

In addition to these signals, this volume also includes symbols to highlight two subjects to which participants in the process frequently refer: points of order and controlled time.

means that the text sets forth a point of order in the Senate. (As the number of possible points of order is nearly infinite, this volume does not mark all possible points of order.)

means that the text sets forth a procedure for controlled time in the Senate.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS AND DISCLAIMERS

The author of this volume has collected many of the precedents that appear here from the Rules database of the LEGIS computerized legislative information system available to Senate offices. Often the author has merely paraphrased the headnote of the Parliamentarian's notation of a precedent in that database. Consequently, this book owes much — if not all — to the Senate Parliamentarian, Alan Frumin (who wrote the lion's share of the entries in the Rules database), and his excellent and helpful staff, Assistant Parliamentarian Kevin Kayes, Second Assistant Parliamentarian Jim Weber, Third Assistant Parliamentarian Beth Smerko, and Executive Assistant Sally Goffinet. The author owes particular thanks to former Assistant Parliamentarian and former Counsel to the Senate Budget Committee Gail Del Balzo, now of the Congressional Budget Office. Thanks are due, too, to former Parliamentarian Bob Dove, now of the Republican Leader's Office and former Third Assistant Parliamentarian Jennifer Smith, now Counsel to the House Budget Committee.

The Budget Committee, under the leadership of Chairman Jim Sasser of Tennessee, its Staff Director Larry Stein, and its former Deputy Staff Director John Callahan, now Chief of Staff to Senator Sasser, has provided the impetus, direction, and guidance necessary to the production of this volume. The Senate Budget Committee's Legal Group, Counsel

Agnes Bundy and Staff Assistant Nell Mays, as well as Assistant to the Deputy Director Louise Echols, former Legal Interns Michael Higginbotham, Doug Kilday, and Alex Rogers, former Legal Aide Rita Graf, former Staff Assistants Jackie King and Kelly Hines, and Buck White and Alex Green of the Senate Budget Committee Publications Department provided invaluable technical support in the production of this volume. The author owes thanks, as well, to former Senate Budget Committee Staff Directors Rick Brandon, Steve Bell, and John Hilley, former Chief Counsel Nell Payne, former Republican Assistant Staff Director Carol Hartwell, and Republican Director of Budget Process Austin Smythe for their input.

Bob Keith and Sandy Davis of the Congressional Research Service, Tom Armstrong of the General Accounting Office, and Jack Conway of the Senate Appropriations Committee also provided valuable component parts of this volume.

Although the author has imposed on each of these people named above for material for this volume and for help in its writing, none bears responsibility for its content. The annotations included here do not necessarily reflect the views of the Senate Budget Committee or of anyone other than the author, although, as do most authors, the author does hope that others will share the views expressed here.

The author would be remiss not to thank his dear spouse Ellen Weintraub for her patience in putting up with endless discussions of this volume. Finally, the author owes a debt to Martin Gardner, whose work¹² has undoubtedly inspired many an annotation, and perhaps a few laws.

W.G.D.

¹² M. GARDNER, THE ANNOTATED ALICE: ALICE'S ADVENTURES IN WONDERLAND & THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS (1960).