Jersey]: Mr. Speaker, a further parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. Speaker, while the Chair has ruled, it must now be clear to all Members that the comity of this House and our ability to proceed depends upon an understanding of the Chair's ruling. I would therefore inquire as to what precedents the Chair has relied upon. . . .

Clearly there are Members of the institution who recall that . . . a Member of this institution came to the floor raising questions about former Speaker Wright's publishing activities. Did therefore the Parliamentarian at any time rule that those inquiries were inappropriate? . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would state that on June 15, 1988, Speaker pro tempore at that point Tom Foley cautioned all Members to avoid personal references to the conduct of the Speaker and to those who brought charges.

MR. TORRICELLI: Mr. Speaker, my parliamentary inquiry was this: Was the Member from Georgia's words . . . ever taken down when he rose on the floor and raised questions about the $12,000 publishing deal of Mr. Wright? . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: . . . [T]he Speaker pro tempore announced a standard but did not rule in response to a point of order on that occasion. And more importantly, those words were not challenged at the time. . . .

MR. DINGELL: Mr. Speaker, the Chair has made the ruling that it is not parliamentary language to raise questions by innuendo. May I inquire of the Chair what that means with regard to the right of Members to raise questions about the propriety of the behavior of other Members of this body under either the rules or the statutes of the United States and the House of Representatives?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Personal references to Members are clearly not in order.

MR. DINGELL: What about questions, though, Mr. Speaker, relative to the propriety of the behavior of Members under the rules of the House of Representatives and the laws of the United States? Are those questions still permitted to be raised under the rules and have the rules of the House been changed with regard to those matters? . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman realizes, there are rules and proper channels for bringing conduct of Members before the House.

MR. DINGELL: And I appreciate that, Mr. Speaker, but that does not respond to my question. I asked, are Members now precluded from raising questions about the behavior of other Members of this body?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: It would depend upon whether it was a personality in the debate.

MR. DINGELL: Have the rules been changed to effect a different order of precedents and dignity to the Speaker? Is he now treated differently than other Members of this body so that questions about propriety of behavior of other Members may be raised but questions about the propriety of the behavior of the Speaker may not now be raised?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Simply put, personalities in regard to all Members should not be part of the debate.

On the following day,⁽⁶⁾ a point of order was raised concerning the account in the Congressional Record of the Chair's ruling, and further discussion ensued with respect to the limits placed on Members' references to others, including the Speaker:

MR. [BARNEY] FRANK of Massachusetts: Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁷⁾ The gentleman from Massachusetts is recognized.

MR. FRANK of Massachusetts: Mr. Speaker, at the beginning of this session, the House adopted a new rule which says the Congressional Record shall be a substantially verbatim account of remarks made during the proceedings of the House, subject only to technical, grammatical, and typographical corrections authorized by the Member making the remarks involved.

In the Congressional Record that we received this morning, reflecting yesterday's proceedings, at page H301 in the transcript of the remarks of the Speaker pro tempore, the gentleman from Florida, there are two changes that were made between what he, in fact, said and what is in the Record.

The first change is as follows:

He said yesterday with regard to the statements of the gentlewoman from Florida about the book of the Speaker, "It is the Speaker's opinion that innuendo and personal references to the Speaker's conduct are not in order."

That has been altered and that does not appear verbatim in the Congressional Record. Instead, it says, "It is the Speaker's opinion that innuendo and critical references to the Speaker's personal conduct are not in order."

Additionally, later on in response to a parliamentary inquiry from the gentleman from Missouri, the Speaker pro tempore said, as I recollect it, "It has been the Chair's ruling, and the precedents of the House support this, a higher level of respect is due to the Speaker."

In the Congressional Record that has been changed to "a proper level of respect."

Now, I do not believe that changing "personal" to "critical" and "proper" to

6. See 141 CONG. REC. p. ____, 104th Cong. 1st Sess., Jan. 19, 1995.

7. David Dreier (Calif.).

“higher” is either technical, grammatical, or typographical. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair might respond to the gentleman.

The Chair would recite from the manual that in accordance with existing, accepted practices, the Speaker may make such technical or parliamentary insertions, or corrections in transcript as may be necessary to conform to rule, custom, or precedent. The Chair does not believe that any revision changed the meaning of the ruling.

The Chair would under the circumstances inform the House on behalf of the Parliamentarian that the new rule is as it might apply to the role of the Chair will be examined. . . .

MR. DINGELL: . . . Yesterday the Speaker then presiding made a ruling which now appears in the precedents of the House. It interpreted the precedents of the House. It related to the rights, the behaviors, the dignities of the Members, and it dictated the future course of conduct of Members of this body.

Is the Chair informing us that the rulings of the Chair yesterday stand, that the rulings of the Chair yesterday have been changed without approval by the House? . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair must reiterate that the principles of decorum in debate relied on by the Chair yesterday with respect to words taken down are not new to the 104th Congress.

First, clause 1 of rule XIV establishes an absolute rule against engaging in personality in debate where the subject of a Member’s conduct is not the pending question.

Second, it is the long and settled practice of the House over many Congresses to enforce that standard by demands from the floor that words be taken down under rule XIV. Although the rule enables the Chair to take initiative to address breaches of order, the Chair normally defers to demands that words be taken down in the case of references to Members of the House. On occasion, however, the Chair has announced general standards of proper reference to Members, as was the case on June 15, 1988. There, in response to a series of 1-minute speeches and special order debates focusing on the conduct of the Speaker as the subject of an ethical complaint and on the motives of the Member who filed the complaint, the Chair stated as follows:

Thus, the Chair would caution all Members not to use the 1-minute period or special orders, as has already happened, to discuss the conduct of Members of the House in a way that inevitably engages in personalities.

Third, longstanding precedents of the House provide that the stricture against personalities has been enforced collaterally with respect to criticism of the Speaker even when intervening debate has occurred. This separate treatment is recorded in volume 2 of Hinds’ Precedents, at section 1248.

Finally, a complaint against the conduct of the Speaker is presented directly for the action of the House and not by way of debate on other matters. As Speaker Thomas B. Reed of Maine explained in 1897, criticism of past conduct of the presiding officer is out of order not because he is above criticism but, instead, because of the tendency of piecemeal criticism to impair the good order of the House.

Speaker Reed's rationale is recorded in volume 5 of Hinds' Precedents section 5188 from which the Chair now quotes as follows:

The Chair submits to the House that allusions or criticisms of what the Chair did at some past time is certainly not in order not because the Chair is above criticism or above attack but for two reasons: first, because the Speaker is the Speaker of the House, and such attacks are not conducive to the good order of the House; and, second, because the Speaker cannot reply to them except in a very fragmentary fashion, and it is not desirable that he should reply to them. For these reasons, such attacks ought not be made.

Based on these precedents, the Chair was justified in concluding that the words challenged on yesterday were in their full context out of order as engaging in personalities. . . .

MR. DINGELL: . . . My question is: What is now the status of the original ruling by the previous occupant of the chair in connection with the matter of the 1-minute yesterday and the remarks of the gentlewoman from Florida? . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: In response to the gentleman's parliamentary inquiry, the Chair has interpreted there will not be a change based on the precedents that have been established. The statement that appeared in the Record was not different than that that had been provided. . . . [T]he revisions that were made were technical and not substantive. That is the ruling of the Chair. . . .

MR. [RICHARD J.] DURBIN [of Illinois]: . . . If I might, I would like to ask the Chair's position as to whether Members in statements on the floor can make any references to activities of Members which may raise ethical questions.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair must reiterate that the principles of decorum in debate relied on by the Chair yesterday with respect to words taken down are not new to the 104th Congress.

First, clause 1 of rule 14 establishes an absolute rule against engaging in personality in debate where the subject of a Member's conduct is not the pending question.

Second, it is the long and settled practice of the House over many Congresses to enforce that standard by demands from the floor that words be taken down under rule 14. Although the rule enables the Chair to take initiative to address breaches of order, the Chair normally defers to demands that words be taken down in the case of references to Members of the House. . . .

MR. DURBIN: . . . I just would like to ask two questions by parliamentary inquiry and then I will sit down. I thank the Chair for rereading the ruling. It is improving every time he reads. But I would ask this question. Can a Member during the course of a 1-minute make any reference to an activity of another Member, including the Speaker, which has taken place outside this Chamber?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Based on the precedents, only a factual reference can be made.

MR. DURBIN: A factual reference can be made.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Without any suggestions whatsoever of impropriety.

MR. DURBIN: One further inquiry. Does this limitation in terms of reference to personal conduct beyond factual conduct apply to those who serve in Government and the executive branch as well as the legislative branch?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: It applies to the President of the United States.

MR. DURBIN: Does it apply to anyone else serving in the executive branch?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: It applies to the President of the United States.

The gentleman from Michigan.

MR. [DAVID E.] BONIOR [of Michigan]: Parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker, and this will be the final comment by me on this issue. We are eager to get on with the business of the House. But there are some very fundamental issues, as we have heard on the floor this morning, at stake here. We are being told that the Speaker is being placed above criticism and comments.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman is incorrect in drawing that conclusion.

§ 58. Criticism of Legislative Actions or Proposals

While it has been held unparliamentary to arraign the motives of Members⁽⁸⁾ or their legislative actions, the content of an introduced bill or amendment can be criticized.⁽⁹⁾ Whether a legislative action is good or bad, needed or not, is after all the essence of legislative deliberation.⁽¹⁰⁾ The forces in society which sway legislative decisions are "fair game" in debate;⁽¹¹⁾ and it has been held within the bounds of propriety to indicate the relative importance of Member-sponsorship.⁽¹²⁾ Criticism of legislative tactics has been upheld.⁽¹³⁾

Criticism of Bills

§ 58.1 Words uttered in debate criticizing a bill, as distinguished from a Member, are held in order.

On Jan. 31, 1946,⁽¹⁴⁾ while the Committee of the Whole was considering a bill providing for appointment of fact-finding boards to investigate labor disputes, the following words were used by Mr. Emanuel Celler, of New York, in criticism of the bill: "and, to quote the Bible, 'would they be like a fool who returneth to his folly, or a dog that returneth to his vomit?'"

Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that since the name of no Member was mentioned, the words taken down were merely an opinion of a measure before the House and therefore not unparliamentary.

§ 58.2 A statement in debate that if a certain Member sponsors a measure it would receive one or two votes was held in order.

On June 12, 1934,⁽¹⁵⁾ Mr. Claude A. Fuller, of Arkansas, stated in debate, referring to Mr. Charles V. Truax, of Ohio, "The very fact that he espouses a measure . . . is a self-evident fact that it will only receive 1 or 2 votes in the entire House." Speaker Henry T. Rainey, of Illinois, ruled that the words were not objectionable but a matter of judgment, and declined to sustain Mr. Truax's claim that the language was a deliberate falsehood.

Criticism of Amendments

§ 58.3 A statement in debate that an amendment offered to a bill would be viewed by every lawyer in America as having no effect on the bill was held in order.

On Feb. 20, 1946,⁽¹⁶⁾ Mr. Malcolm C. Tarver, of Georgia, stated

15. 78 CONG. REC. 11177, 73d Cong. 2d Sess.

16. 92 CONG. REC. 1500, 1501, 79th Cong. 2d Sess.

as follows on an amendment to a bill for school lunch programs:

. . . There is not a lawyer in America who is worthy to be called a lawyer but who knows that the adoption of this language neither adds to nor takes from a single item of the substance of this bill.

The Committee of the Whole rose and Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that the language used was an opinion expressed on a measure which did not reflect upon the character of any Member, and was therefore in order.

§ 58.4 A statement in debate that a member "has already admitted that his amendment does not make sense, and he will take any alternative that is offered" was held not a breach of order.

On Jan. 21, 1964,⁽¹⁷⁾ Mr. Peter H. B. Frelinghuysen, Jr., of New Jersey, stated of an amendment offered by Mr. Adam C. Powell, of New York, "Mr. Chairman, it seems to me the gentleman from New York has already admitted his amendment does not make sense, and he will take any alternative that is offered." Mr. Powell demanded that the words be taken down, and Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, ruled that the words objected to were not violative of the rules of the House.

17. 110 CONG. REC. 756, 88th Cong. 2d Sess.

§ 58.5 A reference to an amendment that “where I come from the people do not like slippery, snide, and sharp practices” was held in order as not reflecting on any Member.

On July 26, 1951,⁽¹⁸⁾ Mr. John J. Rooney, of New York, while discussing opposition amendments to a pending bill, stated as follows:

. . . Where I come from great faith is put on a man's ability to stand up and fight for what he believes and what he thinks is best for the country. The people in my district do not like slippery, snide, and sharp practices.

Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, demanded that the words be taken down, and Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled as follows:

. . . The Chair does not think that it should offend anybody for the gentleman from New York [Mr. Rooney] to brag of his constituents, as to their character or as to their ability. It appears to the Chair that these words were spoken with reference to an amendment and not with respect to a Member of the House of Representatives; and therefore, there is no reflection on any Member of the House.

18. 97 CONG. REC. 8968, 8969, 82d Cong. 1st Sess.

§ 58.6 The Speaker ruled out of order remarks in debate characterizing the motivation for an amendment as “demagogic” and “racist.”

On Dec. 13, 1973,⁽¹⁹⁾ the Committee of the Whole was considering H.R. 11450, the Energy Emergency Act. Mr. John D. Dingell, of Michigan, offered an amendment to prohibit the use of petroleum for the busing of school children beyond the nearest public school. In debate on the amendment, Ms. Bella S. Abzug, of New York, stated as follows:

An amendment like this can only be demagogic or racist because it is only demagoguery or racism which impels such an amendment like this.

Mr. Robert E. Bauman, of Maryland, demanded that the words be taken down, and Ms. Abzug responded that her language had not in any way impugned the motives of Mr. Dingell.

The Committee rose and Speaker Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, ruled as follows:

On May 4, 1943 . . . Speaker Rayburn held:

Statement by Newsome of Minnesota that, “I do not yield to any more demagogues,” held not in order.

It is the opinion of the Chair that the statements reported to the House are within the framework of this ruling, and without objection the words are therefore stricken from the Record.

19. 119 CONG. REC. 41270, 41271, 93d Cong. 1st Sess.

Criticism of Opponents

§ 58.7 A reference in debate accusing opponents of the repeal of a law of possessing blind, slavish, and shameful opposition to repeal was held in order as merely an argument for the repeal or amendment of a law.

On Feb. 6, 1950,⁽²⁰⁾ Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, demanded that the following words used in debate by Mr. Anthony Cavalcante, of Pennsylvania, be taken down:

Mr. Speaker, the friends of the Taft-Hartley law show the nature of their mind by their constant opposition to all congressional effort to pass laws that will protect labor against the predatory traits of their masters. This nature is seen in their blind opposition to the repeal of any part of that infamous law; in their slavish opposition to the passage of a more adequate and just social-security law; in their shameful opposition to a Federal national-health program; and in their illogical opposition to put teeth in the coal-mine inspection law.

Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that the words were not unparliamentary since merely an argument for the repeal or amendment of law.

20. 96 CONG. REC. 1513, 81st Cong. 2d Sess.

§ 58.8 A statement in debate accusing colleagues who opposed a measure of "loose talk" was held merely an expression of opinion mentioning no Member by name and not a breach of order.

On May 6, 1941,⁽¹⁾ the following words used in debate in the Committee of the Whole were demanded to be taken down:

If everybody would talk as loosely and recklessly with the truth as some of these opponents of the administration measures that they are carrying on, it is no wonder there is confusion.

The Committee rose, and Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that the language objected to simply expressed an opinion that certain things bring about confusion in the House and mentioned no Member of the House by name. Therefore the words were not violative of the rules of the House.

§ 58.9 A statement in debate that sinister influences were working to the interest of certain Members allegedly conducting a filibuster was held not to be a breach of order.

1. 87 CONG. REC. 3670, 77th Cong. 1st Sess.

On Mar. 23, 1936,⁽²⁾ the following words used in debate were demanded to be taken down:

Owing to the fact that one or two men want to carry on a filibuster, opposed to the people of the District of Columbia receiving some relief. They are today being gouged by real-estate men. I wonder if the sinister influences are working to the best interests of these gentlemen.

The Committee of the Whole rose and the words objected to were reported to the House. Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, ruled as follows:

There is no reference in the language to just who is carrying on a filibuster, if one has been carried on during the day. [Laughter.] The Chair is not in position to say that there has been a filibuster carried on. We have had a number of roll calls. The Chair is not going to say officially that there has been an actual filibuster. No reference is made to any particular Member of the House in the remarks of the gentleman from Indiana.

The Chair fails to see anything objectionable in the language referred to, and so holds.

“Withholding” Votes

§ 58.10 A statement in debate referring to a tactic of “withholding” votes until it could be determined whether they would be necessary on the pending question was held in order.

2. 80 CONG. REC. 4235, 74th Cong. 2d Sess.

On July 27, 1965,⁽³⁾ the following words used in debate by Mr. Charles E. Goodell, of New York, were taken down:

I would be very interested on this particular issue if we are going to have a repeat of the exhibition on the housing vote with the gentlemen withholding votes and seeing how they are necessary on the issue that comes before us. I hope that this will not be repeated.

Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, overruled the point of order, stating that the remarks did not reflect on any Member's motives or votes.

Criticizing Action of House Conferees

§ 58.11 The Speaker has applied the rules governing propriety of debate to posters and charts in the Speaker's Lobby, ordering their removal if the language would have given rise to a challenge if uttered on the floor of the House.

On June 5, 1930, the House discussed the action of the Speaker in ordering removed from the Speaker's Lobby placards posted

3. 111 CONG. REC. 18441, 89th Cong. 1st Sess.

by a Member criticizing the action of House conferees on a particular bill (H.R. 2667, a tariff bill).⁽⁴⁾

Speaker Nicholas Longworth, of Ohio, stated that he had ordered removed the placard under his authority granted by Rule I clause 3, empowering him to exercise control over the corridors and passages and unappropriated rooms in the House side of the Capitol. The Speaker also stated that “the Chair was of the opinion that at least two of the sentences in that document were sentences which, if pronounced on the floor of the House, would have been subject to being taken down, and were not in order, and, by analogy, the Chair thinks it is even more improper to have such publications posted where no one can criticize them.”

The Speaker read the following objectionable language of the placard:

3. The House conferees, in violation of the gentleman's agreement and in disregard of the positive mandate of the House, voted lumber used by the farmers on the dutiable list and polls and ties used by the public utilities on the free list.

4. The conferees are the servants of the House, not its masters. Will the Members by their votes condone the violation of the gentleman's agreement and the disregard of the positive mandate of the House on the part of its conferees?

4. 72 CONG. REC. 10122, 10123, 71st Cong. 2d Sess.

The Speaker stated that the truth or falsity of the document was not material, but whether the document cast doubt upon the worthiness of the motives of the conferees was relevant to his decision.⁽⁵⁾

§ 58.12 While it may be appropriate in debate to characterize the effect of an amendment as deceptive or hypocritical, the Speaker has ruled out of order words taken down in Committee of the Whole characterizing the motivation of a Member in offering an amendment as deceptive and hypocritical.

During consideration of the Department of Education Organization Act of 1979 (H.R. 2444) in the Committee of the Whole, certain words used in debate were reported to the House and ruled out of order by the Speaker. The pro-

5. Rule I clause 3, House Rules and Manual §623 (1995) provides: “He [the Speaker] shall have general control, except as provided by rule or law, of the Hall of the House, and of the corridors and passages and the disposal of the unappropriated rooms in that part of the Capitol assigned to the use of the House, until further order.”

ceedings of June 12, 1979,⁽⁶⁾ were as follows:

MR. [HENRY B.] GONZALEZ [of Texas]: Mr. Chairman, I expected resistance to this amendment and not necessarily my getting involved. I am not a member of this committee. But this amendment is probably the most detrimental to the main purposes of equal opportunity of education to the most needed segments of our society that has been presented thus far and probably could ever be presented. The insidiousness of the amendment is compounded by the sponsor's deceptive—I should say hypocritical—presentation of this amendment, disguising it as a quota prohibition.

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Chairman, I demand that the words be taken down.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁷⁾ The Clerk will report the words objected to. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN: The Committee will rise. . . .

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁸⁾ The Clerk will report the words objected to.

The Clerk read as follows: . . .

The insidiousness of the amendment is compounded by the sponsor's deceptive—I should say hypocritical—presentation of this amendment, disguising it as a quota prohibition.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair is ready to rule.

The Chair, having read the references concerning deception and hypoocrisy, will state that there have been previous opinions by the Chair that there is nothing wrong with using the word, "deceptive," or the word, "hypocritical," in characterizing an amendment's effect but when a Member so characterizes the motivation of a Member in offering an amendment that is not in order.

Consequently, the words in the last sentence read by the Clerk are unparliamentary and without objection, the offensive words are stricken from the Record.

§ 59. Criticism of Statements or Tactics in Debate

In order that free debate and discussion be preserved in the House, Members may argue with wide latitude against statements made on the floor by other Members.⁽⁹⁾ But criticism of a Member's statements in debate may not extend to personal attacks,⁽¹⁰⁾ and the use of certain derogatory terms, such as "disgraceful"⁽¹¹⁾ or "demagogic"⁽¹²⁾ may be ruled out as unparliamentary. However, criticism of legislative tactics has been upheld.⁽¹³⁾

“Confusing the Issue” in Debate

§ 59.1 A statement in debate accusing a Member of intentionally confusing an issue was held in order.

On Sept. 25, 1951,⁽¹⁴⁾ Mr. Wayne L. Hays, of Ohio, stated in debate: “I do not want you to stand up there and try to becloud the issue. What you are trying to do is make out that we are helping our enemies, when the very purpose of this act is to encourage our friends and to make them strong so that we can combat the people that we may have to fight against.”

Mr. Howard H. Buffett, of Nebraska, demanded that the words be taken down and Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that they were not unparliamentary and that there was nothing in the words that should be offensive to anybody.

Characterizing Argument as “Crime”

§ 59.2 A statement in debate that another Member “was guilty of that crime”—referring to such Member’s allegedly unwarranted attacks and arguments—was held to be in order.

On July 23, 1935,⁽¹⁵⁾ Mr. Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, rose to object to the following language used in debate by Mr. John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts:

The gentleman from New York [Mr. Fish], whether he intended it or not, is guilty of that crime; not only a few days ago, but is again guilty of the same crime on this occasion.

On the request of Speaker Pro Tempore John J. O’Connor, of New York, the words immediately preceding the language objected to were also read:

I respect men who fight hard. I respect men, members of the Republican Party and the Democratic Party, who fight hard for their party, but who fight clean. I respect men who make constructive criticisms; but my general respect for men is somewhat lost when they depart from what should be and what ordinarily is their general conduct and enter into the field of unnecessary, unfair, and unwarranted attacks and arguments.

15. 79 CONG. REC. 11699, 74th Cong. 1st Sess.

The Speaker Pro Tempore ruled as follows on the point of order:

The Chair may state, even though it may be gratuitous, that from his personal standpoint there has grown up in this House a ridiculous habit of causing the words of a Member to be taken down, which course often consumes a great deal of time; and, as the Chair said on the floor the other day, it appears to have come to pass recently that a Member cannot even say "boo" to another Member without some Member demanding that the words be taken down. This practice has become reductio ad absurdum. . . .

For the gentleman from Massachusetts to state that what the gentleman from New York did or said was a "crime", in the opinion of the present occupant of the chair, is but a loose expression—a word commonly used as a mere figure of speech. The word "wrong" in the dictionary is a synonym for "crime", and the Chair holds that the use of the word "crime", under the particular circumstances, is not unparliamentary language; and the gentleman from Massachusetts may proceed.

The House then rejected an appeal from the decision of the Chair.

"Disgraceful" Argument

§ 59.3 A statement in debate referring to another Member as speaking in a disgraceful and unparliamentary manner was held not in order.

On May 16, 1946,⁽¹⁶⁾ Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, objected to the use of certain words in debate by Mr. Arthur G. Klein, of New York, in the Committee of the Whole. The words were taken down, the Committee rose, and Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that the words were unparliamentary.

16. 92 CONG. REC. 5106, 79th Cong. 2d Sess.

Parliamentarian's Note: The words objected to and stricken from the Record read as follows: "The gentleman took the floor and in his self-appointed role as spokesman for the Committee referred to me in my absence in a disgraceful and unparliamentary manner."

§ 59.4 A statement in debate charging another Member with using disgraceful language was on demand taken down and ruled out of order.

On Feb. 12, 1946,⁽¹⁷⁾ Mr. Hugh DeLacy, of Washington, used the following language in debate:

I am standing here today to state to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Rankin] that we do not propose to permit this kind of language to be indulged in on this floor. It is disgraceful.

Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that the language used was unparliamentary.

17. 92 CONG. REC. 1241, 79th Cong. 2d Sess.

“Intemperate” Argument§ 59.5 A reference in debate to another Member’s statement as “intemperate” was held not to be a breach of order.

On Aug. 1, 1963,⁽¹⁸⁾ Mr. James C. Wright, Jr., of Texas, referred to Mr. H.R. Gross, of Iowa, as attacking the Secretary of the Navy in an “intemperate way.” Mr. Gross demanded that the words be taken down and Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, ruled that the language used was not objectionable, since the word “intemperate” might be used just as the word “improper” might be used in debate.

§ 59.6 The Presiding Officer of the Senate ruled that the words “the intemperate inference, the thinly veiled implication in which some have indulged” in reference to his colleagues were not unparliamentary.

On May 14, 1964,⁽¹⁹⁾ during debate on a resolution relating to an investigation, Senator Michael J. Mansfield, of Montana, described his colleagues arguments with the words, “the intemperate inference,

18. 109 CONG. REC. 13865, 13866, 88th Cong. 1st Sess.

19. 110 CONG. REC. 10926–31, 88th Cong. 2d Sess.

the thinly veiled implication in which some have indulged.” Senator Clifford P. Case, of New Jersey, rose to make a point of order against the language used by Senator Mansfield. Presiding Officer Edward M. Kennedy, of Massachusetts, ruled that under the rules of the Senate, the language used was not objectionable. Senator Case attempted to appeal the ruling of the Chair but the Chair ruled that the expiration of the time limitation for debate and adoption of a motion to table carried the appeal to the table.

“Ludicrous” Argument§ 59.7 A reference to another Member’s remarks in debate as “ludicrous” were objected to but withdrawn before a ruling was made.

On May 11, 1964,⁽²⁰⁾ Mr. H. R. Gross, of Iowa, stated as follows: “Does the gentleman think this will give the gentleman from New York [Mr. John J. Rooney], ample opportunity to make ludicrous statements such as he did the other day with respect to the cost of amendments?”

When Mr. Rooney demanded that the words be taken down, Mr. Gross obtained unanimous consent to withdraw the word “ludicrous.”

20. 110 CONG. REC. 10448, 88th Cong. 2d Sess.

Characterizing Debate as Unfair

§ 59.8 It was held not unparliamentary to assert that remarks in debate tended to attack the character of other speakers rather than meet their arguments, particularly since the assertion included a disclaimer conceding possible lack of intention to impugn any Member’s motives.

During consideration of H.R. 2760 (prohibition on covert aid in Nicaragua) in the Committee of the Whole on July 28, 1983,⁽¹⁾ it was demonstrated that when a demand is made in Committee for words to be taken down, the Committee rises automatically and reports the words to the House:

MR. [DAVID R.] OBEY [of Wisconsin]: I am concerned, as I said, about the statements that I have heard on the floor today, because I believe that what they have a tendency to do, even though that may not be the intention, I think they have the tendency to try to assassinate the character of the person making the statement rather than to effectively assassinate the argument.

MR. [C.W. BILL] YOUNG of Florida: Mr. Chairman, I demand that the gentleman’s words be taken down. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽²⁾ The Committee will rise.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. Natcher, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 2760) to amend the Intelligence Authorization Act for fiscal year 1983 to prohibit U.S. support for military or paramilitary operations in Nicaragua and to authorize assistance, to be openly provided to governments of countries in Central America, to interdict the supply of military equipment from Nicaragua and Cuba . . . certain words used in debate were objected to and on request were taken down and read at the Clerk’s desk, and he herewith reported the same to the House.

THE SPEAKER:⁽³⁾ The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union reports that during the consideration of the bill, H.R. 2760, certain words used in the debate were objected to [and] taken down and read at the Clerk’s desk and does now report the words objected to to the House.

The Clerk will report the words objected to. . . .

The words having been read, and the gentleman from Wisconsin having very definitely included in his statement a disclaimer that he does not impugn the motives or intentions of any Member of the House, in the opinion of the Chair, in his legislative argument the words of the gentleman from Wisconsin are not unparliamentary and the gentleman may proceed.

1. 129 CONG. REC. 21461, 21462, 98th Cong. 1st Sess.

2. William H. Natcher (Ky.).

3. Thomas P. O’Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

The Committee will resume its sitting.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill, H.R. 2760, with Mr. Natcher in the chair.

Parliamentarian's Note: The Speaker's ruling should not be taken to mean that a Member may say anything in debate as long as it is accompanied by a disclaimer of intent to impugn the motives of another Member, although in this instance the inclusion of the disclaimer made it easier to hold the words in order.

§ 59.9 Clause 1 of Rule XIV, requiring all Members engaging in debate to "avoid personality" applies to the Speaker when he takes the floor in debate; and on one occasion, the Speaker's opinion expressed in debate that a Member had deliberately stood in the well before an empty House and challenged the Americanism of other Members, "and it is the lowest thing that I have ever seen in my thirty-two years in Congress" was held to constitute an unparliamentary characterization of that Member's motives and actions and was ruled out of order on a demand that the words be taken down.

On May 15, 1984,⁽⁴⁾ a demand was made that Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill's words, spoken from the floor, be taken down, as indicated below:

MR. [THOMAS P.] O'NEILL [Jr., of Massachusetts]: . . . My personal opinion is this: You deliberately stood in that well before an empty House and challenged these people, and you challenged their Americanism, and it is the lowest thing that I have ever seen in my 32 years in Congress.

MR. [NEWT] GINGRICH [of Georgia]: Mr. Speaker, if I may reclaim my time, let me say first of all that—

MR. [TRENT] LOTT [of Mississippi]: Mr. Speaker, I demand that the Speaker's words be taken down.⁽⁵⁾

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁶⁾ Words will be taken down.

The Clerk will report the words.

The Clerk read as follows:

My personal opinion is that you deliberately stood in that well before an empty House and challenged these people and you challenged their Americanism and it is the lowest thing that I have ever seen in my 32 years in Congress. . . .

MR. LOTT: If the Chair would rule, I have a request that I would like to make.

5. On an earlier occasion (Feb. 12, 1798), words spoken by Speaker Jonathan Dayton, of New Jersey, were ruled out of order as he participated in debate in Committee of the Whole. See 2 Hinds' Precedents § 1367 (note).
6. John Joseph Moakley (Mass.).

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair feels that that type of characterization should not be used in debate.

MR. LOTT: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent at this point that the Speaker be allowed to continue in order. . . .

Our point has been made. I think that we want to change the tenor of this debate and we should now proceed on a higher plane with this debate. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi?

There was no objection. . . .

MR. O'NEILL: I am not questioning the gentleman's patriotism, I am questioning his judgment. I also question the judgment of the Chair. . . .

MR. [VIN] WEBER [of Minnesota]: A point of parliamentary inquiry. . . .

Do the rules of the House apply to the Speaker of the House?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The rules of the House apply to all Members of the House.

Parliamentarian's Note: The Speaker's words, though ruled to be unparliamentary, were not ordered stricken from the Record by the House; the Chair did not so order and no other Member moved that the words be stricken.

§ 59.10 A Member's statement during debate that another Member's demand that words be taken down during a special-order speech was "an unfair stealing of time" was held not to be unparliamentary, as not necessarily implying an illegal action.

tary, as not necessarily implying an illegal action.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Feb. 27, 1985:⁽⁷⁾

MR. [BOB] MCEWEN [of Ohio]: . . . I [have] observed what I see as an increasing parliamentary maneuver to destroy and steal the time of people who are trying to present their position on the floor of this House. . . . I have seen a significant deterioration over recent years of the privilege and courtesy of Members to yield time. When a debate is progressing in a direction [with] which they disagree, they take upon themselves the courtesy that is usually extended another Member, that of yielding, grab the microphone and continue to shout, "Will the gentleman yield"? until such time as his train of thought is destroyed or his point has been stopped.

When that is unsuccessful, I have observed on more recent occasions an effort to request that words be taken down which, upon their repetition by the Clerk, are obviously not offensive to anyone, and yet the debate has been destroyed and an effort has been made to prevent the point that the speaker was attempting to present from going forward. . . . I think the Members should be allowed to express themselves during special orders without this kind of unfair stealing of time. . . .

MR. [ANDREW] JACOBS [Jr., of Indiana]: Mr. Speaker, I demand the words be taken down.

7. 131 CONG. REC. 3899, 3900, 99th Cong. 1st Sess.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁸⁾ The Clerk will report the words taken down.

The Clerk read as follows:

. . . I think the Members should be allowed to express themselves during special orders without this kind of unfair stealing of time.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair thinks in the connotation that the words were used, there is no allegation of illegality. The words are not unparliamentary, in the opinion of the Chair. . . .

MR. MCEWEN: Mr. Speaker, I wish to make it abundantly clear that at no time in my presentation did I accuse anyone or intend to imply that anyone was stealing anything.

MR. JACOBS: Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my point of order.

§ 60. Critical References to Members

The form and the substance of a Member's reference to another Member in debate are regulated by the rules and longstanding practice of the House. So that "order, decency, and regularity be preserved in a dignified public body,"⁽⁹⁾ the motives of Members may not be impugned or their personalities attacked,⁽¹⁰⁾ and inde-

10. For a distinction between general language used in debate and that in-cent or grossly accusatory language may not be used in criticizing a Member. Indeed, Rule XIV provides that a Member must confine himself to the question under debate, avoiding personality.⁽¹¹⁾

The proper procedure to be followed when objectionable words are used in reference to a Member is the demand that they be "taken down,"⁽¹²⁾ and the House has on occasion demanded an apology from or reconciliation between hostile Members.⁽¹³⁾

Senate rules of proceedings are similar to those of the House, the Standing Rules of the Senate prohibiting remarks in debate imputing conduct or motive unworthy of a Senator to one or more of his colleagues.⁽¹⁴⁾ volving personalities, see 5 Hinds' Precedents § 5153.

