PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The appropriation estimate for the fiscal year 1957 reflects an increase of $165,000, including $128,000 for salary increases.

1. Processing deposits of withheld tax payments.—Employers and business enterprises make monthly deposits of excise and withheld income and social-security taxes to the credit of the Treasurer of the United States with designated banks. The Federal Reserve banks, acting as fiscal agents of the Treasury, issue depositary receipts which the employers attach to their returns as evidence of payment of taxes. The proportionate share of the expense relating to the issuance and verification of these receipts is charged against the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund. The work volume is estimated at 7,800,000 depositary receipts in the fiscal years 1956 and 1957 which is an increase of 11.7 percent over 1955.

2. Financial reporting and maintenance of the Government's central accounts.—Central accounts include control accounts on appropriations, receipts, and expenditures and provide data for financial statements. This activity also includes the preparation and publication of financial reports on the Government's fiscal operations, such as the annual Combined Statement of Receipts, Expenditures, and Balances; the Monthly Treasury Statement; the Secretary's Annual Report and the Treasury Bulletin. The volume of accounting items is estimated at 5,070,500 for the fiscal years 1956 and 1957 as compared with 5,069,106 in 1955.

3. Accounting and reporting development and internal audit.—Technical accounting advice and assistance are furnished all bureaus and offices of the Treasury. In addition, staff participates in the governmentwide accounting improvement program. This activity also includes internal audit in the Bureau and coordination of Treasury fiscal internal audit.

4. Processing investments, loans, claims, collections, and surety bonds.—Investments in interest-bearing securities are processed for such funds as the Federal old-age and survivors trust fund, the unemployment trust fund, the veterans insurance trust fund, and various Government retirement funds. The work includes purchase and disposal of securities, processing capital stock subscriptions of Government corporations, payment of international and other claims and examination of the financial condition of companies issuing surety bonds in favor of the United States. The number of transactions is estimated at 207,365 for the fiscal year 1956 and 208,025 for the fiscal year 1957 as compared with 205,841 for 1955.

5. Supervision of the Federal depositary system.—Banking facilities are provided for all agencies of the Government through the designation of selected institutions to act as official depositaries of the Government's funds. Workload is expected to increase in 1957 as follows:

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The division, through its Washington and regional offices, makes payments for civilian Federal agencies, except the Post Office Department and certain Government corporations; and issues savings bonds for Federal employees under the payroll savings plan. The division also makes payments for certain agencies and corporations on a reimbursable basis.

The increase in the fiscal year 1957 is due to authorized salary increases and an increase of 11.4 million payments over the number to be processed in the fiscal year 1956. The major part of the increase in work volume, 10.6 million, is due to increased benefit payments for the Social Security Administration.

The funds required are determined by multiplying the volume of work or the number of units to be processed by the unit cost per item as shown in the following tables. The unit cost for the fiscal years 1956 and 1957 includes salary increases on a full year basis, whereas the unit cost for the fiscal year 1955 only includes salary increases for 3½ months.

4. Refining gold and silver bullion.—Gold and silver bullion are refined in order to facilitate accountability, protection, and storage; and to bring the bullion up to a degree of purity suitable for use in the world markets. Charges are made against depositors of gold and silver for refinery services, but receipts are not available for payment of refining costs. During fiscal year 1955, $124,448 were deposited to miscellaneous receipts.

6. Equipment acquisitions.—These acquisitions are ordinarily for normal replacement. However, the 1956 acquisitions also include equipment necessary to modernize the Philadelphia Mint.

Relation of costs to obligations.—The increase or decrease (−) in selected resources available for application to future activity costs is derived from account balances in the table below:

| Increase or decrease (−) in selected resources available for future application to activity costs | | 430,677 | −404,814 | |

The increase in selected resources for 1955 was due to the purchase of copper contained in silver being returned by the Netherlands Government, undelivered equipment orders, and uncollected reimbursements. Delivery of the equipment and collection of the reimbursements will result in a decrease for 1956.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The Coast Guard enforces maritime law, provides limited security of ports and waterfront facilities, saves life and property, provides navigational aids to maritime commerce in navigable waters, promotes the safety of the American merchant marine, and maintains its military readiness to serve as a part of the Navy in time of war or national emergency.

1. Vessel operations.—Multifunctional vessels are strategically stationed along the coasts and inland waterways for search and rescue; tending aids to navigation; operating an international ice observation and patrol service in the North Atlantic Ocean; performing limited ice breaking in navigable lakes, rivers, canals, and in harbors; and for law enforcement. The same number of vessels will be operated in 1957 as in 1956. As in 1956, the equivalent of 18 cutters will operate at 6 ocean stations financed by a $16,240,000 reimbursement from the Department of Defense. These vessels will continue to perform the dual functions of ocean station duty and search and rescue.

| Ocean stations operated | 6 | 6 | 6 |

2. Aviation operations.—Aircraft are maintained at air stations and detachments for search and rescue; logistic work in isolated areas; Federal law enforcement; and aerial reconnaissance for the international ice patrol. The 1957 program includes the same number of aviation facilities as in 1956; however, two additional aircraft will be operated to furnish logistic support for seven loran stations, being constructed to meet defense requirements.

| Cargo (ton-miles) | 722,937 | 725,000 | 750,000 |

3. Shore stations and aids operations.—Bases and lifeboat stations are strategically situated for search, rescue, and law enforcement and for maintaining aids to navigation. Port security units patrol major harbor entrances; control anchorage areas; supervise the loading and unloading of dangerous cargoes; and screen merchant seamen and longshoremen to keep subversive elements from merchant vessels and critical waterfront areas. Critical waterfront areas have been patrolled since inauguration of the port security program in 1951.

Buoys, lighthouses, lightships, fog signal stations, radiobeacons, and loran stations are maintained as navigational aids in the waters of the United States, its Territories and military bases overseas. Radio stations provide rapid communication incident to all Coast Guard operations. Marine inspection offices and detachments administer laws and issue regulations on safety equipment and inspection of merchant vessels, and on licensing and certification of merchant marine officers and crews. They review plans for construction or alteration of merchant vessels, investigate marine accidents, and hear disciplinary cases.

Operating costs for 10 additional loran stations are included in the budget for 1957. Three loran stations in the Gulf of Mexico have been acquired from the Air Force, and seven are being constructed during 1956 with funds provided by the Department of Defense.

4. Repair and supply facilities.—Repair and supply facilities are maintained at strategic points for support of Coast Guard operating units. Also, two facilities are maintained for testing, developing, or adapting materiel for safer and more effective Coast Guard marine use. As a result of reorganization of supply facilities, one supply depot has been eliminated in 1956. No significant changes are anticipated during 1957.

5. Training and recruiting facilities.—Under this activity are included the Coast Guard Academy for training of cadets and officer candidates, the training units for recruits and prospective petty officers, outside training programs and recruiting stations.

6. Administration and operational control.—In addition to ordinary executive direction, this activity provides for internal auditing and inspection, administrative services to operating units, district and area offices, and regional inspection offices, along with personnel assigned to liaison with other agencies.

7. Other military personnel expenses.—This activity provides for certain military personnel expenses such as the pay of personnel in hospitals and in transit; expenses of permanent changes of stations, including travel of dependents and transportation of household effects; and expenses of military separation cost, recreation, death gratuities, and burial.

8. Supporting programs.—This activity consists of programs for procurement of ammunition and maintenance of ordnance; vehicle, boat, and electronic equipment replacement; transportation of materials; and printing. All of these programs have such general applicability that they cannot readily be charged directly to units.

REVOLVING AND MANAGEMENT FUNDS

PUBLIC ENTERPRISE FUNDS

The following corporations and agencies, respectively, are hereby authorized to make such expenditures, within the limits of funds and borrowing authority available to each such corporation or agency and in accord with law, and to make such contracts and commitments without regard to fiscal year limitations as provided by section 104 of the Government Corporation Control Act, as amended, as may be necessary in carrying out the programs set forth in the Budget for the fiscal year [1956] 1957 for each such corporation or agency, except as hereinafter provided: (Treasury-Post Office Appropriation Act, 1956.)

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY

FEDERAL FACILITIES CORPORATION

Federal Facilities Corporation Fund

The Federal Facilities Corporation, created on June 30, 1954, under the provisions of the Rubber Act of 1948, and Executive Order 10539, assumed responsibility for the synthetic rubber and tin programs formerly operated by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. The Corporation is under the control and direction of the Secretary of the Treasury.

The primary purpose in organizing the Federal Facilities Corporation was to administer the operation of the Government-owned synthetic rubber facilities until the disposal of the properties was completed according to the provisions of the Rubber Producing Facilities Disposal Act. In addition, the Corporation is responsible for the operation of the Government's tin program while ultimate disposition of the program is being reviewed.

The operations are financed with funds arising from the synthetic rubber and tin programs. To the extent that funds realized from these programs exceed requirements, they are deposited in the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

ANALYSIS OF BUDGET PROGRAMS

Synthetic rubber.—Under the program of the Rubber Producing Facilities Disposal Commission, all of the synthetic rubber plants, except one at Baytown, Tex., and one at Institute, W. Va., were transferred to private ownership in April 1955. The Baytown plant was transferred in July 1955; the Institute plant is expected to be sold in 1956. There also remains under Government ownership one alcohol butadiene plant which has been leased to a private operator for a 3-year period.

The remaining activities programed include (1) administration of the national security provisions of the contracts under which the synthetic rubber plants were sold, (2) servicing of the purchase money mortgages acquired in the sale of the synthetic rubber plants, (3) administration of leased properties, and (4) winding up general matters arising out of the Government's operation of the synthetic rubber program.

Tin.—Authority for operation of the Government-owned tin smelter at Texas City, Tex., expires on June 30, 1956 (Joint Resolution approved June 28, 1947, as amended). In Senate Concurrent Resolution 26 the President was requested to conduct a study and investigation for the purpose of recommending the most feasible methods of maintaining a permanent domestic tin-smelting industry. The President's report and recommendations on this matter are to be made to the Congress prior to March 31, 1956.

The budget provides for operation of the tin smelter by the Government only until June 30, 1956.

ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES

Administrative expenses consist of salaries and related costs of personnel engaged in the supervision and control of the Corporation's programs, together with rental costs of office space. A limitation of $975,000 for administrative expenses has been authorized for 1956. For 1957, a limitation of $250,000 is requested.

FINANCING OPERATIONS

In 1955, the Corporation turned over to the Treasury the sum of $390 million. Included in this amount was $265,156,975 paid in cash by purchasers of the synthetic rubber plants. The balance of the $390 million consisted of amounts realized from operation of the synthetic rubber plants under Government ownership. Including amounts estimated to be received from the sale of the Institute plant, and from payments on purchase money mortgages, it is anticipated that $55 million will be turned over to Treasury in 1956, and $1.2 million in 1957, thereby reducing the equity of the Treasury to $38,681,969 as of June 30, 1957.

LIQUIDATION OF RECONSTRUCTION FINANCE CORPORATION

The Secretary of the Treasury is responsible for completing the liquidation of RFC, as provided by the RFC Act, as amended. The programs being liquidated include the following: (a) the assets acquired under RFC's former lending programs, exclusive of assets transferred to other agencies in accordance with the RFC Liquidation Act and Reorganization Plan No. 2 of 1954, (b) certain assets acquired by RFC in its World War II activities, and (c) the assets of the Smaller War Plants Corporation.

Effect on budget expenditures.—The net budgetary effects anticipated from liquidation of the RFC programs in 1956 and 1957 are as follows:

| | 1956 estimate | 1957 estimate |
|---|---|---|
| Liquidation of lending program | −$154,891,151 | −$16,425,000 |

PROGRAM HIGHLIGHTS

|---|---|---|---|
| Outstanding at end of year: | | | |
| Loans and investments (at cost) | $228.8 | $74.0 | $57.7 |
| Commitments | 21.9 | 20.8 | 14.5 |

Analysis of budget program.—The progress made and anticipated in the liquidation of RFC loans and commitments is shown in the following table. Excluded from the table are loans and commitments transferred to other agencies in accordance with the RFC Liquidation Act and Reorganization Plan No. 2 of 1954, and commitments to participate in bank loans on a deferred basis.

|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Loans to business enterprises | $395.5 | $183.8 | $149.6 | $40.2 | $34.4 |
| Equity in business loan pool | | 26.2 | 20.1 | 17.1 | 7.9 |

| Total | 592.2 | 284.6 | 232.1 | 74.8 | 58.4 |

Administrative expenses.—A limitation of $1.4 million was placed on administrative expenses for 1956. Due to the pay increase authorized by Public Law 94, 84th Congress, it is anticipated that an increase in the limitation will be requested in the sum of $85,000. Thus $1,485,000 is the amount comparable to the limitation of $1,060,000 requested for 1957. The reduction in the amount of the limitation requested is due to the smaller workload anticipated as further progress is made in liquidating the Corporation's assets.

Financing operations.—The former lending activities of RFC were financed from (a) $100 million of capital stock issued to and held by the Secretary of the Treasury, (b) retained earnings to the extent of $250 million (after reasonable reserves for losses), and (c) borrowings from the Treasury as needed.

On June 30, 1955, the capitalization of RFC included the $100 million of capital stock and retained earnings of $163,216,742. All borrowings from Treasury were repaid in 1955.

It is anticipated that payment of liquidation proceeds to the Treasury will amount to $188,754,741 in 1956, and $26,425,000 in 1957. After these payments, the capitalization of RFC at the close of 1957 will consist solely of $54,157,001 of capital stock.

LIQUIDATION OF WORLD WAR II ASSETS

The liquidation of the World War II assets is being carried out under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury.

On June 30, 1955, the total assets to be liquidated amounted to $20.4 million, and it is estimated that the value of the unliquidated assets will have been reduced to $12.5 million by June 30, 1956, and to $8.9 million by June 30, 1957.

The administrative expenses of liquidating the remaining World War II assets are estimated to be $81,000 in 1956 and $41,000 in 1957.

To the extent that funds realized from the liquidation of World War II assets exceed requirements of the program, they are paid into the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts. It is estimated that payment of $17.9 million and $5.8 million will be made in 1956 and 1957, respectively, thereby reducing the equity of Treasury to $17.7 million.

CIVIL DEFENSE LOANS

Civil Defense Program Fund, Treasury

The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to purchase securities or make loans (including participations therein and guaranties thereof) to aid in financing projects for civil-defense purposes upon certification by the Federal Civil Defense Administrator (sec. 409, Federal Civil Defense Act and sec. 104, RFC Liquidation Act). Investments under the program are limited to a total of $250 million outstanding at any one time. The activities authorized are financed by borrowings from the Treasury.

Analysis of program.—Loans outstanding on June 30, 1955, amounted to $2,264,195, and undisbursed commitments totaled $4.4 million. Included in the undisbursed commitments is $1.8 million representing agreements to participate on a deferred basis in loans made by banks. All authorizations have been to assist in financing construction of hospitals.

It is anticipated that there will be no additional loans authorized during 1956 and 1957. To the extent possible, outstanding loans and commitments will be placed with private financial institutions. There are no loan disbursements anticipated for 1956 and 1957. Repayments are estimated at $1,309,195 and $90,000 for 1956 and 1957, respectively.

Financing operations.—Borrowings from the Treasury amounted to $2.3 million at the end of 1955. Repayments are expected to reduce outstanding borrowings to $870,000 and $758,000 at the end of 1956 and 1957, respectively.

Operating results.—Income from interest and fees exceeded expenses by $34,700 in 1955. Net income for 1956 and 1957 is estimated at $56,000 and $32,000, respectively. Accumulated net earnings are expected to reach $152,137 on June 30, 1957.

BUREAU OF ACCOUNTS

Fund for Payment of Government Losses in Shipment

S. C. 134).

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing designs, manufactures, and supplies all major evidences of a financial character issued by the United States. It is the sole source of United States currency and Federal Reserve notes, certificates of indebtedness, and United States bonds, as well as most of the minor evidences of a financial character issued by the United States, such as, postage, internal revenue, customs, and savings stamps. In addition, the Bureau prints checks, commissions, certificates, permits, warrants, etc. The Bureau also prints bonds, postage, and internal revenue stamps for the governments of insular possessions.

The Bureau finances its operations out of reimbursements from appropriations of other agencies for all direct and indirect costs, including administrative expenses (31 U. S. C. 181–181e).

ANALYSIS OF BUDGET PROGRAM

The anticipated work volume is based on estimates of requirements submitted by the agencies served. The program comprises the following activities:

1. Engraving and printing—(a) Currency.—It is anticipated that deliveries in 1956 and 1957 will be approximately 15 percent less than those in 1955.

(b) Stamps.—The estimated production requirements in 1956 and 1957 reflect an increase of 1 percent and 6 percent respectively over the 1955 requirements.

(c) Paper checks, commissions, certificates, etc.—Overall, the production is estimated to increase approximately 5 percent in 1956, and decrease approximately 6 percent in 1957, as compared with 1955. The anticipated decrease in production of paper checks in 1956 and 1957, due primarily to the gradual increase in the use of checks in punchcard form, is more than offset in 1956 and to a great extent in 1957 by an increase in requests for commissions, certificates, etc.

(d) Securities.—The anticipated production in 1956 and 1957 is approximately the same as that produced in 1955, with the exception of postal savings certificates which will no longer be produced by the Bureau.

2. Operation and maintenance of the incinerator and space utilized by other agencies.—Charges are made to other agencies, on an actual cost basis, for use of the incinerator and for the cost of maintenance services provided for the space which they occupy in the Bureau's buildings.

3. Card checks.—Purchases of punchcard check forms are made from a commercial source, based on estimated requirements submitted by agencies served.

OPERATING RESULTS AND FINANCIAL CONDITION

Although the fund sustained a small loss in 1955, this operation is maintained on a break-even basis. The level of operations is expected to remain relatively constant in 1956 and 1957. Budget receipts are expected to exceed budget expenditures in the amount of $228,854 in 1957.