The Speaker may intervene in debate to prevent breaches of order in referring to personalities. See 5 Hinds' Precedents § 5163.

Breaches of order include sarcastic or satirical compliments; see 5 Hinds' Precedents §§ 5165, 5167, 5168.

Members may be censured for invoking personalities in debate; see 2 Hinds' Precedents §§ 1251, 1253, 1254, 1259.

11. Rule XIV clause 1, House Rules and Manual § 749 (1995).

12. See § 49, supra.

13. See 2 Hinds' Precedents §§ 1651, 2648, 2650.

14. See Rule XIX clause 2, Standing Rules of the Senate § 19.2 (1975).

The rules against engaging in personalities in debate have applied uniformly whenever questions of order have been raised respecting personal references, whether in legislative debate, during special orders, or in extension of remarks. Obtaining a special order with the specific purpose of discussing a topic such as “ethics in the House” does not change these standards precluding personal references in debate. Neither does informing a colleague that his conduct is going to be the subject of discussion on the floor make a subsequent personal reflection less objectionable. “Engaging in personalities” remains contrary to accepted House practice notwithstanding such notification. Where the House has under consideration a resolution involving the conduct of a Member, a wider range of debate is permitted. In the context of a specific legislative proposal involving censure, reprimand, or expulsion, or a proposal advocating an investigation of misconduct, the facts surrounding the resolution may be discussed, but even in these situations debate personally offensive has not been permitted.

For a discussion of Senate principles governing references in debate to Members, see 94 CONG. REC. 8966, 80th Cong. 2d Sess., June 19, 1948 (President Pro Tempore Irving M. Ives [N.Y.]).

Rule XIV, clause 1, prohibits references by one Member in debate to newspaper accounts personally critical of another Member in a way that would be unparliamentary if uttered as the first Member’s own words. Generally, the publication of charges in another forum does not necessarily legitimize references to such charges on the floor of the House. In 1868, a Member from Illinois leveled charges against a Member from Minnesota in an article (apparently a letter to the editor) in a Minnesota newspaper. The House adopted as a question of privilege a resolution enabling a select committee to investigate the matter. The select committee found that the words of the letter, if uttered on the floor of the House, would have been unparliamentary for their tendency to provoke disturbance and disorder in the proceedings but that, as uttered in a newspaper, had no equal tendency.⁽¹⁵⁾

A statement on the floor personally critical of another Member is properly challenged by a demand that the “words be taken down.” A question of personal privilege cannot ordinarily be raised against words used in debate,⁽¹⁶⁾ whether or not the Member making the statement purports to assert it on his own responsibility. However, in 1910, a Member from Arkansas stated on the floor his understanding, apparently derived from the accounts of others, of matters reflecting on the conduct of a Member from New York. The Member from New York was recognized on a question of personal privilege notwithstanding the argument of the Member from Arkansas that he had not made the assertion on his own responsibility but instead had said that he was so informed.⁽¹⁷⁾

Although debate on a privileged resolution recommending disciplinary action against a Member may include comparisons with other such actions taken by or reported to the House for purposes of measuring severity of punishment, it is not in order to discuss the conduct of another Member not the subject of a committee report, or make references to similar conduct of another which is not then the subject of a question pending before the House.⁽¹⁸⁾

Indulging in Personalities

§ 60.1 It is a breach of order in debate to indulge in personalities of other Members or to use unparliamentary language in relation to them.

On Mar. 11, 1936,⁽¹⁹⁾ Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, commented on the subject of the conduct of debate in the House. He cited Rule XIV of the House rules governing the subject and quoted relevant sections of Jefferson's Manual. The Speaker expressed the hope that Members would cease indulging in the personalities of other Members in debate, cease addressing a Member in other than the third person, and expressed his intention to call any Member violating rules of decorum and debate to order. He also requested any Members who would be called upon to preside as Chairman of the Committee of the Whole to pursue a similar practice.⁽²⁰⁾

—Proper Form of Address

§ 60.2 The proper form of reference to another Member is "the gentleman (or gentlewoman) from (state)," and not any other appellation or characterization.

20. See also 96 CONG. REC. 5539, 81st Cong. 2d Sess., Apr. 12, 1950; 80 CONG. REC. 3894, 3895, 74th Cong. 2d Sess., Mar. 17, 1936.

On Oct. 2, 1984,⁽¹⁾ during consideration of the balanced budget bill (H.R. 6300) in the House, the Chair, in responding to a parliamentary inquiry, reminded the Members of the proper form of reference to other Members:

MR. [DANIEL E.] LUNGREN [of California]: Well, Mr. Speaker, thank God this is not a medical research center, because if you believe laetrile cures cancer, you think that Dr. "Feelgood's" bill here on the floor is going to do something, but the fact of the matter is that it has nothing to do with the legislation on the floor; it has to do with the will of the Members of Congress. . . .

MR. [RONALD V.] DELLUMS [of California]: Mr. Speaker, is it a violation of the comity and custom of the House to refer to a Member of this body in terms other than as the gentleman from a particular State?

The Chairman of this committee was referred to as "Dr. Feelgood Jones," and I would think that is in violation of the comity and custom of the House. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽²⁾ The gentleman is correct in stating that it is the custom and practice and tradition of the body that Members of the body should be referred to as the gentleman or gentlewoman from a certain State.

References to Demagoguery

§ 60.3 A statement in debate that a Member would not

1. 130 CONG. REC. 28519, 28520, 98th Cong. 2d Sess.
2. Richard A. Gephardt (Mo.).

"yield to any more demagogues" was held not to avoid personalities and therefore to be unparliamentary and out of order.

On May 4, 1943,⁽³⁾ while Mr. Harold Knutson, of Minnesota, had the floor, Mr. Wright Patman, of Texas, asked him to yield. Mr. Knutson replied "No. I do not yield to any more demagogues." Mr. Patman rose to a point of order and demanded that the words be taken down, and the Committee of the Whole rose. In the House, a third Member, Mr. J. William Ditter, of Pennsylvania, opposed the point of order and cited the dictionary definition of a demagog: "A leader or orator and popular with or identified with the people."

Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, stated that he had passed upon identical language in the past and would conform to his prior ruling, holding that words accusing a Member of demagoguery does not avoid personalities and is therefore a breach of order.

§ 60.4 Reference in debate to a Member as "president of the Demagog Club" was held to be a breach of order.

On Feb. 15, 1940,⁽⁴⁾ Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, demanded that the following words used by Mr. Michael J. Bradley, of Pennsylvania, in debate in relation to Mr. Martin Dies, Jr., of Texas, also a Member of the House, be taken down:

As I say, he is a pretty smart fellow, and, after all, he has not been president of the Demagog Club for 8 years for nothing, without learning how to take care of his prerogatives as far as publicity is concerned.

Speaker Pro Tempore Sam Rayburn, of Texas, found that the point of order presented a “pretty close question, but the Chair feels constrained to hold that in the language the gentleman used he did not avoid personality.”

§ 60.5 The Speaker ruled that language characterizing debate as demagogic was not a breach of order.

On Mar. 26, 1965,⁽⁵⁾ Mr. Frank Thompson, Jr., of New Jersey, stated as follows in debate: “I might suggest further you can beat this dog all you want for political purposes; you can demagog however subtly and try to scare people off at the expense of the Nation’s schoolchildren with your demagoguery—”. Mr. Charles E. Goodell, of New York, demanded that the words be taken down.

5. 111 CONG. REC. 6107, 89th Cong. 1st Sess.

Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, ruled that the language did not violate the rules of the House since Members in debate have reasonable flexibility in expressing their thoughts.

§ 60.6 The Speaker ruled out of order in debate remarks characterizing the motives behind certain legislation as “demagogic and racist.”

On Dec. 13, 1973,⁽⁶⁾ the Committee of the Whole was considering H.R. 11450, the Energy Emergency Act. Mr. John D. Dingell, of Michigan, offered an amendment to prohibit the use of petroleum for the busing of schoolchildren beyond the nearest public school. In debate on the amendment, Ms. Bella S. Abzug, of New York, stated as follows:

An amendment like this can only be demagogic or racist because it is only demagoguery or racism which impels such an amendment like this.

Mr. Robert E. Bauman, of Maryland, demanded that the words be taken down; Ms. Abzug responded that her language had not in any way impugned the motives of Mr. Dingell. The Committee rose and Speaker Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, ruled as follows:

6. 119 CONG. REC. 41271, 93d Cong. 1st Sess.

On May 4, 1943 . . . Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, held:

Statement by Newsome of Minnesota that, "I do not yield to any more demagogues," held not in order.

It is the opinion of the Chair that the statements reported to the House are within the framework of this ruling, and without objection the words are therefore stricken from the Record.

References to Member's Representative Capacity

§ 60.7 A reference in debate to another Member as not representing a certain class of people in his state was held not unparliamentary.

On Apr. 28, 1953,⁽⁷⁾ Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, stated of Mr. Herman P. Eberharter, of Pennsylvania: "you do not represent the hard-working Dutch people up there—not by a long shot. You live in the city where you want everything brought to you." Mr. Eberharter demanded that the words be taken down, but Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, ruled that the words used by Mr. Hoffman did not indicate any intent to reflect upon the character or integrity of Mr. Eberharter, and were therefore not objectionable under House rules.

§ 60.8 A statement by a Member (referring to the actions of another Member on the floor) that "I think in my opinion it was a cheap, sneaky, sly way to operate" was held to be unparliamentary by the Speaker and those words were, on motion, stricken from the Record by the House.

7. 99 CONG. REC. 4126, 83d Cong. 1st Sess.

On Aug. 21, 1974,⁽⁸⁾ the procedure for taking down words in the House, finding those words unparliamentary and striking the offending words from the Record was demonstrated, as set out below:

MR. [THOMAS P.] O'NEILL [Jr., of Massachusetts]: Mr. Speaker, I take this time so I may direct my remarks to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Bauman).

Yesterday, Mr. Speaker, by mutual consent of the leadership on both sides of the aisle and by the members of the Judiciary Committee, I offered to this House a resolution. At the completion of the resolution, Mr. Speaker, I asked that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to extend their remarks and it was objected to, Mr. Speaker, by the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Bauman). He gave a reason at that particular time.

I told him that I thought he should have cleared it with the leadership on his own side of the aisle; but nevertheless, Mr. Speaker, when all the Members had left last night, the gentleman came to the well and asked unanimous consent of the then Speaker of the House who was sitting there, if he may insert his remarks in the Record, with unanimous consent, following the remarks where he had objected.

So, Mr. Speaker, in today's Record on page H8724 you will find the remarks of Mr. Bauman. You will not find the remarks of Mr. McClory, one of the people who had asked me to do this. You will not find the remarks of other members of the Judiciary Committee, who were prepared at that time to put their remarks in the Record; but you will find the remarks of Mr. Bauman and Mr. Bauman alone.

[I just want to say that I think in my opinion it was a cheap, sneaky, sly way to operate.]

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, I demand that the gentleman's words be taken down.

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁹⁾ The gentleman demands that the words be taken down.

The Clerk will report the words objected to. . . .

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. O'Neill: Mr. Speaker, I take this time so I may direct my remarks to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Bauman). . . .

I just want to say that I think in my opinion it was a cheap, sneaky, sly way to operate.

THE SPEAKER: The words in the last sentence are not parliamentary. Without objection, the offending words will be stricken from the Record. . . .

MR. [WAYNE L.] HAYS [of Ohio]: Mr. Speaker, I do object

MR. [B. F.] SISK [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Sisk moves that the words of the gentleman from Massachusetts, Mr. O'Neill, be stricken from the Record.

MR. SISK: Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion.

The previous question was ordered.

THE SPEAKER: The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California.

The motion was agreed to.

§ 60.9 Words that would ordinarily be subject to a point of order in debate as inappropriate references to another Member may be permissible when a resolution to expel such Member is pending, if the words are within the scope of the subject matter of the resolution.

During consideration, on Mar. 1, 1979,⁽¹⁰⁾ of a resolution to expel a Member, such Member was characterized as "arrogant" by another Member.⁽¹¹⁾ No objection was raised, and probably the reference would not in any event have been ruled out of order.

§ 60.10 It is not unparliamentary in debate to charac-terize Members as having praised a foreign dictator in the past in prior debate.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Apr. 12, 1984,⁽¹²⁾ during consideration of House Concurrent Resolution 290 (expressing the sense of Congress that no appropriated funds be used for the purpose of mining the ports or territorial waters of Nicaragua):

MR. [TOM] HARKIN [of Iowa]: I ask the Members to turn the clock back to 1978 and 1979 when all the debates were going on about supporting Somoza. And the same Members who are taking the floor tonight to argue against this resolution are the same Members in 1978 and early 1979 who rose time and time again to tell us how great Somoza was and to tell us how we had to keep arming and supporting General Somoza in Nicaragua. They continually voted to send more arms to Somoza.

MR. [HENRY J.] HYDE [of Illinois]: Will the gentleman yield?

MR. HARKIN: No, of course not.

MR. HYDE: A statement has been made, a misstatement.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹³⁾ The gentleman is out of order.

MR. HYDE: Mr. Speaker, I ask that the gentleman's words be taken down. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The words of the gentleman will be taken down. What specific words?

12. 130 CONG. REC. 9480, 98th Cong. 2d Sess.

13. Steny H. Hoyer (Md.).

MR. HYDE: He said the same people that stood up here tonight were praising Somoza, and I was here in this House then and I have never said a syllable of praise for that man. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Clerk will report the words.

The Clerk read as follows: . . .

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁴⁾ In the opinion of the Chair, the words do not apply to any specific Member⁽¹⁵⁾ in an unparliamentary manner and consequently there has been no infraction of the rules of the House by the gentleman from Iowa.

References to Ethics Charges and Disciplinary Proceedings

§ 60.11 Although debate must avoid personalities under Rule XIV clause 1, discussion as to a Member's official conduct is appropriate, including evidence of charges not sustained by the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, where a disciplinary resolution relating to that Member is pending.

For examples of debate in the House relating to disciplinary resolutions against Members, see § 35.13, supra, discussing the proceedings at 124 CONG. REC. 36976 et seq., 95th Cong. 2d Sess., Oct.

14. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

15. Note: The remarks would probably not be ruled out of order even if referring to a specific Member.

§ 60.12 Where a resolution to expel a Member is pending before the House, a transcript of court proceedings on which the proposal of expulsion is based may be read or inserted in the Record with the permission of the House, and no point of order lies that the House may not consider such information.

For an illustration of proceedings in which permission was sought to read from a transcript of court proceedings, see §80.7, infra.

§ 60.13 In one instance, during a special-order speech urging the future expulsion of a Member who refused to refrain from voting in the House pending his appeal of federal felony convictions relating to his official conduct, another Member read into the Congressional Record the indictment in federal court of the Member in question, where no point of order was raised.

On Feb. 28, 1979,⁽¹⁶⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House:

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁷⁾ Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Gingrich) is recognized for 60 minutes.

MR. [NEWTON L.] GINGRICH [of Georgia]: Mr. Speaker, this evening I have asked for this special order to talk briefly about . . . the question of whether or not a Member should be expelled.

I have requested the gentleman from the 13th District of Michigan refrain from voting precisely because something did happen—he did violate his oath to this House. . . .

[T]omorrow I will offer a privileged motion, the motion of expulsion, immediately before the House takes up its other legislative business for the day. . . .

One of our former colleagues has commented on this issue. . . .

I would like to share with my colleagues a letter he wrote earlier this year:

The letter from Mr. Charles E. Wiggins, former Member from California, stated in part:

There are two aspects to the question posed: Does the House have the power to act under the circumstances? And, if so, should it do so as a matter of sound policy?

The first question is, I believe, free of serious doubt. The source of Congressional power is Article I, Section 5 of the Constitution. . . .

Congressman Diggs has been convicted of multiple counts of a felony which, stripped to its essentials, involves stealing from the public. Whether such an offense is sufficiently serious as to justify his expulsion, I submit to your good judgment. Personally, I believe it does, for the public itself is uniquely the victim of his crime and the circumstances of its commission involve a criminal misuse of the office itself.

Parliamentarian's Note: The reading and insertion of the indictment, and possibly portions of the Wiggins letter, would have been subject to a point of order since in effect impugning the integrity, motives, and official conduct of a Member when a disciplinary measure against the Member was not pending on the floor of the House. Subsequently, Mr. M. Caldwell Butler, of Virginia, obtained unanimous consent to insert the entire indictment in the Record rather than read it from the floor. The effect of such request was to preclude a demand that the words be taken down, inasmuch as the words were not being uttered on the floor. A question of privileges of the House could thereafter have been raised by a resolution to strike the offending words from the Record.

§ 60.14 The Speaker reminded the Members, pending the consideration of a resolution to censure and punish a Member, that while a wide range of discussion relative to such Member was permitted during debate, Rule XIV, clause 1, prohibited personalities in debate and the use of language which is personally abusive.

On July 31, 1979,⁽¹⁸⁾ the Speaker⁽¹⁹⁾ made a statement regarding procedures to be followed during debate of a privileged resolution reported from the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct censuring and punishing a Member, as indicated below:

MR. [CHARLES E.] BENNETT [of Florida]: Mr. Speaker, I call up a privileged resolution (H. Res. 378) in the matter of Representative Charles C. Diggs, Jr., and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 378

Resolved,

(1) that Representative Charles C. Diggs, Junior, be censured

THE SPEAKER: The Chair wishes to make a statement after which the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Bennett) will be recognized for 1 hour.

The Chair must acknowledge the gravity of the pending resolution insofar as the House will be called up to discipline one of its Members. While there should, of course, be an opportunity to debate all aspects of this matter, the Chair wishes to remind Members of the restrictions imposed by clause I, rule XIV, and by the precedents relating to references to Members in debate. These restrictions indicate that Members should refrain from using language which is personally abusive. While a wide range of discussion relating to conduct of the Member in question will be permitted, it is the duty of the Chair to maintain proper decorum in debate. It is the intention of the Chair to enforce the rules.

19. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

§ 60.15 Where several Members had improperly engaged in personalities during debate by references to the Speaker and to a Member who had filed a complaint regarding the Speaker's official conduct, the Speaker Pro Tempore (the Majority Leader) took the Chair to announce to the House that Members should not engage in such debate.

The proceedings of June 14 and 15, 1988, are discussed in §57.5, supra.

§ 60.16 It is not in order in debate to "list Members of the House who have had ethical clouds cast upon them" unless the subjects of a pending report from the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct or otherwise before the House on a question of privilege.

On June 15, 1988,⁽²⁰⁾ Speaker Thomas S. Foley, of Washington, responded to an inquiry regarding the use of personalities in debate. The proceedings were as follows:

(Mr. Schumer asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

MR. [CHARLES E.] SCHUMER [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, Attorney General Meese said yesterday that he had to step down to pursue opportunities in the private sector. . . .

The issue was not just Ed Meese. It was this administration's disdain for Government that led to its appalling lack of ethical standards. Ed Meese is just one fish in a foul sea.

Just consider a partial list of Bush-Reagan appointees who have resigned under a cloud: Richard Allen, Anne Gorsuch Burford, Michael Deaver, John Fedders, Edwin Gray, Rita Lavelle, Robert McFarlane, Lyn Nofziger, Oliver North, Theodore Olsen, Melvyn Paisley, John Poindexter, Paul Thayer, and James Watt. American voters will remember the hall of shame in November.

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, if a Member were to list a similar group of Members of the House who have had an ethical cloud cast upon them, would it be proper to read such a list on the House floor?

20. 134 CONG. REC. 16629, 16630, 100th Cong. 2d Sess.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: It is not proper, as the Chair has previously stated, under the rule against personalities in debate, unless the Members' names are subjects of a report being debated from the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct or are otherwise being raised under questions of privilege.

MR. WALKER: Mr. Speaker, I thank the Chair, because it is very interesting that once again we have this double standard in the House of Representatives, that a Member can come on and criticize the administration and criticize a whole list of people, some of whom have never had any charges brought against them whatsoever, and call that a sleaze factor; but in the House of Representatives, if we have Members of the House who have similar kinds of clouds assigned to them, it cannot be mentioned in this well.

§ 60.17 It is a breach of order under clause 1 of Rule XIV to allege in debate that a Member has engaged in conduct similar to the subject of a complaint pending before the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct against another Member; and under clause 4 of that rule, the Chair takes the initiative in calling to order Members improperly engaging in personalities in debate.

Speaker Pro Tempore G. V. (Sonny) Montgomery, of Mis-issippi, called a Member to order in the House on Mar. 22, 1989,⁽¹⁾ as indicated below:

(Mr. Alexander asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks and to include extraneous material.)

MR. [BILL] ALEXANDER [of Arkansas]: Mr. Speaker, after arriving at the Capitol a few minutes ago on this glorious spring day, I learned that our colleagues on the other side of the aisle have conducted an election for minority whip resulting in the election of the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Gingrich) as minority whip. . . .

I would note to those who are observing that the gentleman from Georgia made his name, so to speak, by a sustained personal attack on the good name of Jim Wright, the Speaker of the House of Representatives who has devoted decades of meritorious service to our country. The gentleman from Georgia alleged that the Speaker has circumvented minimum income limits of Members of Congress by writing a book for which he received a royalty.

Now, it is also to be noted that just this week it was learned that the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Gingrich) also allegedly has a book deal. It is alleged in the Washington Post this week that the gentleman from Georgia received a royalty or a payment in the nature of a royalty. This is apparently similar to the Wright arrangement which is the basis of the gentleman from Georgia's complaint before the Ethics Committee.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would state to the gentleman that he cannot make personal references, as the gentleman has done in his remarks.

1. 135 CONG. REC. 5130, 101st Cong. 1st Sess.

§ 60.18 While comparisons of the recommended disciplinary action pending before the House in a privileged resolution may be made with other such actions taken by or reported to the House by an investigating committee for the purpose of measuring severity of punishment, it is not in order to discuss the conduct of other Members where such conduct has not been the result of a committee reported action.

On Dec. 18, 1987,⁽²⁾ during consideration of a privileged resolution (H. Res. 335, disciplining a Member) in the House, it was held that debate on a resolution recommending a disciplinary sanction against a Member may not exceed the scope of the conduct of the accused Member. The proceedings were as follows:

MR. [JULIAN C.] DIXON [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I call up a privileged resolution (H. Res. 335) in the matter of Representative Austin J. Murphy, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

2. 133 CONG. REC. 36266, 36271, 100th Cong. 1st Sess.

H. RES. 335

Resolved, That the House of Representatives adopt the report by the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct dated December 16, 1987, in the matter of Representative Austin J. Murphy of Pennsylvania.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽³⁾ The gentleman from California [Mr. Dixon] is recognized for 1 hour. . . .

MR. [NEWT] GINGRICH [of Georgia]: Mr. Speaker, I commend the committee for its report and its recommendation. Given the facts, a reprimand is a reasonable recommendation and I will vote "yes" but I sympathize with the plight of Mr. Murphy. We must be careful not to make a scapegoat of the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

This committee's earlier report on the gentleman from Rhode Island should be reexamined with this new yardstick. The committee's letter on the gentlewoman from Ohio should be scrutinized with this new yardstick. The admission of $24,000 in election law violations by the gentleman from California should be held up to this new yardstick.

Finally, the numerous allegations about the Speaker must be—

MR. [TOMMY F.] ROBINSON [of Arkansas]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

I thought we were here today to hear a very serious charge against one of our colleagues from Pennsylvania, not from California or other States.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Will the gentleman suspend? Does the gentleman from Georgia yield?

3. Dave McCurdy (Okla.).

MR. GINGRICH: No, I do not yield, Mr. Speaker.

MR. ROBINSON: Mr. Speaker, I raise a point of order.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state his point of order.

MR. ROBINSON: Mr. Speaker, my point of order is that we are here to consider the committee's report against our colleague Austin Murphy and not against other Members today that the charges have not been substantiated or presented to the committee. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: . . . On the debate currently ongoing, there can be references made to other cases reported by the committee, not by individual or by name. The gentleman from Georgia, as the Chair understands, has not mentioned other individuals and the gentleman from Arkansas—

MR. ROBINSON: Mr. Speaker, he has, too.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman may compare disciplinary actions reported by the committee and should confine his remarks to the matters before the House.

MR. ROBINSON: I have a further parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker. To my knowledge, these charges are not before the committee.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Georgia will proceed in order.

§ 60.19 Reference should not be made in debate to pending investigations undertaken by the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, including suggestions of courses of action, nor should critical characterizations be made of members of that committee who have investigated a Member's conduct.

On Mar. 3, 1995,⁽⁴⁾ the Speaker responded to inquiries made about the propriety of remarks made by a Member with reference to certain investigations:

MR. [HAROLD L.] VOLKMER [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, last year Members of the present majority complained about the investigation by Special Counsel Robert Fiske. They claimed that Fiske was a friend of the White House and that his investigation of Whitewater was not going far enough.

I ask the Members of the House to consider these facts. The current chairman of the House Ethics Committee cast the deciding vote for the Speaker in the 1989 whip's race. The chairman of the Ethics Committee seconded the nomination for Speaker this year. The chairman of our Ethics Committee last year tried to help our current Speaker by closing the pending Ethics Committee complaint against him.

Two other majority members of the House Ethics Committee have had personal dealings with the personal PAC of the Speaker, GOPAC, one of them as a contributor, and another as a recipient for his reelection.

Given these facts, I am sure those who call for a replacement of Special Counsel Fiske will now join me in calling for a special counsel to investigate the allegations against Speaker Gingrich, and it should not take 100 days.

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁵⁾ The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. WALKER: Mr. Speaker, was not the entire speech of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Volkmer], just a moment ago, out of order, because it was a direct reference to Members of this body? . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Members should not refer to pending Standards Committee investigations.

MR. WALKER: I have a further parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state it.

MR. WALKER: Beyond the pending ethics investigation, he also may have had personal references to the chairman of the Ethics Committee. Is that also not out of order?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Members should not so refer to the Standards Committee or any Members thereof.

MR. WALKER: A further parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker. My understanding is that what the gentleman has just done in the House was a speech which was entirely out of order before the body: is that correct?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair is responding in a general way to the proper debate in the House with respect to ethics investigations.

MR. WALKER: I thank the Chair.

MR. VOLKMER: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. VOLKMER: Is the Chair ruling that it is improper for any Member to request a special counsel in an investigation being conducted by the Ethics Committee, which action has not been taken by the Ethics Committee?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Members should not refer to pending Standards Committee investigations, or suggest courses of action within that committee.

MR. VOLKMER: I thank the Chair.

References to Groups of Members

§ 60.20 Clause 1 of Rule XIV proscribes Members in debate from engaging in personalities, including references that an identifiable group of Members (“the Democratic leadership”) committed a crime (“stole” an election).

On Mar. 21, 1989,⁽⁶⁾ the Speaker took the initiative to focus the attention of Members on the prohibition in clause 1 of Rule XIV against Members engaging in personalities during debate and called to order a Member alleging

5. John T. Doolittle (Calif.).

6. 135 CONG. REC. 5016, 5017, 101st Cong. 1st Sess.

that an identifiable group of sitting Members had committed a crime. The proceedings in the House were as follows:

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, bipartisanship in the House has taken a curious twist. It now appears that the Democrat leadership is attempting to influence and interfere in the race for Republican whip. . . .

To those Democrats who have been a part of trying to influence the outcome of this election, let it be noted that the last time you played this game, you stole the Indiana seat from the Republican Party. That outrage and this one tell us more than we need to know about your definition of bipartisanship.

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁷⁾ The gentleman is not proceeding in a parliamentary manner. He used the word "stole." His accusation that Members of the House stole an election is improper, and the gentleman realizes that.

In addition, his imputation that individuals on the broad generic term "House leadership" in an attempt to interfere with his election is also, I think, incorrect, and I would ask the gentleman to reconsider his thoughts on that. . . .

MR. WALKER: Mr. Speaker, instead of "House leadership," should I name names?

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman is engaging in personalities and when he uses words like the word "stole" with reference to an identifiable group of Members, that has been held improper.

§ 60.21 The Speaker ruled that a statement made in Committee of the Whole that another Member should not "let this element over here who advocates unilateral disarmament to browbeat you into thinking they know more than you do" did not refer to or reflect on a particular Member of the House and was therefore in order, but the Speaker cautioned that in the tone or mannerisms of a Member speaking in debate it is not in order to make any statement which would be personally offensive to another Member.

7. James C. Wright, Jr. (Tex.).

On May 26, 1983,⁽⁸⁾ it was demonstrated that, when a demand is made that words spoken in debate in Committee of the Whole be taken down, the words are reported by the Clerk, the Committee rises and the words are reported again to the House, and the Speaker rules whether the words are in order.

MR. [THOMAS F.] HARTNETT [of South Carolina]: . . . The gentleman from California, for whom I have a great deal of respect, is, through his proposals, through his amendment, advocating unilateral disarmament on behalf of the United States. . . .

I would say to my colleague from Indiana that when we are told by the gentleman from California that we go beyond a deterrence to a war-fighting capability, that when your deterrence is no longer a deterrence it is probably time that you build that deterrence at least to a war-fighting capability.

8. 129 CONG. REC. 14048, 14049, 98th Cong. 1st Sess.

I do not want my colleague from Indiana to be ashamed whatsoever or to let this element over here who advocates unilateral disarmament to browbeat you into thinking they know more than you do.

MR. [RONALD V.] DELLUMS [of California]: . . . Mr. Chairman, I object and I move that the gentleman's words be taken down. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁹⁾ . . . The Clerk will report the words of the gentleman from South Carolina.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Hartnett. I do not want my colleague from Indiana to be ashamed whatsoever or to let this element over here who advocates unilateral disarmament to browbeat you into thinking they know more than you do. . . .

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE: The Committee will rise.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. Downey of New York, Chairman pro tempore of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that the Committee having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 2969) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 1984 for the Armed Forces . . . and for other purposes, reported that certain words used in the debate were objected to and on request were taken down and read at the Clerk's desk, and he herewith reported the same to the House.

9. Thomas J. Downey (N.Y.).

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁰⁾ The Clerk will report the words objected to. . . .

The Chair is ready to rule.

The statement as made by the gentleman from South Carolina is apparently not directed at any particular Member.

The House has had rulings in situations, perhaps analogous to this in the past. A statement by the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. Rankin), that "It has been amazing to me to hear these Members rise on the floor and give aid and comfort to those enemies, those traitors within our gates, for every Communist in America is a traitor to our Government and is dedicated to its overthrow." That was held in order by Speaker Martin on November 24, 1947, since it did not reflect on any individual Members.

This is a ruling that has been made by this House before and it seems that there is an established precedent.

While the remarks of the gentleman are in order, the Chair would caution him that in the tone of his voice or things of that manner it is against the rules of the House to make any statement that would be personally offensive.

The Chair has ruled that both the gentleman's statements were not personal to any particular Member of the House.

The Committee will resume its sitting.

§ 60.22 In response to a parliamentary inquiry, the Chair indicated that it was not in order in debate to refer to an identifiable group of sitting Members as having committed a crime, such as “stealing” an election.

10. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

The prohibition in Rule XIV, clause 1,⁽¹¹⁾ against Members’ engaging in “personality” during debate, applies to allegations that an identifiable group of sitting Members have committed a crime. Such application of the rule is shown by the proceedings of Feb. 27, 1985,⁽¹²⁾ in which a statement made by Mr. John Rowland, of Connecticut, as indicated below, concerning an allegedly “stolen” election, was the subject of a demand that the words be taken down:

MR. [ANDREW] JACOBS [Jr., of Indiana]: Mr. Speaker, I demand the gentleman’s words be taken down in that he said “stolen.”

THE CHAIRMAN: Words will be taken down.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹³⁾ The Clerk will read the words taken down. The Clerk read as follows:

The scary thing about it, as a person who served in the legislature for 4 years, and as a person who happens to be sitting as the youngest Member of Congress, I find it difficult that the first situation that we run into in this House, the first class project, as we may call it, is trying to retain a seat that has been stolen from the Republican side of the aisle, and I think it is rather frustrating.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Would the gentleman care to modify his remarks before the Chair rules?

MR. ROWLAND of Connecticut: Yes, I would, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: In what way does the gentleman care to modify?

MR. ROWLAND of Connecticut: I would like to ask unanimous consent that the words objected to be withdrawn. . . .

The word “stolen,” Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Connecticut?

There was no objection. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Georgia is recognized.

MR. [NEWT] GINGRICH [of Georgia]: I would yield in just a moment, after asking the Chair if in fact Members were convinced an action were being taken which involved a word which was ruled by the Chair to be inappropriate, how could a Member report to the House on that action? Should we substitute the word “banana”? What is it one should say if in fact—not just as a joke, but if in fact—Members of the Republican side honestly believed strongly something is being done? In other words, is “unconstitutional” an acceptable term but “illegal” not acceptable? . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Simply put, Members should not accuse other Members of committing a crime. When the majority is accused of “stealing,” that may suggest illegality. Other words could be used but not those accusing Members of committing a crime.

MR. GINGRICH: What if one honestly believes, for a moment, that a crime is being committed? Would it in fact be against the rules—

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Members may not engage in personalities.

MR. GINGRICH: But he did not talk in personalities.

MR. ROWLAND of Connecticut: Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

MR. GINGRICH: I will be glad to yield to the gentleman.

MR. ROWLAND of Connecticut: I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I would simply point out that I did not refer to anybody stealing an election. I just referred to the frustration that we as freshmen are exhibiting and fearing as we go through the deliberations. I did not refer to anybody.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman seemed to refer to the majority of the House, that it had stolen the election.

Characterizations of Member

§ 60.23 A statement in debate attacking personal characteristics of another Member while on the floor is not in order.

On Mar. 16, 1939,⁽¹⁴⁾ Mr. John Taber, of New York, demanded that certain words used by Mr. Lee E. Geyer, of California, in reference to another Member be taken down. Mr. Geyer used derogatory terms in describing the Member's physical characteristics and his overbearing manner in debate. Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, ruled as follows:

14. 84 CONG. REC. 2871, 76th Cong. 1st Sess.

The words objected to and which have been taken down and read from the Clerk's desk very patently violate the rule, because the words alleged do involve matters of personal reference and personality.

Mr. Geyer then asked and was granted unanimous consent to withdraw the words in question.

§ 60.24 A statement in debate referring to another Member's record with the FBI was held unparliamentary.

On Apr. 30, 1945,⁽¹⁵⁾ certain words used in debate by Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, were objected to by Mr. Vito Marcantonio, of New York, and demanded to be taken down. Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that the words were not parliamentary and by unanimous consent the words were stricken from the Congressional Record.

Parliamentarian's Note: The statement objected to read as follows: "I will say to the gentleman now, don't you start—don't you start comparing anybody's record, because I have got yours for a long time back with both the Dies Committee and the FBI.”

15. 91 CONG. REC. 3992, 79th Cong. 1st Sess.

§ 60.25 In response to a parliamentary inquiry during debate on a question of personal privilege (involving derogatory statements to the press by one Member against others), the Speaker Pro Tempore advised that the term “crybaby” would not be an appropriate phrase to be used in the debate as a reference to a particular Member.

On May 31, 1984,⁽¹⁶⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House:

MR. [BARNEY] FRANK [of Massachusetts]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: I yield for a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁷⁾ The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. FRANK: The parliamentary inquiry is dealing with the question of propriety. Is the term “crybaby” an appropriate phrase to be used in a debate in the House?

16. 130 CONG. REC. 14624, 98th Cong. 2d Sess.

17. John P. Murtha (Pa.).

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would hope that the phrase would not be used.

Questions of Personal Privilege Arising Out of Personal Attacks

§ 60.26 A Member may not rise to a question of personal privilege under Rule IX merely to complain of words previously spoken of him in debate.

On Mar. 16, 1988,⁽¹⁸⁾ the Chair responded to a parliamentary inquiry regarding a point of personal privilege, as indicated below:

MR. [ROBERT K.] DORNAN of California: Mr. Speaker, I have a point of parliamentary inquiry. . . .

I would like to inquire if this Member is able to take a point of personal privilege, that is 1 hour of debate on the House floor at the moment it is granted, if I feel that my honor was impugned when the majority whip, who also spoke way beyond 1 minute . . . if Mr. Coelho tells me that I have sold out the young men and women that I visited with not more than a month ago who are at this moment being strafed and rocketed by Soviet gunships, to tell me to my face—and I am sitting in the front row—that I sold them out impugned my honor.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁹⁾ The gentleman will state a parliamentary inquiry.

18. 134 CONG. REC. 4087, 100th Cong. 2d Sess.

19. Gary L. Ackerman (N.Y.).

MR. DORNAN of California: Do I have a right for a point of personal privilege on that?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: That is not a remedy that the gentleman has under the circumstances.

MR. DORNAN of California: May I ask the ruling of the Chair as to why I cannot maintain a point of personal privilege that my honor was impugned.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The point of personal privilege does not derive from words spoken in debate.

—Press Attacks

§ 60.27 Press accounts of a Member's criticisms, both during debate and off the floor, of another Member may give rise to a question of personal privilege; thus, on one occasion, Members including the Majority Leader rose to questions of personal privilege under Rule IX to respond to press accounts of another Member's criticisms of their efforts to communicate with a foreign government concerning that country's human rights policies.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on May 15, 1984:⁽²⁰⁾

MR. [JAMES C.] WRIGHT [Jr., of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of personal privilege. . . .

20. 130 CONG. REC. 12207, 12211, 98th Cong. 2d Sess.

My point of personal privilege, Mr. Speaker, is that in the Washington Post on Monday, yesterday, appeared an article which characterizes a communication signed by 10 Members of the Congress, including this Member, as the Democratic foreign policy establishment writing a letter which states explicitly that it opposes the policies of the American Government and that it amounts to a virtual teaching document to bring Third World Soviet colonies into the process of manipulating American politics and politicians.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁾ The gentleman has stated a question of personal privilege and is recognized for 1 hour. . . .

MR. [DAVID R.] OBEY [of Wisconsin]: Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of personal privilege, citing the same letter referred to by the majority leader.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state his privilege.

MR. OBEY: Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of personal privilege because I am a signator of the same letter which was referred to by the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Gingrich) in the press.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Obey) is recognized for 1 hour.

—Insertions in Record

§ 60.28 Clause 1 of Rule XIV, requiring Members to "avoid personality" during debate, prohibits references in debate to newspaper accounts used in support of a Member's personal criticism of a

1. John Joseph Moakley (Mass.).

sitting Member in a way which would be unparliamentary if uttered on the floor as the Member's own words; and the prohibition against reading in debate of press accounts which are personally critical of a sitting Member does not constitute "censorship" of the press by the House, but rather is consistent with House rules which preclude debate or insertions in the Record which engage in "personality."

On Feb. 25, 1985,⁽²⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House:

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽³⁾ Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Gingrich) is recognized for 60 minutes.

MR. [NEWT] GINGRICH [of Georgia]: Mr. Speaker, I am going to insert in the Record today and read into the Record several editorials, one from the Atlanta Journal and Constitution yesterday, Sunday, February 24, and one this morning from the Wall Street Journal, both of them talking about the tragic situation in which the Democratic leadership has blocked Mr. McIntyre of Indiana from being seated. . . .

Yet twice the House has voted to deny McIntyre the seat while it investigates. . . .

2. 131 CONG. REC. 3344-46, 99th Cong. 1st Sess.
3. Sam B. Hall, Jr. (Tex.).

The technicalities aside, the case is interesting for what it says about the Congress. . . . In the second vote only five Democrats dared abandon O'Neill and the leadership.

Georgia's Democrats went right along with the herd, in defiance of basic decency. . . . A few Republicans near each election try to remind voters that the Democrats' first vote will be for O'Neill and that vote signals bondage. This year it meant the abandonment of fairness. . . .

MS. [MARY ROSE] OAKAR [of Ohio]: Mr. Speaker, parliamentary inquiry. . . .

MR. GINGRICH: Mr. Speaker, the gentlewoman has not asked me to yield, and I was in fact making an inquiry myself to the Chair. I was asking the Chair to rule in this sort of setting if one is reporting to the House on the written opinion of a columnist in which the columnist has said very strong things, is it appropriate for the House to be informed of this and, if so, what is the correct procedure?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The ruling of the Chair is that the gentleman should not read into the Record things which would clearly be outside the rules of this House. . . .

MR. GINGRICH: Let me continue to ask the Chair, because I am a little confused, in other words, if a columnist writing in the largest newspaper in the State of Georgia says very strong things about his concern about the House's behavior, would the House in effect censor a report of that concern?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: No; the House does not censor any report of that kind. The gentleman does take the responsibility, however, for words uttered on the floor, and he is certainly capable of leaving out those items which he knows would be outside the rules of this House. . . .

MR. GINGRICH: If I may continue a moment to ask the gentleman, if we are in a situation where in the view of some people, such as Mr. Williams of the Atlanta Journal-Constitution, very strong things are legitimately being said, and this is obviously his viewpoint, what is the appropriate manner in which to report his language to the House?

That is not me saying these things; he is saying these things.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman knows the rules of the House, I am certain, and he can take out or delete any things that he knows would violate the rules of this House if spoken from the floor.

MR. GINGRICH: Under the Rules of the House . . . if one were to only utter the words on the floor that were appropriate, but were to then insert the item in the Record, is the Record then edited by the House? That is, if it was put in as an extension of remarks or put in under general leave?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: As the gentleman knows, there are precedents where a question of privilege can be raised about certain things inserted in the Record, and those could be raised if the gentleman attempts to insert them into the Record, or not. . . .

As the gentleman knows, words spoken on the floor of the House can be objected to.

The following exchange took place on Feb. 27, 1985:⁽⁴⁾

MR. [THOMAS S.] FOLEY [of Washington]: . . . I came to the floor [to] suggest that it is important that we have a balanced opportunity to discuss these issues. . . . I simply think it is important that we observe the rules of the House in the course of debate, and I think the two gentlemen, Mr. Walker and Mr. Gingrich, know that it is not permissible under long-standing rules of the House and interpretations of the Parliamentarians . . . to read into the Record statements that would be inappropriate if made by a Member directly. . . .

4. 131 CONG. REC. 3902, 99th Cong. 1st Sess.

I just wanted to make the point that these gentlemen in the well and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Walker) know the rules very well. They are very skilled at them and they know that it is inappropriate to use a newspaper article, however widely published, to violate the rules of the House.

—Remarks by Other Colleagues

§ 60.29 It is not in order in debate to refer to the official conduct of other Members where such conduct is not the subject then pending before the House by way of a report of the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct or as a question of the privilege of the House; nor is it in order in debate to refer to a “hypothetical” Member of the House in a derogatory fashion where it is evident that a particular Member is being described.

On Nov. 3, 1989,⁽⁵⁾ it was demonstrated that where a Member transgresses clause 1 of Rule XIV, by engaging in personalities in debate, the Chair takes the initiative to call him to order pursuant to clause 4 of Rule XIV. The proceedings in the House were as follows:

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁶⁾ Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. Dannemeyer] is recognized for 60 minutes.

MR. [WILLIAM E.] DANNEMEYER [of California]: . . . What is a person to think after breaking the law because of an obsession with homosexual sodomy and having his party leader state publicly that he is a fine man and a credit to public service? . . .

One party, the Democrats, openly courts homosexual votes and defends the behavior as if homosexual sodomy is a fundamental civil right. The other party, the Republicans, while some of its members are kowtowing to homosexuals, still refuses to legitimize homosexual sodomy in the public arena.

The ramifications of this juxtaposition are stark. For instance, take one Democrat and one Republican both discovered in the course of homosexual misdeeds. The former, we will say, is apologetic, but not contrite. The latter is both apologetic and contrite. Isn't it fair to say that the member whose party leadership condones homosexual behavior is more apt to come under less condemnation than the member whose party leadership has consistently renounced homosexual behavior?

In this hypothetical situation, the sword of Damocles hangs precariously over the head of the Republican. His political career is in deep jeopardy. Ironically, the Democrat, with similar circumstances, is allowed by party leaders to use the same sword of Damocles to carve out a lure for the Cretan Bull! . . .

Article I, section 5, clause 2 of the United States Constitution provides that:

Each House may determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly behavior, and, with the concurrence of two thirds, expel a Member.

We should all be clear that at issue when the House takes disciplinary action of this latter sort is not whether a Member is guilty of any criminal wrongdoing. At issue is whether or not a Member is unfit for participation in House proceedings. Wrongdoing can be the basis for considering a punishment, but punishment does not depend on indictments or convictions. . . .

Let me make it easy for Members. Let's say, hypothetically, that a Member has admitted to violating several laws, both felonies and misdemeanors, involving moral turpitude. And that the punishments accompanying these illegal violations combine to total nearly 15 years in prison. . . .

I want to make clear to my colleagues that at the appropriate time in the near future, I will offer a resolution, in one form or another, to expel [two Members specified]. . . .

No Member can legitimately take issue that I have interfered in the juisdiction of the Ethics Committee by my comments here today. My indirect or direct comments made about [the two Members] have only concerned activities the former has admitted to and the latter has been convicted on. . . .

6. Jolene Unsoeld (Wash.).

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will pause. The gentleman is discussing a matter pending before the Ethics Committee. I would remind the gentleman from California that clause 1 of rule XIV prevents Members in debate from engaging in personalities. Clause 4 of that rule provides that if any member transgresses the rules of the House, the Speaker shall, or any Member may, call him to order.

MR. DANNEMEYER: . . . George Washington Law Professor John Banzhaf has done extensive research on a case of Member "X." He concludes that Member "X" has publicly admitted to committing crimes, and a refusal to take any action would undermine the public's confidence in the mechanism set up to ensure that Members of Congress abide by ethical and moral standards at least as high as those to which we currently hold attorneys, cadets at the Nation's military academies, high military officials, and even school principals. . . .

The Boston Globe wrote, Were Member X's transgressions serious enough to warrant his departure from Congress? Yes. For his own good and for the good of his constituents, his causes and Congress"—

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will cease. The Chair would remind the gentleman, and will repeat again, and will read the Speaker's full statement, clause 1 of rule XIV prevents Members in debate from engaging in personalities. Clause 4 of that rule provides that if any Member transgresses the rules of the House, the Speaker shall, or any Member may, call him to order. Members may recall that on December 18, 1987, the Chair enunciated the standard that debate would not be proper if it attempted to focus on the conduct of a Member about whom a report had been filed by the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct or whose conduct was not the subject of a privileged matter then pending before the House. Similarly, the Chair would suggest that debate is not proper which speculates on the motivations of a Member who may have filed a complaint before the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct against another Member.

MR. DANNEMEYER: Madam Speaker, I have no longer made reference to a specific Member. I have merely made reference to "Member X."

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman is referring to newspaper stories which specifically names Members.

The gentleman may proceed within the rules of the House.

§ 61. — Use of Colloquialisms

The use in debate of colloquial expressions, or familiar terms used in conversation, is governed by their current meaning and by the context in which they are uttered.⁽⁷⁾ The Speaker has on occa-

7. Although the statesmanship of a Member may be questioned, a con-

sion referred to dictionaries to ascertain the current definitions of common expressions used on the floor in reference to Members.⁽⁸⁾

References to Physical Characteristics

§ 61.1 References to a Member having a “hand like a ham”, grasping a microphone until it “groaned from mad torture”, and stamping up and down on the House floor “like a wild man” were held out of order.

On Mar. 16, 1939,⁽⁹⁾ Mr. John Taber, of New York, demanded that the following words used by Mr. Lee E. Geyer, of California, in reference to another Member be taken down:

I have seen him come out [on the House floor] with a hand that only he possesses, a hand like a ham, and grasp this delicate [microphone] until it groaned from mad torture. I have seen him come on the floor and stamp up and down like a wild man.

Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, ruled as follows:

temptuous remark, such as “pot-house politician,” may not be used in debate; see 8 Cannon’s Precedents §2527.

8. See §61.13, infra.

9. 84 CONG. REC. 2871, 76th Cong. 1st Sess.

The words objected to and which have been taken down and read from the Clerk’s desk very patently violate the rule, because the words alleged do involve matters of personal reference and personality.

Mr. Geyer then asked and was granted unanimous consent to withdraw the words in question.

Use of Particular Terms —Cheap, Sneaky, Sly

§ 61.2 The Speaker held unparliamentary a reference in debate to another Member’s proceeding in a “cheap, sneaky, sly way.”

On Aug. 21, 1974,⁽¹⁰⁾ Mr. Robert E. Bauman, of Maryland, demanded that the words below, as used in debate in reference to him by Mr. Thomas P. O’Neill, Jr., of Massachusetts, be taken down. After being read by the Clerk, Speaker Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, ruled the words out of order.

MR. O’NEILL: Mr. Speaker, I take this time so I may direct my remarks to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Bauman).

Yesterday, by mutual consent of the leadership on both sides of the aisle and by the Members of the Judiciary Committee, I offered to this House a resolution. At the completion of the resolution, Mr. Speaker, I asked that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to extend their remarks and it was objected to, Mr. Speaker, by the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Bauman). He gave a reason at that particular time.

10. 120 CONG. REC. 29652, 29653, 93d Cong. 2d Sess.

I told him that I thought he should have cleared it with the leadership on his own side of the aisle; but nevertheless, Mr. Speaker, when all the Members had left last night, the gentleman came to the well and asked unanimous consent of the then Speaker of the House who was sitting there, if he may insert his remarks in the Record, with unanimous consent, following the remarks where he had objected. So, Mr. Speaker, in today's Record on page 29362 you will find the remarks of Mr. Bauman. You will not find the remarks of Mr. McClory, one of the people who had asked me to do this. You will not find the remarks of other Members of the Judiciary Committee, who were prepared at that time to put their remarks in the record; but you will find the remarks of Mr. Bauman and Mr. Bauman alone.

I just want to say that I think in my opinion it was a cheap, sneaky, sly way to operate.

The House agreed to a motion to strike the objectionable words from the Record.

—Slippery, Snide, and Sharp Practices

§ 61.3 A statement in debate “where I come from the people do not like slippery, snide, and sharp practices,” was held in order as not reflecting on any Member.

On July 26, 1951,⁽¹¹⁾ Mr. John J. Rooney, of New York, while discussing opposition amendments to a pending bill, stated as follows:

Where I come from great faith is put on a man's ability to stand up and fight for what he believes and what he thinks is best for the country. The people in my district do not like slippery, snide, and sharp practices.

Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, demanded that the words be taken down and Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled as follows:

. . . The Chair does not think that it should offend anybody for the gentleman from New York [Mr. Rooney] to brag of his constituents, as to their character or as to their ability. It appears to the Chair that these words were spoken with reference to an amendment and not with respect to a Member of the House of Representatives; and therefore, there is no reflection on any Member of the House.

—Alleging “Coverup”

§ 61.4 An allegation in debate in the Senate that a colleague “did all he could to cover up wrongdoing” was held to be a breach of order as impugning the integrity or conduct of another Senator.

On Mar. 20, 1968,⁽¹²⁾ Senator Joseph S. Clark, of Pennsylvania,

11. 97 CONG. REC. 8968, 8969, 82d Cong. 1st Sess.

12. 114 CONG. REC. 7153, 90th Cong. 2d Sess.

and Senator Carl T. Curtis, of Nebraska, were engaged in a colloquy in relation to the investigation of an employee of the Senate. Senator Curtis stated to Senator Clark "you did all you could to cover up wrongdoing." Senator Clark requested the Chair to admonish Senator Curtis for that language and to require him to take his seat under the Standing Rules of the Senate.

Presiding Officer Birch E. Bayh, of Indiana, ruled that the language used was objectionable under Rule 14, prohibiting a Senator from impugning the integrity or conduct of a colleague in debate. Senator Curtis was then permitted to proceed in order.

—Horning In

§ 61.5 In contrast to the usual procedure of taking words down, a Member sought to rise to a question of personal privilege to challenge another Member's reference to him in debate as "another guy" who was "horning in on the act."

On Aug. 4, 1970,⁽¹³⁾ Mr. Page H. Belcher, of Oklahoma, referred to Mr. Silvio O. Conte, of Massachusetts, in debate as "another guy"

13. 116 CONG. REC. 27130, 91st Cong. 2d Sess.

who was "horning in on the act" in relation to a certain measure before the House. Rather than demand that the words be taken down, Mr. Conte sought recognition for a point of personal privilege and requested a definition from Mr. Belcher of "another guy" and "horning in". After some discussion, Mr. Thomas G. Abernethy, of Mississippi, stated the point of order that the proper procedure was to take the words down and have a ruling by the Chair on whether they were in order. Speaker Pro Tempore Edward P. Boland, of Massachusetts, ruled that the point of order came too late and entertained a unanimous-consent request that the words "another guy" used by Mr. Belcher be stricken from the Record and be substituted by "the gentleman from Massachusetts."

—Loose Talk

§ 61.6 A statement in debate accusing colleagues who opposed a measure of "loose talk" was held merely an expression of opinion mentioning no Member by name and not a breach of order.

On May 6, 1941,⁽¹⁴⁾ the following words used in debate in

14. 87 CONG. REC. 3670, 77th Cong. 1st Sess.

the Committee of the Whole were demanded to be taken down:

If everybody would talk as loosely and recklessly with the truth as some of these opponents of the administration measures that they are carrying on, it is no wonder there is confusion.

The Committee rose, and Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that the language objected to simply expressed an opinion that certain things bring about confusion in the House and mentioned no Member of the House by name. Therefore the words were not violative of the rules of the House.

—Mouthpiece for Another

§ 61.7 Where a statement that a Member spoke as a “mouthpiece” for a professional medical association was objected to in debate, the statement was by unanimous consent changed to “self-appointed spokesman” before a ruling on the point of order was made.

On June 5, 1962,⁽¹⁵⁾ Mr. John D. Dingell, Jr., of Michigan, referred to another Member as a “mouthpiece for the AMA [American Medical Association].” Mr. Thomas B. Curtis, of Missouri, demanded that the words be taken down, but before a ruling was made, Mr. Dingell asked unanimous consent to change the word “mouthpiece” to “self-appointed spokesman.” There was no objection to the request and the point of order was withdrawn.

15. 108 CONG. REC. 9739, 87th Cong. 2d Sess.

—Crybaby

§ 61.8 In response to a parliamentary inquiry during debate on a question of personal privilege (involving derogatory statements to the press by one Member against others), the Speaker Pro Tempore advised that the term “crybaby” would not be an appropriate phrase to be used in the debate as a reference to a particular Member.

On May 31, 1984,⁽¹⁶⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House:

MR. [BARNEY] FRANK [of Massachusetts]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: I yield for a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁷⁾ The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

16. 130 CONG. REC. 14624, 98th Cong. 2d Sess.

17. John P. Murtha (Pa.).

MR. FRANK: The parliamentary inquiry is dealing with the question of propriety. Is the term "crybaby" an appropriate phrase to be used in a debate in the House?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would hope that the phrase would not be used.

—Pinko

§ 61.9 It is not in order in debate to refer to another Member of the House as "pinko."

On Oct. 31, 1963,⁽¹⁸⁾ Mr. Edgar Franklin Foreman, of Texas, was recognized under previous order to address the House for 60 minutes. Mr. Foreman discussed a newspaper story which quoted him as calling 20 of his colleagues in the House "pinkos." When Mr. Foreman commenced to describe the one occasion on which he called a Member a pinko, Mr. John J. Rooney, of New York, demanded that his words be taken down and then stated as follows:

Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that it is my understanding of the rules that no Member of the House may be labeled a "pinko" by anyone who would put himself above everybody else in the House, regardless which side of the aisle he is on, this becomes so interesting that I withdraw my demand to have the words taken down at this point so that I may hear what further the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Foreman] has to say that is of interest.

Mr. Foreman continued:

The fact of the matter is, as I was saying, to set the record straight, I have only referred to one Member of this body as a "pinko." On Friday, October 18, 1963, during a speech in San Jose, Calif., I referred to the gentleman from California, Mr. Don Edwards, as Don "Pinko" Edwards.

Mr. Rooney then demanded that those words be taken down and Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, ruled that to characterize any Member of the House as a "pinko" is in violation of the rules.

The House then rejected a unanimous-consent request for Mr. Foreman to continue with the balance of his statement.

—You Are Going To "Skin Us"

§ 61.10 A statement in debate "you are going to skin us" was held merely a colloquialism which did not reflect upon any Member and was in order.

On Feb. 18, 1941,⁽¹⁹⁾ Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, used the following language in relation to his opposition on a certain measure: "You are going to skin us, are you not?" Mr. Robert F. Rich, of Pennsylvania, demanded that the words be taken down, the committee rose, and Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that the expression contained in those words was merely a colloquialism which did not reflect in an unparliamentary manner upon any Member.

19. 87 CONG. REC. 1126, 77th Cong. 1st Sess.

—Snoop

§ 61.11 It is a breach of order in debate to refer to another Member as a "snooper."

On July 16, 1935,⁽²⁰⁾ Mr. Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, referred to Mr. Wright Patman, of Texas, in debate as a "snooper." The words were taken down. After consulting Webster's Dictionary and reading the definition of the term as "to look or pry about or into others' affairs in a sneaking way," or as "one who snoops, a prying sneak," Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, held that the use of the term violated the rules of the House.

—Stool Pigeon

§ 61.12 It is a breach of order in debate to refer to another Member as a "stool pigeon."

On July 16, 1935,⁽¹⁾ Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee,

20. 79 CONG. REC. 11256, 74th Cong. 1st Sess.

1. Id.

ruled that the use of the term "stool pigeon" by a Member in debate referring to another Member was clearly a breach of order. The Speaker stated that it was not necessary for the Chair or for any Member to consult the dictionary in order to ascertain the meaning of the language objected to.

—Yapping

§ 61.13 The word "yapping" used in debate to refer to another Member's remarks is not unparliamentary.

On June 16, 1934,⁽²⁾ Speaker Henry T. Rainey, of Illinois, ruled that the word "yapping," used by Mr. George E. Foulkes, of Michigan, in debate to refer to addresses on the floor by Mr. John Taber, of New York, was not unparliamentary. The Speaker had consulted the dictionary and stated that the term meant "to talk loudly; chatter; scold" and was not objectionable.

—Lacking Guts

§ 61.14 The Chair on one occasion intervened to admonish Members not to characterize the motivations of other Members, without a challenge from the floor and without any specific Member being mentioned.

2. 78 CONG. REC. 12114, 73d Cong. 2d Sess.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on July 9, 1992,⁽³⁾ during consideration of House Resolution 513 (the rule providing for consideration of H.R. 5518, Department of Transportation appropriations for fiscal year 1993):

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: . . . The problem is that the Democratic leadership and the Committee on Rules that they control are so weak and pathetic that they cannot stand up for honor and they cannot stand up for law. . . .

Why can you not at least have the guts to stand up for real deficit reduction and for the budget process? . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁴⁾ Members are reminded to refrain from characterizing the actions or motivations of other Members of the House.

§ 62. —Questionable Motives

Members may not in debate impugn the motives of other named Members in the performance of their legislative duties.⁽⁵⁾ A rea-

In the early practice of the House the Speaker customarily intervened sonable difference of opinion on the intent of another Member in offering a bill or debating a proposition may be stated,⁽⁶⁾ as may an opinion on the general motives of the House or a political party in adopting or rejecting a proposition.⁽⁷⁾ But an assertion that a Member's use of the legislative process is motivated by personal gain or is deceitful is not in order.⁽⁸⁾

Generally

§ 62.1 It is a breach of order in debate to impugn the motives of other named Members.

On Feb. 7, 1935, certain language was used in the Committee in debate to prevent even the mildest imputation on the motives of Members; see 5 Hinds' Precedents §§ 5161, 5162.

Purposely misquoting a Member's remarks is a breach of order. See 5 Hinds' Precedents § 5150.

7. See § 62.7, infra (motive of political party).

If words used to describe the motive of the House are objectionable in themselves, they are a breach of order; see § 65.6, infra (characterization of amendment as "demagogic" and "racist").

of the Whole charging that Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, and former Speaker Henry T. Rainey, of Illinois, in the past had committed dishonest acts and repudiated and ignored the rules of the House in the course of presiding.⁽⁹⁾

Mr. Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, objected to the words uttered by Mr. George H. Tinkham, of Massachusetts, and demanded that they be taken down. When the committee rose and Speaker Byrns resumed the Chair, he appointed Speaker Pro Tempore John J. O'Connor, of New York, to preside.

In defense of the words, Mr. Frederick R. Lehlbach, of New Jersey, stated as follows:

Mr. Speaker, the right of free debate in a parliamentary assemblage is the one privilege which the minority in such a body has, and which no deliberative assembly, certainly no English-speaking assembly, has ever sought to abridge or suppress.

Unparliamentary language is the use of abusive epithets or abuse or improper and excessive use of words, but it does not extend to criticism of anybody connected with the Government or characterization of the acts so criticized, and that is all that is involved here. It is a criticism of what the gentleman charges was done, and it is entirely aside from the question of whether that charge is true or not as to whether the language is unparliamentary. The gentleman has a perfect right to charge that in the conduct of any kind of detail of the function of government certain acts were performed by certain officials. He has the right to condemn those acts, and he has the right to characterize them in any way he sees fit as long as he confines the language in which he makes his criticism to language ordinarily used by a gentleman.

9. 79 CONG. REC. 1680, 1681, 74th Cong. 1st Sess.

The Speaker Pro Tempore ruled that the language used was a breach of order, since "It is well established under the precedents of the House that it is out of order in debate to arraign the motives of Members. Of course, the Speaker is a Member of the House."⁽¹⁰⁾

Inconsistency in Motivation

§ 62.2 A statement in debate that "consistency is a virtue of small minds" was held not to reflect on the motives of any Member of the House and not to be unparliamentary.

On Apr. 11, 1962,⁽¹¹⁾ Mr. Wayne L. Hays, of Ohio, delivered the following words in debate in relation to Mr. H. R. Gross, of Iowa: "I say

10. The Speaker referred to a precedent set on Apr. 19, 1934, 78 CONG. REC. 6947, 6948, 73d Cong. 2d Sess.

11. 108 CONG. REC. 6374, 87th Cong. 2d Sess.

you have your definition of consistency. My definition is that consistency is a virtue of small minds." Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, ruled as follows:

In the opinion of the Chair, both Members were talking about a definition and each definition might apply to others outside the House. The Chair sees nothing about the words taken down that impugns the motives of any Member.

Attributing Legislative Position to Improper Motives

§ 62.3 A statement in debate accusing another Member of attacking the intent to enfranchise men in the Armed Forces was held in order as not impugning the motives of the Member.

On Dec. 15, 1943,⁽¹²⁾ Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, demanded that the following words used in reference to him by Mr. Vito Marcantonio, of New York, in debate be taken down:

The gentleman from Mississippi saw fit to make an attack on the President's Committee for Fair Employment Practices and also to state his viewpoint with regard to the soldiers' vote bill. Throughout the gentleman's speech the gentleman rests his attack on the Committee for Fair Employment Practices as well as his attack on the attempt to enfranchise the men in American uniform on what he deemed to be the philosophy of Thomas Jefferson.

12. 89 CONG. REC. 10737, 78th Cong. 1st Sess.

Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled as follows:

The Chair read the statement and then listened to its reading and the Chair can hardly think that the language of the gentleman from New York was more than expressing his opinion of the attitude of the gentleman from Mississippi. The Chair very seriously doubts that it is a violation of the rules of the House or a direct charge impugning the gentleman's motives or impugning his character.

§ 62.4 A statement in debate accusing a Member of attempting to deprive men in the Armed Forces of the right to vote was held to transgress the rules and to be a breach of order in debate.

On Dec. 20, 1943,⁽¹³⁾ the following words used by Mr. Adolph J. Sabath, of Illinois, in debate in relation to Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, were demanded to be taken down:

I said that I did not care whether it was my bill, his bill, or any bill; but that it should be a bill that will give them the right to vote [men in the armed forces] and not a bill that will deprive them of that great privilege as the gentleman from Mississippi is trying to do.

13. 89 CONG. REC. 10922, 10923, 78th Cong. 1st Sess.

Speaker Pro Tempore John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, ruled as follows:

The Chair feels that the question is very close to the line, but does transgress the rules when the gentleman from Illinois used the words “deprive them” in that those words tend to impugn the motives of the gentleman from Mississippi.

A Member may take the floor and make as vigorous an attack as he desires on any bill and its merits, but when it comes to the question of impugning the motives of another Member, one has to be exceedingly careful. Many times these questions are very close, and the Chair is frankly of the opinion that this is a very close question. But in order to preserve that understanding among Members which is so essential in a legislative body, the Chair is of the opinion that the words used, while very close to the line, tend to transgress the rules of the House.

§ 62.5 A statement in debate accusing another Member of past opposition to “every bill necessary for the defense of our country” was held to be an expression of opinion and not unparliamentary.

On Mar. 16, 1949,⁽¹⁴⁾ Mr. John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, delivered the following words in debate in reference to another Member: “Before Pearl Harbor the gentleman was opposed to every bill necessary for the defense of our country.” Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, to whom the words referred, demanded that the words be taken down.

14. 95 CONG. REC. 2651, 2652, 81st Cong. 1st Sess.

Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, stated that he had always been in favor of a wide range of discussion and expression of opinion in debate; he ruled that the words objected to expressed an opinion, not fact, and were therefore not in violation of the rules of the House.

§ 62.6 While remarks in debate may not impute questionable personal motivations to a Member for his legislative positions, it is permissible to address political motivations for legislative positions in a manner not constituting a personal attack on a Member.

On Jan. 24, 1995,⁽¹⁵⁾ Mr. Dan Burton, of Indiana, was given permission to address the House for one minute and to revise and extend his remarks:

MR. BURTON of Indiana: Mr. Speaker, the people of this country spoke last

15. 141 CONG. REC. p. ____, 104th Cong. 1st Sess.

November. But it is apparent to anyone who is paying attention to what is going on in this House that the Democratic Party is doing everything they can to derail the Contract With America. They are proposing hundreds of amendments to slow down the process. All I want to say is that it is the height of hypocrisy, the height of hypocrisy for the Democrats to come down here and complain about what the Republicans are doing after the way they have run this House for the last 40 years.

MR. [JERROLD L.] NADLER [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, I demand that the gentleman's words be taken down. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁶⁾ The Chair is prepared to rule.

It would be out of order for the gentleman to make reference to a particular Member, but precedent suggests that reference to procedures, or amendments, or to parties is not out of order. . . .

MR. NADLER: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

The second half of the statement of the distinguished gentleman made reference to the hypocrisy of the Democrats. The context clearly indicated that it was the Democratic Members of the House that he was referring to. My parliamentary inquiry, therefore:

Since the rules prohibit the impugning of motives of Members of the House, and the gentleman impugned the motives of a group of Members of the House, just under half the Members of the House; so is it not permitted under the rules then to impugn the motives of an individual Member of the House, but to impugn the motives of a group of Members of the House is permitted?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair believes that collective political motivation can be discussed and it was not discernible that it was relating to any particular Member.

The scope of permissible discussion of motivation was further clarified by the Chair on Mar. 8, 1995,⁽¹⁷⁾ in his response to a parliamentary inquiry. The Committee of the Whole had under consideration H.R. 956, to establish legal standards and procedures for product liability litigation:

MR. [THOMAS L.] BLILEY [Jr., of Virginia]: . . . I will point out to the gentleman on the other side that between 1973 and 1988 product liability suits in Federal courts increased 1,000 percent. In State courts, the increase was between 300 and 500 percent. One estimate of the total cost of these suits is $132 billion a year. . . .

To the gentleman from Massachusetts I would say, when we were accused today in a bill that we passed overwhelmingly with bipartisan support for securities litigation reform, that we were bringing this because we were rewarding our fat cats, maybe some of us might beg to say that the gentleman on the other [side] might be trying to defend them.

Mr. Chairman, that may be one of the reasons that they so vociferously

16. Christopher Shays (Conn.).

17. 141 CONG. REC. p. ____, 104th Cong. 1st Sess.

defend the current system is that one of the heaviest contributors to their campaign coffers are the trial lawyers of the United States. . . .

MR. [JOHN] BRYANT of Texas: Mr. Chairman, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

Do the rules prohibit implying a motive or the improper motive on the part of your adversary in debate for presenting legislation?

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽¹⁸⁾ The rules of the House prevent Members from engaging in personal attacks.

MR. BRYANT of Texas: I thank the Chair. But my further inquiry was, do the rules prohibit you from implying a prohibited motive, unsavory motive for offering amendments for advocating legislation?

THE CHAIRMAN: The rules do not prohibit Members from engaging in discussions of political motivation.

MR. BRYANT of Texas: What about motivations that relate to your personal occupation or your personal sources of income?