The capital of the fund is expected to remain at $25.3 million, represented by an appropriation of $3.3 million and donated assets of $22 million.

Coast Guard Supply Fund

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Stocks of general stores, uniform clothing, and commissary supplies are procured under this revolving fund (14 U. S. C. 650), which is reimbursed as issues are made. During 1956 and 1957 it is estimated that receipts from sales will be entirely offset by cost of goods sold.

The capital of this fund is expected to remain through June 30, 1957, at $5,982,299, representing paid-in capital of $5,888,402 and retained earnings of $93,897.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

This fund finances industrial operations at the Coast Guard Yard, Curtis Bay, Md., which consist principally of vessel construction, repair and alterations; small boat construction and repair; buoy fabrication; electronics maintenance; and fabrication of special items (14 U. S. C. 648). Costs are recovered through charges for work performed.

For 1957, operations are expected to continue at the same level as in 1956. Retained earnings of $266,110 on June 30, 1955, are not expected to vary through 1957.

It is estimated that the principal of the fund will be $8,951,336 on June 30, 1957. This figure consists of donated assets, and represents a slight decrease from 1955 due to depreciation not recoverable from operations.

EXPLANATORY STATEMENT

The District of Columbia constitutes a political entity in which are exercised not only municipal but also county and State functions, such as public education, administration of justice, promotion of family welfare, care of the indigent, custody of mental defectives and delinquents, protection of the interests of labor, metropolitan area planning, etc.

Congress is empowered "to exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever" on behalf of the District of Columbia as the seat of government of the United States. Congress acts in municipal matters as a city council, and in dealing with the broader aspects of the local government, as a county board and a State legislature. In this connection, Congress enacts measures to provide revenues from residents of the District and appropriates the money thus raised to carry on the government of the District of Columbia. District revenues from all sources are covered into the United States Treasury and credited either to the general fund, the highway fund, the water fund, the sanitary sewage works fund, the motor vehicle parking fund, or a trust fund, and no expenditure can be made from any of these funds, other than trust funds, without specific appropriation by Congress.

Under the law, the District estimates of appropriation are submitted to the Bureau of the Budget for incorporation in the Budget of the United States. The Bureau, however, does not examine the estimates of the District in minute detail, but confines its attention more to matters of policy which concern the Federal Government and present and proposed local revenue measures required to balance the District budget.

The detailed estimates for 1957 include partial requests for the third year of the public-works program. This construction program will extend over a 10-year period ending in 1964 and will provide increased water supply, sewers, highways and bridges, schools, hospitals, and other buildings. The method of financing the balance of the year's work under this program will be explained under the segment of this statement pertaining to proposed legislation for the general fund.

The estimates of revenues for the general, highway, water, sanitary-sewage works, motor-vehicle parking, and trust funds are found in supporting statement No. 1. Estimates of obligations for the same funds are shown in supporting statement No. 2. Attention is also directed to the summary of operations table at the beginning of this section.

GENERAL FUND

Revenues accruing to the general fund of the District of Columbia are used to finance the administrative offices, retirement funds, schools, libraries, police, fire, health, recreation, welfare, corrections, sanitation, public buildings construction, and other activities. These revenues are realized from real, personal, and other property taxes; sales and gross receipts taxes on alcoholic beverages, cigarettes, insurance, motor vehicles, public utilities, gross sales, and other sources; licenses and permits; individual, unincorporated business, and corporation income taxes; inheritance and estate taxes; certain earnings and miscellaneous revenues; and the Federal payment. The largest item of revenue in the general fund comes from realty and personal property taxes, and amounts to approximately 42 percent of the total revenues from current legislation. The levy is based on an estimated assessed valuation of $2,237 million taxed at the rate of $2.20 per $100 for realty and $2 per $100 for personal property. The estimated valuation is $44 million higher in 1957 than for the current year.

Out of current legislation.—Although the total funds required for the general fund in 1957 amount to $150,181,091, there is available only $140,101,231 from current legislation. This latter amount is the basis for the submission of the detailed items included in this document.

General-fund estimates of appropriation for 1957, based on current legislation, are $138,259,891 and show an overall decrease of $3,530,977 (approximately 2.5 percent). This decrease results from an increase in operating expenses of $3,974,023 and a decrease in capital outlay of $7,505,000. The increase in operating expenses, amounting to about 3 percent, results largely from increased retirement costs, staffing of new buildings, increased workload, and additional costs of materials. The only capital outlay items included are for debt service, school construction, and electrical improvements.

Out of proposed legislation.—Because revenue availability permits only the foregoing estimates, the Commissioners propose to submit legislation to modify the present tax structure of the District of Columbia and to provide other revenue increases. It is estimated that these changes, if enacted as requested, will produce $10,130,000 in the fiscal year 1957.

Subsequent to the passage of this legislation, there are proposed to be submitted additional capital outlay items, payable from the general fund, amounting to $13,215,500. Of this amount $4,085,500 will be financed in 1958, leaving a fund requirement of $9,130,000. In addition, the customary reserve for supplementals of $1 million will be available. The major items in this program proposed for later transmittal will be a new firehouse, hospital buildings, welfare institutions, recreation improvements, correctional buildings, and storm-water sewers.

HIGHWAY FUND

Highway-fund revenues are realized from a gasoline tax, part of the automotive registration and weight tax, motor-vehicle fees of various types, and paving assessments. The estimated revenues from these sources for 1957, including available surplus and a Federal loan of $5.4 million, total $23,058,421 which is $9,796 in excess of the amount of the estimated obligations.

Estimates of appropriation chargeable to the highway fund for 1957 show an overall increase of 12 percent over the 1956 estimates. The increase is largely reflected in increases in capital outlay in the Department of Highways.

WATER FUND

Water-fund revenues are derived from the sale of water to residents of the District of Columbia, to Arlington County, Va., and to the Federal Government; and from miscellaneous receipts. The total revenue availability in the water fund, including Federal loans of $5.3 million, amounts to $13,868,547, which will be $26,329 in excess of the estimated obligations for 1957.

The estimates of appropriation for the water fund for 1957 amount to $13,842,218 which is an increase of $3,272,447 over the 1956 estimates (approximately 30 percent). This will permit an increase in the capital expenditures for the water distribution system.

SANITARY SEWAGE WORKS FUND

Revenues accrue to this fund from a charge based on the amount of water used by both private consumers and the Federal Government. There will also be an assessment for installation of sanitary sewers and payments from the State of Maryland. This total revenue availability will amount to $6,138,266, which leaves a surplus of $8,805. This will be an increase of $2,817,866 over 1956, and will be used primarily to combat river pollution.

MOTOR-VEHICLE PARKING FUND

This fund is derived from parking-meter receipts and is used to pay the administrative expenses of that agency and is available for the acquisition, creation, and operation of public off-street parking facilities as a necessary incident to insuring in the public interest the free circulation of traffic in and through the District. An increase of $3,067 is requested for 1957. It is estimated that the surplus at the end of 1957 will amount to $1,146,184.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

1. Juvenile Court.—The court has exclusive jurisdiction in matters involving dependent and delinquent children, and has concurrent jurisdiction with the United States District Court in matters of support of legitimate family members in destitute circumstances. The court secures for each child under its jurisdiction such care and guidance, preferably in his own home, as will serve the child's welfare and the best interests of the community. In addition, it has jurisdiction in matters involving children born out of wedlock, labor laws and matters contributing to the delinquency of minors. The 1957 budget provides for an anticipated 23 percent increase in workload.

2. Municipal Court.—The court has original jurisdiction concurrently with the United States District Court with respect to violations of municipal ordinances, and crimes and offenses not punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary, except libel, conspiracy, and violations of the post office and pension laws of the United States. It has exclusive jurisdiction of civil actions, including counterclaims and cross-claims, in which the claimed value of personal property or the debt or damages claimed does not exceed $3,000. It also provides for operation of Central Violations Bureau.

3. Municipal Court of Appeals.—Appeals from the municipal and juvenile courts are reviewed and decided. Miscellaneous order and decisions of various District of Columbia administrative agencies are also considered. Appeals under the Motor Vehicle Safety Responsibility Act are also heard. During the fiscal year 1955, 167 appeals were considered and terminated, and approximately 500 motions were disposed.

4. District of Columbia Tax Court.—Appeals from assessments made by the taxing authority of the District of Columbia are heard and decided. During the fiscal year 1955 the court disposed of 36 appeals, of which 14 involved inheritance taxes, 3 real estate taxes, 7 personal property taxes, 9 franchise and income taxes, 1 excise tax, and 2 sales and use taxes.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Facilitation of motor-vehicle parking.—Reports and recommendations are made relating to off-street parking facilities, municipal parking areas, and development by private enterprise of additional off-street parking facilities It is also the responsibility of this agency to conduct continuing surveys and analyses of the program's operations and results for use in determining needs for future facilities in the Washington metropolitan area. During 1956, 3,020 spaces will be added by private enterprise in the central business district. The agency in 1956 will provide 747 parking spaces in the fringe area and 187 metered off-street parking spaces in an outlying section not served by commercial parking lots. The two activities will provide a total increase for 1956 of 3,954 spaces.

In 1957 private enterprise will provide 3,050 additional parking spaces in the central business district, with the agency adding 550 in the fringe areas for a total of 3,600 spaces. Motorist parking in the fringe areas would board express buses to the downtown area.

The program objective and accomplishment implement the Motor Vehicle Parking Act of 1942, and serve to reduce congestion on streets, expedite the movement of people, including transit vehicles, strengthen economic stability of the community, and delay blight and decentralization.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The Washington Aqueduct, under the control of the Chief of Engineers, Department of the Army, provides an adequate supply of purified water to the District of Columbia, Arlington County, and Falls Church, Va., and for certain Federal establishments in the adjacent environs.

1. Administration.—Covers executive direction and administrative and management services, including warehousing and issuance of supplies, civil defense, custodial services, legal and personnel services, protective security, policymaking, and preparation and justification of budgetary estimates.

2. Purification.—During 1955 there were processed, purified, and fluoridated 59.71 billion gallons of water through two filtration plants and 5,170 tons of alum sirup were manufactured. A total of 8,707 tons of chemicals were applied, including 479 tons of sodium silicofluoride. Quality control was maintained, including 100,000 laboratory examinations for chemical, bacteriological, and fluorine content of approximately 20,000 water samples collected from 115 sampling points.

3. Pumping.—Water is pumped from the Potomac River for processing through the Dalecarlia and McMillan filter plants, and to the distribution system. Total energy consumed in 1955 was 34,812,600 kilowatt-hours, of which 3,425,600 kilowatt-hours were generated by the hydro station and 31,387,000 kilowatt-hours were purchased. Demand requirements were 62,934 kilowatts.

4. Transmission.—Approximately 12 miles of force mains transmit water to five underground water-service reservoirs for storage and subsequent distribution to the District of Columbia, Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission in Maryland, Falls Church and Arlington County, Va., systems.

5. Maintenance.—In 1955, 156,538 man-hours were used for normal operating repairs to plant and 27,502 man-hours for normal plant betterments. Twenty-three plant pumping units and 119 pieces of mobile equipment and 76 pieces of portable equipment of various types were maintained.

6. Collection.—Water collection is accomplished by the operation of intake works for the removal of ice and debris on the Potomac River at Great Falls, 14 miles from the city, and transmission of the raw water through conduits and receiving reservoir to the purification system.

7. Construction.—The water supply system plant expansion program, period (1950–70), includes force account and contract construction of capital outlay and miscellaneous betterment projects. During fiscal years 1956 and 1957, construction work will be in progress on the third high service transmission main, Dalecarlia pumping station, Little Falls pumping station, dam and tunnel, McMillan chemical building, shops and storehouses, flocculation-sedimentation basin at Dalecarlia, and the third high service reservoir at Reno (first half).

8. Engineering.—Prepares reports, designs, specifications, and project cost estimates and supervises architect-engineer services, in conformance with increased water supply system expansion program contained in House

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

All capital outlay construction is in accord with the public works program.

1. Water distribution.—In addition to the necessary extensions of the water distribution system for new building and in advance of paving, major trunk water main construction to relieve and supplement the existing system will be continued through the starting of a major reinforcement of the central city area. Water storage facilities for the central city and Anacostia supply would also be continued to completion.

2. Sewage disposal—(a) Sewers.—Sanitary sewer extensions are planned as required by new developments and in advance of paving to convey all sewage to a point of safe discharge. The relief of trunk and intercepting sewers which have become inadequate is part of the sanitary sewer program.

(b) Sewage treatment plant.—Additions to the plant are programed to continue construction of secondary treatment units in order to reduce the pollution of the Potomac in the metropolitan area. The funds requested will complete the second half of these plant facilities.

3. Storm drainage.—The stormwater sewer system in the District is severely overtaxed and entirely lacking in some areas. This program attacks the weakest points each year to bring the eventual solution somewhat closer. Ultimate relief will be reached only after many years of continuous effort and expenditure.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Current funds and present estimates are in accord with the furtherance of Washington Aqueduct future water supply, construction program, as set forth in House Document No. 480, 79th Congress, 2d session.

1. Water collection.—The average daily discharge of the Potomac River at the water supply intakes is 7,500 million gallons. Present raw-water intake sustained capacity approximates 216 million gallons daily. Initially, the Little Falls pumping station, dam and tunnel will increase plant raw-water intake sustained capacity by 350 million gallons daily and ultimately by 500 million gallons daily.

2. Water purification.—The filtration plant sustained capacities at present are as follows: McMillan, 125 million gallons daily and Dalecarlia, 109 million gallons daily. The new Dalecarlia filter and chemical buildings will increase the filtering capacity of Dalecarlia by 56 million gallons daily, thereby increasing total plant water production capacity from 234 million gallons daily to 290 million gallons daily.

3. Water storage.—Existing filtered water storage capacity is 80 million gallons which results in a 48 million gallons daily working capacity. Completion of the third high reservoir at Reno (first half) and placing in service the 30 million gallon reservoir at Dalecarlia will increase the filtered water storage capacity to 130 million gallons and the working capacity to 70 million gallons daily.

4. Water transmission.—Includes two main pumping stations at Dalecarlia and McMillan, the booster pumps at Dalecarlia, Georgetown, McMillan east shaft, and the hydroelectric plant. Also included is the transmission of potable water in force mains to various service reservoirs in the District of Columbia and to Arlington County, Va., and the installation of meters to gage water consumption by the Federal Government.

5. Acquisition of land.—The safeguarding of Washington Aqueduct facilities requires the acquisition of essential land parcels.

INTRODUCTION TO PART III

Part III of the budget contains summary tables on trust and deposit funds, and detailed schedules and explanatory statements on the various trust funds.

TRUST AND DEPOSIT FUNDS DISTINGUISHED

The funds which are covered in the summary tables in this part of the budget are of two types, as follows:

Trust funds are those funds which are established to account for receipts which are held in trust by the Government for use in carrying out specific purposes and programs in accordance with a trust agreement or a statute. Within the category of trust funds, there is a small subcategory of trust revolving funds, which are trust funds used to carry on a cycle of business-type operations.

Deposit funds are those funds which are established to account for collections that are either (a) held in suspense temporarily and later refunded or paid into some other fund of the Government, or (b) held by the Government as banker or agent for others, being paid out in lump sums at the direction of the owner. Such funds are not available for paying salaries, expenses, grants, or other expenditures of the Government.

While the transactions in these groups of funds are a part of the financial program of the Government, the trust and deposit funds are not owned by the Government; hence these transactions are excluded from the budget totals.

TRUST FUND RECEIPTS, AUTHORIZATIONS AND EXPENDITURES

Basis of stating trust receipts.—Table 8 summarizes trust fund receipts, and table 9 gives figures by agency and account. Such receipts include all money paid into the Treasury to the credit of the trust funds, including contributions to the trust funds from the general fund and are stated on the basis of confirmed deposits. Sales and redemptions of investments in United States Government securities are excluded from receipts, and are listed in special analysis K of part IV.

Trust authorizations.—Trust fund receipts must be appropriated before they can be spent. These appropriations are summarized in table 8 and listed in table 10.

Most trust funds are appropriated by permanent law, not requiring further action by Congress. Usually the appropriations equal the receipts of the year. In a few cases receipts of trust funds can be spent only in accordance with appropriations enacted by Congress from year to year. Examples are funds of the Soldiers' Home and the municipal revenues of the District of Columbia (which are accounted for as trust funds by the Federal Government). In a few other cases trust fund receipts are permanently appropriated for benefit payments, but limitations on administrative expenses payable out of the trust funds are imposed by annual action of the Congress.

Basis of stating trust expenditures.—Table 8 summarizes the trust fund expenditures, and table 10 gives figures by agency and account. These expenditures are stated on a checks-issued basis, less refunds collected. Net investments in United States Government securities are excluded from the figures, and are listed in special analysis K of part IV.

Trust revolving funds.—The small group of funds which constitute trust revolving funds represent an exception to the basis stated immediately above. The collections of trust revolving funds, instead of being taken into the tables as receipts and authorizations, are deducted from expenditures; thus the expenditures of such funds are stated on a net basis.

DEPOSIT FUND EXPENDITURES

Tables 8 and 10 include figures on deposit fund expenditures. These expenditures are on a net basis; that is, the collections are deducted from checks issued, and the resulting figure is shown as an expenditure. Checks issued include those written to move money into other funds, as well as those written for refunds and the return of money to depositors. When the collections are larger than the checks issued, the amount shown as an expenditure is a negative item.

NET ACCUMULATION IN TRUST AND DEPOSIT FUNDS

Table 8 shows the net accumulation in all the trust and deposit funds. This represents the result obtained when the trust and deposit fund expenditures are subtracted from the trust receipts of the year. Since trust and deposit funds, as well as Federal funds, affect the total cash balance of the Treasury and the total public debt, the final figures on table 8 are carried forward into table 4 of part I.

DETAIL OF TRUST FUND ESTIMATES

The detailed material following table 11 covers the trust funds which do not require annual action by Congress (those requiring annual authorizations or limitations are in part II). Consolidated schedules are used for the smaller trust funds of each bureau or independent agency. The material here follows the general format of the similar material in part II. However, no appropriation language appears here, and the narrative statement of "Program and performance" usually consists only of an explanation of the sources of money for the fund, the purposes for which it is authorized to be spent, and the legal citations.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

This schedule covers (1) funds received as gifts for immediate expenditure and receipts from revolving funds the original capital for which was received as gifts, (2) income from investments held by the Library of Congress trust fund board, and (3) interest at the rate of 4 percent per annum paid by the United States Treasury on the principal funds deposited therewith as described under "Library of Congress trust fund, principal accounts" (2 U. S. C. 156–160; 31 U. S. C. 725s; 37 Stat. 319).

The four principal purposes for which these funds are used in general are acquisition of library materials, reader and reference services, organization of the collections, and information service on copyright materials.

1. Acquisition of library materials.—During 1955, this included the procurement of rare books and manuscripts for the Library of Congress, the procurement of Government documents for the Library of Congress and cooperating libraries, and assistance in the selection of Polish materials for addition to the collections.

2. Reader and reference services.—These services during 1955 included the preparation of bibliographies, indexes, digests, and checklists; lectures; surveys of bibliographic services; poetry readings; musical concerts; furtherance of musical research, composition, performance, and appreciation; and providing photostats, photographs, microfilm, and other forms of photoduplication, and sound recordings of folksongs and poetry to other Government agencies, libraries, and other institutions, and to the general public.

3. Organization of the collections.—During 1955, the preparation of the 16th edition of Dewey Classification was continued, assistance was provided for cataloging of Cyrillic publications, and further progress was made toward the completion of a catalog of Chinese rare books.

4. Information service on copyright materials.—Depositors were supplied with preliminary information relating to copyright materials in selected subject fields.

Employees Life Insurance Fund, Civil Service Commission

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

This fund finances the payment of group life insurance premiums to private insurance companies under the Federal Employees Group Life Insurance Act of 1954 (5 U. S. C. 2091–2103) and any expenses incurred by the Civil Service Commission in administration of this act as annually authorized by Congress.

Premium costs are met by withholding from the salary of an employee under age 65, as his share of his group life and accidental death and dismemberment insurance, an amount not to exceed 25 cents biweekly for each $1,000 of his group life insurance, and contribution by the Government from appropriations or funds used for the payment of his salary, wage, or other compensation of an amount not to exceed one-half the amount withheld from the employee.

The Civil Service Commission is authorized to arrange with any nonprofit association of Federal employees for the assumption by the fund of any existing life insurance agreements with its members and to insure the obligations assumed with any insurance company or companies qualifying under the Federal Employees Group Life Insurance Act of 1954. The statements do not reflect what effect the assumption of any such agreements may have on the fund, except for the increase in administrative expenses. Language and schedules for this limitation are included in part II of the budget document.

Net trust investment, representing retained earnings, is expected to be $3,453,850 on June 30, 1957.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The war claims fund consists of funds transferred by the Office of Alien Property, Department of Justice, from the net proceeds derived from the liquidation of former German and Japanese assets vested pursuant to the Trading With the Enemy Act. This fund is for payment of the claims and administrative expenses of both the Foreign Claims Settlement Commission and the Bureau of Employees' Compensation, Department of Labor. This is the master trust account from which transfers are made to other accounts, and it includes all unobligated balances from these accounts.

The program by activities includes for 1957 a transfer to Treasury of $6.6 million which Foreign Claims Settlement Commission estimates will cover future appropriations to the Bureau of Employees' Compensation, Department of Labor, for the payment of claims.

The Foreign Claims Settlement Commission has included in its 1957 legislative program a proposal to amend the War Claims Act of 1948 so as to disestablish the war claims fund. The remaining balance of the fund, estimated to be in excess of $15 million, would be transferred to miscellaneous receipts.

Operation and Maintenance, Properties Aided By or Leased From Public Housing Administration, National Capital Housing Authority—Continued

Operation and development activities are financed by rental income or by temporary loans and the sale of notes and bonds to private investors which are serviced by rental income and Federal contributions received from the Public Housing Administration. Net income from properties transferred to local ownership for low-rent use is paid to the Public Housing Administration. Low-rent properties developed or purchased by the Authority will operate at a deficit with the difference between income and expense being met by Federal contribution. The Federal contribution permits the Authority to reduce rents for low income families below cost levels. The cumulative deficit is expected to be $4.1 million in 1956 and $5.1 million in 1957 and represents the Federal contributions receivable to date and depreciation charged.

Income.—The income of the railroad retirement account consists of taxes paid by railroad employers and employees, payments from the general fund to cover the cost of crediting military service, and interest on investments.

1. Retirement and survivor benefit payments.—Payments will increase, both because the fund is maturing, and because Public Law 383, approved August 12, 1955, increased benefits for approximately 90,000 beneficiaries.

2. Interest payments under Public Law 234.—Interest is paid to the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund to place the trust fund in the same position in which it would have been if railroad employment after 1936 had been under social security coverage (45 U. S. C. 228).

3. Administrative expenses.—Such expenses are subject to annual limitations in appropriations acts (see "Salaries and expenses, Railroad Retirement Board," in part II of the budget).

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The Railroad Retirement Board administers an unemployment and sickness insurance system and an employment service to find jobs for unemployed railroad workers. The administrative costs of this system are provided through a permanent appropriation of 0.2 percent of taxable payroll to this fund. As of June 30 of each year, any balance in this fund in excess of $6 million is transferred to the railroad unemployment insurance account in the unemployment trust fund (45 U. S. C. 361).

1. Maintenance of accounts of employee earnings.—The amounts of insurance payments for unemployment, sickness, and maternity benefits are based upon individual records of earnings and daily wage rates. This workload fluctuates with the level of employment in the railroad industry, rates of turnover, and similar factors. This activity is operated jointly with a similar requirement under the retirement program and costs are shared on a measured basis. Compensation items were 5,269,770 in 1955 and are estimated to be 3,874,000 and 4,019,800 in 1956 and 1957.

2. Processing and certification for payment of unemployment insurance claims.—This embraces the work of paying benefits to unemployed railroad workers and conducting an employment service to find jobs for them. Individual claims for unemployment compensation are filed locally and certified for payment through regional offices. The number of claims for unemployment compensation fluctuates widely due to economic changes affecting the railroad industry. Unemployment claims were 2,784,679 in 1955 and are estimated at 2.5 million and 2.3 million in 1956 and 1957.

3. Processing and certification for payment of sickness and maternity claims.—Unlike unemployment claims, these claims are filed by mail and certified for payment through the regional offices of the Board. The volume of claims for sickness is relatively stable. Sickness claims were 961,461 in 1955 and are estimated at 936,000 in 1956 and 1957.

4. General administration.—Except for certain basic activities solely supported and concerned only with this program, administrative costs are shared between this and the retirement program on a measured basis.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

This fund was established in 1940 to receive premiums and pay claims on national service life insurance. Over 22 million policies have been issued under this program, of which about 5.7 million, totaling almost $38 billion coverage, remain in force. The fund was closed to new issues in 1951.

The following statement of income and charges includes certain noncash transactions, for which obligations are offset by other claims of the fund. The assets of the fund, which are invested in interest-bearing securities and policy loans, are estimated to increase from $5,535 million as of June 30, 1955, to $5,763 million on June 30, 1957. The current actuarial evaluation of policy obligations totals almost $5 billion, leaving a balance of $543 million for contingency reserves.

The fund is operated on a commercial basis to the greatest possible extent consistent with law. Payments

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

This fund was established in 1919 to receive premiums and pay claims on insurance issued under the provisions of the War Risk Insurance Act, as amended. Nearly 400,000 policies of United States Government life insurance, providing coverage of over $1.7 billion, remained in force as of June 30, 1955.

The following statement of income and charges includes certain noncash transactions, for which obligations are offset by other claims of the fund. The assets of the fund, which are invested in interest-bearing securities and policy loans, are estimated to decline from $1,363 million as of June 30, 1955, to $1,335 million on June 30, 1957, as an increasing number of policies mature through death or disability. The current actuarial evaluation of policy obligations totals approximately $1.2 billion, leaving a balance of $129 million for contingency reserves.

The fund is operated on a commercial basis to the greatest possible extent consistent with law. Payments are made to the fund from the appropriation, Military and naval insurance, Veterans Administration, for claims (a) resulting from the extra hazards of the veteran's service, and (b) arising on certain policies held by personnel on active military duty. Administrative expenses are charged to the appropriation, General operating expenses, Veterans Administration.

HOUSING AND HOME FINANCE AGENCY

FEDERAL NATIONAL MORTGAGE ASSOCIATION

Secondary Market Operations, Federal National Mortgage Association (Trust Revolving Fund)

The secondary market operations of the Federal National Mortgage Association were authorized by the Housing Act of 1954 in order to provide supplementary assistance to the secondary market for home mortgages by providing a degree of liquidity for mortgage investments, thereby improving the distribution of investment capital available for home mortgage financing. Operations are financed by the proceeds from (1) the subscription by the Treasury in 1955 of $92.8 million in preferred stock, (2) the sale of debentures to the Treasury in an amount not to exceed $1 billion, (3) the mandatory subscription by mortgage sellers to the Association's common stock, and (4) the sale of debentures to the public. Government management is intended to be transitional to be succeeded by wholly private operation when the Government investment can be retired. The present interim program, financed by private as well as Government investment, is treated as a trust fund. Operations are discussed in part II of the budget in connection with the program's general fund financing and effect on budget expenditures.

SOIL CONSERVATION SERVICE

Payments in Lieu of Taxes and Operation and Maintenance Costs, Water Conservation and Utilization Projects

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Receipts from leasing of project lands owned by the United States have been used heretofore for payments in lieu of taxes to local government taxing units and in some instances for operation and maintenance costs of the resettlement features of the projects, until land development for irrigation was completed and farm units were returned to private ownership. Funds not needed for expenses or payments in lieu of taxes were paid into miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury (40 U. S. C. 431–434). Because most Government-owned lands have been sold, no further payments are contemplated from this account. Under the Department's general authorities, all unexpended balances were transferred to miscellaneous receipts in the fiscal year 1955, and the revolving fund was terminated. All revenue received in the future will be deposited directly to miscellaneous receipts.

This assistance is over and above that which would be furnished to farmers and ranchers under the regular soil conservation programs with soil conservation districts.

2. Miscellaneous contributed funds.—Miscellaneous funds received from States, local organizations, individuals, and others are available for work under cooperative agreements (5 U. S. C. 67, 563).

FARMERS' HOME ADMINISTRATION

State Rural Rehabilitation Funds, Farmers' Home Administration, Department of Agriculture

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

The funds are being administered through the Farmers' Home Administration, under agreements with 40 individual States, for use in carrying out the purposes of titles I and II of the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act, as amended. In these States, production and subsistence-type loans are made at 5-percent interest. Also, in some States, farm ownership-type loans are made from these funds and insured under the regular Farmers' Home Administration insured loan program at 3½ percent plus a 1 percent insurance charge. The entire assets of the 40 State corporations are being administered by the Farmers' Home Administration, with exception of $2,425,218 in cash and other assets which by June 30, 1955, had been returned to and held by several States for use in rural rehabilitation.

It is estimated that a total of 5,675 loans, amounting to $11,100,000, will be made in 1957, and 5,385 loans, amounting to $9,802,921, in 1956, compared with 6,415 in 1955, amounting to $14,100,157.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

1. National Park Service, donations.—The Secretary of the Interior accepts and uses donated moneys for purposes of the National Park and Monument system (16 U. S. C. 6). Donations were received from 60 contributors during fiscal year 1955. A donation of $300,000 was received during fiscal year 1956 from a private foundation with the stipulation that it be matched with an equal amount of Federal funds for the purpose of acquiring private inholdings within Grand Teton National Park. An additional $200,000 in donations is anticipated during fiscal year 1956 for the purpose of acquiring lands in the National Park system. Federal funds to match the $500,000 donation were appropriated in 1956. It is estimated that another $500,000 donation will be made on the same terms for fiscal year 1957 and a matching amount has been included in the 1957 estimate of appropriation for construction, National Park Service, for acquisition of lands and water rights.

2. National Park trust fund.—The National Park trust fund board holds and administers gifts of personal property for the benefit of, or in connection with, the National Park Service. Interest accruals or donations to the fund are used for current needs, or invested in United States Treasury bonds (16 U. S. C. 6a, 19). No donations were appropriated in 1955.

3. Preservation, birthplace of Abraham Lincoln.—This fund consists of an endowment given by the Lincoln Farm Association, and the interest thereon is available for preservation of the Abraham Lincoln National Historical Park, Ky. (16 U. S. C. 211, 212).

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Property seized by the Government from German nationals is held pending final settlement of claims. Interest in vested property as of June 30, 1955, is $58.2 million; however, $57.4 million of this amount consists of Treasury participation certificates whose value is contingent upon fulfillment of certain obligations of the German Government which have been in default since 1931. Little change is expected in 1956 and 1957.

Alien Property Fund, World War II

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Seized property in the United States, of the governments or nationals of Germany and Japan, vested in the name of the Attorney General is prepared for liquidation as soon as practicable. During the fiscal year 1955, $15 million was transferred to the war claims fund, making a total of $225 million so transferred to date. In 1955 $7 million in claims and settlements was paid from such property operations and it is anticipated that $5.1 million will be paid in 1956 and the same amount in 1957. Interest in vested property is estimated to be $159.7 million at June 30, 1957, decreasing $3.8 million from 1956, and $6.3 million from 1955.

The fund is maintained through (1) contribution of 5 percent of the basic annual salaries of all Foreign Service officers; (2) interest on investments; and (3) appropriated funds. It is estimated that 510 annuitants will be paid benefits from this fund during 1957. Gratuities represent payments made to class 4 and 5 officers who are selected out of the Service.

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

Under the Federal old-age and survivors insurance system, workers and their employers make annual contributions in the form of taxes on wages toward the benefits which will be payable when the worker reaches 65 or when he dies. An amount equal to the annual contributions, including interest and penalties, is appropriated to this trust fund for benefit payments and administrative expenses, part of which is being used for a building to house the Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance. The excess of income over outgo and annual interest are invested in Government securities (42 U. S. C. 401).

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

1. Mexican claims.—The American-Mexican Claims Commission adjudicates and certifies to the Treasury Department claims of American nationals against the Government of Mexico. The Mexican claims fund includes deposits totaling $40,533,659, consisting of $40 million from the Government of Mexico (payable in 16 annual installments—the final payment being made by Mexico in fiscal year 1956) and $533,659 appropriated by the Congress of the United States. Currently there are approximately 2,800 accounts maintained pursuant to awards of the Commission (22 U. S. C. 661).

2. National defense conditional gifts.—The Secretary of the Treasury accepts on behalf of the United States any conditional gifts of money or other intangible property to be used for a particular defense purpose. Such intangibles other than money are converted at the best terms available. The moneys held in trust are paid to such of the various appropriation accounts as will best effectuate the intent of the donors (68 Stat. 566).

3. Panama claims.—The final claims were paid in 1955 (64 Stat. 12).

4. Payment of pre-1934 bonds of the Government of the Philippines.—This trust account provides for payment of principal and interest on outstanding bonds of the Philippines, its provinces, cities, and municipalities, issued prior to May 1, 1934, under authority of acts of Congress. The value of the outstanding bonds is $6,350,850 (22 U. S. C. 1393 (g) (5)).

5. Payment of unclaimed moneys.—Payments are made to individuals who establish their right to moneys held in trust pending claims of owners (31 U. S. C. 725p).

6. Unclaimed moneys of individuals whose whereabouts are known.—Amounts are held in trust awaiting settlement and allowance of claims (31 U. S. C. 725).

7. Yugoslav claims.—Claims of American nationals against Yugoslavia are adjudicated by the Foreign Claims Settlement Commission and paid by the Secretary of the Treasury out of a $17 million fund received from the Government of Yugoslavia under an agreement of July 19, 1948. It is expected that final payment of these awards will be made during the fiscal year 1956 (64 Stat. 12).

Matured obligations of the District of Columbia.—Funds from inactive accounts are transferred to this account to meet matured obligations of the District of Columbia when and if presented (31 U. S. C. 725s).

To promote the education of the blind.—The uninvested sum of $250,000 is credited on the books of the Treasury Department as an unexpendable endowment fund for the purpose of aiding the education of the blind in the United States. A permanent annual appropriation of $10,000, being equivalent to 4 percent on the principal, is paid to the American Printing House for the Blind (20 U. S. C. 101).

PROGRAM AND PERFORMANCE

This trust fund is maintained to account for funds and to control the resources and liabilities of commuted ration messes. These messes are established at small units where provisions are procured in the immediate area rather than through the Coast Guard supply fund.

These commuted ration messes were formerly administered by designated district mess treasurers with funds maintained on deposit in commercial banks. Effective May 1, 1955, a revolving trust fund was established to provide improved accounting control, and all funds are now deposited in the general fund of the Treasury (14 U. S. C. 478).

INTRODUCTION TO PART IV

Part IV of the budget contains special analyses of budget data and Federal programs. These analyses supplement material appearing in other parts of the budget. Most of the analyses include explanatory material which expands and elaborates these introductory notes.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT RECEIPTS FROM AND PAYMENTS TO THE PUBLIC

Special analysis A presents information on the flow of money between the public and the Federal Government as a whole, including both Federal funds and trust (and deposit) funds. Major intragovernmental and noncash transactions are excluded. This analysis also presents a reconciliation with the concept of cash deposits and withdrawals as used in the Daily Statement of the United States Treasury.

BUDGET RECEIPTS (BY SOURCE)

Special analysis B presents details on the budget receipts summarized in table 1. It includes a statement explaining the receipt estimates, together with a table giving a classification of receipts by source. The figures include receipts of both the general fund and the special funds. The text pertaining to taxes, customs, and refunds is prepared by the Treasury Department.