THE CHAIRMAN: The rules prohibit Members from engaging in personal attacks.

Opportunism as Motive

§ 62.7 A statement in debate that a Member was leading the Republican party in a policy of opportunism was held not to transgress the rules of the House or reflect upon the integrity of Members and therefore to be in order.

18. David Dreier (Calif.).

On Feb. 8, 1941,⁽¹⁹⁾ the following words used by Mr. John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, in debate were demanded to be taken down by Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan:

The gentleman from New York who was leading the Republican Party in the policy of opportunism that is being engaged in in connection with a bill serious to the fate of our country relating to our national defense.

The Committee of the Whole rose and the words were reported to the House. Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that the words did not reflect upon the integrity of any Members and were therefore not violative of the rules of the House.

Personal Gain as Motive

§ 62.8 Where a Member charged another with opposing a rent bill because he was a landlord, the Speaker ruled the reference a breach of order.

On Apr. 17, 1936,⁽²⁰⁾ during consideration of a District of Columbia rent bill in the Committee of the Whole, Mr. Marion A. Zioncheck, of Washington, stated as follows:

Mr. Chairman, there has been a bad rumor running around the town that

19. 87 CONG. REC. 796, 77th Cong. 1st Sess.

20. 80 CONG. REC. 5647, 74th Cong. 2d Sess.

the reason the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Blanton] objects to this bill is that he is a landlord.

Mr. Thomas L. Blanton made a point of order against those remarks, and Chairman William B. Umstead, of North Carolina, ruled as follows:

. . . The gentleman from Washington will confine his remarks to the amendment which he offered and avoid personalities, and please proceed in order.

Following another personal remark by Mr. Zioncheck, the Chairman again reminded him that he could not indulge in personalities.

§ 62.9 While it may be appropriate in debate to characterize the effect of an amendment as deceptive or hypocritical, the Speaker has ruled out of order words taken down in Committee of the Whole characterizing the motivation of a Member in offering an amendment as deceptive and hypocritical.

During consideration of the Department of Education Organization Act of 1979 (H.R. 2444) in the Committee of the Whole, certain words used in debate were reported to the House and ruled out of order by the Speaker. The proceedings of June 12, 1979,⁽¹⁾ were as follows:

1. 125 CONG. REC. 14461, 96th Cong. 1st Sess.

MR. [HENRY B.] GONZALEZ [of Texas]: Mr. Chairman, I expected resistance to this amendment and not necessarily my getting involved. I am not a member of this committee. But this amendment is probably the most detrimental to the main purposes of equal opportunity of education to the most needed segments of our society that has been presented thus far and probably could ever be presented. The insidiousness of the amendment is compounded by the sponsor's deceptive—I should say hypocritical—presentation of this amendment, disguising it as a quota prohibition.

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Chairman, I demand that the words be taken down.

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽²⁾ The Clerk will report the words objected to. . . .

The Committee will rise. . . .

THE SPEAKER:⁽³⁾ The Clerk will report the words objected to.

The Clerk read as follows: . . .

The insidiousness of the amendment is compounded by the sponsor's deceptive—I should say hypocritical—presentation of this amendment, disguising it as a quota prohibition.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair is ready to rule.

The Chair, having read the references concerning deception and hypocrisy, will state that there have been previous opinions by the Chair that there is nothing wrong with using the word, "deceptive," or the word, "hypocritical," in characterizing an amendment's effect but when a Member so

2. Lucien N. Nedzi (Mich.).

3. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

characterizes the motivation of a Member in offering an amendment that is not in order.

Consequently, the words in the last sentence read by the Clerk are unparliamentary and without objection, the offensive words are stricken from the Record.

—Party Motivation in Offering Question of Privilege

§ 62.10 Reference in debate to the minority party as “having some motivation other than fully objective concern for the House in the timing of a resolution” and the assertion that the House could proceed with “greater dignity and honor” at another time, together with the disclaimer that the Minority Leader did not necessarily share that motivation, was held not to impugn the motives of any Member and to be parliamentary.

During consideration of House Resolution 578 (directing the Committee on Rules to make certain inquiries) on Feb. 13, 1980,⁽⁴⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House:

MR. [RICHARD] BOLLING [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, I send to the desk a privileged resolution (H. Res. 578)

4. 126 CONG. REC. 2768, 2769, 96th Cong. 2d Sess.

and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 578

Resolved, Whereas it was reported in the public press on February 9, 1980, that, “The House of Representatives this week lost a secret effort in court to obtain a ruling that congressmen do not have to respond to federal grand jury subpoenas for House records;” . . .

Therefore be it resolved, That the Committee on Rules be instructed to inquire into the truth or falsity of the newspaper account and promptly report back to the House its findings and any recommendations thereon. . . .

MR. BOLLING: . . . The gentleman from Missouri has not felt more strongly about a matter in a very long time than he does about this. . . . The gentleman from Missouri obviously has no difficulty with the content of the resolution and feels that he could in honor offer it. The gentleman from Missouri has a very, very strong feeling about the timing of the offering of this proposal by the minority, and the gentleman from Missouri has carefully differentiated between what he has said earlier about the minority leader and what he is now saying about the minority.

I fear me, and I do not suspect the gentleman from Arizona of having this view, I fear me that there is some motivation other than fully objective concern for the House in the timing of the resolution, not in the content. And that is the reason that the gentleman from Missouri took the unusual course of offering the minority’s proposition. He feels that it is appropriate for the House, through the Rules Committee initially, to look into this matter. But he thinks it might be done with greater dignity, and one might say with greater honor, if it were not done at this particular time of confusion. . . .

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, I demand that the words of the gentleman from Missouri be taken down. . . .

If the record is read back by the Clerk, I believe the Chair will find that the gentleman from Missouri referred to the motivation behind the offering of this resolution at this time and referred to the minority leader and the members of the minority party. Subsequent to that the gentleman from Missouri referred to that motivation being dishonorable. I think this falls within the rules of the House that clearly say that a Member of the House cannot question the motivation of other Members of the House in their actions. The gentleman from Missouri did refer to the minority leader, and all of the Members of the minority and their motivation.

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁵⁾ The Clerk will report the words. . . .

The gentleman from Missouri has referred in his remarks that he feels that it is appropriate for the House, through the Rules Committee, initially to look into this matter, and he thinks it might be done with greater dignity and, one might say, with greater honor if done by the committee or considered at another time.

The Chair, in its opinion, feels that he has not transgressed on the honor or the dignity of the minority party or the minority leader, and the point of order is not well taken.

The gentleman from Missouri.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, would the Chair address himself to the issue of motivation the gentleman from Missouri raised, as to whether that is a correct use of parliamentary language.

THE SPEAKER: In the opinion of the Chair the gentleman did not talk about or refer to the dishonor of any Member of the House, nor did he characterize the motives of any specific Member in an unparliamentary way.

The Chair repeats, the point of order is not well taken.

Indirect Derogatory Reference

§ 62.11 Under Jefferson's Manual,⁽⁶⁾ it is not in order during debate to refer to a particular Member of the House in a derogatory fashion, and the Chair will intervene to prevent improper references where it is evident that a particular Member is being described although not named.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Oct. 28, 1981:⁽⁷⁾

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁸⁾
Under a previous order of the House,

5. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Bliley) is recognized for 60 minutes. . . .

MR. [THOMAS J.] BLILEY [Jr., of Virginia]: . . . Mr. Speaker, my constituent is disgusted and I am disgusted. Disgusted to think that any Member of this House would sanction the use of his signature on this kind of scurrilous fabrication. Yes, outright fabrication. . . .

MR. [DANIEL E.] LUNGREN [of California]: . . . [People] who asked for our trust and the trust of the American people in solving the problem, are telling us now that what the President is trying to do is destroy the system, and one party, one party will save it and make it a partisan issue.

Unfortunately, the signer of this terrible appeal for cash is a most distinguished member of the Committee on Aging.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would advise the gentleman to confine his remarks to parliamentary and legislative issues and not refer to Members of the body individually.

Parliamentarian's Note: Mr. Lungren's reference had been to the chairman of the Select Committee on Aging, Mr. Claude Pepper, of Florida, and in the context of the full special order containing remarks relating to unidentified members of the majority party who had solicited campaign funds under the guise of a "Social Security Notice", the reference to Mr. Pepper was unparliamentary. Mr. Lungren revised his remarks to delete any reference to the chairman, over whose signature the controversial letter in question had been mailed out.

Challenging Motive of Minority Party

§ 62.12 A demand that words be taken down (in this instance, language arguably impugning the motives of other Members) is untimely if further debate has intervened.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Mar. 4, 1985,⁽⁹⁾ during consideration of House Resolution 97 (to seat Richard D. McIntyre as a Member from Indiana):

MR. [ROBERT H.] MICHEL [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of privilege.

Mr. Speaker, I send to the desk a privileged resolution (H. Res. 97) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 97

Whereas a certificate of election to the House of Representatives always carries with it the presumption that the State election procedures have been timely, regular, and fairly implemented; and . . .

Whereas the presumption of the validity and regularity of the certificate of election held by Richard D. McIntyre has not been overcome by any substantial evidence or claim of irregularity: Now, therefore be it

9. 131 CONG. REC. 4277, 4283-85, 99th Cong. 1st Sess.

Resolved, That the Speaker is hereby authorized and directed to administer the oath of office to the gentleman from Indiana, Mr. Richard D. McIntyre. . . .

MR. [WILLIAM V.] ALEXANDER [of Arkansas]: Mr. Speaker, I move that the resolution be referred to the Committee on House Administration. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁰⁾ The gentleman is entitled to 1 hour under that motion, during which time the gentleman from Arkansas controls the time. . . .

MR. [WILLIAM D.] FORD of Michigan: . . . Mr. Speaker, this issue is being handled now in a manner being allowed in this House that does not meet the dignity of this body which is very much needed at the moment. At the time that the people of this country are wondering whether or not the Congress is going to do the things that are necessary, some of them painful, to protect our country, we have Members playing petty politics over there in a way that is calculated to do nothing except destroy public confidence in this body.

I can see how people would lose confidence in the House, which is put into this kind of mess by this bushwhacking method of causing a vote. . . . [W]e count on assertions from our leaders on both sides that on particular days you can take care of other important matters because there will not be rollcalls. They know that many of the Members are being deprived, who have been seated, of representing their districts because of the way in which this vote is called up. And if they want to show good faith at this point, Mr. Speaker, then the gentleman should withdraw his motion and move to take it up at a time when due notice has been given so that my constituents and all of the districts in Michigan will have their representative here to vote on them. . . .

MR. [CARROLL] CAMPBELL [Jr., of South Carolina]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

Mr. Speaker, am I correct in saying that we do not seek to impugn the motives of a Member when they bring a matter to the floor? Is that correct under the way this House operates? And that when a Member's motives have been impugned that that Member or others on their behalf would have a right to ask that words be stricken? Is that a correct assumption?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman is correct that no Member's motive is to be impugned by another Member in the course of orderly debate on the House floor.

MR. CAMPBELL: Well, Mr. Speaker, my concern lies with the fact that with the previous speaker that the motivation of those of us who are concerned with this matter may have been impugned when the accusation was made that this was being done under petty politics and that it was bushwhacking and instead of the motivation of trying to protect legitimately the rights of a Member of the minority party who had been denied, though being certified, his seat.

To make that charge I raise the point of order does impugn the motivation of those of us who seek to seat Mr. McIntyre. I ask that the gentleman's words be stricken.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman's point of order in this particular instance comes too late. Intervening debate has proceeded.

10. James C. Wright, Jr. (Tex.).

MR. CAMPBELL: The gentleman who previously spoke, Mr. Speaker, I was on my feet asking to be recognized on a point of order, who had made those accusations.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will state the Chair expects all Members to maintain the dignity of the Chamber, and that includes the proper use of language in reference to their colleagues of either political party.

The Chair will state that the point of order made by the gentleman at this time is not timely made. But the Chair will instruct all Members with the expectation that parliamentary language will be observed.

term or language implying a deliberate misstatement of the truth, for whatever motive, is unparliamentary,⁽¹³⁾ including allegations of insincerity,⁽¹⁴⁾ and hypocrisy.⁽¹⁵⁾

Allegations of Express or Implied Falsehood

§ 63.1 The Speaker ruled that the word "canard" meant falsehood and was out of order in debate when referring to another Member.

On May 11, 1949,⁽¹⁶⁾ Mr. Emanuel Celler, of New York, stated in debate in reference to Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, "Mr. Speaker, I cannot let the occasion go by without commenting on the canard that the gentleman from Mississippi was guilty of when he called the Antidefamation League subversive.” Mr. Rankin demanded that the words be taken down and Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled as follows:

The Chair desires to make a statement. There are too many “left-handed” compliments being passed around this House all the time on both sides.

The word “canard” to me conveys the idea that a man has told a falsehood. Therefore, if anybody desires to move to strike it from the Record—without objection, the word “canard” will be stricken from the Record.

There was no objection.

§ 63.2 A statement in debate referring to another Member “when he comes here to defend some slime-monger who goes on the radio and lies about me, then I am ready to meet him anywhere” was held in order.

On Feb. 12, 1946,⁽¹⁷⁾ Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, stated in debate in reference to Mr. Adolph J. Sabath, of Illinois, “when he comes here to defend some slime-monger who goes on the radio and lies about me, then I am ready to meet him anywhere.” Mr. Sabath demanded that the words be taken down. However, Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that the language objected to was not a breach of order since it was directed not towards Mr. Sabath but towards a news commentator.

§ 63.3 Where a Member stated in debate he did “not believe a word that another Member has said,” the language was held in order as no intentional misrepresentation was implied.

On July 2, 1935,⁽¹⁸⁾ Mr. Maury Maverick, of Texas, stated in debate “I do not believe a word the gentleman from Maine [Mr. Ralph O. Brewster] said” while the House was considering House Resolution 285, to appoint a committee to investigate charges of intimidation of Mr. Brewster by an official of the executive branch.

Mr. Brewster demanded that the words be taken down as a challenge to his words on the floor of the House. Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, ruled as follows:

The gentleman from Texas made the statement, but that does not necessarily imply that the gentleman from Maine intentionally made a misstatement on his own part. He simply said he did not believe it, but this did not necessarily imply that the gentleman from Maine intentionally made a misstatement. What the gentleman from Texas said may be construed as meaning that the gentleman from Maine was merely mistaken in his conclusions, and that the gentleman did not deliberately make a false statement.

§ 63.4 A statement in debate that the remarks of a Member were “false and slanderous” was held out of order.

On Dec. 20, 1943,⁽¹⁹⁾ Mr. Adolph J. Sabath, of Illinois, had the floor and was speaking of a bill related to the right of servicemen to vote. During the course of his remarks, he referred to a certain bill as depriving them of the vote. Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, rose to demand that that language be taken down; he stated “I make the point of order that his statement is false and slanderous.”

Mr. Sabath demanded that Mr. Rankin’s accusation be taken down and Speaker Pro Tempore John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, ruled on both points of order. He ruled that Mr. Rankin’s statement clearly transgressed the rules of the House and declined to sustain Mr. Rankin’s argument that “When any Member rises on the floor and makes a false statement, any other Member has the right to say that that statement is false; and when that statement is slanderous, any gentleman is within the rules of the House when he says so.”

§ 63.5 Language in a telegram read in debate in the House which repudiated “lies and half-truths” of a House committee report was held out of order as reflecting on the integrity of committee members.

On June 16, 1947,⁽²⁰⁾ Mr. Chet Holifield, of California, read in the House a telegram from the Southern Conference for Human Welfare. Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, made a point of order against certain words in the telegram and demanded that they be taken down: “We completely repudiate the lies and half-truths of the report that was issued and consider it un-American.”

Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, ruled that the words objected to, referring to the Committee on Un-American Activities, were unparliamentary, since they “reflect upon the character and integrity of the membership of a committee. . . .” The words were stricken on motion from the Congressional Record.

Hypocrisy

§ 63.6 A statement in referring to another Member that “I was reminded that pretexts are never wanting when hypocrisy wishes to add malice to falsehood or cowardice to stab a foe who cannot defend himself” was held unparliamentary.

20. 93 CONG. REC. 7065, 80th Cong. 1st Sess.

On Oct. 25, 1945,⁽¹⁾ Mr. Edward E. Cox, of Georgia, stated in debate in reference to Mr. Emanuel Celler, of New York: “I was reminded that pretexts are never wanting when hypocrisy wishes to add malice to falsehood or cowardice to stab a foe who cannot defend himself.” Mr. Celler demanded that the words be taken down, and Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled the language unparliamentary as specifically directed to Mr. Celler.

Allegations of Insincerity

§ 63.7 A statement by a Member “I cannot believe that the gentleman from Mississippi is sincere in what he has just said” was held out of order as a personal attack on a Member’s sincerity.

On Nov. 2, 1942,⁽²⁾ Mr. Harold Knutson, of Minnesota, stated in debate: “Mr. Speaker, I cannot

1. 91 CONG. REC. 10044, 79th Cong. 1st Sess.

2. 88 CONG. REC. 8702, 77th Cong. 2d Sess.

believe that the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. John E. Rankin] is sincere in what he has just said.” Mr. Rankin demanded that the words be taken down and Speaker Pro Tempore Jere Cooper, of Tennessee, ruled as follows:

The Chair is of the opinion that the words complained of, in effect, accuse the gentleman from Mississippi of insincerity and constitute a personal attack on the sincerity of the gentleman from Mississippi and are in violation of the rules of the House.

§ 64. — Lack of Intelligence

Wide latitude is permitted in debate to criticize the understanding of other Members or groups of Members in relation to pending legislation. But such remarks may not extend to personal attacks on the intelligence of another Member.⁽³⁾

Implication in Debate

§ 64.1 An implication in debate that another Member did not understand English was held in order.

During debate on Mar. 9, 1936,⁽⁴⁾ Mr. Thomas L. Blanton, of

3. See § 64.4, infra.

4. 80 CONG. REC. 3465, 74th Cong. 2d Sess.

Texas, stated in reference to Mr. Henry Ellenbogen, of Pennsylvania, "Here is the answer, if the gentleman can understand English." The words were taken down, but Speaker Pro Tempore John J. O'Connor, of New York, ruled that there was nothing objectionable in the language noted.

§ 64.2 A question in debate whether it was a parliamentary inquiry to ask that a bill be printed in such a way that the Republicans could understand it was held in order.

On Mar. 31, 1938,⁽⁵⁾ Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, demanded that the following words used in debate by Mr. Thomas F. Ford, of California, be taken down: "Mr. Chairman, is it a parliamentary inquiry then to ask that the bill be reprinted in words of one syllable so that the Republicans can understand it?"

Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, ruled that the language was clearly not objectionable under House rules.

§ 64.3 Where a Member characterized another Member's comment on a pending amendment as a "dumb interpretation in my opinion," the words were taken down but withdrawn by unanimous consent before a ruling was made.

5. 83 CONG. REC. 4484, 4485, 75th Cong. 3d Sess.

On June 10, 1964,⁽⁶⁾ the Committee of the Whole was considering an amendment to a pending bill offered by Mr. Olin E. Teague of Texas. Mr. H. R. Gross, of Iowa, described his view of the amendment's effect, and Mr. Teague replied "It is a dumb interpretation in my opinion." Mr. Gross demanded that the words be taken down but Mr. Teague asked unanimous consent that the words be withdrawn before any ruling was made.

§ 64.4 A reference in debate to a Member as one who was incapable of ascertaining whether a document has been forged was held to transgress rules of debate.

On Mar. 1, 1940,⁽⁷⁾ Mr. Clare E. Hoffman, of Michigan, referred in debate to Mr. Frank E. Hook, of Michigan, as a person "who never can tell whether a document has been forged or whether it has not." Mr. Hook demanded that the words be taken down, and Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, ruled that the language violated the rules of debate since directed to the personality of another Member. The words were stricken from the Record.

7. 86 CONG. REC. 2229, 76th Cong. 3d Sess.

§ 65. —Race and Prejudice

It is not in order in debate to accuse a Member of bigotry or racism.⁽⁸⁾ However, a Member may express the opinion in debate that another Member is by his actions and words doing a disservice to a minority race if terms not objectionable in themselves are not used.⁽⁹⁾

Remarks Relating to Race Generally

§ 65.1 A statement in debate expressing the opinion of the Member that if he were a Negro he would avoid association with non-Negroes was held not to reflect on any Member of the House and therefore to be in order.

On Apr. 5, 1946, Mr. Adam C. Powell, Jr., of New York, offered to H.R. 5990, the District of Columbia appropriation bill of 1947, an amendment to deny funds to any agency, office, or department which segregated citizens on the basis of race, color, creed, or national origin.⁽¹⁰⁾ In commenting on the amendment, Mr. Powell stated:

⁸. Compare §§ 65.5–65.7, infra.

⁹. See § 65.4, infra.

If you do not believe that segregation is practiced here by the District government may I say look at me, one of your fellow Congressmen. I cannot get a card to play tennis, for instance, in any of the parks of the District of Columbia. . . .

Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, then commented as follows on the amendment:

Mr. Chairman, this amendment to deny funds to separate schools here in Washington is another one of those communistic movements to stir up race hatred in the District of Columbia. . . .

If I were a Negro I would want to be as black as the ace of spades, and I would not be running around here trying to play tennis on a white man's court. I would go with the other Negroes and have the best time in my life. . . .

Mr. Powell demanded that the last paragraph of Mr. Rankin's remarks be taken down. The Committee of the Whole rose and Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled as follows:

The Chair would think and would be compelled to hold that there is nothing

¹⁰. 92 CONG. REC. 3227, 79th Cong. 2d Sess.

in this language that refers to any specific person by name or otherwise as a Member of the House of Representatives, does not reflect upon his character, his integrity, or attribute to him any moral turpitude.⁽¹¹⁾

§ 65.2 The Speaker held that reference to a class or group of persons as “Negroes” was in order, although it was objected that a corruption of that term had been used, thereby insulting some Members of the House.

On Sept. 21, 1949,⁽¹²⁾ Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, was delivering remarks in debate against Paul Robeson, whom he termed a “Negro Communist”. Mr. Vito Marcantonio, of New York, made the following point of order:

The gentleman from Mississippi used the word “nigger.” I ask that that word be taken down and stricken from the Record inasmuch as there are two Members in this House of the Negro race, and that word reflects on them.

Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, stated that he had understood Mr. Rankin to say “Negro,” and Mr. Rankin added that he had used that term ever since he had learned to talk. Mr. Marcantonio insisted that Mr. Rankin had said “nigger,” and Speaker Rayburn ruled as follows:

11. Id. at pp. 3229, 3230.

12. 95 CONG. REC. 13124, 81st Cong. 1st Sess.

The Chair holds that the remarks of the gentleman from Mississippi are not subject to a point of order. He referred to the Negro race, and they should not be ashamed of that designation.

Similarly, on Feb. 18, 1947,⁽¹³⁾ Mr. Rankin delivered the following remarks in debate:

Now, let us turn back to this Negro witness. His name is Nowell. He lived in Detroit. He said he was born in Georgia. Now, I have lived all my life and practiced law for years in a State where we had many, many lawsuits between Negroes and whites and between Negroes themselves. I am used to cross-examining them. I know something of the way they testify, and have a fairly good way weighting testimony, and if I am any judge this Negro, Nowell, was sincere in every word he said.

The following point of order and ruling by Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, then took place:

MR. [ADAM C.] POWELL [of New York]: Is it within the rules of this Congress to refer to any group of our Nation in disparaging terms?

MR. RANKIN: It is not disparaging to call them Negroes, as all respectable Negroes know.

MR. POWELL: I am addressing the Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair is not aware of the disparaging term used.

MR. POWELL: He used the term “nigger” in referring to a group.

13. 93 CONG. REC. 1131, 80th Cong. 1st Sess.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair understood the gentleman to say "Negro."

MR. RANKIN: Mr. Speaker, I said what I always say and what I am always going to say when referring to these people.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will proceed in order.

MR. POWELL: Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair overrules the point of order.

§ 65.3 It is not in order to impugn the motives of other Members as being racially prejudiced.

On Aug. 14, 1967,⁽¹⁴⁾ Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, ruled that the use of the word "bigoted" in reference to another Member was not consistent with the rules of the House.

Similarly, on Dec. 13, 1973,⁽¹⁵⁾ Speaker Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, ruled that the use of the words "demagogic and racist" in relation to the motivation for an amendment was a breach of the rules of the House.

§ 65.4 In referring to another Member in debate the proper reference is "the gentleman from 'the state from which he comes'" and not "the Jewish gentleman from New York."

On Oct. 24, 1945,⁽¹⁶⁾ Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, in debate referred to Mr. Emanuel Celler, of New York, as the "Jewish gentleman from New York." The words were demanded to be taken down by Mr. Celler, and Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled them out of order.

Mr. Rankin then continued with his remarks and criticized Mr. Celler for protesting reference to him as a "gentleman of his race".

Mr. Celler demanded that those words be taken down on the grounds that Mr. Rankin was again referring to him by innuendo as the Jewish gentleman from New York. Speaker Rayburn ruled that there was no breach of order in referring to another Member merely as a member of a minority race. Mr. Rankin then asked the Speaker:

. . . I wish to proceed in order. Does the Member from New York [Mr. Celler] object to being called a Jew or does he object to being called a gentleman? What is he kicking about?

MR. [VITO] MARCANTONIO [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, a point of order.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair desires to make a little statement.

The Chair trusts that points of order may be properly points of order hereafter, and that a Member before he makes a point of order secures the recognition of the Chair.

16. 91 CONG. REC. 10032, 10033, 79th Cong. 1st Sess.

The gentleman from Mississippi will proceed in order, and the Chair trusts that the gentleman from Mississippi understands what the Chair means.

On May 22, 1947,⁽¹⁷⁾ Mr. Rankin delivered the following words in debate.

Mr. Speaker, I might say in the beginning that I know of no man who in my opinion has done the Jews of this country more harm than the gentleman from New York [Mr. Celler].

The words were demanded to be taken down by Mr. Celler and Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, ruled that the words used were merely an expression of an individual opinion and that they did not reflect in an unparliamentary manner upon Mr. Celler.

§ 65.5 It is not in order in debate to refer to a Member as having reached “bigoted” conclusions.

On Aug. 14, 1967,⁽¹⁸⁾ the following words used in debate by Mr. F. Edward Hébert, of Louisiana, in relation to another Member were demanded to be taken down: “His conclusions have already been reached. They are prejudicial and bigoted.” Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, ruled that the use of the word “bigoted” was not consistent with the rules of the House. The words were stricken from the Record and Mr. Hébert was recognized for the remainder of his time.

17. 93 CONG. REC. 5663, 5664, 80th Cong. 1st Sess.

18. 113 CONG. REC. 22443, 22444, 90th Cong. 1st Sess.

§ 65.6 The Speaker ruled out of order in debate remarks characterizing the motivation for an amendment as “demagogic” and “racist.”

On Dec. 13, 1973,⁽¹⁹⁾ the Committee of the Whole was considering H.R. 11450, the Energy Emergency Act. Mr. John D. Dingell, of Michigan, offered an amendment to prohibit the use of petroleum for the busing of schoolchildren beyond the nearest public school. In debate on the amendment, Ms. Bella S. Abzug, of New York, stated as follows:

An amendment like this can only be demagogic or racist because it is only demagoguery or racism which impels such an amendment like this.

Mr. Robert E. Bauman, of Maryland, demanded that the words be taken down and Ms. Abzug responded that her language had not in any way impugned the motives of Mr. Dingell.

19. 119 CONG. REC. 41271, 93d Cong. 1st Sess.

The Committee rose and Speaker Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, ruled as follows:

On May 4, 1943 . . . Speaker [Sam] Rayburn [of Texas] held:

Statement by Newsome of Minnesota that, "I do not yield to any more demagogues," held not in order.

It is the opinion of the Chair that the statements reported to the House are within the framework of this ruling, and without objection the words are therefore stricken from the Record.

Exciting To Prejudice

§ 65.7 A statement in debate accusing a Member of remarks on the floor calculated to stir up race prejudice was ruled in order as a statement of opinion and not reflecting upon the character or integrity of the Member mentioned.

On Feb. 25, 1948,⁽²⁰⁾ Mr. Frank B. Keefe, of Wisconsin, used the following words in debate in relation to Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi:

[T]hat statement of the gentleman from Mississippi is just as wrong as many of the other inflammatory statements which he makes on the floor of this House in an attempt to stir up race prejudice that ought to be subdued rather than stirred up.

Mr. Rankin demanded that the words be taken down and Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, ruled that Mr. Keefe had merely stated his opinion and did not reflect upon the character or integrity of Mr. Rankin. The Speaker ruled that the statement was not unparliamentary since it only expressed a difference of opinion.

§ 66. — Disloyalty

Remarks in debate impugning the loyalty of a Member are not in order.⁽¹⁾ However, if such language is directed at the House or at its membership in general, the remarks may not be improper.⁽²⁾ Allegations of disloyalty or lack of patriotism may assume various forms, including such labels as

1. Accusations of active disloyalty are in order when the subject is relevant to disciplinary proceedings brought by the House against a Member, or to the consideration of resolutions of censure, expulsion, or exclusion. See Ch. 7, supra (disloyalty as disqualification for membership) and Ch. 12, supra (conduct; punishment, censure, or expulsion).
2. See, for example, § 53.1, supra. Compare 5 Hinds' Precedents § 5139 ("rebel elements" in House held unparliamentary).

²⁰ 94 CONG. REC. 1707, 80th Cong. 2d Sess.

“communist”⁽³⁾ and “subversive,”⁽⁴⁾ as well as the assertion that a Member has given aid or comfort to the enemy.⁽⁵⁾

Particular Accusations—Communism

§ 66.1 A statement in debate referring to another Member’s language as “communistic” was held unparliamentary.

On Feb. 12, 1946,⁽⁶⁾ Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, stated in response to comments accusing him of using disgraceful language, “I am not going to sit here and listen to these communistic attacks made on me.”

Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that Mr. Rankin’s language was unparliamentary.

§ 66.2 A statement in debate accusing all opponents of the Committee on Un-American Activities as communist enemies was held in order on the assurance of the Member having the floor that he was not referring to any Member of the House.

3. See §§ 66.1–66.5, infra.

4. See § 66.8, infra.

5. See §§ 66.3, 66.4, infra.

6. 92 CONG. REC. 1241, 79th Cong. 2d Sess.

On Feb. 27, 1946,⁽⁷⁾ Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, stated of the words “The House Un-American Committee” that had appeared in a Congressional Record insert by another Member:

That is the Communist line, Mr. Speaker, that is being followed by these enemies of our country, in their attacks on the Committee on Un-American Activities.

Mr. Adolph J. Sabath, of Illinois, asked that those words be taken down, and Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, questioned Mr. Rankin as to whether he intended to refer to Mr. Sabath in stating those remarks. Mr. Rankin stated that he was not referring to any individual in the House but only to communists and enemies throughout the Nation. No further action was taken in the matter.

Giving Aid and Comfort to Enemies

§ 66.3 A statement in debate referring to Members who give aid and comfort to enemies and traitors was ruled not a breach of order since it did not reflect on individual Members.

On Nov. 24, 1947,⁽⁸⁾ Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, delivered the following words in debate:

7. 92 CONG. REC. 1724, 79th Cong. 2d Sess.

8. 93 CONG. REC. 10791, 80th Cong. 1st Sess.

. . . It has been amazing to hear these Members rise on the floor of the House and give aid and comfort to those enemies, those traitors within our gates, for every Communist in America is a traitor to the Government of the United States and is dedicated to its overthrow.

The words were demanded to be taken down by Mr. Vito Marcantonio, of New York, and Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, ruled that although a close question was presented, the remarks used did not reflect upon individual Members personally and were therefore not out of order.

§ 66.4 A reference in debate to Members whose utterances would give “great aid and comfort to the Soviet Politburo” was held to violate the rules and was stricken from the Record.

On Aug. 17, 1951,⁽⁹⁾ Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that certain words used in reference to Members violated the rules of the House.

Parliamentarian’s Note: The words objected to and stricken from the Record referred to certain Members as “apostles of doom” whose utterances would give “great aid and comfort” to the Politburo of the Soviet Union.

9. 97 CONG. REC. 10250, 82d Cong. 1st Sess.

§ 66.5 A statement in debate referring to Members of the House who would rip down the American flag and replace it with the Soviet flag was held in order as not reflecting on any particular individual Member of the House.

On Mar. 25, 1948,⁽¹⁰⁾ Mr. Edward E. Cox, of Georgia, stated in debate as follows:

Mr. Chairman, how long, I wonder, must Members of this body sit here and hear assaulted from day to day the Government we love, and by people who would rip from the wall that symbol of liberty that hangs above the Speaker’s rostrum, and who would run down the flag of the stars and stripes that proudly floats above this Capitol and run up in its stead the flag of the hammer and sickle?

Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, ruled that nothing in the words used reflected upon any particular individual Member of the House and that in the debate at that time much latitude would be allowed.

References to Fascist Elements

§ 66.6 A statement in debate that insertions in the Record by another Member were taken from “Nazi elements” was held to be out of order.

10. 94 CONG. REC. 3533, 80th Cong. 2d Sess.

On June 14, 1940,⁽¹¹⁾ Mr. Adolph J. Sabath, of Illinois, demanded that the following words used in reference to him in debate be taken down:

I feel these inserts are unjustifiable and unwarranted. They are not founded on facts. You cannot substantiate any of them—I think you should desist—taken from Nazi elements who are feeding you with that stuff.

Speaker Pro Tempore Emmet O'Neal, of Kentucky, ruled that the words referring to Nazi elements were out of order.

§ 66.7 A statement by a Member that internal fascist organizations exercised extensive influence on a special House committee was held to impugn the motives and actions of the committee and its members and was ruled a breach of order.

On Feb. 11, 1941, during consideration of House Resolution 90 to continue investigation by a special committee [the Dies Committee] on unAmerican activities, Mr. Samuel Dickstein, of New York, had the floor in debate.⁽¹²⁾ Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, interrupted Mr.

11. 86 CONG. REC. 8269, 76th Cong. 3d Sess.

12. 87 CONG. REC. 894, 895, 77th Cong. 1st Sess.

Dickstein's remarks and demanded that the following words be taken down as a violation of the rules of the House:

I also charge, Mr. Speaker, that 110 Fascist organizations in this country had the back key, and have now the back key to the back door of the Dies committee.

Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that the language noted "certainly impugns the motives and actions of a committee and the individual members thereof." The House then expunged Mr. Dickstein's entire speech from the Congressional Record.

Characterizing Debate as Subversive

§ 66.8 When a Member in debate accuses another of making remarks that are subversive, it is a violation of the rules of the House.

On Apr. 2, 1946,⁽¹³⁾ Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, demanded that words used by Mr. Vito Marcantonio, of New York, in debate accusing him of subversive remarks be taken down. Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that "when a Member accuses another of making remarks that are subversive, it is a violation of the rules of the House."

Parliamentarian's Note: The objectionable words, which were stricken from the Record, were as follows: "There is nothing more subversive than the kind of red baiting tactics that are being carried on in this House by the gentleman from Mississippi."

13. 92 CONG. REC. 2957, 2958, 79th Cong. 2d Sess.

§ 66.9 A statement in debate referring to another Member as attempting to undermine the government was held out of order and stricken from the Record.

On May 14, 1946,⁽¹⁴⁾ Mr. Charles E. McKenzie, of Louisiana, delivered remarks in debate accusing another Member who had spoken before him of "trying to undermine" the government. The words were taken down and Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that they were not parliamentary since they reflected upon a Member of the House. The words were then stricken from the Record.

§ 66.10 A statement in debate referring to the association of a Member with a newspaper allegedly dedicated to the destruction of the government was held in order.

On Mar. 28, 1946,⁽¹⁵⁾ the following remarks in debate by Mr.

14. 92 CONG. REC. 5028, 79th Cong. 2d Sess.

15. 92 CONG. REC. 2751, 79th Cong. 2d Sess.

John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, in relation to Mr. Andrew J. Biemiller, of Wisconsin, were taken down:

I have just seen in the Communist Daily Worker of this morning that Mr. Andrew J. Biemiller had written these words, "There is no place in our democracy for a committee functioning like the present one," referring to the Committee on Un-American Activities. He does not know any more about what goes on in the Committee on Un-American Activities than he does about what goes on in the moon. He has never come before that committee, he has never asked it a question, he has never appeared before it, yet he goes into the Communist Daily Worker, that everybody knows is dedicated to the destruction of this Government—

Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, ruled that Mr. Rankin was expressing his opinion of the newspaper and not reflecting upon the character or integrity of Mr. Biemiller.

Characterization of House Committees

§ 66.11 A statement in debate characterizing the Committee of the Whole as an agency of the Soviet Union was held in order as it did not reflect upon any Member's integrity but indicated criticism of the House.

On June 4, 1948,⁽¹⁶⁾ Mr. Clarence Cannon, of Missouri, stated

16. 94 CONG. REC. 7171, 80th Cong. 2d Sess.

in debate: “You will think, when you review the Soviet press, that the committee of this House [the Committee of the Whole] was an agency of the U.S.S.R.” Mr. Frank B. Keefe, of Wisconsin, demanded that the words be taken down, and Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, ruled that the words used indicated criticism of the House but did not reflect upon the integrity of any individual Member and were therefore in order.

§ 66.12 A reference in debate to the Committee on Un-American Activities as “the Un-American Committee” was held out of order.

On June 12, 1947,⁽¹⁷⁾ Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, demanded the taking down of the reference by Mr. Chet Holifield, of California, in debate to the Committee on Un-American Activities as the “Un-American Committee.”

Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, ruled that the reference impugned the motives of the committee in question and were used in debate in violation of the rules of the House.

H. DURATION OF DEBATE IN THE HOUSE

§ 67. In General

The duration of debate on a proposition in the House is governed by the type of procedure invoked for its consideration. Most proposals are considered pursuant to one of the four procedures below:

(1) consideration under the hour rule where a standing rule of the House or a special rule from the

^{17.} 93 CONG. REC. 6895, 80th Cong. 1st Sess.

^{18.} See § 68, infra.

Committee on Rules does not otherwise provide;⁽¹⁸⁾

(2) consideration for a fixed period of time provided for by a standing rule governing a particular House procedure, such as suspensions or Calendar Wednesday;⁽¹⁹⁾

(3) consideration under the five-minute rule in the House as in the Committee of the Whole, by unanimous consent, special order,

^{19.} See § 69, infra.

^{20.} See § 70, infra. On rare occasions, a special rule has provided that bills or for Private Calendar bills;⁽²⁰⁾ and

(4) consideration pursuant to special rules or unanimous-consent agreements fixing or extending the time for debate in the House.⁽¹⁾

One-minute speeches and special-order speeches are two further methods whereby time may be obtained for debate, but only when no measure is under consideration.⁽²⁾

The Speaker has the function of ascertaining the time for debate and determining its expiration,⁽³⁾ and under certain limited circumstances the length of debate is within the Chair's discretion.⁽⁴⁾

The only motion in the House with the primary purpose of closing debate and bringing the House to a vote is the motion for the previous question. Certain other motions, such as the motion to lay on the table, may have the effect of closing debate if decided in the affirmative.⁽⁵⁾ be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole (see § 4.1, supra).

1. See § 71, infra.
2. See § 73, infra.
3. See §§ 67.1, 67.2, infra.
4. See §§ 67.3–67.6, infra.
5. For the closing of House debate, see § 72, infra.

The closing of debate in the Committee of the Whole is discussed in §§ 76, 78, 79, infra.

6. See § 72.1, infra.

Where a Member is entitled to a certain amount of time in debate, either under the general rules of the House or by unanimous consent or special rule, he is not required to consume or yield all of his time. If he is recognized to make a debatable motion under the hour rule, he may move the previous question at any time.⁽⁶⁾ And where a unanimous-consent agreement provides a certain amount of debate, the Member in charge may move the previous question without using or yielding all the time agreed upon.⁽⁷⁾ Similarly, the managers of a bill in the Committee of the Whole may, acting together, agree to use less than the time for general debate allotted under a special rule.⁽⁸⁾

Although a Member making a debatable motion need not consume all the time to which he is entitled, if he loses or surrenders the floor without closing debate, another Member is entitled to recognition.⁽⁹⁾

The duration and closing of debate in the Senate is governed by different considerations than those in the House.⁽¹⁰⁾

The closing of debate in the Committee of the Whole is discussed in §§ 76, 78, 79, infra.

6. See § 72.1, infra.
7. See § 72.3, infra.
8. See § 76.1, infra.
9. See §§ 67.10–67.13, infra.
10. See § 72, infra.

Timekeeping§ 67.1 The Chair counts the time of a Member with the*floor and announces the expiration of allotted time.

On June 11, 1963,⁽¹¹⁾ Mr. Paul C. Jones, of Missouri, had the floor for a one-minute speech prior to the legislative business of the day and yielded to Mr. James G. Fulton, of Pennsylvania. Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, interrupted Mr. Fulton to state that Mr. Jones' one minute had expired, and Mr. Fulton asked unanimous consent that Mr. Jones be given one additional minute.

The Speaker ruled that such a request was not in order and refused to recognize Mr. Fulton for the request (it not being the practice to permit any Member to be recognized for more than one one-minute speech or to speak for more than one minute prior to legislative business).

§ 67.2 Evaluation of the time consumed in one-minute speeches is a matter for the Chair and is not subject to challenge or question by a parliamentary inquiry.

On May 9, 1972,⁽¹²⁾ Speaker Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, responded as follows to a parliamentary inquiry:

MR. [DONALD W.] RIEGLE [Jr., of Michigan]: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state the parliamentary inquiry.

MR. RIEGLE: Mr. Speaker, I have observed different speakers being given very different lengths of time to speak under the 1-minute rule.

I just noticed, for example, the gentleman from California who was given approximately half the time that the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Devine) and several other speakers were given today. I object to that and I think if we are going to use the 1-minute rule, let us use it fairly.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will state that the Chair is trying to enforce the 1-minute rule. That is not a parliamentary inquiry and the gentleman was out of order in making it.

Chair's Discretion as to Debate Time

§ 67.3 The duration of debate time on a point of order is within the discretion of the Chair.

On Apr. 13, 1951,⁽¹³⁾ Mr. Carl Vinson, of Georgia, made a point of order that an amendment offered by Mr. Antoni N. Sadlak, of Connecticut, to a pending bill was not in order since not germane to the bill. Chairman Jere Cooper, of

13. 97 CONG. REC. 3909, 3910, 82d Cong. 1st Sess.

Tennessee, inquired of Mr. Sadlak whether he desired to be heard on the point of order. Mr. Sadlak inquired "how much time will be allotted to me for that purpose?" The Chair responded that the time to be allotted was "in the discretion of the Chair."⁽¹⁴⁾

Parliamentarian's Note: Rule XVII clause 3 [House Rules and Manual §811 (1995)] provides that "incidental questions of order arising after a motion is made for the previous question, and pending such motion, shall be decided, whether on appeal or otherwise, without debate." The rule does not, however, deprive the Chair of his discretion, under the precedents, over debate on a point of order or a parliamentary inquiry.

§ 67.4 A concurrent resolution providing for adjournment of Congress to a day certain is not debatable, but the Speaker has in his discretion permitted some time for discussion where no point of order is raised.

On Aug. 28, 1967,⁽¹⁵⁾ Mr. Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, called up

214. Points of order on which the Chair has announced his readiness to rule are not debatable, such debate being at all times within the discretion of the Chair. See § 6.12, supra; 5 Hinds' Precedents §§ 6919, 6920.

15. 113 CONG. REC. 24201, 90th Cong. 1st Sess.

House Concurrent Resolution 497, providing for an adjournment to a day certain of the two Houses of Congress. Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, ruled that the resolution was not debatable, but permitted Mr. Albert to yield to another Member for a brief statement:

MR. [H. R.] GROSS [of Iowa]: Mr. Speaker, I move to strike the last word.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will state that this is not a debatable resolution.

MR. GROSS: Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

MR. ALBERT: I yield to the gentleman from Iowa for the purpose of making a brief statement.

MR. GROSS: Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the distinguished majority leader why the adjournment resolution was not made effective as of the first of this week, and why the recess was not planned to take in this week as well as next week?

MR. ALBERT: We have discussed this matter with the leadership on both sides, and it was determined it would be impractical to do so. . . .

The concurrent resolution was agreed to.

§ 67.5 Although a concurrent resolution providing for an adjournment sine die is not debatable, brief debate time has been permitted by the Chair where no point of order was raised and where the legislative situation warranted some discussion of the resolution.

On Oct. 14, 1968,⁽¹⁶⁾ Mr. Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, called up Senate Concurrent Resolution 83, providing for an adjournment sine die of the Congress on Oct. 11, 1968. Mr. Albert moved to amend the resolution by striking out the date and inserting "October 14, 1968" and then yielded five minutes' debate, without objection, to Mr. James G. O'Hara, of Michigan. Mr. O'Hara, who had previously expressed his intention to prevent the adjournment of Congress until the Senate took action on a legislative proposal permitting network TV debates among the major Presidential candidates, announced he would no longer persist in his efforts due to the likelihood of a failure of a quorum in the Senate. Mr. Albert resumed the floor to express support for Mr. O'Hara's statement and then moved the previous question on the amendment to the adjournment resolution.

§ 67.6 Recognition for a reservation of objection to a unanimous-consent request is within the discretion of the Speaker and sometimes he refuses to permit any debate time under such a reservation.

On Dec. 3, 1969,⁽¹⁷⁾ Mrs. Edith S. Green, of Oregon, made a unanimous-consent request that she be allowed to address the House for one hour at the close of business. Mr. Roman C. Pucinski, of Illinois, attempted to reserve the right to object in order to discuss the matter. Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, refused to entertain the reservation of objection and stated "Either the gentlewoman receives permission, or she does not." There was no objection to the request.⁽¹⁸⁾

Effect of Interruptions During Debate Time

§ 67.7 The Speaker stated that time for interruptions was

17. 115 CONG. REC. 36748, 91st Cong. 1st Sess.

18. Any Member may demand the regular order and preclude further debate on a reservation of the right to object (see 75 CONG. REC. 11759, 72d Cong. 1st Sess., June 1, 1932).

No reservation of objection may be entertained during the call of the Private Calendar (see Rule XXIV clause 6, House Rules and Manual §893 (1995)). Before that prohibition was added to the rules, the Speaker would on occasion invoke the five-minute rule in order to prevent prolonged discussion under a reservation of a right to object (see, for example, 78 CONG. REC. 2364, 73d Cong. 2d Sess., Feb. 10, 1934).

taken out of the time of the Member with the floor, except for points of order.

On Apr. 8, 1937,⁽¹⁹⁾ Mr. Arthur H. Greenwood, of Indiana, had the floor, having called up by direction of the Committee on Rules a privileged resolution. Mr. Carl E. Mapes, of Michigan, asked Mr. Greenwood to yield for the propounding of a parliamentary inquiry. Speaker William B. Bankhead, of Alabama, advised as follows on the consumption of time for interruptions:

MR. MAPES: Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield so that I may submit a parliamentary inquiry, not to be taken out of the gentleman's time?

MR. GREENWOOD: I yield for that purpose.

THE SPEAKER: If the gentleman yields, it comes out of his time.

MR. GREENWOOD: Then I prefer to make my statement. I will not yield for that purpose at this time.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will state to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. Mapes] that the only exception where interruptions are not taken out of the time of the speaker is on points of order.

Parliamentarian's Note: When a Member with the floor yields, the time consumed by the interruption is charged to his time.⁽²⁰⁾

19. 81 CONG. REC. 3283, 75th Cong. 1st Sess.

20. For yielding time, see §29, supra.

Where, however, he is taken off his feet by a point of order, quorum call, or reservation of objection, the time consumed thereby is not charged to his time.⁽¹⁾

§ 67.8 Where debate has been limited to a specified number of minutes, time is counted only during debate, not during quorum calls.

On Aug. 4, 1966,⁽²⁾ Majority Leader Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, sought unanimous consent that debate on a pending motion to strike a title of a bill in Committee of the Whole be limited to 30 minutes. Chairman Richard Bolling, of Missouri, then answered a parliamentary inquiry on the effect of a quorum call on that time.

MR. [DURWARD G.] HALL [of Missouri]: Mr. Chairman, is my under-

1. For interruptions of the Member with the floor, see § 32, supra.

When a Member with the floor suspends temporarily for the reception of a message or conference report or other pressing legislative business, the time consumed by the interruption is not charged to his time. See, for example, § 73.19, infra, where a Member occupying the floor for a "special-order speech" suspended for a motion to suspend the rules and consumed the remainder of his time following adoption of the motion.

2. 112 CONG. REC. 18207, 89th Cong. 2d Sess.

standing correct that the unanimous consent request propounded by the distinguished majority leader would preclude a quorum call prior to the first order of business and the 30 minutes before the vote?

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair will reply to the gentleman that if there is no quorum present any Member at any time can make a point of order. In other words, it will not preclude a quorum call.

MR. HALL: A further parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Chairman. Would that time come out of the 30 minutes allotted for debate?

THE CHAIRMAN: It would not.

Parliamentarian's Note: Time consumed by votes and quorum calls is not counted where the time limit for debate is a specified number of minutes or hours, as distinguished from a time certain by the clock. Thus, when debate has been limited "to 30 minutes," time is counted only during debate, not during quorum calls. Likewise, in such cases, if an amendment is read during debate, the time consumed by the reading of amendments is not taken from that remaining for debate. But where time for debate has been fixed to time certain, i.e., 4:15 p.m., the time for parliamentary inquiries, rereading of amendments, points of order, etc., is taken from time remaining, thus reducing the time for debate available to Members thereafter.⁽³⁾

Debate Time Fixed at "One Day"

§ 67.9 Where debate on a bill is fixed by special order at one day, the term "one day" means one legislative day as terminated by adjournment.

On Aug. 17, 1949, the House adopted House Resolution 327, providing for general debate not to exceed one day in the Committee of the Whole on H.R. 5895, furnishing military assistance to foreign nations. When the House had resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole for consideration of the bill, Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, of Arkansas, answered a parliamentary inquiry on the meaning of the term "one day":

THE CHAIRMAN: Under the rule general debate will be equally divided and will not exceed one day.

MR. [JOSEPH P.] O'HARA of Minnesota: Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman will state it.

MR. O'HARA of Minnesota: What is meant by the term "one day"?

THE CHAIRMAN: The term means one legislative day as terminated by adjournment, from now until the time the House adjourns.⁽⁴⁾ the Committee of the Whole, see § 79, infra. Although limitations are often set by the clock in the Committee of the Whole, time in the House for debate is customarily fixed at a certain number of minutes.

Member's Time Lapses When He Loses the Floor

§ 67.10 A Member in control of time under the hour rule may yield portions of his time to others; but if he surrenders the floor before fulfilling his commitments to yield, all time remaining available to him under the hour—his own as well as that promised or yielded to others—lapses.

On Nov. 29, 1967,⁽⁵⁾ Mr. William R. Anderson, of Tennessee, called up by direction of the Committee on Rules House Resolution 960, a privileged resolution authorizing travel by Members of the Committee on Education and Labor for investigatory purposes, and yielded 30 minutes to the minority Member handling the resolution, Mr. Smith of California. Mr. Anderson yielded to Mr. Durward G. Hall, of Missouri, to offer an amendment, thereby surrendering control of the resolution to Mr. Hall. When Speaker Pro Tempore Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, Where debate time in the Committee of the Whole is fixed at two legislative days, the Chair does not determine when each day is complete; the Committee so determines by rising. See § 74.9, infra.

stated that the question was on the resolution, a parliamentary inquiry was stated:

MR. [H. ALLEN] SMITH of California: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state the parliamentary inquiry.

MR. SMITH of California: I was yielded 30 minutes a while ago by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Anderson]. Do I not have that time?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: When the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Anderson] yielded to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Hall] for the purpose of offering an amendment, he surrendered all his time, and the Chair so informed the gentleman from Tennessee.

MR. SMITH of California: If the gentleman has agreed to yield 30 minutes to me, I lose it?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: When the gentleman yielded for the purpose of amendment.

§ 67.11 Where the Member in charge of a resolution in the House yields to another for the purpose of offering an amendment he loses control of the floor and the sponsor of the amendment is given control for an hour.

On Mar. 27, 1945,⁽⁶⁾ Mr. Edward E. Cox, of Georgia, the manager of a resolution (H. Res. 195), was recognized and moved the previous question, which was ordered. Discussion then ensued on an agreement made by Mr. Cox with Mr. Clinton P. Anderson, of New Mexico, that before the resolution was voted on an amendment to the resolution would be considered. Mr. Cox therefore moved to reconsider the vote on the previous question, and the previous question was reconsidered and rejected.

Mr. Cox then yielded to Mr. Anderson to offer an amendment to the resolution. At that point, Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, answered a parliamentary inquiry:

MR. [EARL C.] MICHENER [of Michigan]: Mr. Speaker, the acting chairman of the Committee on Rules having yielded for the offering of an amendment, as I understand the rule, the gentleman from New Mexico now has 1 hour, and the gentleman from Georgia has lost the floor.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman is correct.⁽⁷⁾

Member is recognized for one hour.

On Oct. 10, 1940,⁽⁸⁾ Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, laid before the House a veto message from the President. Mr. Samuel Dickstein, of New York, moved that the message and the bill be referred to a House committee. He was recognized for one hour by the Speaker, delivered some remarks, and then stated "I yield back the balance of my time." Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi, asked for recognition in opposition to the motion, and the Speaker inquired of Mr. Dickstein whether he yielded. When Mr. Dickstein stated that he had yielded the floor, Mr. Rankin was recognized for one hour. Mr. Dickstein then objected that he had not meant to surrender the floor, and the Speaker stated that he had affirmatively done so.

§ 67.13 A Member having yielded the floor without moving the previous question after making a motion in the House, another Member seeking recognition was recognized for one hour.

On July 5, 1945,⁽⁹⁾ Mr. Malcolm C. Tarver, of Georgia, offered a motion to correct the permanent Record, in order to accurately reflect a colloquy between himself and Mr. John E. Rankin, of Mississippi. Mr. Tarver discussed his motion and then yielded the floor without moving the previous question. Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, recognized Mr. Rankin for one hour.

Unfinished Business and Resuming Debate

§ 67.14 When the consideration of unfinished business resumes in the House, debate does not begin anew but recommences from the point where it was interrupted.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on June 10, 1980:⁽¹⁰⁾

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹¹⁾ The unfinished business is the further consideration of the resolution (H. Res. 660) in the matter of Representative Charles H. Wilson.

The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read the resolution as follows:

Resolved,

(1) That Representative Charles H. Wilson be censured;

(2) That Representative Charles H. Wilson be denied the chair on any committee or subcommittee of the House of Representatives. . . .

10. 126 CONG. REC. 13801, 96th Cong. 2d Sess.

11. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

THE SPEAKER: Pursuant to the rules of the House and the unanimous-consent agreement, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Bennett) has 12 minutes remaining, the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. Spence), has 8 minutes remaining; the gentleman from California (Mr. Charles H. Wilson), or his designee has 1 hour remaining.

Debate Under Statutory Provisions

§ 67.15 Under section 604(h) of Public Law 93-198, debate on a concurrent resolution disapproving an action by the District of Columbia City Council can be limited by motion, but otherwise extends not to exceed 10 hours.

During consideration of House Concurrent Resolution 228 (disapproving the Location of Chanceries Amendment Act) in the House on Dec. 20, 1979,⁽¹²⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [FORTNEY H.] STARK [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the Senate concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 63) to disapprove the Location of Chanceries Amendment Act of 1979 passed by the City Council of the District of Columbia, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate concurrent resolution. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹³⁾ Does the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Ashbrook) reserve the right to object?

13. George E. Danielson (Calif.).

MR. [JOHN M.] ASHBROOK [of Ohio]: I reserve the right to object, Mr. Speaker.

MR. STARK: Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman.

Mr. Speaker, I have requested this procedure because the alternate procedure is a privileged motion which is at the desk which allows up to 10 hours of debate, which is the identical motion, and it would take the House some more time.

I would be glad to yield to any Member under the other debate procedure and allow every Member time for debate. I would hope to save the House time, and I would urge the gentleman to allow us to call up the Senate resolution.

MR. ASHBROOK: Mr. Speaker, I will still object.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Objection is heard.

MR. STARK: Mr. Speaker, under the home rule statute (Public Law 93-198, sec. 604(g)), I move to proceed to the immediate consideration of House Concurrent Resolution 228 as a privileged resolution and ask unanimous consent that general debate thereon be limited to one-half hour, to be equally divided between the gentleman from Virginia and myself.

The Clerk read the title of the concurrent resolution.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The question is on consideration of the concurrent resolution.

The motion to consider the House concurrent resolution was agreed to.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. Stark) to limit debate to one-half hour?

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, we have already had the debate. I do not know why the gentleman needs a half hour, frankly.

MR. STARK: Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

MR. BAUMAN: I yield to the gentleman from California.

MR. STARK: Mr. Speaker, it is to accommodate anybody who has not had an opportunity to speak on the issue.

MR. BAUMAN: I think 10 hours is worth it on this.

I object.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Objection is heard.

MR. STARK: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that general debate be limited to 20 minutes, to be divided between myself and the gentleman from Virginia.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

MR. [ROMANO L.] MAZZOLI [of Kentucky]: Mr. Speaker, I object.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Objection is heard.

MR. STARK: Mr. Speaker, I move that debate on the concurrent resolution be limited to 20 minutes.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California. . . .

[T]he motion was agreed to.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Under the motion, there are 20 minutes for debate. The gentleman from California (Mr. Stark) will be recognized for 10 minutes, and the gentleman from Virginia (Robert W. Daniel, Jr.) will be recognized for 10 minutes.

al Budget Act of 1974 (Public Law 93-344, amended by Public Law 95-523), the four hours' debate on economic goals and policies in Committee of the Whole on the first concurrent resolution on the budget must be consumed in its entirety or yielded back before the remaining time for general debate on the resolution may be resumed.

During consideration of House Concurrent Resolution 115 (pertaining to the congressional budget) in the Committee of the Whole on May 1, 1981,⁽¹⁴⁾ the Chair made a statement as to procedures for debate, as follows:

THE CHAIRMAN PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁵⁾ The gentleman from California (Mr. Hawkins) has 8 minutes remaining. The rules are that the gentleman must complete his time on economic policies before the general debate continues, controlled by Mr. Latta and Mr. Jones of Oklahoma on the budget resolution generally.

MR. [AUGUSTUS F.] HAWKINS [of California]: Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Extending Debate by Unanimous Consent

§ 67.17 By unanimous consent, further debate may be permitted on a motion to instruct conferees on which the previous question has been ordered.

During consideration of a motion to instruct House conferees on the conference with the Senate on H.R. 3919 (crude oil windfall profits tax) on Feb. 20, 1980,⁽¹⁶⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [NORMAN E.] D'AMOURS [of New Hampshire]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

THE SPEAKER: The Clerk will report the motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. D'Amours moves that, pursuant to the provisions of clause 1(b) of Rule XXVIII, the managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the Senate amendment to the bill H.R. 3919 be instructed to agree to the provisions contained in parts 1, 2 and 4 of title II of the Senate amendment to the text of the bill.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁷⁾ The gentleman from New Hampshire (Mr.

D'Amours) is recognized for 1 hour. . . .

Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the motion to instruct.

There was no objection.

MR. [CLARENCE J.] BROWN of Ohio: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . . [T]here may have been some confusion on the last vote, given what appeared on the screens in Members' offices. . . .

This question . . . we will vote on now is a vote on the motion to instruct the conferees?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The question that will occur now is on the motion to instruct the conferees.

(By unanimous consent Mr. Gibbons was allowed to speak out of order.)

MR. [SAM M.] GIBBONS [of Florida]: Mr. Speaker, I cannot believe the last vote. It is absolutely astounding.

What my colleagues voted for was to instruct the conferees to throw away $26 billion on some tax credits of doubtful value. . . .

But, please, do not instruct us. We are about to complete this conference. We are about to get things wound up and get it out here where we can either accept it or reject it.

§ 68. The Hour Rule

Rule XIV clause 2 provides for a one-hour limitation on debate in the House and in Committee of the Whole:

. . . and no Member shall occupy more than one hour in debate on any question in the House or in committee, except as further provided in this rule.⁽¹⁸⁾

Any Member who is recognized in the House is recognized for one hour, unless the matter under consideration—such as a suspension motion—has a special debate process stated in the rule permitting the matter to be called up, or debate is being conducted under the five-minute rule in the House as in the Committee of the Whole, or a special rule has provided otherwise.⁽¹⁹⁾

18. House Rules and Manual § 758 (1995). The clause dates from 1841 (see 5 Hinds' Precedents § 4978) and is unique to the House, the hour rule having no application to the proceedings of the Senate (see § 72, infra).

In the House of Commons of Great Britain, there is no limit on holding the floor for debate except by closure of debate, selection of amendments, or adoption of orders limiting debate. See Erskine May's Parliamentary Practice 472, Butterworth & Co. Ltd. (17th ed.) (London 1964).

19. The rules provide for 10-minute, 20-minute, and 40-minute debate on certain motions and questions (see § 69, infra). For special orders and unanimous-consent agreements altering the duration of debate in the House, see § 71, infra.

On Calendar Wednesday, debate on bills considered in the Committee of the Whole is limited to two hours, one hour controlled by the Member in charge of the bill and one hour by

An hour rule also applies to general debate in the Committee of the Whole where a Member in control of the time may not consume more than one hour except by unanimous consent of the House. Debate proceeds under the hour rule unless otherwise provided by the House.⁽²⁰⁾

Unless the House provides by special rule or by unanimous-consent agreement for the control and distribution of time in the House, the proponent of a proposition in the House is recognized for one hour and typically moves the previous question at or before the ranking minority member of the committee who is opposed to the bill. See 81 CONG. REC. 3456, 75th Cong. 1st Sess., Apr. 14, 1937, where the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole for the consideration of a bill called up under the Calendar Wednesday procedure (call of committees under Rule XXIV clause 7, House Rules and Manual § 897 [1995]). See also, for the two-hour limitation, 84 CONG. REC. 5654, 76th Cong. 1st Sess., May 17, 1939; and 72 CONG. REC. 8938, 8939, 71st Cong. 2d Sess., May 14, 1930 (the two hours may not be extended by unanimous consent).

the expiration thereof.⁽¹⁾ Where a Member has spoken for an hour, his time cannot be extended, even by unanimous consent.⁽²⁾ If he loses or surrenders the floor, such as by yielding for an amendment, or offering the previous question which is then rejected, or failing to move the previous question, another Member may be recognized under the hour rule, with the right to offer amendments, to move the previous question, or to offer appropriate motions.⁽³⁾ In certain situations, where an essential motion (such as the previous question) is defeated, a Member of the opposition is entitled to recognition for an hour.⁽⁴⁾

Before Adoption of Rules

§ 68.1 Prior to the adoption of the rules, a Member offering a resolution on the seating of a Member-elect is entitled to one hour of debate.

On Jan. 10, 1967, prior to the adoption of rules, Mr. Morris K. Udall, of Arizona, offered as privileged House Resolution 1, authorizing the Speaker to administer the oath of office to challenged Member-elect Adam C. Powell, of New York, and referring the question of his final right to a seat to a select committee. Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, ruled that Mr. Udall was entitled to recognition for one hour.⁽⁵⁾ § 68.2 Before the adoption of rules, if the previous question is voted down on a resolution and an amendment is offered, the proponent of the amendment is recognized under the hour rule.

On Jan. 3, 1969, before the adoption of rules, the House was considering a privileged resolution related to the right of a Member-elect to his seat.⁽⁶⁾ After the previous question was voted down on the resolution, Mr. Clark MacGregor, of Minnesota, offered an amendment in the nature of a substitute to the original resolution. Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, recognized Mr. MacGregor for one hour of debate.

Bills and Resolutions Generally

§ 68.3 While a Member may be given control of several hours of debate, he may not yield himself more than an hour or have his time extended, even by unanimous consent.

On Mar. 9, 1976,⁽⁷⁾ Speaker Pro Tempore Morgan F. Murphy, of Illinois, made a ruling relative to extension of debate time as follows:

THE SPEAKER: Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New York (Mr. Pike) is recognized for 60 minutes.

MR. [OTIS G.] PIKE [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, last Sunday while I was picking up oysters and eating up some chowder, I decided that perhaps the time had come for me to make a statement about the late House Select Committee on Intelligence. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

MR. [DALE] MILFORD [of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the time of the gentleman be extended 5 minutes.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman's request is out of order.

§ 68.4 Where the House agrees to consider in the House a bill called up by unanimous consent from the Speaker's table, the Member calling up the bill is recognized for one hour.

On Oct. 5, 1962,⁽⁸⁾ Mr. Francis E. Walter, of Pennsylvania, called up S. 3361, relating to the entry of alien specialists, from the Speaker's table and asked unanimous consent for its immediate consideration in the House. When the request was granted, Mr. Walter was recognized for one hour. Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, indicated that no amendments could be offered to the bill unless Mr. Walter yielded for that purpose.⁽⁹⁾

Parliamentarian's Note: The procedure is otherwise if the request is simply for the "immediate consideration" of a Union Calendar bill or of an unreported bill which would, if reported, be referred to the Union Calendar. In that event the measure is considered under the five-minute rule in the House as in the Committee of the Whole.

9. For disposal of Senate bills on the Speaker's table, and the requirements such bills must meet before such disposition, see Rule XXIV clause 2, House Rules and Manual §882 (1995).

§ 68.5 When a District of Columbia bill on the House Calendar is called up on District Day, under Rule XXV clause 8, the bill is considered in the House under the hour rule.⁽¹⁰⁾

—Use of Previous Question To Terminate Debate

§ 68.6 The Member recognized to control one hour of debate in the House may, by moving the previous question, terminate utilization of debate time he has previously yielded to the minority.

On Mar. 9, 1977,⁽¹¹⁾ it was demonstrated that a Member calling up a privileged resolution in the House may move the previous question at any time, notwithstanding his prior allocation of debate time to another Member:

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹²⁾ The gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Bolling) is recognized for 1 hour.

MR. [RICHARD] BOLLING [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Anderson), for the minority, pending which I yield myself 5 minutes. . . .

Mr. Speaker, the other amendment that the gentleman offers proposes to give the House the opportunity to vote up or down in a certain period of time regulations proposed by the select committee. What that does, and it really demonstrates an almost total lack of understanding of the rules, is to upgrade regulations into rules. The Members of the House will have the opportunity to deal with all laws and rules. That is provided in the resolution. . . .

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution. . . .

MR. [JOHN B.] ANDERSON of Illinois: I have time remaining. Do I not have a right to respond to the gentleman from Missouri?

THE SPEAKER: Not if the previous question has been moved, and it has been moved.

MR. ANDERSON of Illinois: Even though the gentleman mentioned my name and made numerous references to me for the last 10 minutes?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair is aware of that.

The question is on ordering the previous question.

—Member Yielded Time Cannot Reserve Time

§ 68.7 A Member to whom time was yielded under the hour rule in the House may not, except by unanimous consent, reserve a portion of that time to himself; the unused time reverts to the Member controlling the hour who may subsequently yield further time to that Member.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Feb. 8, 1972,⁽¹³⁾ during consideration of House Resolution 164 (creating a Select Committee on Privacy, Human Values, and Democratic Institutions):

MR. [RAY J.] MADDEN [of Indiana]: Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 164 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution as follows:

H. RES. 164 . . .

Whereas the full significance and the effects of technology on society and on the operations of industry and Government are largely unknown. . . .

Resolved, That there is hereby created a select committee to be known as the Select Committee on Privacy, Human Values, and Democratic Institutions. . . .

MR. MADDEN: Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Gallagher).

MR. [CORNELIUS E.] GALLAGHER [of New Jersey]: Mr. Speaker, may I take 5 minutes now and reserve 5 minutes to the end of the debate since it is my bill?

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁴⁾ The gentleman may do that. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MR. [DURWARD G.] HALL [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object . . . is it in order to have a unanimous-consent request at a time like this when the time is controlled by the members of the Committee on Rules . . . ?

MR. GALLAGHER: . . . It was my understanding that I would have the time at the conclusion of debate.

MR. HALL: Mr. Speaker, I submit this is between the gentleman and the man handling the rule, and therefore I must object.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will notify the gentleman when 5 minutes are up. . . .

The gentleman from New Jersey has consumed 5 minutes.

MR. GALLAGHER: Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

THE SPEAKER: . . . The gentleman from Indiana has control of the time. . . .

If the gentleman from Indiana desires to yield further time at this time he can do so.