ANALYSIS OF THE BUDGET BY FUNCTION AND AGENCY

Special analysis C gives the details for the functional breakdown of new obligational authority and expenditures used in the budget message and in certain tables of part I. It is compiled by regrouping the figures found in the chapter summaries of part II. The code numbers used in the chapter summaries are the key to the grouping found in this analysis.

SPECIAL ANALYSES OF BUDGET EXPENDITURES

Special analysis D analyzes budget expenditures (gross and net) in terms of the duration and nature of the benefits derived. Expenditures of an investment type are shown in two major categories—one for acquisition and improvement of Federal assets, and the other for developmental purposes such as additions to State, local, and private assets, and expenditures for research, education, and health. Expenditures yielding current benefits are also grouped in two major categories—one for aids and special services to various groups and the other for the remaining current operating expenses. No adjustments are made for depreciation, obsolescence, allowances for potential losses on loans, and other items not reflected in current expenditure data.

Special analysis E divides budget expenditures into four major groupings in order to show the purposes or ultimate ends involved. These categories are: The cost of protection including collective security, civil benefits to various parts of society, civil operations and administration, and interest payments. The discussion of budget expenditures which appears on pages M8 to M12 of the budget message is based on this classification.

ANALYSES OF CERTAIN PROGRAM EXPENDITURES

Special analysis F gives detailed information on the major Federal programs involving direct loans, loan insurance, and loan guaranties. It provides data on commitment authority, commitments, expenditures, repayments, and outstanding loans, guaranties, and insurance.

Special analysis G provides an analysis of the construction activities of the Federal Government. It presents detailed information on direct Federal public works and Federal grants and loans for public works. It gives summary information on Federal financial assistance for certain international public works, semipublic works, and construction by private business and individuals.

Special analysis H brings together information on those items in the budget which are for Federal aid to State and local governments. It includes grants-in-aid, shared revenues, and loans (including repayable advances).

Special analysis I shows the amounts devoted to research and development purposes. It includes both basic and applied research, and the construction of research facilities.

Special analysis J presents the current and recommended budget levels of the major economic statistical programs of the Federal Government.

SELECTED INVESTMENT AND INTERFUND TRANSACTIONS

Special analysis K sets forth certain investment and interfund transactions which are not reflected in the expenditures or receipts shown elsewhere in the budget. The first two groups of these are the investments by revolving and trust funds in United States Government securities (both Treasury issues and the securities of wholly owned Government enterprises), and the net borrowing or repayment of debt by wholly owned enterprises (other than their debt to the Treasury). The totals of these transactions, while not a part of budget expenditures or receipts, affect the financing requirements of the Government as a whole, and therefore are carried forward from this analysis to table 4 in part I. The other group of transactions included in this table constitutes the payments by the revolving funds to the general fund, representing the return of capital or the distribution of earnings; such payments are excluded from budget expenditures and budget receipts in parts I and II of the budget in order to avoid inflating both sides of the budget.

HISTORICAL COMPARISON OF BUDGET RECEIPTS AND EXPENDITURES

Special analysis L presents a 10-year comparison of budget receipts and expenditures. The receipts are classified by source and the expenditures by function. Technical notes set forth the changes in classifications since the 1956 budget. As in special analysis C, the code numbers appearing in the chapter summaries of part II are the key to the grouping of items in the expenditure section of this analysis.

Special Analysis A

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT RECEIPTS FROM AND PAYMENTS TO THE PUBLIC

This analysis presents information on the flow of money between the public and the Federal Government as a whole.

By definition, the public includes individuals, banks, other private corporations and associations, and unincorporated businesses. The Federal Reserve System, the United States Postal Savings System, State and local governments, foreign governments, and international organizations are also defined as part of the public.

Federal Government receipts and payments include the transactions of trust and deposit funds as well as Federal funds (for definitions of funds see introductions to part I and part III, pages A2 and 1014). They also include certain transactions, as reflected in the records of the United States Treasury, of Government-sponsored enterprises, mainly the Federal home loan banks, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Federal land banks, and the banks for cooperatives. Major intragovernmental and noncash transactions are excluded in the consolidation of Federal transactions.

Use and limitations.—This analysis is significant for many purposes, particularly in helping to evaluate the impact of Federal transactions on the economy.

However, the full scope and impact of Federal transactions is understated, in part because the total of Federal payments to the public includes only the net spending of Government enterprises—both wholly owned and Government-sponsored. In the course of their operations, these enterprises receive interest payments, repayments of loans, and other income. These receipts are deducted from new loans and other disbursements and the net difference is reported in this analysis as the payments of the enterprises to the public. This procedure does not affect the excess of Federal receipts from or payments to the public, since the totals of both receipts and payments are understated by equal amounts.

The table in the budget message on page M22 shows that $10.5 billion was spent in the fiscal year 1955 by wholly owned Government enterprises out of the receipts from their operations, in addition to the net expenditures which are included in budget expenditures. An estimated additional $1.6 billion was received and spent by the Government-sponsored enterprises over and above the net payments shown for them in 1955.

It should be recognized, however, that not only receipts and payments, but also many other Federal financial activities have important economic effects. For example, the rapid expansion in new appropriations and in Government orders immediately after the attack on Korea stimulated a rise in business activity long before the authorized funds were paid to the public. Likewise, the enactment of a tax measure or even the expectation of a change in tax rates may affect business activity long before the cash flows involved take place between the Federal Government and the public. Federal guaranties and insurance of private loans (summarized in special analysis F) also influence the economy, even though they normally have little or no impact on Federal receipts from and payments to the public. Certain other Government contractual arrangements, such as the program for the lease-purchase of Government buildings, have economic effects which cannot be measured by the Government payments made in any one year. The management of the public debt is an important factor in the money and credit markets, aside from the significance of interest payments to the public.

Consolidated cash statement.—Data on Federal receipts from and payments to the public represent, in effect, a consolidated cash statement of Federal transactions with the public other than borrowing operations. Major intragovernmental transactions which are reported as both expenditures and receipts in other tables in the budget are eliminated in this special analysis. Noncash items which represent accrued obligations of the Government to make payments in the future are also eliminated in the year of the accrual but are added to expenditures in subsequent years as actual payments are made. Receipts of the Government from exercise of monetary authority (mostly seigniorage on silver) are also excluded, because they do not represent cash received from the public.

| Excess of Federal receipts from the public | | 2,424 | 2,434 |
| Excess of Federal payments to the public (−) | −2,712 | | |

The amounts shown for intragovernmental transactions consist of (1) budget receipts which are also budget expenditures, such as payments to Treasury by wholly owned enterprises for interest on loans from Treasury; (2) budget receipts which are also trust fund expenditures, such as reimbursements to Treasury by the old-age and survivors insurance trust fund for expenses incurred, mainly in the collection of social security taxes; (3) budget receipts which are also Government-sponsored enterprise expenditures, such as franchise taxes paid by the banks for cooperatives; (4) trust fund receipts which are also budget expenditures, such as interest received by trust funds on their investments in public debt securities; and (5) trust fund receipts which are also trust fund expenditures, such as payments by the District of Columbia to the civil service retirement and disability fund.

The noncash expenditure items which are eliminated in the above table consist of (1) interest accrued on savings bonds which will not be paid in cash until the bonds are redeemed; (2) United States securities issued in payment of obligations which will be redeemed for cash at a later date; and (3) net changes in the clearing accounts for checks which have been issued but not yet cashed, and for related items. When savings bonds are redeemed, the amount of interest actually paid to the public is included in Federal payments to the public. Similarly, as the other securities are redeemed (for example, Armed Forces leave bonds which were issued in 1947 and are still being cashed), these payments are also added; and if the volume of Treasury checks outstanding is reduced, this amount also is added in computing cash payments to the public.

Operating payments and receipts of Government-sponsored enterprises are included on a net basis in payments to the public. Generally, these enterprises obtain funds for their operations through direct borrowing or through cashing United States securities they hold; they apply the net income received in their regular operations to the redemption of their obligations in the market and to the purchase of United States securities.

Complete detail of all the individual adjustment items in the above table can be obtained upon request from the Bureau of the Budget.

Reconciliation with Treasury cash deposits and withdrawals.—The daily statement of the United States Treasury presents a consolidated cash statement of Treasury operating transactions showing cumulative results for the month and fiscal year. These published figures are similar in general concept to Federal receipts from and payments to the public, but are limited in coverage to those transactions which affect the accounts of the Treasurer of the United States.

RECONCILIATION OF FEDERAL GOVERNMENT RECEIPTS FROM THE PUBLIC WITH TREASURY CASH DEPOSITS

[In millions]

| Description | 1955 actual | 1956 estimate | 1957 estimate |
|---|---|---|---|
| Federal receipts from the public | $67,836 | $73,473 | $75,354 |
| Receipts from exercise of monetary authority | 29 | 27 | 27 |
| Net difference in actual year due to reporting method | −96 | | |
| Equals: Treasury cash deposits | 67,769 | 73,499 | 75,381 |

As shown above, Treasury cash deposits include the receipts from exercise of the monetary authority which are omitted from Federal receipts from the public. Except for this small conceptual difference, the two consolidated statements are very closely related on the receipts side. The net difference due to reporting method applies equally in the reconciliation of receipts with deposits and in the reconciliation of payments with withdrawals.

This arises principally from the fact that changes in the clearing accounts are reported on a net basis with increases in deposits in transit deducted from increases in checks outstanding. While this reporting procedure yields an accurate measure of the excess of receipts or payments, it does not provide the data for adjusting separately the receipts and the payments of the Federal Government to the basis used in obtaining cash deposits to and withdrawals from the Treasurer's account.

Federal payments to the public are more inclusive than cash withdrawals from Treasury since they include the transactions from Government accounts in commercial banks and from cash balances held by agency disbursing officers. For example, if Federal cash balances outside the Treasury decrease, Federal payments to the public will be greater than cash withdrawals from Treasury; if these outside balances increase, Federal payments to the public will be smaller than cash withdrawals from Treasury.

[2] Includes only net sales by Government agencies and trust funds which were not reflected in the accounts of the Treasurer of the United States.

Federal repayment of cash borrowing from the public.—In the long run, the amount of Federal repayment of cash borrowing from the public is affected primarily by the excess of receipts from the public over payments. Funds obtained late in one fiscal year, however, are sometimes not utilized until early in the following year. Thus, they affect the annual changes in the Government's cash balances. Receipts from the exercise of the monetary authority (mostly seigniorage on silver) provide a relatively small additional amount that is available for payment to the public or repayment of cash borrowing.

States Government securities to the public. They also include the net borrowing of Government agencies and Government-sponsored enterprises through sales of their own securities. Excluded, however, are changes in the public debt which do not represent direct cash borrowing from the public. Major examples of these exclusions are (1) issuance of United States Government securities to Government trust funds, such as the old-age and survivors insurance trust fund, and (2) the addition to the public debt of certain noncash transactions such as the amount of interest accruing on savings bonds which is not paid in cash until the bonds are redeemed.

Special Analysis B

EXPLANATION OF THE ESTIMATES OF RECEIPTS

Estimates based on existing legislation

The estimates of receipts from taxes and customs for the current and ensuing fiscal years are prepared in December of each year by the Treasury Department. In general, the estimates of miscellaneous receipts are prepared by the agency depositing the receipts in the Treasury. In accordance with the practice of previous years, the following discussion deals only with estimates based on existing legislation. The estimates recognize the substantial advance in business activity, personal income, and corporate profits between 1954 and 1955. They assume an additional rise in activity and personal income in 1956.

Detailed estimates of budget receipts under both existing and proposed legislation are contained on pages 1089 to 1092.

BUDGET RECEIPTS

Actual budget receipts amounted to $60,390 million in the fiscal year 1955. As estimated for the ensuing fiscal years, receipts are expected to increase to $64,295 million in the fiscal year 1956 and decline slightly to $64,022 million in 1957. The expected rise in incomes would, by itself, produce a substantial increase in estimated receipts in 1956 and an additional rise in 1957. However, the effect of the net change in incomes between 1955 and 1956 is partially offset by the virtual termination in 1955 of collections under the excess profits tax and the completion in that year of the principal effect of the acceleration of corporate tax payments. The 1956 receipts are also reduced somewhat by the reductions in certain excise rates scheduled under present law for April 1, 1956.

The relatively small decrease in estimated receipts between 1956 and 1957, which comes in the face of an anticipated continued rise in business activity, is attributable primarily to the 5-point reduction in the corporate normal tax rate scheduled for April 1, 1956, and the full-year effect of the excise rate changes which would occur at the same time under existing law.

FISCAL YEAR 1956

Actual receipts in the fiscal year 1955 and estimated receipts in the fiscal year 1956 are compared by major sources in the following table:

Budget receipts (by source)

[In millions]

| Source | 1955 actual | 1956 estimate | Increase (+) or decrease (−) 1956 over 1955 |
|---|---|---|---|
| Individual income tax | $31,650.1 | $33,555.0 | +$1,904.9 |
| Corporation income tax | 18,264.7 | 20,300.0 | +2,035.3 |
| Excise taxes | 9,210.6 | 9,689.0 | +478.4 |
| Employment taxes | 6,219.7 | 7,420.0 | +1,200.3 |
| Estate and gift taxes | 936.3 | 1,025.0 | +88.7 |
| Customs | 606.4 | 690.0 | +83.6 |
| Internal revenue not otherwise classified | 7.4 | 5.0 | −2.4 |
| Miscellaneous receipts | 2,559.1 | 2,500.0 | −59.1 |
| Total receipts | 69,454.2 | 75,184.0 | +5,729.8 |
| Deduct— | | | |
| Transfer to Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund | 5,039.6 | 6,475.0 | +1,435.4 |
| Transfer to railroad retirement account | 598.9 | 625.0 | +26.1 |
| Refunds of receipts | 3,426.0 | 3,789.0 | +363.0 |
| Budget receipts | 60,389.7 | 64,295.0 | +3,905.3 |

Budget receipts are expected to advance substantially in the fiscal year 1956, because of the rise in income levels. The total increase of $3,905 million is largely attributable to individual and corporate income taxes, although all other major tax receipts sources will also advance moderately. The general rise will be dampened to some extent by the small initial effect of excise tax reductions scheduled under present law on April 1, 1956, and by the fact that the 1955 total was increased abnormally, as a result of corrections of previous overappropriations to the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund.

Individual income tax.—Receipts from the individual income tax are estimated to be $33,555 million in the fiscal year 1956, an increase of $1,905 million over actual receipts of $31,650 million in the fiscal year 1955. The increase is estimated on the basis of the expected rise in levels of income.

Corporation income tax.—Corporation income tax receipts in the fiscal year 1956 are estimated to amount to $20,300 million, $2,035 million above the fiscal year 1955 collections. Profits in the calendar year 1955, which will largely determine receipts in the fiscal year 1956, are estimated to have increased substantially over earnings in 1954. The rise in tax revenues accompanying higher earnings, however, will be substantially offset by two additional factors. The more important of these is the termination of the increase in fiscal year receipts resulting from year-by-year acceleration of corporation installment payments required under the Revenue Act of 1950. The second offsetting factor is the virtual absence of any collections in the fiscal year 1956 from the excess profits tax, which was terminated on December 31, 1953; some revenue from this source was received in the fiscal year 1955.

Acceleration of corporate tax payments is continued by the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, through the declaration and payment of estimated tax on current income. However, in contrast to the 1950 Revenue Act, which for calendar year corporations had the effect of moving payments forward from one fiscal year to the preceding year, the acceleration of payments by such corporations under the 1954 act does not result in the movement of installments from one fiscal year to another. Since most corporations file calendar year returns, fiscal year receipts will not be appreciably affected by the current acceleration of payments.

Excise taxes.—Receipts from this source by major groups are listed in the table below:

| Source | 1955 actual | 1956 estimate | Increase (+) or decrease (−) 1956 over 1955 |

Excise tax receipts are expected to increase from $9,211 million in the fiscal year 1955 to $9,689 million in the fiscal year 1956. The increase, reflecting higher levels of business activity and personal income, would be somewhat larger except for the rate reductions scheduled under present law effective April 1, 1956. These affect most of the important sources in the alcohol, tobacco, and manufacturers' excise tax groups.

Virtually all of the individual excise taxes are expected to increase in 1956; however, about three-fourths of the overall increase occurs in the manufacturers' excise tax group, principally because of the large gains estimated in receipts from the various automotive taxes.

Employment taxes.—The yield of the employment taxes is shown in the following table:

| Source | 1955 actual | 1956 estimate | Increase (+) or decrease (−) 1956 over 1955 |
|---|---|---|---|
| Federal Insurance Contributions Act | $5,339.6 | $6,475.0 | +$1,135.4 |
| Federal Unemployment Tax Act | 280.0 | 320.0 | +40.0 |
| Railroad Retirement Tax Act | 600.1 | 625.0 | +24.9 |
| Total employment taxes | 6,219.7 | 7,420.0 | +1,200.3 |
| Deduct— | | | |
| Transfer to Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund | 5,039.6 | 6,475.0 | +1,435.4 |
| Transfer to railroad retirement account | 598.9 | 625.0 | +26.1 |
| Net employment taxes | 581.2 | 320.0 | −261.2 |

The increase in receipts from the Federal Insurance Contributions Act reflects higher income levels, the increase in coverage, and an increase in the maximum amounts subject to tax from $3,600 to $4,200 a year. The increase in receipts from the Federal Unemployment Tax Act arises from the elimination of quarterly installment payments, resulting in a bunching of receipts in the fiscal year 1956.

Estate and gift taxes.—Receipts from estate and gift taxes are estimated to be $1,025 million in the fiscal year 1956, an increase of $89 million, reflecting recent increases in security values.

Customs.—Customs receipts are estimated to amount to $690 million in the fiscal year 1956, $84 million above the amount collected in the fiscal year 1955, as an expected result of higher business activity.