Consideration of Measures in House

—Private Bill By Unanimous Consent

§ 68.9 When a private bill on the calendar of the Committee of the Whole is called up by unanimous consent for consideration in the House, the Member making the request is recognized for one hour.

On Mar. 12, 1963,⁽¹⁶⁾ Mr. Emanuel Celler, of New York, asked unanimous consent for the immediate consideration in the House of private bill H.R. 4374, to proclaim Sir Winston Churchill an honorary citizen of the United States. Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, answered parliamentary inquiries on the control and time for debate:

MR. [H. R.] GROSS [of Iowa]: Mr. Speaker, under what circumstances will this resolution be considered? Will there be any time for discussion of the resolution, if unanimous consent is given?

Where the Member with the floor under the hour rule surrenders the floor without moving the previous question, any Member of the House securing recognition in opposition to the pending proposal is recognized for one hour (see § 34, supra).

16. 109 CONG. REC. 3993, 88th Cong. 1st Sess.

THE SPEAKER: In response to the parliamentary inquiry of the gentleman from Iowa, if consent is granted for the present consideration of the bill, the gentleman from New York [Mr. Celler] will be recognized for 1 hour and the gentleman from New York may yield to such Members as he desires to yield to before moving the previous question.

MR. GROSS: Mr. Speaker, further reserving the right to object, is sometime to be allocated to this side of the aisle?

MR. CELLER: I intend to allocate half of the time to the other side.

MR. GROSS: Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

—Consideration of Senate Bill in House Pursuant to Special Rule

§ 68.10 Following the adoption of a resolution making in order the consideration of a Senate bill in the House the Member calling up the Senate bill is recognized for one hour.

The proceedings relative to consideration of S. 2667 (Emergency Petroleum Allocation Act Extensions) in the House on Nov. 14, 1975,⁽¹⁷⁾ were as follows:

Mr. [Richard] Bolling [of Missouri] from the Committee on Rules, reported the following privileged resolution (H. Res. 866, Rept. No. 94-666), which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

17. 121 CONG. REC. 36638, 36641, 94th Cong. 1st Sess.

H. RES. 866

Resolved, That immediately upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to take from the Speaker's table the bill S. 2667, to extend the Emergency Petroleum Allocation Act of 1973, and to consider said bill in the House.

MR. BOLLING: Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 866 and ask for its immediate consideration.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁸⁾ The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read the resolution.

THE SPEAKER: The question is, Will the House now consider House Resolution 866?

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

MR. [JOHN H.] ROUSSELOT [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

THE SPEAKER: . . . Two hundred and forty-one Members are present, a quorum.

MR. ROUSSELOT: Mr. Speaker, I demand a division.

On a division (demanded by Mr. Roussetot) there were—yeas 171, noes 14.

So (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof), the House agreed to consider House Resolution 866.

THE SPEAKER: The question is on the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

18. Carl Albert (Okla.).

THE SPEAKER: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. Staggers).

MR. [HARLEY O.] STAGGERS [of West Virginia]: Mr. Speaker, pursuant to House Resolution 866, I call up the Senate bill (S. 2667) and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

—House Bill

§ 68.11 A Member calling up a bill or joint resolution in the House pursuant to a special order controls one hour of debate thereon and may offer an amendment thereto and move the previous question on the amendment and on the bill or joint resolution.

On Nov. 3, 1977,⁽¹⁹⁾ the proceedings relating to consideration of House Joint Resolution 643 (continuing appropriations) in the House were as follows:

MR. [GEORGE H.] MAHON [of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the rule just adopted, I call up the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 643) making further continuing appropriations for the fiscal year 1978, and for other purposes. . . .

The Clerk read the joint resolution, as follows:

H.J. RES. 643

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United

19. 123 CONG. REC. 36970, 36971, 95th Cong. 1st Sess.

States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums are appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, and out of applicable corporate or other revenues, receipts, and funds, for the several departments, agencies, corporations, and other organizational units of the Government for the fiscal year 1978, namely:

Sec. 101. Such amounts as may be necessary for continuing projects or activities which were conducted in the fiscal year 1977, and for which appropriations, funds, or other authority would be available in the District of Columbia Appropriations Act, 1978 (H.R. 9005) as passed the House of Representatives or the Senate. . . .

THE SPEAKER:⁽²⁰⁾ The gentleman from Texas (Mr. Mahon) is recognized for 1 hour.

MR. MAHON: Mr. Speaker, Members need to understand what our problem is at the moment. In view of the fact that final action has not been taken on the District of Columbia appropriation bill and on the Labor-Health, Education, and Welfare bill, we have to have a continuing resolution. . . .

Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment. The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Mahon: On page 2, line 6, strike the period and insert the following: “: Provided further, That the rate of operations for the Disaster Loan Fund of the Small Business Administration contained in said Act shall be the rate as passed the Senate. . . .

MR. MAHON: It is absolutely urgent that we find a way to get this continuing resolution acted upon by the Congress tomorrow, since we cannot do it tonight. It is imperative that we get through the Congress a continuing resolution on tomorrow and send it to the President. Otherwise, there will be some very serious problems.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the amendment and the joint resolution to final passage.

The previous question was ordered.

The amendment was agreed to.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Senate Amendments

§ 68.12 Senate amendments which do not require consideration in Committee of the Whole are debatable under the hour rule when considered in the House.⁽¹⁾

—Senate Amendments in Disagreement

§ 68.13 Prior to the amendment to Rule XXVIII, clause 2(b) in the 92d and 99th Congresses (providing that the hour debate on an amendment in disagreement be divided), debate on an amendment reported from conference in disagreement was under the hour rule and the Member calling up the conference report was in control of the debate thereon.⁽²⁾

Parliamentarian's Note: House Resolution 1153, which was adopted on Oct. 13, 1972, 92d Cong. 2d Sess., to become effective at the end of the 92d Congress, amended Rule XXVIII by requiring that debate on amendments reported from conference in disagreement be equally divided and controlled by the majority and minority parties. Thus the hour of debate on a motion offered to dispose of an amendment in disagreement is equally controlled by the Member offering the initial motion and a Member of the minority, typically the senior conferee of that party.

The debate may be divided three ways if both the manager and the ranking minority Member agree. See Rule XXVIII clause 2(b)(1), House Rules and Manual § 912b (1995), as amended in the 99th Congress by H. Res. 7, Jan. 3, 1985.

under the hour rule, and the Member calling up the conference report is in control of the time (subject to the division of time required by clause 2(b) of Rule XXVIII).

On Aug. 1, 1962,⁽³⁾ Mr. John E. Fogarty, of Rhode Island, had called up a conference report on H.R. 10904, the labor, health, education, and welfare appropriations for fiscal 1963. Certain Senate amendments had been reported in disagreement. When Senate amendment No. 3 was read, Mr. Fogarty offered a motion that the House recede from disagreement and concur with an amendment. Speaker Pro Tempore Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, then answered a parliamentary inquiry on control of the time:

MR. [H. R.] GROSS [of Iowa]: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state it.

MR. GROSS: Is the gentleman from Rhode Island going to explain any of these amendments?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: That is within the discretion of the gentleman.

MR. GROSS: A further parliamentary inquiry. Does not the gentleman have an hour on each of these amendments?

ment to a House amendment to a Senate amendment to a House bill, the stage of disagreement having been reached, is under the hour rule.⁽⁸⁾

—Following Rejection of First Motion

§ 68.19 Under clause 2(b) of Rule XXVIII, the time allotted for debate on an original motion to dispose of disagreement on a Senate amendment is divided equally between majority and minority parties (except that if both floor managers support the motion then one-third of the time may be claimed by an opponent); and where the original motion to dispose of the Senate amendment in disagreement is rejected, the time for debate on a successor motion is also governed by clause 2(b) of Rule XXVIII and may be equally divided.

On Aug. 6, 1993,⁽⁹⁾ the House had under consideration Senate amendments in disagreement to

H.R. 2493 (Agriculture appropriations for 1994):

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁰⁾ The Clerk will designate the next amendment in disagreement.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Senate amendment No. 164: Page 81, after line 12, insert:

Sec. 730. (a) None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act shall be used by the Secretary of Agriculture to provide a total amount of payments to a person to support the price of honey under section 207 of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1446h) and section 405A of such Act (7 U.S.C. 1425a) in excess of $50,000 in the 1994 crop year.

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. SKEEN

MR. [JOE] SKEEN [of New Mexico]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Clerk will report the motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Motion offered by Mr. Skeen:

Mr. Skeen moves that the House recede and concur in the amendment of the Senate numbered 164 with an amendment as follows: In the matter proposed to be inserted by the amendment, add the following: "The GAO shall conduct a study and report to Congress on the effectiveness of the program."

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. Skeen] is recognized for 30 minutes.

MR. [HARRIS W.] FAWELL [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

10. Romano L. Mazzoli (Ky.).

MR. FAWELL: First of all, the motion that the gentleman from New Mexico offered was read so fast I did not understand just what it was. But I rise in opposition.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: If the gentleman is opposed to the motion offered by the gentleman from New Mexico, the gentleman [Mr. Fawell] is entitled to 20 minutes to debate the issue. . . .

MR. FAWELL: . . . Assuming that this particular motion fails, can the Chair advise me where we will be then?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Another Member will be recognized for another motion on this amendment in disagreement. . . .

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. Skeen]. . . .

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were yeas 140, nays 274, not voting 19, as follows: . . .

So the House refused to recede and concur in the amendment of the Senate numbered 164 with an amendment. . . .

MR. FAWELL: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Fawell moves that the House recede and concur in the amendment of the Senate numbered 164 with an amendment as follows: In the matter proposed to be inserted by the amendment, strike "$50,000" and insert "$0".

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Fawell] will be recognized for 30 minutes in support of his motion, and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. Durbin] will be recognized for 30 minutes in opposition.

Under a former practice, if the initial motion to dispose of the amendment in disagreement was rejected, the time for debate on a subsequent motion was under the hour rule and entirely within the control of the Member of the opposition recognized to make the motion. Thus, on July 19, 1977,⁽¹¹⁾ during consideration of the conference report on H.R. 7554 (Housing and Urban Development and independent agencies appropriation bill for fiscal 1978) in the House, it was demonstrated that, where a motion to dispose of an amendment reported from conference in disagreement, offered by the manager of the conference report, is rejected, the Speaker recognizes a Member leading the opposition to offer another motion to dispose of the amendment.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹²⁾ The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 24: Page 17, line 11, strike out "$2,943,600,000" and insert "$3,013,000,000".

MR. [EDWARD P.] BOLAND [of Massachusetts] [manager of the conference report]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

11. 123 CONG. REC. 23668, 23669, 23678, 95th Cong. 1st Sess.

12. Norman Y. Mineta (Calif.).

Mr. Boland moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 24 and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed by said amendment insert "$2,995,300,000".

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Boland) is recognized for 30 minutes and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Coughlin) is recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Boland).

MR. BOLAND: Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. . . .

MR. [DON] FUQUA [of Florida]: Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to amendment No. 24. . . .

[After debate, the motion was rejected.]

MR. FUQUA: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Fuqua moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 24 and concur therein.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Florida (Mr. Fuqua) is recognized for 60 minutes. . . .

MR. FUQUA: Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion.

The previous question was ordered.

The motion was agreed to.

—Intervention of Preferential Motion

§ 68.20 The time for debate on an amendment reported from conference in disagreement is equally divided between the majority and minority parties under Rule XXVIII clause 2(b), and a Member offering a preferential motion does not thereby gain control of time for debate; nor can the Member who has offered the preferential motion move the previous question during time yielded to him for debate, since that would deprive the Members in charge of control of the time for debate.

On Dec. 4, 1975,⁽¹³⁾ an example of the proposition described above occurred in the House during consideration of the conference report on H.R. 8069 (the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare and related agencies appropriation bill):

MR. [DANIEL J.] FLOOD [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Flood moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 72 and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment, insert the following:

"Sec. 209. None of the funds contained in this Act shall be used to require, directly or indirectly, the transportation of any student to a school other than the school which is nearest or next nearest the student's home. . . .

13. 121 CONG. REC. 38714, 38716, 38717, 94th Cong. 1st Sess.

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Bauman moves that the House recede from its disagreement to Senate amendment No. 72 and concur therein.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁴⁾ The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Flood).

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, may I inquire, who has the right to the time under the motion?

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Flood) has 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel) has 30 minutes. The time is controlled by the committee leadership on each side, and they are not taken from the floor by a preferential motion. . . .

MR. [ROBERT H.] MICHEL [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Bauman).

MR. BAUMAN: The gentleman from Maryland has made his case and if the gentleman would like to concur in the stand taken by the majority party in favor of busing he can do that. I do not concur.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion.

MR. FLOOD: Mr. Speaker, I demand the question be divided.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Flood) has the floor and the Chair is trying to let the gentleman be heard.

MR. FLOOD: Mr. Speaker, I demand a division.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, I have not yielded. My time has not expired.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman has time for debate only.

MR. BAUMAN: No; Mr. Speaker, it was not yielded for debate only.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Maryland has 15 seconds.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman was yielded to for debate only. The gentleman from Illinois had no authority under clause 2, rule XXVIII to yield for any other purpose but debate.

Parliamentarian's Note: Debate on a motion that the House recede from its disagreement to a Senate amendment and concur is under the hour rule. In the above instance, the motion to recede and concur was divided.⁽¹⁵⁾ If the motion is so divided, the hour rule applies to each motion separately.⁽¹⁶⁾ Thus, technically, the Bauman motion to concur could have been debated under the hour rule, since the request for division of the question was made prior to the ordering of the previous question. Control of the time, however, would have remained with the majority and minority under the rule.

Whether or not the division demand was made before or after

15. 121 CONG. REC. 38717, 94th Cong. 1st Sess.

16. See 86 CONG. REC. 5889, 76th Cong. 3d Sess., May 9, 1940.

14. Carl Albert (Okla.).

the ordering of the previous question on the motion to recede and concur, the preferential motion offered by Mr. Flood to concur with an amendment could have been debated under the hour rule equally divided, since it was a separate motion not affected by ordering the previous question on the motion to recede and concur.

Had the Bauman motion to concur been rejected, the motion to concur with another amendment would have been in order, and preferential to a motion to insist on disagreement.

§ 68.21 Time for debate on motions to dispose of amendments in disagreement is equally divided, under Rule XXVIII clause 2(b), between the majority and minority party; and if a minority Member has been designated by his party to control time, another minority Member who offers a preferential motion does not thereby gain control of the time given to the minority.

On May 14, 1975,⁽¹⁷⁾ during consideration of the conference report on H.R. 4881⁽¹⁸⁾ in the House, the following proceedings occurred:

17. 121 CONG. REC. 14385, 14386, 94th Cong. 1st Sess.

18. The Emergency Employment Appropriations for fiscal year 1975.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁹⁾ The Clerk will report the next amendment in disagreement.

The Clerk read as follows:

Senate amendment No. 61: Page 41, line 9, insert:

“FEDERAL RAILROAD ADMINISTRATION

“RAIL TRANSPORTATION IMPROVEMENT
AND EMPLOYMENT

“For payment of financial assistance to assist railroads by providing funds for repairing, rehabilitating, and improving railroad roadbeds and facilities, $700,000,000. . . .

MR. [GEORGE H.] MAHON [of Texas]:
Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Mahon moves that the House insist on its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 61.

PREFERENTIAL MOTION OFFERED BY MR.
CONTE

MR. [SILVIO O.] CONTE [of Massachusetts]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a preferential motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Conte moves that the House recede from its disagreement to Senate amendment Number 61 and concur therein with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate, insert the following:

“CHAPTER VIII

“DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION

“FEDERAL RAILROAD ADMINISTRATION

“For payment of financial assistance to assist railroads by providing

19. Carl Albert (Okla.).

funds for repairing, rehabilitating, and improving railroad roadbeds and facilities, $200,000,000. . . .

MR. [E. G.] SHUSTER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state it.

MR. SHUSTER: Mr. Speaker, how is the time divided?

THE SPEAKER: The time is divided equally between the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Mahon), who has 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel) who has 30 minutes or such small fraction thereof as he may decide to use.

Conference Reports

§ 68.22 One hour of debate, equally divided between the majority and minority parties, is permitted on a conference report; and the Speaker recognizes the Member calling up the report to control 30 minutes and a Member from the other party (preferably the senior conferee from that party) to control 30 minutes.

On Jan. 19, 1972,⁽²⁰⁾ Wayne L. Hays, of Ohio, Chairman of the Committee on House Administration, called up the conference report on S. 382, the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1972.

20. 118 CONG. REC. 319, 320, 92d Cong. 2d Sess.

Speaker Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, recognized Mr. Hays to control 30 minutes of debate on the report and Mr. William L. Springer, of Illinois (ranking minority member of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce and a conferee), to handle the other 30 minutes.

Conferees had been appointed from both the Committees on House Administration and Interstate and Foreign Commerce, since the bill was the work product of both committees.

Parliamentarian's Note: Rule XXVIII, clause 2(a), was amended in the 92d Congress, 1st session (H. Res. 5) to require a division of the hour for debate on a conference report. Prior to that time, debate on a conference report was under the hour rule, with the Member recognized to call up the report in control of the time. Clause 2(a) was again amended in 1985 to permit a three-way division of the hour if both the majority and minority floor managers support the report.⁽¹⁾

—Motion To Reject Nongermane Provision in § 68.23 Pursuant to a special rule and to clause 1 of Rule

1. See, for example, 115 CONG. REC. 40451, 91st Cong. 1st Sess., Dec. 20, 1969; 108 CONG. REC. 4247-51, 87th Cong. 2d Sess., Mar. 15, 1962. See also 99th Cong. 1st Sess., H. Res. 7, Jan. 3, 1985, p. 393.

XX (now clause 4(a), Rule XXVIII), the House agreed to a section of a conference report (containing non-germane Senate matter) on a separate vote after 40 minutes' debate thereon, equally divided between the Member moving to reject the section and a Member opposed to that motion. The House then considered the entire conference report, the Member calling it up and a Member of the minority party each being recognized for 30 minutes under clause 2(a) of Rule XXVIII.

On Nov. 10, 1971,⁽²⁾ Mr. F. Edward Hébert, of Louisiana, called up the conference report on H.R. 8687, military procurement authorization. Speaker Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, stated the special order governing the consideration of the report (H. Res. 696), provided that a separate vote could be demanded on certain sections of the conference report (containing non-germane portions of the Senate amendment). Mr. Donald Fraser, of Minnesota, demanded a separate vote on section 503 of the report, pursuant to the special order and pursuant to Rule XX, clause 1. The Speaker recognized Mr. Hébert and Mr. Fraser for 20 minutes each and the House then agreed to retain section 503 within the conference report.

The House then proceeded to the consideration of the entire conference report. The Speaker stated that one hour of debate would be had thereon, Mr. Hébert to be recognized for 30 minutes and a member of the minority party, Mr. Leslie C. Arends, of Illinois, to be recognized for 30 minutes.

After Rejection of Nongermane Portion of Conference Report—Debate on Motion To Recede and Concur in Senate Amendment With Amendment Consisting of Remainder of Conference Report

§ 68.24 Where the House agrees to a motion to reject a nongermane portion of a conference report pursuant to Rule XXVIII clause 4, the pending question, in the form of a motion offered by the manager of the conference report, is to recede from disagreement to the Senate amendment and concur with an amendment consisting of the remaining portions of the conference report not rejected on the separate vote, and one hour of debate, equally divided between the majority and minority parties, is permitted on that pending question.

The proceedings of Dec. 12, 1979,⁽³⁾ during consideration of H.R. 595⁽⁴⁾ in the House, were as follows:

MR. [ROBERT H.] MOLLOHAN [of West Virginia]: Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H.R. 595) to authorize the Administrator of General Services to dispose of 35,000 long tons of tin in the national and supplemental stockpiles, to provide for the deposit of moneys received from the sale of such tin, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

MR. [LARRY] McDONALD [of Georgia]: Mr. Speaker, I have a point of order.

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁵⁾ The gentleman will state it.

MR. McDONALD: Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the matter contained in clause 3 of section 3 of the substitute for the text of the bill recommended in the conference report would not be germane to H.R. 595 under clause 7 of rule XVI if offered in the House and is therefore subject to a point of order under clause 4(a) of rule XXVIII. . . .

MR. MOLLOHAN: . . . I concede the point of order.

3. 125 CONG. REC. 35522, 35527, 35528, 96th Cong. 1st Sess.
4. A bill authorizing the General Services Administration to dispose of tin from the national stockpile.
5. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

THE SPEAKER: The point of order is sustained.

MR. McDONALD: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. McDonald moves, pursuant to the provisions of clause 4(b) of rule XXVIII, that the House reject clause 3 of section 3 of the substitute for the text of the bill recommended in the conference report.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Georgia (Mr. McDonald) will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. Mollohan) will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. McDonald). . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁶⁾ The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. McDonald).

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

MR. [SILVIO O.] CONTE [of Massachusetts]: Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 272, nays 122, not voting 39, as follows: . . .

So the motion was agreed to. . . .

MR. MOLLOHAN: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

6. Al Swift (Wash.).

Mr. Mollohan moves pursuant to clause 4 of Rule XXVIII and the actions of the House, that the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate to the text of the bill and concur therein with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the amendment of the Senate to the text of the bill insert the following:

That this Act may be cited as the "Strategic and Critical Materials Transaction Authorization Act of 1979".

Sec. 2. There is authorized to be appropriated the sum of $237,000,000 for the acquisition of strategic and critical material under section 6(a) of the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Piling Act (50 U.S.C. 98e). . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. Mollohan) will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Maine (Mr. Emery) will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from West Virginia (Mr. Mollohan).

—Where Motion To Reject Is Defeated

§ 68.25 Upon defeat of a motion to reject a nongermane portion of a motion to recede and concur in a Senate amendment with a further amendment, the Member who had moved to recede and concur with an amendment and a minority Member are each recognized for 30 minutes of debate on that motion.

On July 31, 1974,⁽⁷⁾ Speaker Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, recognized Wilbur Mills, of Arkansas, to call up the conference report on H.R. 8217 (exemption from tariff duty of equipment on United States vessels) in the House:

MR. MILLS: Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H.R. 8217) to exempt from duty certain equipment and repairs for vessels operated by or for any agency of the United States, and ask unanimous consent that the statement of the managers be read in lieu of the report. . . .

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement. . . .

MR. MILLS: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Mills moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the Senate amendment to the text of the bill, H.R. 8217, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment to the text of the bill (page 2, after line 6), insert the following:

Sec. 3. The last sentence of section 203(e)(2) of the Federal-State Extended Unemployment Compensation Act of 1970 (as added by section 20 of Public Law 93-233 and amended by section 2 of Public Law 93-256 and by section 2 of Public Law 93-329) is amended by striking out "August 1, 1974" and inserting in lieu thereof "April 30, 1975". . . .

7. 120 CONG. REC. 26082, 26083, 26088, 26089, 93d Cong. 2d Sess.

MR. [J. J.] PICKLE [of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order on section 3 of this bill because it does not conform to the House germaneness rule, rule 28, clause 5(b)(1). . . .

Section 3 deals with the unemployment compensation program as it relates to extended benefits. This has nothing to do with the "repair of vessels." . . .

MR. MILLS: Mr. Speaker, I must admit that the point of order is well taken. I cannot resist the point of order.

THE SPEAKER: The point of order is sustained.

MR. PICKLE: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Pickle moves that the House reject section 3 of the proposed amendment to the Senate amendment to the text of the bill H.R. 8217.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Texas (Mr. Pickle) will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. Mills) will be recognized for 20 minutes. . . .

THE SPEAKER: The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Pickle).

The question was taken, and the Speaker announced that the noes appeared to have it.

MR. [H. R.] GROSS [of Iowa]: Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present. . . .

THE SPEAKER: . . . [T]he Chair does recognize the gentleman from Iowa who objects to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and makes the point of order that a quorum is not present, and evidently a quorum is not present. . . .

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 63, nays 336, not voting 35, as follows: . . .

So the motion was rejected. . . .

THE SPEAKER: The Chair desires to state that under the rule the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. Mills) will be recognized for 30 minutes and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Schneebeli) will be recognized for 30 minutes.

—Motion Sending Bill to Conference

§ 68.26 A Member making a motion to send a bill to conference pursuant to authorization by his committee under Rule XX clause 1, is recognized for one hour.⁽⁸⁾

—Motion To Close Conference Meeting

§ 68.27 The motion to close conference committee meetings is debatable under the hour rule.

During consideration of H.R. 5970 (Department of Defense authorization for fiscal year 1978) in the House on May 23, 1977,⁽⁹⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [CHARLES E.] BENNETT [of Florida]: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous

8. See 116 CONG. REC. 5722, 5723, 91st Cong. 2d Sess., Mar. 3, 1970.

9. 123 CONG. REC. 15880, 15881, 95th Cong. 1st Sess.

consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 5970) to authorize appropriations during the fiscal year 1978, for procurement of aircraft . . . and for other purposes, with Senate amendments thereto, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁰⁾ Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida? The Chair hears none, and appoints the following conferees: . . .

MR. BENNETT: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Bennett moves, pursuant to rule XXVIII 6(a) of the House rules that the conference committee meetings between the House and the Senate on H.R. 5970 the fiscal year 1978 military authorization bill be closed to the public at such times as classified national security information is under consideration.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Florida (Mr. Bennett) is recognized for 1 hour.

MR. BENNETT: Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. Bob Wilson), the ranking minority member on the committee, pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume; at the conclusion of which I will be happy to yield to any Member who wishes to be heard.

Parliamentarian's Note: This was the first occasion on which the House considered a motion, pursuant to Rule XXVIII, clause 6(a), that a conference committee meeting be closed to the public.

10. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

Pending the motion to close the conference committee meeting to the public, with the exception of any sitting Member of Congress, the Speaker stated in response to a parliamentary inquiry that the motion was not binding on the Senate conferees, and that each House would have one vote in conference on whether to close the meeting to the public.⁽¹¹⁾

—Motion To Instruct House Managers

§ 68.28 The Member moving to instruct House managers appointed to a conference committee has 30 minutes of debate at his disposal (whether the motion is made before the conferees have been appointed or at least 20 days after they have been appointed, pursuant to clause 1(b) of Rule XXVIII) and 30 minutes is controlled by the minority party.⁽¹²⁾

§ 68.29 A Member offering a motion to instruct conferees is entitled to one hour of debate unless a motion to lay that motion on the table is adopted prior to debate.

11. 123 CONG. REC. 15884, 95th Cong. 1st Sess.

12. See Rule XXVIII, clause 1(a) House Rules and Manual § 909 (1995).

On Aug. 26, 1976,⁽¹³⁾ the House had under consideration a motion to agree to a conference on H.R. 8603 (the Postal Reorganization Act Amendments of 1976), when the following exchange occurred:

MR. [DAVID N.] HENDERSON [of North Carolina]: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's desk the bill (H.R. 8603) to amend title 39, United States Code, with respect to the organizational and financial matters of the U.S. Postal Service and the Postal Rate Commission, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments thereto, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate. . . .

MR. [WILLIAM V.] ALEXANDER [of Arkansas]: Mr. Speaker, if an objection is heard, is it not so that the procedure that would be followed is for the chairman of the committee to go to the committee, convene the committee, and get a motion to come back to the floor asking for a conference, and that that then would be subject to 1 hour of general debate? Is that not so? . . .

MR. ALEXANDER: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Alexander moves that the Managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill, H.R. 8603, be instructed to insist upon (1) section 2(a) and section 2(c) of such bill as passed the House; (2) section 2401(b)(1) of title 39, U.S. Code, as added by section 2(b) of such bill as passed the House; and (3) section 16 of such bill as passed the House.

MR. HENDERSON: Mr. Speaker, I move that the motion offered by the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. Alexander) be laid on the table. . . .

MR. ALEXANDER: Mr. Speaker, is it not so that the parliamentary situation is that my motion is entitled to 1 hour of general debate on that motion, the time to be controlled by me as the person who is offering the motion; but in view of the fact that the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. Henderson) has offered a motion to table, a vote for that motion would preclude any debate and preclude any consideration of the motion to instruct? Is that correct, Mr. Speaker?

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁴⁾ The Chair will state that if the motion to table is voted upon and rejected, 1 hour will be allotted to the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. Alexander).

Parliamentarian's Note: Upon an objection to a unanimous-consent request to take a House bill with Senate amendments from the Speaker's table and agree to a conference, a motion to that effect is privileged if made by direction of the committee having jurisdiction over the bill under clause 1 of Rule XX, and that motion is debatable for one hour.

—Motion To Instruct House Managers, Amendment to

§ 68.30 The division of time, under Rule XXVIII, clause

13. 122 CONG. REC. 27828, 27831, 27832, 94th Cong. 2d Sess.

14. Carl Albert (Okla.).

1(b), for debate on a motion to instruct conferees does not extend to separate debate on an amendment to such a motion, which is governed by Rule XIV, clause 2, the general hour rule in the House.

On Oct. 3, 1989,⁽¹⁵⁾ during consideration of H.R. 3026 (the District of Columbia appropriation bill for fiscal year 1990), it was demonstrated that, where the previous question is rejected on a motion to instruct conferees, a separate hour of debate on any amendment to the motion is fully controlled by the proponent of the amendment, as the manager of the original motion loses the floor. The proceedings were as follows:

MR. [JULIAN C.] DIXON [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 3026) making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of said District for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1990, and for other purposes, with Senate amendments thereto, disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁶⁾ Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

15. 135 CONG. REC. 22859, 22862, 22863, 101st Cong. 1st Sess.

16. William J. Hughes (N.J.).

There was no objection.

MR. [BILL] GREEN [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to instruct.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Green moves that the managers on the part of the House, at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the bill H.R. 3026, be instructed to agree to the amendment of the Senate numbered 3.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from New York [Mr. Green] is recognized for 30 minutes in support his motion. . . .

MR. GREEN: Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion to instruct. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The question is on ordering the previous question.

[The previous question was rejected.]

MR. DIXON: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

I understand now that the gentleman from California [Mr. Danne-meyer] intends to offer an amendment to the motion offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. Green].

My question is: Under the offering will I receive part of the time?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair would state to the gentleman from California [Mr. Dixon] that 1 hour would be allotted to the gentleman from California [Mr. Danne-meyer]. He would have to yield time to the gentleman from California [Mr. Dixon]. . . .

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Danne-meyer to the motion to instruct: At the end of the pending motion, strike the period, insert a semicolon, and add the following language: “; Provided further, That the conferees be instructed to agree to the provisions contained in Senate amendment numbered 22.”

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from California [Mr. Dannemeyer] is recognized for 1 hour.

MR. [WILLIAM E.] DANNEMEYER [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I yield one-half of the time to the gentleman from California [Mr. Dixon], for purposes of debate only.

Parliamentarian's Note: The control of debate in the above instance is to be distinguished from debate on motions in the House to dispose of amendments in disagreement. In the latter case, although the manager of the original motion might lose the floor upon defeat of his motion, debate on a subsequent motion is nevertheless divided under Rule XXVIII, clause 2(b). It is only debate on amendments to such motions, when pending, that is not divided. Rule XXVIII is discussed in § 26, supra.

Privileged Resolutions

§ 68.31 Debate on privileged resolutions is under the hour rule.⁽¹⁷⁾

—Committee Funding Resolution

§ 68.32 Debate on a privileged resolution from the Committee on House Administration is under the hour rule, and the Member recognized to call it up has control of the time.

On Feb. 27, 1963,⁽¹⁸⁾ Mr. Samuel N. Friedel, of Maryland, called up by direction of the Committee on House Administration House Resolution 164, a privileged resolution providing funds for the Committee on Armed Services. Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, answered a parliamentary inquiry as to control of the time for debate:

MR. [CHARLES A.] HALLECK [of Indiana]: As I understand it, the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. Friedel] has said that he would yield time to Members on the minority side, and that is what we want. If there is another minority Member who wants to be recognized at this time, it would be in order under the rules for that Member to be granted time in order that he might make such statement as he might want to make.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will state that under the rules of the House and pursuant to custom that has existed from time immemorial, on a resolution of this kind the Member in charge of the resolution has control of the time and he, in turn, yields time.

18. 109 CONG. REC. 3051, 3052, 88th Cong. 1st Sess.

Majority Leader Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, then made the following statement on distribution of time to the minority:

Following the statement of the distinguished Speaker of the House, the gentleman from Ohio made the statement that he is in favor of the principle involved here. Of course, the principle is well established under the rules of the House and has been observed by both parties from time immemorial, that the Member recognized to call up the resolution has control of the time under the 1-hour rule.

On Feb. 25, 1954,⁽¹⁹⁾ Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, answered parliamentary inquiries on the control of debate on a privileged resolution called up by the chairman of the Committee on House Administration:

MR. [KARL M.] LÉCOMPTE [of Iowa]: Under the rules the Chairman has control of the time.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman has 1 hour to yield to whomsoever he desires.

MR. LÉCOMPTE: And he has control of the matter of offering amendments.

THE SPEAKER: A committee amendment is now pending. No other amendment can be offered unless the gentleman yields the floor for that purpose.

MR. LÉCOMPTE: A motion to recommit, of course, belongs to some member of the minority opposed to the resolution. Would any motion except a motion to recommit be in order except by the gentleman in charge of the bill?

THE SPEAKER: Not unless the gentleman yields for that purpose.

The gentleman from Iowa is recognized for 1 hour.⁽²⁰⁾

—Resolution of Inquiry

§ 68.33 Resolutions of inquiry are debatable under the hour rule.⁽¹⁾

§ 68.34 If a motion to discharge a committee from the further consideration of a privileged resolution is agreed to, the resolution is debatable under the hour rule, and the proponent of the resolution is entitled to prior recognition.

The principle described above was illustrated on Sept. 29, 1975,⁽²⁾ during proceedings in the

Mr. Collins of Texas moves to discharge the Committee on Education and Labor from consideration of House Resolution 718.

THE SPEAKER: The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 718

Resolved, That the Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare, to the extent not incompatible with the public interest, is directed to furnish to the House of Representatives, not later than sixty days following the adoption of this resolution, any documents containing a list of the public school systems in the United States which, during the period beginning on August 1, 1975, and ending on June 30, 1976, will be receiving Federal funds and will be engaging in the busing of schoolchildren to achieve racial balance, and any documents respecting the rules and regulations of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare with respect to the use of any Federal funds administered by the Department for the busing of schoolchildren to achieve racial balance.

THE SPEAKER: The question is on the privileged motion to discharge.

The motion was agreed to.

MR. COLLINS of Texas: Mr. Speaker, basically, what I am concerned with here is full documentation from the Secretary of HEW.

I filed this in the Congressional Record and have met the necessary requirements for a resolution of inquiry. . . .

The other body at this time is discussing the appropriation bill on HEW and has raised the subject over and over again regarding transportation of students to achieve racial balance and how that is affecting the budget. Therefore, it is absolutely essential to us, in our deliberations here in this House, that we have a concise, clear, complete, and factual statement from the Secretary of HEW as defined in my House Resolution 718.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

§ 68.35 The Member calling up for consideration a privileged resolution of inquiry reported adversely from committee is recognized for one hour and may move to lay the resolution on the table at any time; and where the Member calling up the resolution uses part of his hour of debate and then offers a motion to table the resolution which is defeated, the Chair will normally recognize another Member for an hour of debate but may recognize the Member who called up the resolution to control the remainder of his hour of debate, if no other Member seeks recognition.

On June 15, 1979,⁽⁴⁾ during consideration of House Resolution 291 (a resolution of inquiry directing the President to provide Members of the House with certain information) the following proceedings occurred in the House:

MR. [JOHN D.] DINGELL [of Michigan]: Mr. Speaker, I call up the resolution (H. Res. 291), a resolution of inquiry directing the President to provide Members of the House with information on the energy situation, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 291

Resolved, That the President, to the extent possible, is directed to furnish to the House of Representatives, not later than fifteen days following the adoption of this resolution, full and complete information on the following:

(1) the existence and percentage of shortages of crude oil and refined petroleum products within the United States and administrative regions; . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁵⁾ The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Dingell) is recognized for 1 hour.

Subsequently in the proceedings, Mr. Dingell made a motion to table the resolution:

MR. DINGELL: Mr. Speaker, at this time I move to table the resolution of inquiry now before the House.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The question is on the motion to table offered by the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Dingell). . . .

MR. [SILVIO O.] CONTE [of Massachusetts]: Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 4, nays 338, not voting 92, as follows: . . .

So the motion to table was rejected. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Dingell).

MR. DINGELL: Mr. Speaker, may I inquire as to how much time remains?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will state to the gentleman that he has 48 minutes remaining.

MR. DINGELL: Mr. Speaker, I will, then, at this time yield 24 minutes to my distinguished friend, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Devine), for purposes of debate only.

Committee on Rules has one hour at his command and other Members may be recognized only if yielded time.⁽⁶⁾

§ 68.37 Debate in the House on a resolution reported from the Committee on Rules is under the hour rule, and that time may be extended only by unanimous consent.

On June 21, 1972,⁽⁷⁾ Mr. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr., of Massachusetts, had offered House Resolution 996, from the Committee on Rules, providing for the consideration of H.R. 14370, the State and Local Assistance Act of 1972. He asked unanimous consent for extension of the one hour of debate permitted on the resolution, and the request was objected to:

MR. O'NEILL: Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that I have so many requests for time, I ask unanimous consent that discussion on the rule be extended 30 minutes, with 15 minutes given to the gentleman from California (Mr. Smith) and 15 minutes to myself.

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁸⁾ The gentleman from Massachusetts asked unanimous consent that time for debate on the rule be extended an additional 30 minutes, the time to be equally divided between the gentleman from Massachusetts and the gentleman from California.

Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Massachusetts?

MR. [WILLIAM M.] COLMER [of Mississippi]: Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, my attention was elsewhere when the request was made. Do I correctly understand that the request is to extend the time on the rule?

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman is correct.

MR. COLMER: For how long?

THE SPEAKER: For an additional 30 minutes for debate on the rule.

MR. COLMER: Equally divided, Mr. Speaker, between whom?

MR. O'NEILL: The reason why I am asking this is that the gentleman would like to have 10 minutes.

MR. COLMER: I understand the reason why the gentleman is doing it.

Mr. Speaker, under my reservation, if I am in order, between whom is the gentleman going to divide the time?

MR. O'NEILL: I ask unanimous consent for 30 minutes, with 15 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. Smith) and 15 minutes to myself.

The reason I asked for this is that the gentleman, as chairman of the committee, asked for 10 minutes. I allotted five members opposed to the bill 3 minutes apiece. The gentleman was not satisfied with 3 minutes and is insisting upon 10. In order to satisfy him, as chairman of the Rules Committee, I have made this request.

MR. COLMER: Mr. Speaker, on the basis of the statement of the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. O'Neill)

I am unwilling to set a precedent here in order that I may be heard for additional time. Therefore, I object.

THE SPEAKER: Objection is heard.

MR. O'NEILL: Mr. Speaker, under the circumstances, since there is an objection, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. Colmer).

—Debate When Withdrawn Resolution Is Called Up Anew

§ 68.40 A Member calling up a privileged resolution from the Committee on Rules is recognized for a full hour notwithstanding the fact that he had previously called up the resolution and withdrawn it after debate.

the direction of the Committee on Rules House Resolution 665, making in order the consideration of a bill. While the resolution was pending, Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, declared a recess to await the receipt of the engrossed copy of a bill.

Following the recess, Mr. Bolling withdrew House Resolution 665 in order that the engrossed copy of the bill could be taken up as unfinished business. In response to a parliamentary inquiry, the Speaker stated that when the Committee on Rules resolution was again brought up by the Member calling it up, he would be recognized for a full hour despite the fact he had already brought it up, debated it, and withdrawn it:

MR. [CHARLES A.] HALLECK [of Indiana]: Mr. Speaker, in view of the withdrawal of the resolution by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. Bolling] do I understand that we start all over again on the consideration of the rule for the wheat-cotton bill?

THE SPEAKER: When the gentleman calls it up, the understanding of the gentleman is correct.

MR. HALLECK: We will start all over again with 30 minutes on a side?

THE SPEAKER: That is correct.

—Where Previous Question Is Defeated

§ 68.41 If the previous question on a privileged resolution reported by the Committee on Rules is voted down, the resolution is open to further consideration, a motion to table is in order and is preferential; if that motion is rejected, the Chair, under the hour rule, recognizes the Member who appears to be leading the opposition.

On Oct. 19, 1966,⁽¹²⁾ Mr. Claude D. Pepper, of Florida, called up by direction of the Committee on Rules House Resolution 1013, establishing a Select Committee on Standards and Conduct. Mr. Pepper was recognized for one hour and offered a committee amendment to the resolution, which amendment was agreed to. Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, then answered a series of parliamentary inquiries on the order of recognition should Mr. Pepper move the previous question and should the motion be defeated:

MR. [WAYNE L.] HAYS [of Ohio]: Mr. Speaker, if the previous question is refused, is it true that then amendments may be offered and further debate may be had on the resolution?

THE SPEAKER: If the previous question is defeated, then the resolution is open to further consideration and action and debate.

MR. [JOE D.] WAGGONNER [Jr., of Louisiana]: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. WAGGONNER: Mr. Speaker, under the rules of the House, is it not equally so that a motion to table would then be in order?

THE SPEAKER: At that particular point, that would be a preferential motion. . . .

MR. [JAMES G.] FULTON of Pennsylvania: Mr. Speaker, if the previous question is refused and the resolution is then open for amendment, under what parliamentary procedure will the debate continue? Or what would be the time limit?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair would recognize whoever appeared to be the leading Member in opposition to the resolution.

MR. FULTON of Pennsylvania: What would be the time for debate?

THE SPEAKER: Under those circumstances the Member recognized in opposition would have 1 hour at his disposal, or such portion of it as he might desire to exercise.

MR. [CORNELIUS E.] GALLAGHER [of New Jersey]: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state it.

MR. GALLAGHER: If the previous question is voted down we will have the option to reopen debate, the resolution will be open for amendment, or it can be tabled. Is that the situation as the Chair understands it?

THE SPEAKER: If the previous question is voted down on the resolution, the time will be in control of some Member in opposition to it, and it would be open to amendment or to a motion to table.

12. 112 CONG. REC. 27725, 89th Cong. 2d Sess.

§ 68.42 Where the motion for the previous question on a resolution (reported from the Rules Committee) is rejected, the Chair recognizes the Member who led the opposition to the previous question, who may offer an amendment and is recognized for one hour.

During consideration of House Resolution 312, waiving points of order and providing special procedures during consideration of H.R. 4390 (the legislative branch appropriations for fiscal year 1980) on June 13, 1979,⁽¹³⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁴⁾ The question is on ordering the previous question. . . .

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 126, nays 292, not voting 16, as follows: . . .

[Mr. Delbert L. Latta, of Ohio, who had led the opposition to the previous question was recognized.]

MR. LATTA: Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment in the nature of a substitute offered by Mr. Latta:

13. 125 CONG. REC. 14650, 96th Cong. 1st Sess.

14. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

Strike all after the resolving clause and insert in lieu thereof the following: . . .

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Latta) is recognized for 1 hour.

MR. LATTA: Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

—Changing Rules

§ 68.43 A resolution amending the rules of the House to create a permanent select committee is privileged when reported from the Committee on Rules and is debatable for one hour under the control of the Member calling it up.

On July 14, 1977,⁽¹⁵⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House:

MR. [RICHARD] BOLLING [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 658 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 658

Resolved, That it is the purpose of this resolution to establish a new permanent select committee of the House, to be known as the Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence. . . .

tleman from Mississippi (Mr. Lott), pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. . . .

In this instance, the House agreed to a unanimous-consent request to extend for 30 minutes the debate on a privileged resolution reported from the Rules Committee in the House, to be controlled by the Member who had called it up, with the assurance that one-half the additional time would be yielded to the minority:

MR. [TED] WEISS [of New York]: . . . Mr. Speaker, at this time I ask unanimous consent that the time for debate on this matter be extended for an additional 1 hour, the time to be controlled by the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Bolling).

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁶⁾ Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

MR. [JOHN M.] ASHBROOK [of Ohio]: Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would assume the usual delegation of one-half the time to the minority?

MR. WEISS: Of course. That is intended. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

MR. [RONALD M.] MOTTL [of Ohio]: Mr. Speaker, I object.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Objection is heard.

MR. WEISS: Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that time for debate be extended for an additional half hour, the time to be divided 15 minutes on each side.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

Resolution Creating Select Committee

§ 68.44 Where the Majority Leader was recognized for one hour of debate on a privileged resolution creating an ad hoc legislative committee pursuant to Rule X, clause 5(c), he yielded one-half of the time to the Minority Leader.

Proceedings in the House relating to consideration of House Resolution 508 (creating an Ad Hoc Committee on Energy) on Apr. 21, 1977,⁽¹⁷⁾ were as follows:

MR. [JAMES C.] WRIGHT [Jr., of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, pursuant to clause 5 of rule X, I offer a privileged resolution and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 508

Resolved, (a) that pursuant to rule X, clause 5, the Speaker is authorized to establish an Ad Hoc Committee on Energy to consider and report to the House on the message of the President dated April 20, 1977. . . .

17. 123 CONG. REC. 11550, 95th Cong. 1st Sess.

16. B. F. Sisk (Calif.).

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁸⁾ The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Wright).

(Mr. Wright asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

MR. WRIGHT: Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. This resolution authorizes the Speaker to appoint an ad hoc committee to receive the messages and the recommendations of the President of the United States with respect to the energy problems of this country. . . .

Mr. Speaker, I now yield 30 minutes to the distinguished minority leader, or such part of that time as he may consume, and reserve to myself the remainder of the time. I yield to the gentleman from Arizona for purposes of debate only.

Time on Reported Committee Amendments

§ 68.45 There is one hour of debate in the House on a resolution reported from the Committee on Rules, and time consumed on a reported committee amendment runs concurrently with debate on the resolution.

On Jan. 29, 1976,⁽¹⁹⁾ during consideration in the House of House Resolution 982 (authorizing the Select Committee on Intelligence to file its final report by Jan. 31,

With the following committee amendment:

Committee amendment: On page 1, after the first sentence, add the following:

Resolved further, That the Select Committee on Intelligence shall not release any report containing materials, information, data, or subjects that presently bear security classification, unless and until such reports are published with appropriate security markings and distributed only to persons authorized to receive such classified information. . . .

MR. [RICHARD] BOLLING [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER:⁽²⁰⁾ The gentleman will state it.

MR. BOLLING: Mr. Speaker, my parliamentary inquiry is to determine the procedure in the process of considering the resolution just read.

The resolution is a resolution with an amendment. On the resolution with the amendment, if the previous question were ordered on the resolution and the amendment, would the next step after the previous question were agreed to be a vote on the amendment?

20. Carl Albert (Okla.).

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will state that the gentleman is correct.

MR. BOLLING: I thank the Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Texas (Mr. Young) is recognized for 1 hour.

MR. [JOHN] YOUNG of Texas: Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. Quillen)—and might I say, Mr. Speaker, at this point, that all time I yield will be for the purposes of debate only—pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. . . .

[After one hour of debate:]

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the amendment and on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered on the amendment and on the resolution.

THE SPEAKER: The question is on the committee amendment.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the noes appeared to have it.

MR. YOUNG of Texas: Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device; and there were—yeas 246, nays 124, not voting 62.

Privilege of House or Constitutional Privilege

§ 68.46 A Member in rising to a question of privilege of the House must offer a resolution, and on such resolution there is one hour of debate equally divided between the proponent and the Majority Leader, the Minority Leader, or a designee.⁽¹⁾

§ 68.47 A Member recognized on a question of privilege to present impeachment charges against an officer of the government is entitled to an hour for debate.⁽²⁾

§ 68.48 Before the 103d Congress, a Member offering a resolution presenting a question of the privilege of the House was recognized to control one hour of debate on the resolution.

On Feb. 19, 1976,⁽³⁾ Mr. Samuel S. Stratton, of New York, offered a privileged resolution as follows:

MR. STRATTON: I rise to a question involving the privileges of the House, and I offer a privileged resolution.

The Clerk read the resolution as follows:

1. Under Rule IX, clause 2, the debate time on a question of privilege of the House is—since the 103d Congress—divided as indicated. Before 1993, the proponent of such a resolution controlled the hour. See 115 CONG. REC. 17948, 91st Cong. 1st Sess., July 1, 1969; 113 CONG. Therefore be it resolved, That the Committee on Rules be instructed to inquire into the truth or falsity of the newspaper account and promptly report back to the House its findings and any recommendations thereon. . . .

MR. [ROBERT H.] MICHEL [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of privilege.

Mr. Speaker, I send to the desk a privileged resolution (H. Res. 97) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

THE SPEAKER: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Stokes).

MR. [LOUIS] STOKES [of Ohio]: Mr. Speaker, I reserve my time.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁴⁾ The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 794

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Stokes) will be recognized for 1 hour. . . .

MR. STOKES: Mr. Speaker, I yield to my distinguished chairman of the Ethics Committee, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Bennett).

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁶⁾ The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 794

The gentleman from Florida (Mr. Bennett) is recognized for 1 hour.

MR. BENNETT: Mr. Speaker, although technically speaking I could control all of the time, in all fairness I think I should yield half of the time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Myers). I plan to do that at the conclusion of my remarks and the remarks of those people on the Democratic side who wish to be heard. . . .

MR. MYERS of Pennsylvania: Mr. Speaker, I would like to take the well for a minute.

THE SPEAKER: Does the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Bennett) yield time to the gentleman from Pennsylvania? . . .

MR. BENNETT: Mr. Speaker, I will give the gentleman half my time now, which is 30 minutes. I will give all of that time to the gentleman now.

MR. MYERS of Pennsylvania: Mr. Speaker, I certainly thank the committee chairman.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Myers) is recognized for 30 minutes.

MR. MYERS of Pennsylvania: Mr. Speaker, the last vote was this: I only received 75 votes, and I certainly want to thank the Members who had courage enough to stand up and vote. . . .

THE SPEAKER: The time of the gentleman has expired.

(By unanimous consent, Mr. Myers of Pennsylvania was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

MR. MYERS of Pennsylvania: I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Murphy). . . .

THE SPEAKER: The time of the gentleman has expired.

Particular Motions, Debate on —Motion To Recommit After Previous Question

§ 68.57 Under clause 4 of Rule XVI, a motion to recommit with instructions after the previous question is ordered on passage of a bill or joint resolution is debatable for 1 hour (rather than the normal 10 minutes) if the floor manager for the majority so demands.

During consideration of the Omnibus Trade and Competitiveness Act (H.R. 4848) in the House on July 13, 1988,⁽¹⁹⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽²⁰⁾ Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

MR. [ROBERT H.] MICHEL [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

MR. MICHEL: I am, in its present form, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Michel moves to recommit the bill, H.R. 4848, to the Committee on Ways and Means with instructions to report the bill back to the House forthwith with the following amendment:

“Strike out section 1910 (entitled Ethyl Alcohol and Mixtures for Fuel Use);

“And redesignate succeeding sections accordingly.”

MR. [SAM] GIBBONS [of Florida]: Mr. Speaker, pursuant to clause 4 of rule XVI, I demand an hour of debate, equally divided, on the motion to recommit.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel) will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Gibbons) will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the minority leader, the distinguished gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Michel).

—Motion To Postpone

§ 68.58 A motion to postpone further consideration of a privileged resolution (to censure a Member) may be offered before the manager of the resolution has been recognized for debate, and is debatable for one hour controlled by the Member offering the motion.

On May 29, 1980,⁽¹⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House:

1. 126 CONG. REC. 12649, 12650, 96th Cong. 2d Sess.

MR. [CHARLES E.] BENNETT [of Florida]: Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, I call up a privileged resolution (H. Res. 660) in the matter of Representative Charles H. Wilson, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 660

Resolved,

(1) That Representative Charles H. Wilson be censured; . . .

(4) That the House of Representatives adopt the report of the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct dated May 8, 1980, in the matter of Representative Charles H. Wilson.

MR. [JOHN H.] ROUSSELOT [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Rousselot moves to postpone further consideration of House Resolution 660 until June 10, 1980.

THE SPEAKER:⁽²⁾ The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California (Mr. Rousselot) for 1 hour.

—Motion To Reconsider

Resolution 506, brought up by a motion to discharge, providing for the consideration of a bill (H.R. 10065), the Equal Opportunity Act of 1965. Mr. William M. McCulloch, of Ohio, who had voted in the affirmative on the resolution, moved that the vote on adoption of the resolution be reconsidered. Mr. Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, moved to lay that motion on the table.

In response to parliamentary inquiries by Mr. Melvin R. Laird, of Wisconsin, and Mr. McCulloch, Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, advised: (1) that the motion to reconsider would be debatable if the pending motion to table was defeated (the resolution itself being debatable and the previous question not having been ordered thereon); and (2) that in such event the Member moving reconsideration, Mr. McCulloch, would be recognized to control the one hour of debate.

Parliamentarian's Note: A motion to reconsider is debatable only if the measure proposed to be reconsidered is debatable.⁽⁴⁾

—Accepting Resignation From Committee

§ 68.62 When a letter of resignation is laid before the House, the pending question is whether the resignation shall be accepted, and the Speaker recognizes for one hour the Member in effect moving the acceptance of the resignation.

Proceedings relating to acceptance of the resignation of the chairman of a House committee on Mar. 8, 1977,⁽⁷⁾ were as follows:

The Speaker laid before the House the following resignation as chairman and member of the Select Committee on Assassinations: . . .

5. 91 CONG. REC. 7220–25, 79th Cong. 1st Sess., July 5, 1945 (motion); 92 CONG. REC. 1274, 1275, 79th Cong. 2d Sess., Feb. 13, 1946 (resolution).

7. 123 CONG. REC. 6580, 6581, 95th Cong. 1st Sess.

Dear Mr. Speaker: I feel keenly the responsibilities placed on me as Chairman of the House Select Committee on Assassinations. . . .

Under the circumstances that now exist, I have no alternative but to resign from the Select Committee on Assassinations herewith.

With warmest personal regards.

— Sincerely yours,

HENRY B. GONZALEZ

Member of Congress, Chairman

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁸⁾ Is there objection to the acceptance of the resignation?

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, I object.

THE SPEAKER: Objection is heard.

The question is, Shall the resignation be accepted?

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Wright).

MR. [JAMES C.] WRIGHT [Jr., of Texas]: . . . I should like to make it clear that if ever it came to a choice between the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Gonzalez) and any member of that staff, I would come down on the side of the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Gonzalez) because he is my friend and because I admire him and respect him.

However, for those very reasons I am asking the House to accept the resignation of the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Gonzalez). . . . He asked me on last Saturday evening personally to prevail upon the Speaker and upon his friends to accept his resignation. . . .

For that reason I ask the Members of the House to vote to accept the resignation of the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Gonzalez) and to understand that in so doing they are not expressing any disagreement with him. . . .

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

THE SPEAKER: The question is, Shall the resignation be accepted?

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that the ayes appeared to have it. . . .

So the resignation was accepted.

—Electing Members to Committee

§ 68.63 A privileged resolution offered by direction of the Democratic Caucus or Republican Conference, electing a Member to a committee, is debatable for one hour (if debate time is desired by the proponent thereof).

On May 15, 1980,⁽⁹⁾ during consideration of a privileged resolution electing a Member to the Committee on Education and Labor, the following exchange occurred:

MR. [THOMAS S.] FOLEY [of Washington]: Mr. Speaker, as chairman of the Democratic Caucus, and by the authority and direction of the Democratic Caucus, I send to the desk a privileged resolution (H. Res. 669) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

elected to the following standing committee of the House of Representatives:

Committee on Education and Labor: Raphael Musto of Pennsylvania.

MR. [JOHN J.] RHODES [of Arizona]: Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. Is the gentleman from Washington entitled to any time on this resolution?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁰⁾ The Chair would respond to the distinguished minority leader that this would be a debatable resolution if debate were desired.

MR. RHODES: Mr. Speaker, might I ask the gentleman from Washington to take his time for the purpose of answering a question which has absolutely nothing to do with the main part of the resolution?

MR. FOLEY: Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 minutes and I yield to the distinguished minority leader.

—Motion To Discharge; Discharged Measures

§ 68.64 Debate on a motion to discharge a committee from further consideration of a resolution disapproving a reorganization plan (under the Reorganization Act of 1949) was limited to one hour and was equally divided between the Member making the motion and a Member opposed thereto.

10. James C. Wright, Jr. (Tex.).

On Aug. 3, 1961,⁽¹¹⁾ Mr. H. R. Gross, of Iowa, moved to discharge the Committee on Government Operations from the further consideration of House Resolution 335, introduced by Mr. John S. Monagan, of Connecticut, disapproving Reorganization Plan No. 6, transmitted to Congress by the President on June 12, 1961. Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, recognized, under the hour provided for in the Reorganization Act of 1949, Mr. Gross for 30 minutes in favor of the resolution and a Member opposed for 30 minutes in opposition to the resolution.

Parliamentarian's Note: The Reorganization Act of 1949, Public Law No. 81-109, provided for a motion to discharge such a resolution disapproving a reorganization plan from a committee which had not reported such a resolution after 10 days following its introduction. On such a motion, the statute provided "not to exceed one hour" of debate, to be equally divided and controlled between those favoring and those opposing the resolution.⁽¹²⁾

On several occasions, the one-hour debate provided for on the motion to discharge such a resolu-

The proceedings were as follows:

MRS. [MARTHA W.] GRIFFITHS [of Michigan]: Mr. Speaker, pursuant to clause 4, rule XXVII, I call up motion No. 5, to discharge the Committee on the Judiciary from the further consideration of House Joint Resolution 264, proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States relative to equal rights for men and women. . . .

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁶⁾ The question is on the motion offered by the gentlewoman from Michigan (Mrs. Griffiths) to discharge the Committee on the Judiciary from further consideration of House Joint Resolution 264. . . .

So the motion to discharge was agreed to. . . .

MRS. GRIFFITHS: . . . I move that the House proceed to the immediate consideration of House Joint Resolution 264. . . .

The motion was agreed to.

THE SPEAKER: The Clerk will report the joint resolution. . . .

The gentlewoman from Michigan is recognized for 1 hour.

Budget Act

§ 68.67 While under section 305(a)(4) of the Congress-

16. John W. McCormack (Mass.).

sional Budget Act there can be up to five hours of debate on a conference report on a concurrent resolution on the budget equally divided between the majority and minority parties, where the conferees have reported in total disagreement, debate on the motion to dispose of the amendment in disagreement is not covered by the statute and is therefore under the general "hour" rule in the House.

During consideration of the first concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 1978 (S. Con. Res. 19) in the House on May 17, 1977,⁽¹⁷⁾ the following exchange occurred:

MR. [ROBERT N.] GIAIMO [of Connecticut]: Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the Senate concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 19) setting forth the congressional budget for the U.S. Government for the fiscal year 1978 (and revising the congressional budget for fiscal year 1977), and ask for its immediate consideration.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁸⁾ The Clerk will read the conference report.

The Clerk read the conference report. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Clerk will report the Senate amendment to the House amendment.

17. 123 CONG. REC. 15126, 15127, 95th Cong. 1st Sess.

18. William H. Natcher (Ky.).

The Clerk read the Senate amendment to the House amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the House engrossed amendment, insert: . . .

MR. GIAIMO: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Giaimo moves to concur in the Senate amendment to the House amendment.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. Giaimo) for 1 hour.

Parliamentarian's Note: Since the Senate amendment to the House amendment had not been reported from conference in disagreement, but had been subsequently added by the Senate after consideration of the conference report in that body, the requirement for equal division of time on a motion to dispose of a Senate amendment reported from conference in disagreement was not applicable.

§ 68.68 When a conference report in disagreement is called up for consideration, the Chair recognizes the manager for a motion to dispose of the amendment(s) reported in disagreement, which is debatable for one hour, equally divided between the manager and a Member of the minority.

On May 23, 1979,⁽¹⁹⁾ during consideration in the House of the conference report on the first concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 1980 (H. Con. Res. 107), reported in disagreement,⁽²⁰⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [ROBERT N.] GIAIMO [of Connecticut]: Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the order of the House of May 22, 1979, I call up the conference report on the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 107) setting forth the Congressional Budget for the U.S. Government for the fiscal year 1980 and revising the Congressional Budget for the U.S. Government for the fiscal year 1979. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽²¹⁾ The Clerk will read the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Strike out all after the resolving clause and insert:

That the Congress hereby determines and declares [that]

(a) In order to achieve a balanced budget in fiscal year 1981, the following budgetary levels are appropriate for the fiscal years beginning on October 1, 1979, October 1, 1980, and October 1, 1981— . . .

MR. GIAIMO: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Giaimo moves that the House recede from its disagreement to the Senate amendment and to concur therein with an amendment, as follows: . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. Giaimo) will be recognized for 30 minutes [and] the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Latta) will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. Giaimo).

—Statutory Allocation of Time

§ 68.69 While normally the “hour” rule (clause 2 of Rule XIV) prohibits a Member controlling the floor from yielding more than one hour to another Member, a statutory provision constituting a House rule which specifically allocates larger amounts of time may permit more than one hour to be yielded.

Pursuant to section 305(a)(3) of the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 (Public Law 93-344, as amended by Public Law 95-523), a period of up to four hours for debate on economic goals and policies follows the presentation of opening statements on the first concurrent resolution on the budget by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Budget. Thus, the chairman of the Committee on the Budget (or his designee managing the resolution) may yield for more than one hour to another Member to control a portion of the time for such debate, which is equally divided and controlled by the majority and minority. The following exchange occurred on Apr. 30, 1981:⁽¹⁾

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽²⁾ The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Gephardt).

MR. [RICHARD A.] GEPHARDT [of Missouri]: It is my wish now to yield to the gentleman from California (Mr. Hawkins) for a discussion of the provisions of Humphrey-Hawkins which relate to this entire debate.

THE CHAIRMAN: How much time does the gentleman from Missouri wish to yield?

MR. GEPHARDT: It is my understanding under the previously arranged rule that I yield 4 hours; is that correct?

THE CHAIRMAN: Two hours, under the statute. Two on each side.

MR. GEPHARDT: I yield 2 hours to the gentleman from California (Mr. Hawkins).

Parliamentarian's Note: Although section 305(a)(3) does not specify that the four hours of debate is equally divided and controlled by the majority and minority, such has been the practice, which is consistent with the management of other general debate on the resolution.

§ 68.70 While normally the "hour" rule (clause 2 of Rule XIV) prohibits a Member controlling the floor in general debate from consuming more than one hour himself, a statutory provision constituting a House rule which specifically allocates larger amounts of time may permit the Member in charge to consume more than one hour, but not to yield himself more than one hour at a time.

The following proceedings occurred in the Committee of the Whole on Apr. 30, 1981,⁽³⁾ during consideration of House Concurrent Resolution 134 (revising the congressional budget for fiscal year 1981, and setting forth the congressional budget for fiscal years 1982, 1983, and 1984):

THE CHAIRMAN:⁽⁴⁾ The time of the gentleman from Oklahoma has expired.

MR. [JAMES R.] JONES of Oklahoma: Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1 additional minute.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Chair will state that the gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. Jones) has used 1 hour in his opening statement. How much time does the gentleman yield at this moment?

MR. JONES of Oklahoma: Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1 minute.

THE CHAIRMAN: The gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. Jones) is recognized for 1 minute.

Debate on Appeal

§ 68.71 In the House, an appeal from the Chair's ruling is debatable under the hour rule unless a motion to lay the appeal on the table is made prior to debate on the appeal.

On Mar. 16, 1988,⁽⁵⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House:

MR. [ROBERT K.] DORNAN of California: . . . Panama is in chaos and Communists in Nicaragua, thanks to the liberal and radical left leadership in this House are winning a major victory, right now.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁶⁾ The time of the gentleman from California [Mr. Dornan] has expired.

MR. DORNAN of California: Wait a minute. On Honduran soil and on Nicaraguan soil.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The time of the gentleman has expired.

MR. DORNAN of California: And it was set up in this House as you set up the betrayal of the Bay of Pigs.

MR. DORNAN of California: I ask—wait a minute—I ask unanimous consent for 30 seconds. People are dying.

MR. DORNAN of California: People are dying.

MR. [HAROLD L.] VOLKMER [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, regular order, regular order.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The time of the gentleman has expired. Will the Sergeant at Arms please turn off the microphone?

MR. [ROBERT S.] WALKER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, I have a question of privilege before the House under rule IX.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Whereas, the Speaker pro tempore ordered the microphone cut off as a duly-elected Member of the House was speaking: Be it therefore

Resolved, That the Speaker, Speaker pro tempore, or any Member of the House as the Presiding Officer of the House of Representatives may not order the microphone to be cut off while any Member is speaking on the floor of the House of Representatives. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The resolution does not allege an abuse of the House rules, and is not a question of privilege.

The House will proceed to the unfinished business. . . .

MR. WALKER: Mr. Speaker, I am appealing the ruling of the Chair.

It is my understanding, Mr. Speaker, that I am given a chance to debate that issue.

MR. [BRIAN J.] DONNELLY [of Massachusetts]: Mr. Speaker, the vote is automatic.

MR. WALKER: I have 1 hour, I believe.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The appeal is debatable unless there is a motion to table.

Special-order Speeches

§ 68.72 Special orders to address the House at the conclusion of the business of the day are limited to one hour per Member; and when a Member has used one hour, the Chair declines to recognize him for extensions of time or for an additional special order.

On Feb. 9, 1966,⁽⁷⁾ Mr. Joseph Y. Resnick, of New York, who already had scheduled a special order for the day, asked unanimous consent that he have an additional special order to address the House for 15 minutes at the close of legislative business. Speaker Pro Tempore Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, declined to recognize him for that purpose, stating as follows:

The Chair would advise the gentleman that pursuant to the practice of the House, Members are limited to a 1-hour special order per day. The Chair would be glad to entertain a request for a special order for a later day.⁽⁸⁾

On Oct. 16, 1979,⁽⁹⁾ the following proceedings occurred in the House:

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁰⁾ Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. Rhodes) is recognized for 60 minutes.

MR. [JOHN J.] RHODES [of Arizona]: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this special order is to outline what Congress should be doing to help our Nation turn back inflation. It has been said that inflation is the neutron bomb of our economy. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹¹⁾ The time of the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. Rhodes) has expired.

§ 69. Ten-minute, Twenty-minute, and Forty-minute Debate

The House has provided in its rules for fixed periods of debate, equally divided between the proponents and opponents or between parties, on certain motions and questions considered in the House.⁽¹²⁾

Ten minutes of debate, five minutes on each side, is provided by Rule XVI for certain motions to recommit with instructions,⁽¹³⁾ and by Rule XXIV for the motions to dispense with Calendar Wednesday business and to dispense with the call of the Private Calendar.⁽¹⁴⁾

12. The other sections of this chapter, dealing with principles of recognition generally and on specific motions and questions, should be consulted, as should the other chapters of this work dealing with particular motions and questions.
13. Rule XVI clause 4, House Rules and Manual §782 (1995). Prior to the change in that clause by H. Res. 5 in the 92d Congress, no debate was in order on a motion to recommit after the ordering of the previous question (see §6, supra). See §§69.6, 69.7, infra, for application of the rule. For the motion to recommit generally, see Ch. 23, supra.
14. Rule XXIV clause 6, House Rules and Manual §893 (1995) (to dispense with Private Calendar) and Rule XXVII clause 3 provides for 20 minutes of debate on motions to discharge. The time is divided for and against the motion, and the previous question may not be moved to prevent the 20 minutes of debate. Speaker Garner, in 1932, refused to entertain a unanimous-consent request to extend the time.⁽¹⁵⁾

Rule XXVII also provides, in clause 2, for 40 minutes of debate on the motion to suspend the rules, such time to be equally divided between the proponents and opponents of the motion.⁽¹⁶⁾ clause 7, House Rules and Manual §897 (1995) (to dispense with Calendar Wednesday). On each motion, a two-thirds vote is required. See §69.4, infra, for debate on the motions and Chs. 21 (Calendar Wednesday) and 22 (Private Calendar), supra, generally.

For consideration of Private Calendar bills in the House as in the Committee of the Whole, under a strict construction of the five-minute rule, see §§70.7, 70.10, infra.