Miscellaneous receipts.—Receipts from miscellaneous sources are estimated to be $2,500 million in the fiscal year 1956 as compared with $2,559 million in the fiscal year 1955.

Refunds of receipts.—Refunds of receipts are estimated to be $3,789 million in the fiscal year 1956 as compared with $3,426 million in the fiscal year 1955.

FISCAL YEAR 1957

Estimated receipts in the fiscal years 1956 and 1957 are compared by major sources in the following table:

Budget receipts (by source)

[In millions]

| Source | 1956 estimate | 1957 estimate | Increase (+) or decrease (−) 1957 over 1956 |
|---|---|---|---|
| Individual income tax | $33,555.0 | $35,118.0 | +$1,563.0 |
| Corporation income tax | 20,300.0 | 19,080.0 | −1,220.0 |
| Excise taxes | 9,689.0 | 8,960.0 | −729.0 |
| Employment taxes | 7,420.0 | 7,585.0 | +165.0 |
| Estate and gift taxes | 1,025.0 | 1,120.0 | +95.0 |
| Customs | 690.0 | 700.0 | +10.0 |
| Internal revenue not otherwise classified | 5.0 | 5.0 | |
| Miscellaneous receipts | 2,500.0 | 2,800.0 | +300.0 |
| Total receipts | 75,184.0 | 75,368.0 | +184.0 |
| Deduct— | | | |
| Transfer to Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund | 6,475.0 | 6,635.0 | +160.0 |
| Transfer to railroad retirement account | 625.0 | 660.0 | +35.0 |
| Refunds of receipts | 3,789.0 | 4,051.0 | +262.0 |
| Budget receipts | 64,295.0 | 64,022.0 | −273.0 |

Budget receipts on the basis of present law are estimated to decline slightly in the fiscal year 1957. Receipts for the year of $64,022 million are $273 million less than in 1956. Substantial decreases in the corporation income tax and in excise taxes reflecting rate reductions scheduled under present law for April 1, 1956, are expected to be largely offset by advances in all other major revenue sources.

Individual income tax.—Receipts from the individual income tax are estimated to increase to $35,118 million in the fiscal year 1957. This increase of $1,563 million over the estimated receipts of $33,555 million in the fiscal year 1956 reflects the expected continued rise in levels of income.

Corporation income tax.—Receipts from the corporation income tax are estimated to amount to $19,080 million in the fiscal year 1957. This is $1,220 million less than in the fiscal year 1956. Under present law the corporation normal tax is scheduled to be reduced by 5 percentage points, effective April 1, 1956.

Excise taxes.—Receipts from this source by major groups are listed in the following table:

[In millions]

| Source | 1956 estimate | 1957 estimate | Increase (+) or decrease (−) 1957 over 1956 |
|---|---|---|---|
| Alcohol taxes | $2,819.0 | $2,783.0 | −$36.0 |
| Tobacco taxes | 1,550.0 | 1,448.0 | −102.0 |
| Taxes on documents, other instruments, and playing cards | 107.0 | 107.0 | |
| Manufacturers' excise taxes | 3,236.0 | 2,583.0 | −653.0 |
| Retailers' excise taxes | 316.0 | 323.0 | +7.0 |
| Miscellaneous excise taxes | 1,561.0 | 1,616.0 | +55.0 |
| Undistributed depositary receipts and unclassified advance payment of excise taxes | 100.0 | 100.0 | |
| Total excise taxes | 9,689.0 | 8,960.0 | −729.0 |

Excise tax receipts under present law are estimated to amount to $8,960 million in 1957. Because of the expected rise in business activity and personal income, receipts from excise taxes would increase between fiscal years 1956 and 1957. However, because of the full-year effect of the rate reductions scheduled under present law for April 1, 1956, as compared with the part-year effect of these reductions in the fiscal year 1956, excise tax receipts are estimated to decline by a net amount of $729 million.

The decreases estimated for the alcohol, tobacco, and manufacturers' groups reflect the effect of the rate reductions scheduled under present law on the most important revenue sources in these groups. Increases are expected in the retailers' excise taxes which are unaffected by rate changes and in the miscellaneous excise tax group where the effect of rate changes is of minor significance.

Employment taxes.—The details of the yield of the employment taxes are shown in the table below:

| Source | 1956 estimate | 1957 estimate | Increase (+) or decrease (−) 1957 over 1956 |
|---|---|---|---|
| Federal Insurance Contributions Act | $6,475.0 | $6,635.0 | +$160.0 |
| Federal Unemployment Tax Act | 320.0 | 290.0 | −30.0 |
| Railroad Retirement Tax Act | 625.0 | 660.0 | +35.0 |
| Total employment taxes | 7,420.0 | 7,585.0 | +165.0 |
| Deduct— | | | |
| Transfer to Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund | 6,475.0 | 6,635.0 | +160.0 |
| Transfer to railroad retirement account | 625.0 | 660.0 | +35.0 |
| Net employment taxes | 320.0 | 290.0 | −30.0 |

The increase in receipts from the Federal Insurance Contributions Act is based on the estimated continued rise in levels of salaries and wages subject to tax. Receipts from the Federal Unemployment Tax Act are estimated to be lower in the fiscal year 1957 than in the fiscal year 1956 because of the bunching of receipts in the fiscal year 1956 as a result of the elimination of installment payments.

Estate and gift taxes.—Receipts from estate and gift taxes, reflecting current security values, are estimated to be $1,120 million in the fiscal year 1957, an increase of $95 million.

Customs.—Customs receipts are estimated to increase slightly to $700 million in the fiscal year 1957.

Miscellaneous receipts.—Receipts from miscellaneous sources are estimated to increase to $2,800 million in the fiscal year 1957, primarily as a result of an anticipated repayment of silver bullion advanced to our allies in World War II.

Refunds of receipts.—Refunds of receipts are estimated to amount to $4,051 million in the fiscal year 1957, an increase of $262 million above the $3,789 million estimated for the previous year. The largest portion of the increase results from estimated refunds on floor stocks under certain excise taxes which are presently scheduled to be reduced in rate April 1, 1956.

Special Analysis C

ANALYSIS OF BUDGET BY FUNCTION AND AGENCY

This special analysis supplies data on new obligational authority by function, and provides supporting detail for the expenditures included in the tables of the budget message, and in tables 1 and 2 of part I.

For each function and subfunction, data are listed by agencies. In order to find the appropriation items which make up the amounts shown for the agency, it is necessary to look in the chapter summary for that agency. Each entry in the chapter summary is coded to indicate the subfunction in which it is classified.

The functional classification used in this budget summarizes authorizations and expenditures according to the major purposes of the Government. Each function brings together programs which are related to a broad purpose, regardless of the agency responsible. Each major function is divided into several subfunctions which are groups of programs directed to a selected field within the broader category. Changes made in the classification this year are specified in a note in special analysis L.

For purposes of this classification each appropriation account and each special fund, revolving fund, and management fund is treated as a unit. Exceptions are made, and accounts are split into two or more categories, in only selected cases. This necessarily involves some close decisions in borderline cases, and it means that programs with secondary significance for some major functions will be included in another category because another purpose predominates in the particular appropriation. Thus, to secure a comprehensive total of all Government programs related to education, for example, it would be necessary to provide a special tabulation, counting in this category some appropriations which might also be relevant to other categories.

For each major function and subfunction, expenditures are shown on a gross basis, with a deduction for receipts of public enterprise funds to arrive at net budget expenditures for the function or subfunction.

Whereas this special analysis presents both authorizations and expenditures for major functions, subfunctions, and agencies over a 3-year period, special analysis L shows expenditures for the major functions and subfunctions over a 10-year period. Special analysis A shows payments to the public, classified by major function. The functional categories are also used in the analyses summarizing Federal activities in public works and other construction, Federal aid to State and local governments, and Federal research and development programs.

Special Analysis D

INVESTMENT, OPERATING, AND OTHER BUDGET EXPENDITURES

INTRODUCTION

Like the functional classification in special analysis C and the agency classification in part II of the budget, this analysis of Government expenditures is designed to contribute to a general understanding of total budget expenditures and of budgetary problems. It classifies Government expenditures according to those which yield benefits beyond the current fiscal year and those which in the main yield benefits within the year in which the expenditure is made.

Expenditures of an investment type, that is, those yielding benefits over a period of years, are shown in two major categories—one for the acquisition of assets by the Federal Government and the other for other broad developmental purposes such as additions to State, local, and private assets and expenditures for research, education, and health, which contribute to the physical productivity of the economy or help increase the technical skills and knowledge of individuals. Expenditures which yield benefits currently are also grouped in two major categories—one for aids and services to special groups and the other for current operating expenses.

Comparison with a capital budget.—This analysis is not a capital budget. A capital budget as prepared by some foreign governments and some State and local governments usually provides separate financing for major capital outlays. The capital outlays may be entirely excluded from the current budgets of these governments or they may be amortized over a period of years by annual charges to the budget. In the Federal budget, however, investment items are shown in the same way as expenditures for other purposes and hence are included in arriving at the budget surplus or deficit.

A capital budget would also require computing and recording annually an allowance for depreciation and obsolescence on existing physical assets, an allowance for anticipated losses on loan programs, a recognition of assets received as gifts or donated to others, and the profits or losses on sales of assets at a figure different from their book value. This analysis makes no provision for such changes in assets. Hence, it does not indicate the extent to which annual new investment in a given year is offset by depreciation and other changes in existing assets.

On the basis of private accounting practices, investment expenditures would be confined to increases in claims or assets owned by the Federal Government. They would, however, cover all such assets, including office equipment and motor vehicles. In this analysis, the category identified as additions to Federal assets is limited to major outlays, such as public works construction and military aircraft and ships. On the other hand, this analysis adopts a broader concept than is employed in private accounting practice for capital items, since Federal expenditures are here viewed in terms of their effect on the economy as a whole; hence, it includes also, as the second major type of investment expenditures, additions to State, local, or private assets and other Federal expenditures, the major objective of which is to help improve the productivity of the Nation.

Recoverability of certain types of expenditures.—The greater part of Federal expenditures for loans, for investment in commodity inventories, and for construction of powerplants is ultimately returned to the Treasury. However, Federal expenditures for most other investment-type programs are not generally expected to be recovered by specific revenues. Developmental expenditures usually increase the wealth and income of the Nation and often indirectly expand Federal tax revenues over a long period of years. Expenditures of certain Government programs are also financed by the appropriation of part or all of the special receipts which are collected from licenses and fees charged for various special services related to these programs.

As in the last two budget documents, this analysis presents expenditures of public enterprise funds on a gross as well as a net basis, in order to indicate the full scope of their operations. The receipt totals indicated in the tables are only those which are deposited in the revolving funds of such enterprises. Receipts paid directly to the Treasury are excluded from this analysis.

Significant subcategories.—In addition to the four major categories of expenditures already mentioned, this analysis shows separately the expenditures for major national security programs (as defined in special analysis C) and civil programs. Since major national security expenditures represent a large proportion of total budget outlays, such a distinction helps in appraising the significance of outlays within each of the major categories of this analysis. For example, military expenditures for fixed assets and other developmental purposes are not usually intended to achieve the same objectives as civil outlays for assets.

Separate subcategories are also shown for expenditures for direct Federal programs, grants-in-aid or loans to State and local governments, and payments to trust funds. Special analysis H gives details on Federal aid to State and local governments and contains a table summarizing these aids according to the major categories of this analysis.

SPECIAL CLASSIFICATION

The 1956 budget contained for the first time a special classification in which budget expenditures were arranged in four general categories (in addition to the reserve for contingencies): (1) Current expenses for civil operations and administration, (2) interest, (3) civil benefits, and (4) protection. This special classification was based on the tables contained in special analysis D. For the 1957 budget, a number of changes have been made in the grouping of individual items in the special classification and this material now appears separately in special analysis E.

SUMMARY OF SPECIAL ANALYSIS D

Table 1 summarizes expenditures according to the major categories of special analysis D, showing gross and net expenditures, and applicable receipts, for both the major national security and the civil programs. About $22.3 billion of estimated net budget expenditures for the fiscal year 1957 represent outlays for the acquisition and improvement of assets and for other development purposes. Most of these net outlays, $17.2 billion, are for major national security programs. Current expenses for aids, services, and operations are estimated at $43.4 billion, net, for fiscal year 1957. More than half of these net outlays, $23.1 billion, is also for major national security programs.

The estimated increase of $1.6 billion in net budget expenditures from 1956 to 1957 reflects primarily:

(1) An increase of $1,078 million in current operating expenses for major national security programs, mainly for maintenance and operation of military equipment.

ADDITIONS TO FEDERAL ASSETS

Expenditures in this category represent direct investment by the Federal Government in loans and federally owned physical assets. Net expenditures for such additions to assets are estimated to total $18 billion in the fiscal year 1957, $162 million below 1956. Over 85 percent of total net expenditures in this category are for major national security programs, mostly for military equipment.

Loans.—Direct loans of Federal agencies consist of loans to farmers and homeowners, to public and private agencies serving these two groups, and to private business and foreign governments. The Congress has provided that most loan programs operate on a revolving basis. However, the Rural Electrification Administration and the Farmers' Home Administration and a few other loan programs are by law on a nonrevolving basis, with collections on outstanding loans going directly to miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury. In this analysis, loans made through revolving funds are shown on both a gross and a net basis. Since net expenditures for loans reflect only a fraction of total Government loan activity, gross disbursements and repayments indicate more fully the total loan operations of the Government.

In the fiscal year 1957, gross disbursements for loans are estimated to increase by $405 million from 1956. Collections, acquisition of collateral, and other receipts from loans are estimated to decrease by $91 million. As a result, net budget expenditures for loans are estimated to rise by $495 million from the fiscal year 1956 to 1957.

Net loans to domestic private borrowers in the fiscal year 1957 are estimated to be $519 million higher than in 1956, mainly as a result of a reduction in repayments to the Commodity Credit Corporation of loans to private borrowers. Other major loan programs show smaller changes in net expenditures from 1956. An analysis of major credit programs of the Federal Government is contained in special analysis F. That analysis shows gross disbursements and repayments for loan programs, including those collections going directly into miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury.

Public works—sites and direct construction.—This category includes all Federal expenditures for sites and federally constructed civil public works projects, military installations, and other national security facilities which are owned by the United States, including those outside the continental United States. A summary of these and related programs is given in special analysis G.

Total estimated expenditures for direct Federal public works of $3.3 billion in 1957 are about the same as in 1956. About 66 percent of these expenditures for 1957 will be direct public works for major national security programs. Expenditures for construction of military and atomic energy facilities are estimated to decline from 1956 to 1957. Civil public works expenditures, mainly for water resources and related developments and veterans' hospitals, are estimated to rise from $1 billion in 1956 to $1.1 billion in 1957.

Major commodity inventories.—Gross purchases of commodities held for resale or in stockpiles are expected to total $3.2 billion in the fiscal year 1957, exceeding sales by $1.4 billion. The figure for total purchases includes transportation costs, administrative expenses, and storage costs where these are normally included in costs of goods sold.

Net expenditures for stockpiling strategic and critical materials (other than fissionable materials) are estimated at $297 million in the fiscal year 1957. By June 30, 1957, the stockpile inventory is expected to reach an estimated $6.4 billion (at cost). The inventory of farm commodities held by the Commodity Credit Corporation under its farm price-support program is expected to increase by $958 million in the fiscal year 1957. The value of the Corporation's inventory of commodities (at cost) as of June 30, 1957, is estimated to total $6.5 billion.

Major equipment.—Expenditures for major equipment are estimated at $11.8 billion in 1957, a decrease of $95 million from 1956. These expenditures represent, predominantly, purchases of aircraft, naval vessels, tanks, and other major national security equipment needs, as well as construction of merchant ships. Purchases of office equipment, furniture and fixtures, automobiles, and similar items are classified as current operating expenses.

Other physical assets—acquisition and improvement.—Expenditures for other physical assets will rise in 1957, mainly because of increased expenditures of the Atomic Energy Commission for procurement of source materials and production of special nuclear materials and weapons. This subcategory also includes reforestation and range improvements and real property purchased or acquired as collateral on defaulted loans.

Payments of principal under lease-purchase agreements to acquire public buildings are also included in this grouping. Interest payments under these agreements, however, are shown under operation and administration of other civil activities (see special analysis G, page 1138, for discussion of the lease-purchase program).

EXPENDITURES FOR OTHER DEVELOPMENTAL PURPOSES

This category includes Federal expenditures which add to the productivity of the economy over a period of years but which do not directly add to Federal physical and financial assets. Programs which yield the bulk of their benefits immediately are excluded, even though they may also contribute to the longer run economic development of the Nation.

Expenditures for military research and development account for about two-fifths of the total expenditures in this category in 1957. Higher grants to the States for construction of highways and schools are responsible for most of the increase over 1956.

State and local physical assets.—In the fiscal year 1957 the Federal Government will spend an estimated $1.1 billion for additions to physical assets of State and local governments. These outlays, in the form of grants-in-aid such as the Federal-aid highway program and the proposed program of general school construction assistance, are $225 million higher than in the preceding year.

These estimates do not reflect the proposed program of increased grants for the interstate highway system which is to be financed so as not to create budget deficits.

Private physical assets.—Federal expenditures which directly add to privately owned physical assets consist predominantly of payments for conservation and improvement of private farms, grants to States for the building of private hospitals and other health facilities, and construction subsidies for merchant ships. Expenditures for these programs are estimated to rise by $68 million over the 1956 level.

Education, training, and health.—An estimated $448 million of net budget expenditures in the fiscal year 1957 will be for developmental purposes in the fields of education, training, and health, an estimated increase of $26 million over 1956. These programs are intended to foster the knowledge, skills, longevity, and physical vigor of the population. Most of these programs are conducted through grants to State and local governments. Included here are school-operating aid to school districts especially affected by activities of the Federal Government, and grants to States for programs of vocational education, vocational rehabilitation, maternal and child welfare, public health, and agricultural extension work. Closely related are several major items classified in other categories—principally the veterans' education program, which is classified as aids and special services for veterans; the operating expenses of hospital services and medical care programs; and the training of military personnel or other persons in Government service.