15. See §§69.1, 69.2, infra, for the application of the rule, and House Rules and Manual §908 (1995). For the discharge procedure generally, see Ch. 18, supra.
16. Statutes sometimes provide for the discharge of certain kinds of resolutions and that debate thereon is not to exceed one hour. See, for example, §68.64, supra.
16. For the rule, see House Rules and Manual §907 (1995). For the appli-

Rule XXVII clause 3 provides that 40 minutes of debate, equally divided between proponents and opponents, shall also be in order following the ordering of the previous question on a debatable proposition on which there has been no debate.⁽¹⁷⁾

Rule XXVIII provides for 40 minutes of debate, equally divided, on motions to reject certain portions of conference reports or motions to concur in Senate amendments or portions thereof in modified form containing nongermane matter (after the stage of disagreement has been reached).⁽¹⁸⁾

The House may by unanimous consent extend the time for debate after the ordering of the previous question or rescind the ordering of the previous question.⁽¹⁹⁾ cation thereof, see §§69.13–69.15, infra. Suspension of the rules is discussed generally in Ch. 21, supra.

The time on the motion may be extended by unanimous consent (see §71.14, infra) or by special order (see §§71.15, 71.16, infra).

17. House Rules and Manual §907 (1995). For the application of the rule, see §§69.19–69.21, infra. For the previous question and its effect generally, see Ch. 23, supra.
18. See Rule XXVIII clause 4(b), House Rules and Manual §913b (1995), and H. Res. 998 (93d Cong.). See Ch. 32, infra, for Senate amendments, and Ch. 33, infra, for conferences and conference reports.
19. See §§71.22–71.25, infra.

Motion To Discharge

§ 69.1 On a motion to discharge a committee, debate is limited to 20 minutes, 10 minutes under the control of the Member calling up the motion and 10 minutes under the control of a Member opposed (typically the chairman of the committee if he is opposed), and the Speaker does not recognize a Member to ask unanimous consent to extend the time.

On Mar. 14, 1932,⁽²⁰⁾ Mr. J. Charles Linthicum, of Maryland, moved under Rule XXVII clause 4, that the Committee on the Judiciary be discharged from further consideration of House Joint Resolution 208, proposing an amendment to the 18th amendment to the U.S. Constitution. Speaker John N. Garner, of Texas, answered a parliamentary inquiry on the time for debate on the motion:

MR. [BERTRAND H.] SNELL [of New York]: In regard to the division of time, I should expect the chairman of the Judiciary Committee to have the 10 minutes in opposition to the motion. I would like to ask him if he will yield five minutes to this side of the aisle?

THE SPEAKER: The rule is specific. The gentleman making the motion is entitled to 10 minutes, and if the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary is opposed to the motion, he would be entitled to 10 minutes. If he is of the same opinion as the gentleman from Maryland on this particular motion, the Chair would recognize someone on the committee who desired to oppose it. Whether the gentleman from Texas will yield is a question for the gentleman from Texas.

The Speaker then refused to entertain a unanimous-consent request that the time for debate on the motion be extended:

MR. [FIORELLO H.] LAGUARDIA [of New York]: The Speaker announced that he would recognize no Member for any purpose. Does that preclude a Member from asking unanimous consent to extend the time for debate under the rule?

20. 75 CONG. REC. 6000-03, 72d Cong. 1st Sess.

THE SPEAKER: The rule limits the time and provides that there shall be 10 minutes on each side.

MR. LAGUARDIA: I ask unanimous consent that the time be extended 10 minutes on each side.

MR. [CHARLES R.] CRISP [of Georgia]: Mr. Speaker, I object.

THE SPEAKER: It seems to the Chair that it is his duty to protect the rule. Being a Member of the House, he will say himself that he would object to any additional debate, taking as much responsibility as he can in the premises.⁽¹⁾

§ 69.2 The previous question may not be moved on a motion to discharge a committee in order to prevent the 20 minutes of debate permitted by Rule XXVII.

charge the Committee on Ways and Means from further consideration of H.R. 1, for the immediate cash payment of adjusted service certificates. In response to a parliamentary inquiry, Speaker Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, stated that the motion was debatable for 20 minutes under the rules with 10 minutes for each side of the question and that it was not in order to move the previous question on the motion to prevent such debate.

§ 69.3 Twenty minutes of debate are allowed on a motion to discharge a committee from consideration of a joint resolution; and the chairman of that committee may be recognized for ten minutes if opposed to the motion.

On Aug. 10, 1970,⁽³⁾ the House had under consideration a motion to discharge House Joint Resolution 264 (amending the Constitution relative to equal rights for men and women) from the Committee on the Judiciary. During the proceedings a parliamentary inquiry was propounded as to division of the 20 minutes of debate time. The proceedings were as follows:

MRS. [MARTHA W.] GRIFFITHS [of Michigan]: Mr. Speaker, pursuant to

3. 116 CONG. REC. 27999, 91st Cong. 2d Sess.

clause 4, rule XXVII, I call up motion No. 5, to discharge the Committee on the Judiciary from the further consideration of House Joint Resolution 264, proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States relative to equal rights for men and women. . . .

MR. [EMANUEL] CELLER [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry. . . .

I understand the rule provides for 20 minutes of debate, 10 minutes on either side. Is it correct that the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, being opposed to the discharge petition, will be allocated 10 minutes?

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁴⁾ The gentleman's statement is correct that the rule provides for 20 minutes of debate, 10 minutes on each side. If the gentleman from New York (Mr. Celler) is opposed to the [motion], the Chair will recognize him for 10 minutes.

Is the gentleman opposed to the [motion]?

MR. CELLER: I am opposed to the [motion], Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: Under the rule, the gentlewoman from Michigan (Mrs. Griffiths) will be recognized for 10 minutes, and the gentleman from New York (Mr. Celler) will be recognized for 10 minutes.

Motion To Dispense With Calendar Wednesday Business

§ 69.4 On a motion to dispense with business under the Calendar Wednesday rule, there is five minutes debate for and five minutes against the motion, and such motion may not be laid on the table.

4. John W. McCormack (Mass.).

On Feb. 22, 1950,⁽⁵⁾ Mr. Dwight L. Rogers, of Florida, moved to dispense for the day with the operation of Rule XXIV clause 7, providing for the call of committees on Calendar Wednesday. In response to parliamentary inquiries, Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, stated that the motion was debatable for five minutes for and five minutes against the motion, and that the motion was not subject to a motion to table.⁽⁶⁾

§ 69.5 Pursuant to clause 7 of Rule XXIV, the motion to dispense with the call of committees on Calendar Wednesday is debatable for 10 minutes, five minutes on each side, and requires a two-thirds vote for adoption.

On Jan. 24, 1984,⁽⁷⁾ Speaker Pro Tempore Gillis W. Long, of Louisiana, responded to a parliamentary inquiry regarding debate, as indicated below:

MR. [JAMES C.] WRIGHT [Jr., of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, I move that business in order on January 25, 1984, under clause 7, rule XXIV, the Calendar Wednesday rule, may be dispensed with on that day.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Texas (Mr. Wright) is recognized for 5 minutes.

MR. [DANIEL E.] LUNGREN [of California]: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. LUNGREN: Mr. Speaker, is there also 5 minutes given to someone in opposition?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will advise that the opposition is also entitled to 5 minutes and will be recognized following the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Wright). . . .

The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Wright).

So (two-thirds not having voted in favor thereof) the motion was rejected.

Motion To Recommit With Instructions

§ 69.6 Under Rule XVI clause 4, a Member offering a motion to recommit with instructions (after the previous question has been ordered) and a Member opposing the motion to recommit are each recognized for five minutes of debate.

On June 2, 1971,⁽⁸⁾ a bill was reported back to the House with an amendment agreed to in the Committee of the Whole. Speaker Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, stated that under the rule the previous question was ordered, and the bill was read the third time. Mr. Marvin L. Esch, of Michigan, offered a motion to recommit the bill with instructions. The Speaker recognized him for five minutes' debate in favor of his motion and Mr. Carl D. Perkins, of Kentucky, for five minutes' debate in opposition to the motion.⁽⁹⁾

8. 117 CONG. REC. 17491-95, 92d Cong. 1st Sess.

On July 19, 1973,⁽¹⁰⁾ Mr. Charles M. Teague, of California, who was opposed to the pending bill, offered a motion to recommit with instructions after the previous question had been ordered on the bill. Speaker Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, recognized him under the rule for five minutes and then recognized Mr. William R. Poage, of Texas, for five minutes in opposition to the motion.

At the conclusion of Mr. Poage's time, the Speaker held that Mr. Teague still retained control of the motion and could yield to another Member to offer an amendment to the motion to recommit.

9. For prior practice, precluding debate on such a motion, see §6, supra; 5 Hinds' Precedents §§5561, 5582-5584; and 8 Cannon's Precedents §2471.

10. 119 CONG. REC. 24966, 24967, 93d Cong. 1st Sess.

§ 69.7 The 10 minutes of debate on certain motions to recommit with instructions permitted by Rule XVI clause 4, are not in order on a motion to recommit a simple resolution (or a conference report) with instructions.

On Nov. 15, 1973,⁽¹¹⁾ Mr. Wayne L. Hays, of Ohio, offered House Resolution 702, providing additional funds for investigations by the Committee on the Judiciary. Mr. Hays moved the previous question on the report and the previous question was ordered. Mr. William L. Dickinson, of Alabama, then moved to recommit the resolution with instructions. Speaker Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, informed him, in response to his parliamentary inquiry, that no debate was in order on the motion, the pending proposition not being a bill or joint resolution but a simple resolution:

MR. DICKINSON: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. DICKINSON: Mr. Speaker, am I not entitled to 5 minutes as the Member offering this motion to recommit?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will advise the gentleman that that procedure is not applicable on a motion to recommit a simple resolution.

11. 119 CONG. REC. 37141, 37142, 37150, 93d Cong. 1st Sess.

MR. DICKINSON: Mr. Speaker, is that also true when there are instructions in the motion to recommit?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will advise the gentleman that the procedure permitting 10 minutes of debate on a motion to recommit with instructions only applies to bills and joint resolutions.

The question is on the motion to recommit offered by the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. Dickinson).⁽¹²⁾

§ 69.8 Under Rule XVI clause 4, after the previous question is ordered on passage of a bill or joint resolution, 10 minutes are provided for debate on a motion to recommit with instructions; but such provision for debate applies only to bills and joint resolutions, and is not in order on a motion to recommit a concurrent resolution with instructions.

The proceedings described above occurred on May 7, 1975,⁽¹³⁾ during consideration of Senate Concurrent Resolution 23 (authorizing printing of additional copies of "The Congressional Program of Economic Recovery and Energy Sufficiency") in the House.

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit with instructions.

12. Rule XVI clause 4, limits its application as to motions to recommit to bills and joint resolutions. See House Rules and Manual § 782 (1995).
13. 121 CONG. REC. 13366, 13367, 94th Cong. 1st Sess.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Bauman moves to recommit Senate Concurrent Resolution 23 to the Committee on House Administration with instructions to report the resolution back forthwith with the following amendment: Page 1, line 3 and 4 strike the word "Congressional" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Democrat".

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁴⁾ Is the gentleman opposed to the Senate concurrent resolution?

MR. BAUMAN: I am, Mr. Speaker, in its present form or in any other form.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the motion to recommit.

There was no objection.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state it.

MR. BAUMAN: Am I not permitted time to discuss the motion?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: I would inform the gentleman from Maryland that it is not a debatable motion on a concurrent resolution.

§ 69.9 Under Rule XVI clause 4, after the previous question is ordered on passage of a bill or joint resolution 10 minutes are provided for debate on a motion to recommit with instructions; the 10 minutes of debate on a motion to recommit with instructions applies only to bills and joint resolutions and is not in order on a motion to recommit a concurrent resolution with instructions.

On May 7, 1975,⁽¹⁵⁾ during consideration of Senate Concurrent Resolution 23⁽¹⁶⁾ in the Committee of the Whole, the Chair responded to a parliamentary inquiry regarding debate on a motion. The proceedings were as follows:

MR. [ROBERT E.] BAUMAN [of Maryland]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit with instructions.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Bauman moves to recommit Senate Concurrent Resolution 23 to the Committee on House Administration with instructions to report the resolution back forthwith with the following amendment: Page 1, line 3 and 4 strike the word "Congressional" and insert in lieu thereof the word "Democrat".

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽¹⁷⁾ Is the gentleman opposed to the Senate concurrent resolution?

MR. BAUMAN: I am, Mr. Speaker, in its present form or in any other form.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the motion to recommit.

There was no objection.

MR. BAUMAN: Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

16. Authorizing printing of additional copies of "The Congressional Program of Economic Recovery and Energy Sufficiency."

17. John J. McFall (Calif.).

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman will state it.

MR. BAUMAN: Am I not permitted time to discuss the motion?

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: I would inform the gentleman from Maryland that it is not a debatable motion on a concurrent resolution.

§ 69.10 After the previous question has been ordered, a motion to recommit a bill or joint resolution with any proper instructions is debatable for 10 minutes under Rule XVI clause 4.

The following proceedings occurred in the House on Oct. 30, 1975,⁽¹⁸⁾ during consideration of the Postal Reorganization Amendments of 1975 (H.R. 8603):

MR. [EDWARD J.] DERWINSKI [of Illinois]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁹⁾ Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

MR. DERWINSKI: I am, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Derwinski moves to recommit the bill, H.R. 8603, to the Committee on Post Office and Civil Service with instructions that said committee shall promptly hold appropriate hearings thereon.

THE SPEAKER: Does the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Derwinski) desire to be heard on his motion?

18. 121 CONG. REC. 34448, 94th Cong. 1st Sess.

19. Carl Albert (Okla.).

MR. DERWINSKI: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

The motion to recommit is normal except that it does require that the committee hold appropriate hearings.

THE SPEAKER: Does the gentleman from New York (Mr. Hanley) desire to be heard on the motion to recommit?

MR. [JAMES M.] HANLEY [of New York]: I do, Mr. Speaker. I wish to be heard in opposition to the recommittal motion.

Parliamentarian's Note: Debate is permitted on any motion to recommit with instructions, and not merely a motion with instructions to report the bill back forthwith with an amendment.

§ 69.11 The 10 minutes of debate permitted on a motion to recommit with instructions by clause 4 of Rule XVI applies only to a bill or joint resolution and not to a simple resolution.

During consideration of House Resolution 1097 (relating to investigative funds for the Committee on the Judiciary) in the House on Mar. 29, 1976,⁽²⁰⁾ a motion to recommit was offered, as follows:

MR. [JOHN M.] ASHBROOK [of Ohio]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

THE SPEAKER:⁽¹⁾ Is the gentleman opposed to the resolution?

²⁰ 122 CONG. REC. 8444, 94th Cong. 2d Sess.

MR. ASHBROOK: I am, Mr. Speaker.

THE SPEAKER: The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Ashbrook moves that House Resolution 1097 be recommitted to the Committee on House Administration with instructions that said committee forthwith report back to the House said resolution with the following amendment, to wit: on page 2, line 11 of the resolution add the following new sentence: "Not to exceed $300,000 of the total amount provided by this resolution shall be used to carry out activities within the jurisdiction of the Committee on the Judiciary under the provisions of rule X, clause (M) (19) of the Rules of the House of Representatives.

MR. ASHBROOK: Mr. Speaker, may I be recognized for 5 minutes?

THE SPEAKER: The rule regarding debate does not apply to a motion to recommit a resolution.

The question is on the motion to recommit.

Motions Relating to Nongermane Senate Amendments

§ 69.12 Where a Member opposed to a section of a conference report demanded a separate vote on the section pursuant to a special order permitting such procedure, that Member and the Member calling up the conference report were each recognized for 20 minutes of debate as required by Rule XX clause 1.

On Nov. 10, 1971,⁽²⁾ Mr. F. Edward Hébert, of Louisiana, called up a conference report. Speaker Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, stated that the special order under which the report was being considered, House Resolution 696, provided that a separate vote could be demanded on certain sections of the conference report. Mr. Donald M. Fraser, of Minnesota, demanded a separate vote on section 503 of the report pursuant to the special order and pursuant to Rule XX clause 1 of the House rules.

The Speaker then stated the order of recognition pending the separate vote:

Under clause 1 of rule XX, 40 minutes of debate are permitted before a separate vote is taken on a non-germane Senate amendment, one-half of such time in favor of, and one-half in opposition to the amendment.

Pursuant to that rule, the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. Hébert) will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. Fraser) will be recognized for 20 minutes.

Parliamentarian's Note: The provisions of clause 1, Rule XX with respect to debate on a motion to reject a nongermane portion of a conference report were transferred to clause 4, Rule XXVIII in the 92d Congress on Oct. 13, 1972.⁽³⁾

Motions To Suspend Rules

§ 69.13 Debate on a motion to suspend the rules is limited to 40 minutes, 20 minutes controlled by the mover and 20 minutes controlled by the Member demanding a second.

On June 30, 1959,⁽⁴⁾ Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, answered a parliamentary inquiry on the time and distribution of time for debate on a motion to suspend the rules:

THE SPEAKER: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Missouri.

MR. [CLARENCE] CANNON [of Missouri]: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state it.

MR. CANNON: Mr. Speaker, I am advised that the gentleman from New York [Mr. Taber] will demand a second on the motion to suspend the rules on the Temporary Appropriations Act of 1960. How will the time for debate be distributed under the circumstances?

THE SPEAKER: Twenty minutes on a side.

Parliamentarian's Note: The demand for a second on a motion to suspend the rules is no longer used.

§ 69.14 On a motion to suspend the rules and pass a bill with amendments there is 40 minutes of debate, 20 minutes on each side; the five-minute rule does not apply to such amendments, and amendments other than those included in the motion are not in order.

4. 105 CONG. REC. 12306, 86th Cong. 1st Sess.

On June 19, 1948,⁽⁵⁾ Mr. Harold Knutson, of Minnesota, moved to suspend the rules and pass a bill with committee amendments. Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., of Massachusetts, answered a parliamentary inquiry on the time for debate on the motion:

MR. [HERMAN P.] EBERHARTER [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state it.

MR. EBERHARTER: I notice the motion stated "permission to offer amendments." Am I correct?

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman misheard the request. The request was to suspend the rules and pass the bill with committee amendments.

MR. EBERHARTER: Does that allow those who oppose the amendments 5 minutes on each amendment?

THE SPEAKER: The rule provides for 20 minutes on each side. That is, the Republican side will have 20 minutes and the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. Doughton], who will demand a second, will have 20 minutes.

MR. EBERHARTER: Mr. Speaker, the only amendments that may be considered then are those that the committee acted upon?

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman is correct. The Clerk will report the bill.

§ 69.15 Where a Member moving to suspend the rules uses a portion of the 20 minutes available to him for debate, and then yields the "balance of his time" to another who does not, in fact, consume all the remaining time, the unused time reverts to the mover who may continue debate.

On Sept. 19, 1966,⁽⁶⁾ Mr. Adam C. Powell, of New York, moved to suspend the rules and pass a bill. He used part of the 20 minutes available to him under the rules and then yielded the "balance" of his time to Mr. James G. O'Hara, of Michigan. Mr. O'Hara delivered a short address, and Mr. Powell then yielded time to Mr. John H. Dent, of Pennsylvania. Mr. H. R. Gross, of Iowa, made a point of order that Mr. Powell had lost control of the floor, and Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, overruled the point of order:

MR. GROSS: Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the gentleman from New York [Mr. Powell] yielded his remaining time to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. O'Hara] and that he therefore cannot yield time.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Michigan consumed 3 minutes.

MR. GROSS: Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from New York yielded the remainder of his time to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. O'Hara].

MR. POWELL: Mr. Speaker, may I be heard?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will state, when that is done on either side, when a Member does not consume the remainder of the time, control of the remaining time reverts to the Member who has charge of the time.

MR. GROSS: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. GROSS: When the Member in charge of time yields the remainder of his time to another Member, Mr. Speaker, I would not know how he would then be able to yield time to any other Member.

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will rule that when the gentleman in control of time yields the remainder of his time to another Member, and the other Member does not use up all the time, then the remainder of the time comes back under the control of the Member who originally had control of the time.

MR. GROSS: Mr. Speaker, a further parliamentary inquiry.

How may a Member yield the remainder of his time and still control that time?

THE SPEAKER: Well, that is not a parliamentary inquiry, but the Chair will assume, just making an observation, that every Member in the House is aware that happens, and has happened frequently.

MR. GROSS: Mr. Speaker, a further parliamentary inquiry. Would that be in violation of the rules of the House?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair sees no violation of the rules under those circumstances, but a protection of the right for full debate.

§ 69.16 Debate on a motion to suspend the rules is limited to 20 minutes on a side so that if a portion of the time is used and the House then adjourns, the time begins to run on the next day the motion is in order at that point where it was terminated.

On Feb. 28, 1931,⁽⁷⁾ Mr. Thomas A. Jenkins, of Ohio, moved to suspend the rules and pass House Joint Resolution 500, further restricting immigration into the United States. Mr. Samuel Dickstein, of New York, demanded a second, the vote on the second was taken by tellers, and Mr. Fiorello H. LaGuardia, of New York, made a point of order that a quorum was not present. Speaker Nicholas Longworth, of Ohio, counted and stated that a quorum was present. The Speaker then answered parliamentary inquiries on the resumption of the consideration of the motion to suspend the rules should the House adjourn:

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from New York [Mr. Snell] asked if, when a second is ordered or a quorum is present, this matter would be unfinished business at the next meeting of the House. The Chair replies, "Yes." The Chair holds it would be unfinished business at the next meeting of the House, inasmuch as a second has been ordered, a quorum being present.

MR. [HENRY W.] TEMPLE [of Pennsylvania]: Mr. Speaker, if the House adjourns now, will the 20 minutes debate on each side begin where we left off tonight?

THE SPEAKER: It would. It would be in exactly the same position we are now.

Parliamentarian's Note: Ordinarily, a motion to suspend the rules pending at adjournment could not be resumed until the next regular day on which the motion was in order under Rule XXVII clause 1. However, the motion is in order at any time during the last six days of a session.

§ 69.17 Under a former practice, a member of the minority who was opposed to a bill considered under suspension of the rules had the right to recognition, over a majority Member opposed to the bill, to demand a second thereon and to control the 20 minutes of debate in opposition thereto.

On Nov. 17, 1980,⁽⁸⁾ the House had under consideration S. 885

(Pacific Northwest Electric Power Planning and Conservation Act of 1980) when the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [ABRAHAM] KAZEN [Jr., of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill (S. 885) to assist the electrical consumers of the Pacific Northwest through use of the Federal Columbia River Power System to achieve cost-effective energy conservation, to encourage the development of renewable energy resources, to establish a representative regional power planning process, to assure the region of an efficient and adequate power supply, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause of S. 885 and insert the text of H.R. 8157 as amended.

SHORT TITLE AND TABLE OF CONTENTS

Section 1. This Act, together with the following table of contents, may be cited as the "Pacific Northwest Electric Power Planning and Conservation Act". . . .

THE SPEAKER:⁽⁹⁾ Is a second demanded?

MR. [F. JAMES] SENSENBRENNER [Jr., of Wisconsin]: Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

MR. [JAMES] WEAVER [of Oregon]: Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Wisconsin from the minority is entitled to the second.

MR. WEAVER: Mr. Speaker, is the gentleman opposed to the bill? I am opposed to the bill.

9. Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr. (Mass.).

THE SPEAKER: Is the gentleman from Wisconsin opposed to the bill?

MR. SENSENBRENNER: I am opposed to the bill.

THE SPEAKER: Without objection, a second will be considered as ordered.

There was no objection.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman from Texas (Mr. Kazen) will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Sensenbrenner) will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Kazen).

Parliamentarian's Note: The demand for a second on a motion to suspend the rules is no longer used.

§ 69.18 By unanimous consent, debate was extended to one hour, to be equally divided by those controlling the time, on a motion to suspend the rules and agree to a conference report.

During consideration of the Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981 (H.R. 4242) in the House on Aug. 4, 1981,⁽¹⁰⁾ the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [DAN] ROSTENKOWSKI [of Illinois]: Madam Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the conference report on the bill (H.R. 4242) to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 to encourage economic growth through reductions in individual income tax rates, the expensing of depreciable property, incentives for small businesses, and incentives for savings, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the conference report. . . .

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Rostenkowski) will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Shannon) will be recognized for 20 minutes.

MR. ROSTENKOWSKI: Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that time for this debate be extended from 40 minutes to 1 hour, to be equally divided by those controlling the time.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Previous Question Ordered on Proposition Not Debated

§ 69.19 Forty minutes of debate is allowed wherever the previous question is ordered on a debatable proposition on which there has been no debate.

On June 8, 1943,⁽¹¹⁾ the House was considering Senate amendments reported from conference in disagreement on H.R. 2714, urgent deficiency appropriations. Mr. Clarence Cannon, of Missouri, offered a motion to concur in a Senate amendment with an amendment and moved the previous question on his motion. Mr. John Taber, of New York, attempted to demand a second on the motion for the previous question and Mr. Cannon stated:

Mr. Speaker, we have 20 minutes on a side. I have moved the previous question. Therefore, when the gentleman demands a second, we have 20 minutes on a side.

Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, responded:

The previous question must be ordered before any time at all is fixed.

The question is on the motion for the previous question.

The House then rejected the previous question on Mr. Cannon's motion to concur with an amendment, and Mr. Taber offered an amendment to Mr. Cannon's motion. The previous question was immediately ordered on Mr. Taber's amendment and the Speaker recognized Mr. Taber for 20 minutes and Mr. Cannon for 20 minutes on the amendment to the motion, pursuant to Rule XXVII clause 3.⁽¹²⁾

12. Rule XXVII clause 2, House Rules and Manual §907 (1995) provides that "whenever the previous question has been ordered on any proposition on which there has been no debate," it shall be in order "to debate the proposition to be voted upon for forty minutes, one-half of such time to be given to debate in favor of

§ 69.20 Where the previous question is ordered on a debatable motion without debate, a Member may demand the right to debate; and the 40 minutes permitted under the rule is divided between the person demanding the time and some Member who represents the opposing view of the question.

On Sept. 13, 1965,⁽¹³⁾ the previous question was ordered, without debate, on the motion to approve the Journal, as read. Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, stated, in response to a parliamentary inquiry by Mr. Durward G. Hall, of Missouri, that pursuant to Rule XXVII clause 3, any Member could demand the right to debate the motion since it was debatable and since the previous question had been ordered without debate. The Speaker recognized Mr. Hall for 20 minutes and then recognized a Member in opposition, Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, for 20 minutes.

§ 69.21 The right to recognition for 20 minutes of debate under Rule XXVII clause 3, does not apply unless the previous question has been ordered on a proposition on which there has been no debate.

On May 14, 1963,⁽¹⁴⁾ the House was considering Senate amendments reported from conference in disagreement. Mr. Albert Thomas, of Texas, moved that the House concur with an amendment to a certain Senate amendment and moved the previous question on that motion. Before the previous question was ordered, Speaker John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, indicated that the right to debate the motion for 40 minutes, 20 for and 20 against, only applied after the previous question was ordered.

—Before Adoption of Rules

§ 69.22 Prior to adoption of the rules, when the motion for the previous question is moved without debate, the 40 minutes' debate prescribed by House rules during the previous Congress does not apply.

On Jan. 7, 1959,⁽¹⁵⁾ at the convening of the 86th Congress and before the adoption of rules, Mr.

John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, offered House Resolution 1, a privileged resolution authorizing the Speaker to administer the oath of office to a challenged Member-elect and providing that the question of final right of the Member-elect to his seat be referred to the Committee on House Administration. Mr. McCormack moved the previous question on the resolution without any debate, and Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, answered a parliamentary inquiry on the effect of the previous question before the adoption of rules:

MR. [THOMAS P.] O'NEILL [Jr., of Massachusetts]: Mr. Speaker, may I make an inquiry on a point of parliamentary procedure.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state it.

MR. O'NEILL: Mr. Speaker, when the previous order has been moved and there is no debate, under the rules of the House are we not entitled to 40 minutes debate?

THE SPEAKER: Under the precedents, the 40-minute rule does not apply before the adoption of the rules.⁽¹⁶⁾

Nongermane Provision in Conference Report

§ 69.23 A motion to reject a portion of a conference report is in order immediately

16. See also 107 CONG. REC. 23–25, 87th Cong. 1st Sess., Jan. 3, 1961.

after the Speaker sustains a point of order that it would not have been germane if offered to the House bill, and is debatable for 40 minutes, 20 minutes for and 20 minutes against the motion.

On Sept. 11, 1973,⁽¹⁷⁾ Mr. Wayne L. Hays, of Ohio, called up the conference report on H.R. 7645, to authorize appropriations for the Department of State, and for other purposes. Before the statement of the managers was read, Mr. Gerald R. Ford, of Michigan, made a point of order against section 13 of the report on the ground that the section would not have been germane if offered in the House to the bill and was therefore subject to a point of order under Rule XXVIII clause 4.

Mr. Ford and Mr. Hays delivered arguments on the point of order, and Speaker Carl Albert, of Oklahoma, then ruled that the language objected to would not have been germane if offered to the House bill and sustained the point of order.

Mr. William S. Mailliard, of California, then offered, pursuant to Rule XXVIII clause 4, a motion to reject section 13 of the conference report. The Speaker recognized, under the rule, Mr.

Mailliard for 20 minutes in favor of the motion and Mr. Hays for 20 minutes in opposition to the motion.

§ 69.24 Pursuant to Rule XXVIII clause 4, where the Speaker sustains a point of order that a portion of a conference report containing a Senate amendment is not germane to the House bill, a motion to reject that portion of the conference report is in order and is subject to 40 minutes of debate.

For example, see the proceedings of Jan. 29, 1976, discussed in § 69.25, infra.

§ 69.25 Pursuant to Rule XXVIII clause 4, 40 minutes for debate on a motion to reject a nongermane portion of a conference report is equally divided between the proponent and an opponent of the motion to reject, and recognition is not based upon party affiliation; and the House conferee who has been recognized for 20 minutes in opposition to a motion to reject a nongermane portion of a conference report is entitled to close debate on the motion to reject.

and Transportation, consisted of one title relating to grants to state and local governments for local public works construction projects. A new title added by the Senate and contained in a conference report provided grants to state and local governments to assist them in providing public services. On Jan. 29, 1976,⁽¹⁸⁾ a point of order was made in the House, pursuant to Rule XXVIII clause 4, against the title added by the Senate. The title was held to be not germane, because it proposed a revenue-sharing program within the jurisdiction of the Committee on Government Operations, and because the approach taken in the Senate version was not closely related to the methods used to combat unemployment as delineated in the House bill.⁽¹⁹⁾ After the Speaker had ruled on the point of order, a motion was made:

MR. [JACK] BROOKS [of Texas]: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Brooks moves that the House reject title II of H.R. 5247, as reported by the committee of conference.

MR. BROOKS: Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

MR. [FRANK] HORTON [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

THE SPEAKER: The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

MR. HORTON: Mr. Speaker, my parliamentary inquiry is this: Do we have 20 minutes on the minority side?

THE SPEAKER: The Chair will state that the division of time is between those in favor and those opposed to the motion to reject title II. The gentleman from Alabama (Mr. Jones) has 20 minutes and the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Brooks) has 20 minutes.

MR. [JAMES C.] WRIGHT [Jr., of Texas, on behalf of Mr. Jones]: Mr. Speaker, I have one other speaker, the majority leader. I do not know what the courtesy is, or the appropriate protocol, in a matter of this kind.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair will rule that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. Wright] may close debate.⁽¹⁾ question, in the form of a motion offered by the manager of the conference report, is to recede from disagreement to the Senate amendment and concur with an amendment consisting of the remaining portions of the conference report not rejected on the separate vote, and one hour of debate, equally divided between the majority and minority parties, is permitted on that pending question.⁽²⁾

§ 69.26 Where the Chair sustains a point of order pursuant to clause 4 of Rule XXVIII, that a conference report contains a Senate provision which would not have been germane if offered in the House, it is in order to offer a motion to reject the matter covered by the point of order, which motion is debatable for 40 minutes, equally divided and controlled by those in favor of, and those opposed to, the motion.

House, the following proceedings occurred:

MR. [MARIO] BIAGGI [of New York]: Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H.R. 4310) to amend the Federal Boat Safety Act of 1971 to improve recreational boating safety and facilities through the development, administration, and financing of a national recreational boating safety and facilities improvement program, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE:⁽⁴⁾ Under the rule, the conference report is considered as read.

MR. [BILL] FRENZEL [of Minnesota]: Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order under clause 4 of rule XXVIII that title III of the conference report accompanying H.R. 4310 is a nongermane amendment.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 4310, as it passed the House, related to boating safety. It did not amend the Internal Revenue Code. Title III now in the conference report relates to a trust fund for reforestation and contains a significant amendment to the Internal Revenue Code. It would have been nongermane to H.R. 4310 when that bill was originally considered by the House. . . . I contend, Mr. Speaker, that title III should be ruled nongermane and considered in violation of clause 7 of rule XVI.

Mr. Speaker, I understand the point of order will not be contested.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York (Mr. Biaggi).

MR. BIAGGI: Mr. Speaker, we concede the point of order.

4. Thomas S. Foley (Wash.).

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The point of order is sustained.

MR. FRENZEL: Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Frenzel moves that the House reject title III of the conference report accompanying H.R. 4310.

THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE: The gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. Frenzel) will be recognized for 20 minutes, and the gentleman from New York (Mr. Biaggi) will be recognized for 20 minutes.

§ 70. Five-minute Debate in the House as in Committee of the Whole

In the House as in the Committee of the Whole, or the “quasi-committee” as it is sometimes termed, debate proceeds under the five-minute rule for amendment of the measure under consideration, without general debate.⁽⁵⁾

When a proposition is considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole by unanimous consent,⁽⁶⁾ Members may gain five

The procedure is discussed in Jefferson’s Manual, House Rules and Manual §§ 424–427 (1995) and is provided for in only one House rule—that providing for the consideration of omnibus private bills (see Rule XXIV clause 6, House Rules and Manual § 893 [1995]).

Where a private bill is considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole, Rule XXIV clause 6 requires that debate be strictly limited to the five-minute rule, without pro forma amendments, extensions of time, or reservations of objection.⁽⁸⁾

Debate in the House as in the Committee of the Whole may be closed by ordering the previous question,⁽⁹⁾ and it has been held in order in the House as in the Committee of the Whole to move to close debate on a pending section or amendment.⁽¹⁰⁾

Mr. Frank T. Bow, of Ohio, then propounded a parliamentary inquiry whether and when it would be in order to offer amendments. Speaker John W.