Research and development.—The Federal Government also contributes to technological and economic progress through the conduct of varied programs of research and development. Net expenditures for such programs in the fiscal year 1957 are estimated at $2.2 billion, $200 million above 1956. Over 80 percent of this total is for major national security research and development, including the work of the Department of Defense and the Atomic Energy Commission.

Definitions of research and development, in this analysis, are those used in special analysis I, and agree generally with those used by the National Science Foundation for its analyses of Federal Government activities in this general area.

Engineering and natural resource surveys.—An estimated $68 million of net budget expenditures in the fiscal year 1957 will be for investigations and surveys for public works programs, topographic mapping, land classification, forest investigations, and other basic surveys. The largest programs of this type are administered by the Geological Survey, the Bureau of Reclamation, and the Coast and Geodetic Survey.

CURRENT EXPENSES FOR AIDS AND SPECIAL SERVICES

This category covers current expenditures for programs which primarily provide aids or special services to one or more specific groups. The preceding categories include investment-type expenditures which provide substantial benefits to various economic groups, such as loans, public works, and research programs. However, this category contains the administrative and other operating expenses and operating receipts arising from loan programs and from investments in physical assets which benefit specific groups, as well as maintenance costs of any physical assets providing aids and special services. Some of these economic groups also receive benefits from special Federal tax provisions and other nonexpenditure aids, which are not included in this analysis. Approximately 80 percent of expenditures for aids and special services are for civil programs, which are estimated at $10.7 billion, net, for the fiscal year 1957, $270 million below the fiscal year 1956.

Agriculture.—Current expenses predominantly for the benefit of farmers consist chiefly of losses realized on the price-support program, expenses of the International Wheat Agreement, Sugar Act payments, expenditures for removal of surplus commodities, and administrative expenses of loan programs and other aids to farmers. This category also includes the President's proposal for the soil bank and related aids to farmers. Other major expenditures benefiting farmers which are classified elsewhere in this analysis are provided through loans, conservation payments, and construction of reclamation and other water development projects. Farmers also benefit indirectly from the school lunch, international, and other programs which are intended primarily for other purposes.

In the fiscal year 1957, current expenses for programs in this category directly benefiting farmers are estimated at $1.6 billion, net, $109 million below 1956.

Business.—The major types of current Federal expenditures primarily benefiting private business are the Government payment to the Post Office to pay the losses arising primarily from second-, third-, and fourth-class mail; maritime operating subsidies and navigation and other aids to the shipping industry; and various aids to air navigation. Largely as a result of the proposed increase in postal rates, net expenditures for these purposes in the fiscal year 1957 are expected to decline to $577 million, $404 million below 1956.

Labor.—The largest current Federal expenditure benefiting labor is for the Federal-State program of unemployment insurance and public employment offices, in which the Federal Department of Labor makes grants to the States to cover the full cost of administering these services. This program also benefits employers by recruiting workers to fill job vacancies. Also in this category are the mine safety work of the Bureau of Mines and some administrative expenses of the Department of Labor. These expenditures for the fiscal year 1957 totaling $351 million represent an increase of $22 million over the preceding year.

Homeowners and tenants.—Since loans for the benefit of homeowners and tenants are classified in this analysis as investment-type expenditures, current expenditures consist chiefly of grants to local authorities to cover deficits from low-rent public housing projects and the capital losses of slum clearance and urban renewal projects and the operating expense of the management and liquidation functions of the Federal National Mortgage Association. Receipts from the insurance of mortgages and saving and loan share accounts and the earnings from holdings of mortgages and other housing loans exceed current gross expenditures for housing in all 3 years shown in the budget.

Veterans.—Current net expenditures for aids to veterans in the fiscal year 1957 are estimated at $4.8 billion, $61 million above 1956. Compensation and pension benefits account for more than half of the estimated 1957 total in this subcategory. The monthly compensation payments are to veterans with service-connected disabilities and to the families of deceased veterans. Pensions are paid in non-service-connected cases.

Other important current aids to veterans are hospital and medical care for veterans of all wars and readjustment benefits for those who served in World War II and the Korean conflict. Included are outlays for education and training of veterans who enroll in schools and colleges, or vocational training on the job or farm; losses under the loan-guaranty programs; and veterans' unemployment allowances.

International.—In the fiscal year 1957, $2.5 billion or almost three-fifths of total expenditures in this subcategory are for the military part of the Mutual Security Program. These expenditures will furnish military equipment and training to friendly nations. Nonmilitary parts of the mutual security expenditures are primarily to strengthen the economies of our allies so that they can support larger military forces and to help the free nations achieve the economic growth necessary to maintain peace and stable institutions.

Other aids and special services.—Many other Federal programs involve current expenditures for aids and special services providing major benefits for more than one of the above groups or for other groups. The bulk of such expenditures is grants to help provide public assistance to those in need, including the aged, the blind, the permanently and totally disabled, and dependent children. Other major programs include grants to States to help finance low-priced school lunches, hospital operation and medical care by the Public Health Service, and various aids to Indians. These expenditures in the fiscal year 1957 are expected to total $1.7 billion, about the same as in 1956.

OTHER SERVICES AND CURRENT OPERATING EXPENSES

All other expenditures for Government services or for current operations are included in this major category. In the main, the activities are the basic Government operations of maintaining a military establishment, conducting foreign affairs, making or enforcing laws, collecting taxes, managing and paying interest on the public debt, sharing the retirement costs of civilian employees, and operating the postal service.

Current expenditures for major national security, mostly for operation and maintenance of military facilities and for pay and subsistence of military personnel, dominate this category. The largest component of civil expenditures is for interest. All other current civil expenses in 1957 will total about $2.5 billion, an increase of $119 million above 1956.

Repair, maintenance, and operation of physical assets excluding special services.—Expenditures to repair, maintain, and operate physical assets are chiefly for atomic energy facilities; military structures, equipment, and facilities; and general-purpose public buildings. They also pay for operating certain other public assets such as flood-control reservoirs, irrigation works, power facilities, public lands, and national forests.

Net expenditures for civil repair, maintenance, and operation are estimated at $259 million in the fiscal year 1957, $15 million below fiscal year 1956. Outlays for the operation and maintenance of structures, equipment, and facilities for major national security programs are estimated at $9.1 billion, an increase of $746 million from the 1956 level.

Regulation and control.—Most of the major departments and agencies and many smaller agencies have regulatory or law-enforcement responsibilities. These include the normal law-enforcement activities of the Department of Justice, the Treasury, and the judiciary, as well as the operations of the independent regulatory agencies. Expenditures for regulation and control are estimated to total $577 million in 1957, $13 million higher than in 1956.

Operation and maintenance of the postal system.—Since the postal deficit is included under current expenses for aids and special services, this category includes the remaining gross expenditures and the receipts of the Post Office, which are equal in magnitude and therefore cancel out on a net basis. Gross expenditures and receipts in this subcategory for the fiscal year 1957 are estimated at $2.5 billion.

Operation and administration of other civil activities.—All other governmentwide or multiple-purpose expenditures for civil programs will increase from $1.6 billion in 1956 to $1.7 billion in 1957. These consist of expenditures for the legislative branch and the conduct of foreign affairs; tax collection, public debt administration, and other financing activities; central procurement, recordkeeping, payment of claims, and various other direct Federal programs not elsewhere classified. The major increases in this subcategory over the 1956 level occur in the recommended Government payment—as employer—for Federal civilian employees' retirement, in the overseas information activities of the United States Information Agency, and in the Department of State.

Other major national security operation and administration.—Expenditures in this category are estimated to rise from the 1956 level of $11.1 billion to $11.4 billion in the fiscal year 1957. They represent predominantly pay and subsistence for military personnel together with smaller but substantial expenditures for civilian components, industrial mobilization, and various departmentwide activities of the Department of Defense.

Interest.—These expenditures include interest on the public debt and smaller amounts of interest on refunds of receipts and on uninvested funds. Principally because of the higher interest rates now prevailing, expenditures for interest are estimated to be $191 million higher in the fiscal year 1957 than in 1956.

Special Analysis E

ANALYSIS OF BUDGET EXPENDITURES BY PURPOSE

INTRODUCTION AND SUMMARY

In this special analysis, the expenditures of the United States Government are divided into four large groupings in order to show the ultimate ends or purposes for which Federal taxes and other revenues are used. These categories are (1) The cost of protection, including collective security; (2) civil benefits to various parts of our society; (3) civil operations and administration; and (4) interest payments, mainly on the public debt.

The discussion of budget expenditures which appears on pages M8 to M12 of the President's budget message is based on this classification. This analysis is a revision of the special classification of budget expenditures which appeared in the 1956 budget (pp. M11–M13, M21–M23, and 1153–1154 of that document).

Table 1 summarizes budget expenditures on a net basis according to the major categories of special analysis E. Details on each category are contained in subsequent sections of this analysis.

PROTECTION, INCLUDING COLLECTIVE SECURITY

The expenditures for protection, including collective security, which account for almost two-thirds of budget expenditures, consist of all the outlays (including those for additions to Federal assets) for the Military Establishment, the Mutual Security Program, and related activities which enhance this Nation's defensive posture and world position such as the overseas information program, the development of atomic energy, and civil defense. These expenditures are estimated to total $42,384 million in 1957, compared to $41,367 million in 1956 and $42,705 million in 1955 (see table 2).

Department of Defense.—The major types of outlays by the Department of Defense are for military personnel; procurement, maintenance, and operation of military equipment; military construction; and research and development. In the fiscal year 1957, expenditures are estimated to increase by $972 million over 1956, mainly for the maintenance and operation of increasingly complex weapons, for maintenance and operation of additional air bases, radar sites, and other military installations, and for increased reserve components. It is estimated that expanded procurement of guided missiles will be largely offset by reductions in expenditures on conventional vehicles and weapons, the requirements for which have largely been met.

Atomic Energy Commission.—Expenditures for the development and control of atomic energy are estimated to increase because of the purchase of greater quantities of uranium ores and concentrates, and higher production of nuclear materials and weapons.

Mutual Security Program.—This program covers the military equipment and training furnished to friendly nations and economic and technical assistance designed to help the nations of the free world strengthen their economies and improve the standard of living of their people.

Other.—Expenditures for all other programs classified as protection cover net expenditures for stockpiling strategic and critical materials, the expansion of defense production, the overseas information program, civil defense, and selective service.

CIVIL BENEFITS

A large number of programs designed to yield benefits to the Nation generally or to various groups and geographic areas are classified as civil benefits. These cover expenditures for the acquisition of assets, which have varying degrees of recoverable value or permanency, expenditures for long-range development, and current aids and services to various groups. Expenditures for civil benefits are estimated to total $13,949 million in the fiscal year 1957, compared to $13,790 million in 1956 and $13,724 million in 1955 (see table 3).

Additions to Federal assets.—This subcategory covers loans, construction activity, and acquisition of other physical assets by all agencies except those grouped under protection.

Expenditures by the Commodity Credit Corporation for additions to Federal assets cover (1) the net change in loans outstanding for agricultural price supports and certificates of interest pertaining to those loans, (2) increases in inventories of commodities bought or taken over as forfeited collateral on the loans, and (3) construction of storage facilities.

Other loans are made to homeowners, State and local governments, foreign borrowers, and other groups. Loans are generally shown on a net basis, the gross outlays being reduced by the amount of repayments, forfeiture of collateral, and other collections from existing loans. Additional detail on loan programs is contained in special analysis F.

Construction covers all Federal civil public works, including water resource projects by the Corps of Engineers and the Bureau of Reclamation and construction of public buildings and facilities by the General Services Administration and other agencies.

Long-range development.—A number of Federal programs are broadly developmental in that they contribute to the physical productivity of the economy or increase the technical skills and knowledge of individuals. These programs, which are mainly conducted through grants-in-aid to State and local governments, include agricultural conservation assistance to farmers, programs of education, health, and scientific research and development, and construction of airports and highways. The estimates do not reflect the President's proposed program of increased grants for highway construction which, it is contemplated, will be financed so as not to create budget deficits.

Current expenses for civil benefits.—This category covers current expenditures for programs which primarily provide aids or special services to one or more specific groups. However, it excludes investment-type expenditures such as the outlays for loans, construction, other assets, and developmental programs, included above, which provide substantial benefits to various economic groups.

Current expenses predominantly for the benefit of farmers consist chiefly of the net expenditures of the Commodity Credit Corporation, other than those classified as additions to Federal assets, long-range development, and international aids; the removal of surplus agricultural commodities; and administrative expenses of aid programs to farmers. This category also includes the proposed program of soil bank and related aids to agriculture.

Current expenses primarily benefiting private business include aids and subsidies to the aviation and shipping industries and the losses in postal operations arising primarily from second-, third-, and fourth-class mail. The decline estimated in 1957 net expenditures arises chiefly from the proposed increase in postal rates.

Current expenses primarily benefiting labor include the Federal grants to cover the cost of administering unemployment insurance and public employment offices, some administrative expenses of the Department of Labor, and the mine safety work of the Bureau of Mines.

Most of the expenditures primarily benefiting homeowners and tenants are in the form of loans already covered above. Current expenses are primarily for administration and interest, and are offset by the operating receipts arising from housing loan and loan insurance programs.

Current expenses primarily benefiting veterans account for 34 percent of all civil benefits in the fiscal year 1957. These consist of such programs as readjustment benefits, compensation and pensions, and hospital and medical care.

Federal grants to States help provide public assistance to the needy aged, the blind, the totally disabled, and orphans.

Other services performed by the Federal Government which benefit various groups or areas of the Nation include grants for the school lunch program, disaster relief, and certain activities of the Public Health Service and the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

INTEREST

Interest payments for the fiscal year 1957 are estimated at $7,066 million, an increase of $191 million over 1956. This consists mainly of higher interest payments on the public debt, reflecting a higher level of interest rates.

CIVIL OPERATIONS AND ADMINISTRATION

The expenditures shown under this heading are predominantly the traditional expenses for civil operations and administration of the Federal Government. Here are found the bulk of the expenditures for the legislative branch, the judiciary, the Executive Office of the President, the various regulatory activities of the Government, and the expenses of executive direction of various cabinet departments and independent agencies.

Expenditures for civil operations and administration are estimated at $2,242 million in the fiscal year 1957, an increase of $105 million over 1956. The increase results primarily from an estimated rise of $62 million in the Government's payment, as employer, to the civil service retirement and disability fund (see table 4).

RELATIONSHIP OF DATA TO SPECIAL ANALYSIS D

The data used in this classification are related primarily to special analysis D, "Investment, operating, and other budget expenditures." Table 5 shows the relationship between that classification and this one.

The method for relating the data in this classification to special analysis D is as follows:

(1) All items which are classified in the major national security function (shown separately in special analysis D), together with the nonmilitary portion of the Mutual Security Program, the Federal Civil Defense Administration, the Selective Service System, and the United States Information Agency are here classified as protection.

(2) Interest here is identical with interest in both the functional classification and in special analysis D.

(3) The remainder of the expenditures is divided between civil benefits and civil operations and administration, as follows: (a) "Additions to Federal assets," "Expenditures for other developmental purposes," and "Current expenses for aids and special services," are considered civil benefits; (b) repair, maintenance, and operation of water-resource properties, and expenditures for shared revenues and miscellaneous grants-in-aid are also considered civil benefits; and (c) the remaining expenditures are considered civil operations and administration.

Special Analysis F

FEDERAL CREDIT PROGRAMS

Introduction

Federal credit programs are an important method for the achievement of public policy objectives. For example, as part of the Federal programs for improvement of housing and encouragement of home ownership, Federal agencies currently insure or guarantee about 40 percent of all outstanding home-mortgage loans. Similarly, financial assistance in the form of credit is an important part of the Federal program of encouraging efficient family-size farm units. Loans to help restore international economic stability and promote the economic development of underdeveloped areas have been a significant part of the Government's international program in recent years. Federal loans to business are primarily to help meet defense needs and to assist small businesses to obtain financing; they account for only a very small part of business credit. The President is recommending new credit aids as part of his programs for assistance to school construction, health facilities, and communities suffering from chronic unemployment. In addition to influences in these specific areas, Federal credit programs exert a powerful influence on the general level of economic activity.

The impact of Federal credit programs on the Federal budget is relatively small when compared with the large amount of credit extended or guaranteed. The most important reason for this is the predominance of Federal insurance and guaranties of private loans in recent years, discussed more fully later in this analysis. Such programs normally involve little or no budget expenditures except in cases when defaults require the guaranteeing or insuring agencies to take over private loans. Secondly, a substantial share of new commitments, both for insurance and guaranties and for direct loans, are canceled or expire without being used by the lending institution or the borrower. Finally, collections on loans in most cases directly offset disbursements on new loans, with the result that net expenditures are much less than gross expenditures; often net receipts occur.

Federal credit programs are intended to supplement rather than to substitute for private credit. They have expanded greatly in the postwar period. Direct loans outstanding increased from about $5 billion in 1945 to nearly $17 billion on June 30, 1955. However, this amount was less than 5 percent of the estimated private debt of $353 billion outstanding on that date. Private loans partly or wholly guaranteed by Federal agencies have increased more than sevenfold since 1945 to $45 billion, comprising 13 percent of total private debt.

Coverage of Special Analysis

This special analysis presents a broad picture both of direct Federal loans and investments, and of Federal loan insurance and loan guaranty programs. It summarizes new commitments, disbursements and repayments, loans outstanding and guaranties in force, new commitment authority, and status of credit authority of 18 major Federal credit programs. These programs account for nearly all new commitments of Federal credit agencies in the fiscal year 1957.

The analysis covers major credit programs of wholly owned Government enterprises, whether corporate or noncorporate. Included also are major credit operations of other departments and agencies, not primarily engaged in lending activities, such as the Treasury Department loan to the United Kingdom in 1947. Loan programs of important quasi-public agencies are excluded from the tables, but are discussed separately.

The analysis excludes interagency credit, such as borrowing from the Treasury by other Government agencies, whether for loan or other programs. Credit extended in connection with sales by the Federal Government, such as credit to finance sales of war surplus goods, is also excluded in general.

Summary

Total new commitments for major Federal credit programs for the fiscal year 1957 are estimated at $21.3 billion (table 1). Of this total, credit aids for housing and related programs, including loans and guaranties by the Housing and Home Finance Agency and the Veterans Administration, account for $15.8 billion, or nearly 75 percent; those for agricultural programs account for $4.3 billion, or 20 percent. The level of commitments in 1957 will be about the same as in 1956 with increased commitments for housing programs offset by decreases in new commitments by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

As indicated in detail in table 3 below, receipts of major credit programs will exceed expenditures by $128 million in 1957. The changes over the 3-year period are accounted for in large part by changes in the level of operations of price-support programs of the Commodity Credit Corporation.

New Commitments

New commitments provide the best single measure of the trends in most Federal credit programs. They also provide the best indication of trends in the economic impact of these programs, since changes in the magnitude of new commitments usually lead to corresponding changes in the volume of loans disbursed either by public agencies or private lenders.

In this study, commitments are defined as approvals by Federal agencies of direct loans or of insurance or guaranties of private loans. They are shown on a gross basis, including commitments which do not result in an actual credit extension. The amounts shown are the principal amounts of the loans; for several guaranty and insurance programs these exceed the Government's contingent liability, since the unguaranteed or uninsured portions are also included.

As table 2 indicates, commitments for Federal guaranties and insurance of private loans account for nearly 80 percent of total new commitments in 1957. This high proportion arises from legal requirements or administrative policy of making direct loans only where private credit, even with Government guaranty or insurance, is not available on reasonable terms, and from revisions in interest rates and other terms designed to make guaranteed and insured loans more attractive to private lenders. Many of the direct loans and investments also encourage private lending, for example, purchases of mortgages by the Federal National Mortgage Association from private financial institutions and discounts by the Federal Intermediate Credit banks of short-term farm credit extended by private lenders.

Direct loans and investments.—New commitments of $4.6 billion for direct loans and investments continue at approximately the 1956 level, apart from omission of 1957 figures for the International Cooperation Administration. The Housing Amendments of 1955 have authorized more liberal terms for college housing loans, administered by the Community Facilities Administration, and commitments are expected to more than double. The lending program of the Export-Import Bank is being expanded. On the other hand, it is expected that the price-support operations by the Commodity Credit Corporation will decline.

Guaranties and insurance.—New commitments for Federal guaranties and insurance of private loans are estimated at $16.7 billion in the fiscal year 1957, compared to $16.5 billion in 1956 and $14.8 billion in 1955. Guaranties and insurance of housing mortgages will be substantially higher mainly as a result of growing activities under the mortgage insurance programs for housing in urban renewal areas and the revised program authorized by the Housing Amendments of 1955 for mortgage insurance on family housing for the armed services. The increases in the housing programs account for virtually all of the increase since 1955. Commodity loan guaranties under the price-support program of the Commodity Credit Corporation are expected to decline sharply in 1957 primarily because of continuation of acreage restrictions and lower support levels on some commodities.

Overlap in commitments.—Total commitments may overstate by 1 to 2 billion dollars the net amount of credit assistance by the Federal Government, especially for housing credit. This is because two or more types of Federal assistance are sometimes provided for the same borrower or the same property at different stages in the financing process. No adjustment is made for this overlap, since the amount in any single year is difficult to estimate.

A substantial share of the housing initially constructed with the aid of mortgage insurance by the Federal Housing Administration is ultimately sold to veterans who finance their purchases with mortgages guaranteed by the Veterans Administration. The Federal National Mortgage Association purchases or participates only in mortgages previously insured by the Federal Housing Administration or guaranteed by the Veterans Administration.

Similarly, local housing authorities normally finance most or all of the construction of low-rent units with temporary loans made or directly guaranteed by the Public Housing Administration. These temporary obligations, however, are refinanced by sale of long-term obligations to private investors on the security of Federal annual contribution contracts.

DISBURSEMENTS AND REPAYMENTS

Direct loans and investments can have a major impact on the Federal budget, since the difference between disbursements and repayments represents Federal expenditures or receipts. Federal guaranties and insurance of private loans, on the other hand, ordinarily have only a minor effect on Federal expenditures, since they result primarily in expenditures by private financial institutions. Only if they have been taken over by Federal agencies as a result of defaults or otherwise are they reflected in budget expenditures. Net expenditures for Federal credit assistance give, therefore, only a partial picture of the economic impact of these programs.

Net expenditures of all Government lending programs—with the exception of loans from trust funds or by quasi-public agencies—are included in the budget totals. In most cases, collections are offset directly against expenditures; in a few major programs, however, they go directly to miscellaneous receipts and, therefore, do not affect budget expenditures.

Expenditures of most loan programs are shown in most budget tables on a net basis, that is, they reflect loan disbursements less repayments of old loans. In table 1 of this analysis, expenditures for loans are shown on a net basis. However, to indicate more clearly the total volume of loans, table 3 shows both gross loan disbursements and repayments (including those going directly to miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury). The difference between these two columns represents the net addition to or reduction in Federal loan assets (excluding primarily chargeoffs and recoveries) for the major credit programs during the fiscal year. To bring total expenditures for loans into line with budget expenditures, net expenditures of minor Federal programs and an adjustment for repayments going directly to miscellaneous receipts are shown.

In both tables 1 and 3, expenditure figures represent disbursements and repayments of loans only, and exclude all income and expense items. Losses actually incurred and written off are not included because no cash transaction is involved. Consistent with the general definition of budget expenditures investments and sales of United States Government securities are excluded.

In the fiscal year 1957, gross loan disbursements of major Federal credit programs are estimated at $6,846 million and repayments at $6,974 million. Net receipts of $128 million are thus only a minor fraction of the gross level of activity. Of the total repayments, $309 million will go directly to miscellaneous receipts, chiefly repayments of loans by the Farmers' Home Administration, the Rural Electrification Administration, and the Treasury loan to the United Kingdom. Allowing for this adjustment, together with net expenditures of $22 million for relatively minor credit programs, net budget expenditures for loans will amount to an estimated $203 million.

Gross disbursements for 1957 will be somewhat higher than in 1956, primarily as a result of increased expenditures by the Commodity Credit Corporation, in part from commitments made in prior years, and increases by the Federal intermediate credit banks mainly due to expanded farm production and rising costs. Repayments in 1957 are estimated at $7 billion, with no major change in the overall level during the 3-year period.

Measured in terms of both disbursements and repayments, the Federal intermediate credit banks represent one of the most active direct lending programs primarily because of the short-term nature of their advances which are frequently renewed; net expenditures of the banks in 1957 will be less than 2 percent of gross disbursements. Current levels of repayments are small when compared with current disbursements in the case of programs with predominantly long-term loans such as the Rural Electrification Administration, the International Cooperation Administration, or the college housing loan program of the Community Facilities Administration. On the other hand, repayments substantially exceed disbursements in the case of liquidating programs, including the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the loan to the United Kingdom, and the liquidating activity of the Federal National Mortgage Association.

Neither current repayments nor net expenditures provide any measure of the ultimate recoverability of the loans made. As indicated in the detailed statements on individual programs, interest or premiums cover expenses and losses for many programs. In some, the legislative mandates make losses probable from time to time, such as the nonrecourse loans of the Commodity Credit Corporation and the loan-guaranty programs of the Veterans Administration.

LOANS OUTSTANDING AND GUARANTIES IN FORCE

The best index of the level of Federal credit programs over a period of years is provided by the total of their outstanding loans, guaranties, and insurance in force.

Outstanding loans by the end of the fiscal year 1957 are estimated at $16.2 billion, approximately the same as at the end of 1956, but substantially below the 1955 level; this is primarily because of reductions in loans by the Commodity Credit Corporation, reflecting increased acquisition of commodities. About one-half of the loans outstanding are to foreign borrowers, including the loan of $3.5 billion to the United Kingdom, loans of $2.6 billion by the Export-Import Bank, and the $1.9 billion by the International Cooperation Administration.

Guaranties and insurance in force are estimated to increase to $60 billion by the end of the fiscal year 1957. The increase of nearly $15 billion in the 2 years since the end of 1955 reflects primarily increased guaranties of mortgage loans by the Veterans Administration and the Federal Housing Administration. These two programs account for 90 percent of all outstanding guaranties and insurance, and most of the remainder are long-term obligations of the Public Housing Administration.

The amounts shown include both the guaranteed and unguaranteed portion of outstanding loans in order to give a clearer picture of the economic impact of these programs and to tie in better with banking statistics. They do not, however, indicate the estimated contingent liability of the Federal Government, which is shown in table 6. The major program on which the contingent liability differs materially from the principal amount of the loans is the veterans' loan-guaranty program. By the end of the fiscal year 1957, the outstanding amount of such loans will be about $13.7 billion higher than the Government liability.

The probability that the Government will be called upon to take over any substantial part of the guaranteed or insured portion of outstanding loans is small, except possibly in a national financial emergency. Sizable assets are available to minimize any potential losses. Moreover, in the case of most mortgage insurance programs charging premiums, income in the past has been sufficient not only to cover expenses and current losses, but also to build up substantial reserves.

New Commitment Authority

New commitment authority includes any additional loan or loan guaranty authority made available or recommended. There are several kinds of new commitment authority. Budget authorizations are those included in budget totals of new obligational authority; they consist either of appropriations or of authorizations to expend from public debt receipts. Other authorizations, which do not normally give rise to budget expenditures, consist of insurance and guarantee authorizations and conditional authorizations which become available only under specified conditions.

Table 5 summarizes new commitment authority of the 14 major credit programs which will receive additional authority during the period. New commitment authority for the fiscal year 1957 is estimated at $7.2 billion compared to $12.5 billion in 1956. New authority required for the Federal Housing Administration in 1957 is sharply below 1956 because of the large carryover of unused authority; no new borrowing authority is requested in the budget for the Commodity Credit Corporation in 1957. About 67 percent of the new authority is required for guaranties and insurance of housing loans by the Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration.

New commitment authority for most credit programs is provided by Congress in the basic legislation rather than in appropriation acts. For example, the lending authority of the Export-Import Bank and the Small Business Administration, the borrowing authority of the Commodity Credit Corporation and the Public Housing Administration, and the various mortgage insurance authorizations of the Federal Housing Administration are all prescribed in the statutes governing these programs. Since new commitments can generally be financed out of uncommitted balances of prior authorizations, or out of funds made available by collections on outstanding loans, requests for new commitment authority in any 1 year are limited to relatively few credit programs. For example, in the fiscal year 1957, new commitment authority is requested for only five major programs—the Rural Electrification Administration, the Farmers' Home Administration, the Small Business Administration, the Community Facilities Administration, and the Federal Housing Administration; in addition, restoration of capital impairment is requested for the Commodity Credit Corporation. In several other programs, however, authority will become available in 1956 without additional action by the Congress, for example, the direct loan program of the Veterans Administration.

In several important cases, the authority provided by the basic statute is indefinite. The most important examples are guaranties and insurance of loans by the Veterans Administration, guaranties of defense production loans under section 301 of the Defense Production Act, and indirect guaranties of local housing authority obligations issued on the security of annual contribution contracts of the Public Housing Administration. In these cases, the tabulations show new authorizations equal to the net amount of the guaranteed or insured portion of new commitments.

A second type of new authority indefinite in amount exists in the case of loan programs where the authority can also be used for grants, purchase commitments, or other nonlending purposes. Major examples during the 3-year period are the programs of the Commodity Credit Corporation and the International Cooperation Administration. In these programs all the new obligational authority provided could legally be used for loans, but is not likely to be so used. Dollar loans by the International Cooperation Administration in the 3-year period account for only a relatively small part of the total assistance program, so that it would be misleading to include the total amount of the Mutual Security Program as new obligational authority for loan assistance. The data, therefore, show amounts for new authority adequate to finance estimated new commitments. Loans and guaranties by the Commodity Credit Corporation account for a substantial part of its program. Its total new obligational authority is, therefore, included, even though some of it will be used for nonlending purposes.

Status of Credit Authority

Unlike most other Government programs, commitment authority for the major credit programs is not normally provided for a single year, but remains available in most instances until utilized or until the statutory authority for the program expires. Hence, with only a few exceptions, the existing authority represents the cumulative total of amounts made available in prior years.

Cumulative net authority.—Three major types of commitment authority have been provided for Federal credit programs. A majority of the major programs operate on a revolving-fund basis, that is, collections on outstanding loans and expirations of insurance commitments permit reuse of the original authority. Limitations on such programs are ordinarily in terms of maximum amounts of loans outstanding, maximum borrowings from the Treasury, or maximum amounts of insurance or guaranty liability. Leading examples include almost all lending programs of Government corporations and the insurance programs of the Federal Housing Administration.

In the case of several noncorporate loan and loan insurance programs a maximum limitation is placed upon the total volume of loans and loan insurance commitments. Funds collected on such loans and expirations of such insurance are not available for reuse. Typical examples are the direct loan program of the Rural Electrification Administration and the direct loan and insurance program of the Farmers' Home Administration.

A few programs are not governed by any specific dollar limitations. These are limited only indirectly by the provisions of the statute or of the agency's regulations governing eligibility for Federal credit assistance. The amount committed depends primarily on the number of applications. The most important example is the loan guaranty and insurance program of the Veterans Administration. The loan guaranties authorized under section 301 of the Defense Production Act are also not specifically limited.

In the case of both the Commodity Credit Corporation and lending programs under the Defense Production Act, loans are financed from obligational authority which also finances nonlending programs. For the purposes of this analysis, the net authority available at the beginning of the year for these loan programs is set equal to the total available authority after deducting authority committed for nonlending programs. An exception is made for the International Cooperation Administration, because its dollar loans account for only a small and indefinite part of the total assistance given under the mutual security program in recent years and in 1957. Its authority at the beginning of the year is, therefore, shown as equal to loans outstanding and undisbursed commitments at the beginning of the year.

Credit authority available at the beginning of the fiscal year 1957 is estimated at $72.8 billion (table 6). New commitment authority of $7.2 billion is estimated to become available during the year. On the other hand, estimated expirations, certain repayments, and other reductions in outstanding authority amount to $4.8 billion. The net authority available at the end of the fiscal year 1957 is, therefore, estimated at $75.2 billion.

Charges against authority.—In addition to the $62.4 billion of outstanding loans and guaranties (shown in detail in table 4 but excluding here the portion of private loans not guaranteed or insured by the Federal Government), charges against the available authority include undisbursed commitments. These are expected to total $8.6 billion on June 30, 1957, for loans and guaranties together.

Digitized for FRASER

Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis

Uncommitted authority.—For major Federal credit programs as a whole, commitment authority at the end of the fiscal year 1957 is estimated to exceed charges against the authority by $4.2 billion. Of this unused lending authority, 69 percent is accounted for by several programs administered by the Housing and Home Finance Agency, including $1.2 billion by the Federal Housing Administration. A reduction of $2.4 billion in uncommitted authority of the Federal Housing Administration accounts for the major part of the decline of uncommitted authority between 1956 and 1957.

Since the indefinite authority of loan guaranty programs not subject to specific limitations is shown as equal to charges against the authority, the total uncommitted authority in table 6 does not reflect the fact that these guaranty programs could be expanded substantially under presently available authority. However, nearly 70 percent of the cumulative authority is subject to definite limitations.

Since this analysis is limited to major active or liquidating credit programs, substantial amounts of uncommitted standby authority of other programs are excluded. The most important examples are the $3 billion borrowing authority for the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, $1 billion for the Federal home loan banks, and $750 million for the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation. These are unlikely to be used unless a national financial emergency occurs.

Quasi-Public Credit Programs

The Federal Government also has a measure of responsibility for the credit programs of certain mixed-ownership corporations and other public agencies operating in whole or in part with private funds. The most important are the banks for cooperatives, the Federal land banks, the Federal home loan banks, the Federal Reserve banks, and the secondary mortgage market activity of the Federal National Mortgage Association.

The 12 regional banks for cooperatives make loans to agricultural cooperatives. Most of the stock in the banks is still owned by the Federal Government and the banks are supervised by the Farm Credit Administration. Loans outstanding at the end of the fiscal year 1955 were $322 million, compared to $305 million in 1954.

The 12 Federal land banks are now privately owned, but are sponsored by the Government and operate under the supervision of the Farm Credit Administration. These banks provide mortgage credit to farmers at relatively low interest rates through individual national farm loan associations. The amount of loans outstanding at the end of 1955 was $1,408 million, compared with $1,242 million a year earlier.

The 11 Federal home-loan banks are also now privately owned, but are supervised by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and have authority to borrow $1 billion from the Treasury, if necessary. These banks make both short-term and long-term advances to member savings and loan associations on the security of home mortgages or Treasury obligations, as well as unsecured short-term loans. Advances outstanding on June 30, 1955, were $1,017 million, compared with $675 million on June 30, 1954.

All of the stock in the 12 Federal Reserve banks is provided by the member banks, but the policies of the Federal Reserve System are controlled by the Board of Governors. Moreover, the Reserve banks, after paying 6 percent dividends to the member banks, pay 90 percent of their remaining profits to the Treasury, and their entire surplus reverts to the Treasury in the event of liquidation. As part of their normal central banking functions, the Reserve banks stand ready to make short-term discounts and advances for member institutions and also have a small program of direct loans to industry. The amount of discounts, advances, and industrial loans outstanding on June 30, 1955, was $128 million, with discounts and advances seasonally low on that date. One month later, they were $755 million.

The Housing Act of 1954 established as a part of the new Federal National Mortgage Association a fiscally separate unit, partially privately financed, to engage in secondary mortgage market operations. The new unit is intended to help make mortgage funds available throughout the country at market rates of interest. It may purchase only Government insured and guaranteed mortgages meeting the usual standards of private investors, and its operations must be self-supporting. The activity is financed initially by a Government stock subscription of approximately $93 million transferred from the earlier Association; private mortgage sellers are also required to buy stock, with provision for ultimate retirement of the Government stock. The Association may issue unguaranteed debentures; the Secretary of the Treasury may purchase up to $1 billion of these. It is estimated that at the end of 1957 its portfolio of mortgages will total $414 million and private stock investment will total $15 million.

Major Agencies or Programs

HOUSING AND HOME FINANCE AGENCY

Major credit programs administered by five constituents of the Housing and Home Finance Agency are included in this analysis. In addition, there are a number of minor programs—most of which are in liquidation—which are administered in the Agency.

Federal National Mortgage Association.—Under the Housing Act of 1954, the Federal National Mortgage Association was reconstituted as three fiscally independent activities—for secondary market operations, special assistance functions, and management and liquidating functions—under a single management. The secondary market activity is discussed above as a quasi-public credit program because of its partially private ownership.

The special assistance activity is intended to assist groups or areas otherwise unable to obtain private financing and to help prevent declines in housing activity. Authority is provided to make advance commitments, and to purchase $200 million in mortgages. In addition, the Association can purchase $100 million in immediate participations of 20 percent in mortgages, and agree on a deferred participation basis to purchase the remaining 80 percent of such mortgages in case of default. This authority in 1956 and 1957 will be largely directed toward supporting mortgages on housing in urban renewal areas. In addition, $250 million commitment authority for mortgages on cooperative and military family housing was authorized by the Housing Amendments of 1955. New commitments in 1957 are estimated at $187 million in mortgages and immediate participations and $235 million in deferred participations.

The management and liquidating activity of the new Federal National Mortgage Association consists of the liquidation of the $3 billion in mortgages and undisbursed commitments of the predecessor association. No new commitments can be made and mortgage purchase authority expires as mortgages are sold or repaid. Authority is provided to substitute private financing for Treasury borrowing through the sale of unguaranteed debentures. Purchases under outstanding commitments will be completed in 1956 and no additional mortgage purchases will be made in 1957 or later years. The outstanding mortgage portfolio at the end of 1957 is estimated at $2,195 million compared with $2,508 million at the end of 1956.

Urban Renewal Administration.—Under the Housing Act of 1954, the Housing and Home Finance Administrator is authorized to make loans and grants to local public agencies for the planning and execution of slum clearance and urban renewal projects. Loans are made to cover the cost of project planning, and for the temporary financing of project development. In addition, private temporary loans may be guaranteed through the pledge by local agencies of the Federal loan commitment. Borrowing authority of $1 billion is available for these purposes.

The level of loan activity is determined primarily by the number of projects in the development stage. Planning has been completed in an increasing number of communities, and many projects have entered the actual development stage, so that financing needs are increasing. New loan commitments are estimated to increase from $42 million in 1955 to $128 million in 1956 and $160 million in 1957. Net loan expenditures are expected, however, to remain at relatively low levels because of the short-term nature of the loans, and the increasing use of guaranteed private financing in lieu of direct Federal loans.

The current interest rate on these loans is 2⅞ percent. Administrative expenses are financed from a separate appropriation.

Community Facilities Administration.—The Housing Act of 1950 authorized $300 million for long-term loans to colleges and universities for the construction of dormitories and student and faculty housing. The Housing Amendments of 1955 increased the authorization to $500 million; broadened the definition of eligible facilities; increased the maximum maturity from 40 to 50 years; substituted a statutory formula for administrative determination of interest rates, thereby reducing the current interest rate from 3.25 percent to 2.75 percent; and liberalized previous provisions to require the substitution of private financing for Government loans only if available at the same low interest rate. These amendments have sharply increased demand for loans; as a result, loan commitments in 1957 are estimated at $215 million compared to $48 million in 1955 and $106 million in 1956. The uncommitted balance of loan authority of $69 million at the end of 1957 will be reserved for institutions which have applications in process. Legislation is being proposed in this budget to provide an additional $100 million of authority and permit increases in interest rates sufficient to cover the cost of money to the Treasury and to make loans more attractive to private investors.

The Housing Amendments of 1955 also authorized $100 million for a new program of loans to local governments for public facilities, such as water and sewage systems. Preference is to be given to communities with a population of less than 10,000. Commitments under this program are estimated at $8 million in 1956 and $25 million in 1957. Interest rates are required to cover all expenses of the program. Under present market conditions, interest rates have been set at 3.75 percent for general obligation bonds of 30-year maturity and 4.25 percent for revenue bonds of the same period, with upward or downward adjustments for variation in the maturity period. It is expected that these interest rates will permit private refinancing during the 2-year period of Government commitments totaling $3 million.

Federal Housing Administration.—The Federal Housing Administration is authorized to insure against default (a) the full principal amount of a wide variety of mortgage loans on new and existing housing, and (b) up to 90 percent of the principal amount on unsecured home improvement loans. The basic program of insuring loans for 1- to 4-family housing accounts for the bulk of mortgage insurance activity, but insurance is also provided for mortgages on rental housing, housing under cooperative ownership, and housing on military reservations and in urban renewal areas. Approximately 17 percent of all outstanding home mortgages are insured by the Administration.

New insurance commitments, chiefly on mortgages, are expected to rise sharply in 1956 and 1957 mainly as a result of growing activity under the mortgage insurance program for housing in urban renewal areas and the revised program authorized by the Housing Amendments of 1955 for mortgage insurance on family housing for the armed services. In 1957 it is estimated that commitments will be made for insurance of mortgages on 731,950 dwelling units and for 1.3 million home improvement loans.

The Administration's program is fully self-supporting. Insurance premiums, fees, and other income will cover all current expenses and add substantially to the reserve against future losses. The current maximum interest rate is 4½ percent for insured home mortgages and 4¼ percent for mortgages on rental housing, exclusive of the insurance premium and service charges.

Public Housing Administration.—Under the Housing Act of 1949, the Public Housing Administration makes loans and grants to assist local authorities in the construction of low-rent public housing. These loans and grants are made under annual contribution contracts between the Administration and local authorities. The annual contribution contracts provide for (1) loan commitments by the Administration not to exceed 90 percent of project development costs, and (2) the payment of annual Federal contributions over a 40-year period to cover debt service on the bonds used to finance the project permanently.

Loan commitments under annual contribution contracts are either disbursed as direct Federal advances or used to guarantee private temporary loans. Most frequently, a direct Federal advance is made initially and later refunded with guaranteed financing. Ordinarily long-term bonds are sold to private investors prior to completion of construction, and all temporary financing, both direct and guaranteed, is retired. However, under some circumstances, the period of temporary financing may be indefinitely extended. The Administration's borrowing authority for these purposes is $1.5 billion. Because of the decline in the number of units under construction, the volume of temporary financing, including both public and private loans, will decline during 1956 and 1957.

Prior to completion of construction, the units are permanently financed by the local housing authority through the sale of 40-year serial bonds to private investors. While not directly guaranteed by the Federal Government, these local housing authority bonds are treated in this analysis as guaranteed obligations by virtue of the Government contract to pay annual contributions covering debt service. The outstanding permanent financing is expected to increase from $1.8 billion at the end of 1955 to $2.7 billion by the end of 1957, reflecting the completion and permanent financing of a large number of units started in earlier years.

On direct Federal loans, local authorities are charged at the present time an interest rate of 2⅞ percent. In the past year interest rates on private temporary loans have averaged about 1.5 percent and on long-term loans have ranged between 2.33 and 2.55 percent, depending primarily on variations in market rates of interest.

VETERANS ADMINISTRATION

This analysis includes the loan guaranty and insurance programs, and the direct housing loan program authorized under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, as amended. It excludes minor lending activities of the Veterans Administration, such as the policy loans made by the veterans' life insurance funds and a few very small inactive programs.

Loan guaranties and insurance.—The Administrator of Veterans' Affairs guarantees housing, business, and farm loans made by private lenders to veterans of World War II and the Korean conflict. By June 30, 1955, approximately 4,204,000 loans of all types had been guaranteed, of which 93 percent were for homes, 5 percent for business, and 2 percent for farms; currently housing loans account for nearly 99 percent. It is estimated that annual loan guaranties approved will increase from 571,000 during 1955 to 640,000 during 1957. This increase reflects the growing veteran population, the continuing high demand for housing, and an adequate supply of mortgage credit. There is no statutory limit on the total amount of the loans. The maximum interest rate on guaranteed loans is 4½ percent, and on most insured loans 5.7 percent.

Under existing legislation, the Government is liable for all losses on most loans up to 60 percent of the outstanding principal amount, or $7,500, whichever is less. No charge is made by the Government for its guaranty. Administrative expenses are paid from the general operating expenses appropriation of the Veterans Administration and claims are paid from a general appropriation for veterans' readjustment benefits. Net losses on claims paid up to June 30, 1955, amounted to about $37 million, or less than one-half of 1 percent of loan guarantees and insurance made since the program's inception.

Direct housing loans.—In areas where the guaranty program is ineffective because of lack of private loans at 4½ percent interest, the Veterans' Administrator may make loans directly to veterans for the purchase, construction, or improvement of homes (including farm housing) at 4½ percent interest. New commitments for direct loans in 1956 and 1957 are expected to be lower than in 1955, largely due to the success of the Voluntary Home Mortgage Credit Program in placing loans with private lenders. It is estimated that 97,971 direct loans will have been made by June 30, 1957, when the program expires.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

Three major credit programs of the Department of Agriculture are included in this analysis.

Rural Electrification Administration.—Since 1935, the Rural Electrification Administration has been making loans with 35-year maturities, chiefly to cooperatives, to finance construction of electrical distribution, transmission, and generating facilities to serve rural areas without central-station service. Since 1950, similar loans have been made to finance construction and improvement of rural telephone systems.

New obligational authority is provided annually in the budget to finance these programs. New commitments for 1957 will be $265 million, the same as for 1956, but $48 million higher than in 1955. Most of the disbursements in 1957 will arise from commitments made in previous years; undisbursed commitments of $655 million at the end of 1957 will be the basis for disbursements for the following 3 years, on the average.

Interest rates are set by statute at 2 percent, somewhat below the present cost of long-term money to the Treasury of about 2⅞ percent. Administrative expenses are financed by a separate appropriation. Collections of principal and interest are deposited in miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury.

Farmers' Home Administration.—The Farmers' Home Administration makes loans to farmers unable to obtain credit from other sources for farm operating expenses and crop production, farm ownership and improvement, and for soil and water conservation activities. Loans are intended to strengthen the family-type farm and encourage better farming methods. These loan programs are financed by annual authorizations. The Administration may also insure a maximum of $100 million a year in long-term mortgage loans under the farm ownership program and a maximum of $25 million a year under the soil and water loan program.

New direct loans are expected to amount to $180 million in 1957, compared with $167 million in 1956. The increase reflects mainly $15 million requested under proposed legislation for loans on small farms as a part of the expanded rural development program. The President is proposing legislation to broaden the authority under the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act to permit the Farmers' Home Administration to make loans for farm housing previously possible only under title V of the Housing Act of 1949, as amended. With this change, further extension of the authority for farm housing loans under title V beyond its present termination date of June 30, 1956, will not be necessary.

The volume of loans insured by the Farmers' Home Administration is expected to amount to $81 million in both 1956 and 1957, compared to $48 million in 1955. This increase reflects primarily the Administration's policy of putting greater emphasis on guaranteed loans, instead of on direct loans. The Secretary of Agriculture has authorized interest rates on insured farm ownership and soil and water loans of 4½ percent, of which one-half percent represents the insurance premiums and one-half percent a charge for administration.

The interest rate on most of the direct loans is 5 percent. Administrative expenses are covered by separate appropriations. Collections of interest and principal go into miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury.

The Farmers' Home Administration also administers a revolving fund from which emergency loans may be made to farmers and stockmen suffering from production disasters and unable to obtain credit from other sources. The interest rate is 3 percent on all loans except special livestock loans on which the rate is 5 percent. New commitments in 1957 are expected to be substantially below the 1956 and 1955 level, and repayments are estimated to exceed disbursements in both 1956 and 1957.

Commodity Credit Corporation.—In carrying out the Government's program of supporting prices of agricultural commodities, the Commodity Credit Corporation makes

http://fraser.stlouisfed.org/
Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis

direct loans to farmers, guarantees loans made by private lending agencies, and issues certificates of interest in its loans to private banks. Loans and guaranties enable farmers to market their commodities in an orderly manner and secure prices for such commodities in line with the standards set forth in law. Loans are backed by commodities and borrowers may discharge their obligations without personal liability by turning over pledged commodities to the Corporation. These forfeitures of collateral are treated as repayments of loans in this analysis. The Corporation also makes loans for the construction or improvement of farm-storage facilities.

The Corporation's borrowing authority was increased from $10 billion to $12 billion in 1956. No additional borrowing authority is requested for 1957. However, a $929 million appropriation will be needed to restore the impairment of the Corporation's capital resulting from 1955 operations of the price support and related programs New loan and loan guaranty commitments in the fiscal year 1957 are estimated at $1,700 million which is over a billion dollars less than the estimate for 1956. Repayments of direct loans in 1957 are estimated at $3,165 million, $184 million more than estimated disbursements.

Interest rates on 1955 crop loans will be continued at 3½ percent. This rate is charged the borrower only if the loan is repaid in cash; if repaid by surrender of collateral, no interest is charged. In the case of guaranties, the private lender receives interest at the rate of 2½ percent, plus service charges.

FARM CREDIT ADMINISTRATION

The Farm Credit Administration supervises the Federal intermediate credit banks, production credit corporations, the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation (in liquidation), the Federal land banks, and the banks for cooperatives. All except the Federal intermediate credit banks are either quasi-public agencies or relatively inactive in extending credit.

Federal intermediate credit banks.—The 12 Federal intermediate credit banks extend credit to production credit associations and privately capitalized farm-lending institutions by discounting short-term notes to help finance the production needs of farmers. To finance their operations, the banks sell short-term debentures to the public. The banks may have obligations outstanding of not more than 10 times their capital and surplus. Their capital and surplus can be increased by additional subscriptions from a revolving fund in the Treasury. The total obligational authority of $1,123 million available on June 30, 1955, includes these increases in the banks' funds.

New commitments of these banks have risen steadily in recent years, mainly as a result of expanding farm production and rising costs. Reduced farm income and the resulting need to renew loans also have contributed to the rise in commitments. In 1957 they are expected to amount to $2,085 million, which is almost 9 percent higher than in 1955. Repayments, however, will nearly cover disbursements, with net expenditures estimated at $32 million.

Interest rates charged vary with the costs of funds to the individual banks, and on January 1, 1956, ranged from 3 to 3¼ percent. They are set high enough to cover all expenses. One-quarter of the net income of the banks is paid to the Treasury as a statutory franchise tax and the rest is added to their surplus and reserves, which on June 30, 1955, amounted to $52 million.

EXPANSION OF DEFENSE PRODUCTION

Under the Defense Production Act, the President is authorized to make loans or advances or to guarantee loans for expansion of defense production. Numerous agencies participate in these programs. The Defense Production Act expires on June 30, 1956, but the President has requested its extension for 2 years.

Loan guaranties.—Under section 301 of the Defense Production Act, the Departments of the Army, the Navy, the Air Force, Commerce, the Interior, and Agriculture, the Atomic Energy Commission, and the General Services Administration are authorized to guarantee loans by public or private financing institutions to defense contractors and subcontractors. The Federal Reserve banks act as fiscal agents for the guaranties of private loans, and the procedure is governed by the Federal Reserve Board's regulation V. No specific limitation is placed on the amount of loan guaranties.

From the beginning of the program in September 1950 to the end of December 1955, more than 1,400 V-loans, totaling $2.6 billion were authorized by the procurement agencies. More than 95 percent of the guaranties have been authorized by the Departments of the Air Force, the Army, and the Navy, primarily to speed the production of aircraft and aircraft parts, electronics and communication equipment, tanks, weapons, and ammunition. Guaranties by the General Services Administration to expand production of basic minerals and metals and machine tools account for nearly all of the remainder. The volume of new commitments will continue to decline in 1957 as expansion goals are being reached.

To cover administrative expenses and possible losses, charges are made for guaranties, depending upon the proportion of the loan guaranteed. This proportion has averaged about 75 percent. The guaranteed portion of loans must be purchased by the procurement agency upon request of the lender. So far, income has substantially exceeded expenses. Financing institutions may charge a maximum interest rate of 5 percent and a commitment fee of one-half to 1 percent.

Loans and advances.—Under section 302 of the Defense Production Act, the President is authorized to make direct loans or to participate in private loans for the expansion of industrial capacity, development of technological processes, or production of essential materials. The President has delegated this authority for loans to domestic borrowers to the Treasury Department since the liquidation of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and for foreign loans to the Export-Import Bank. The authority is available for borrowers upon certification by the appropriate defense agency as to essentiality to the defense effort. Most of the loans have been made to assist in expanding the production of copper, steel, and other basic minerals and metals. Loans by the Export-Import Bank account for only a relatively small part of the total. New loans in 1956 were made under Executive Order 10634 in connection with damage to defense production facilities by hurricanes and floods, primarily in the Northeastern States. No new commitments are expected in 1957, since most of the planned expansion is already underway. It is anticipated that a large part of the loan portfolio will be sold or refinanced privately in 1957, thus reducing loans and commitments outstanding from $243 million in 1956 to $78 million by the end of 1957.

Under section 303 of the same act, the General Services Administration makes advances on purchase commitments for strategic minerals and metals and industrial equipment. No new advances are expected in the 3-year period.

Interest rates charged on both loans and advances are generally 5 percent. No net ultimate cost is expected.

SMALL BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION

The Small Business Administration was created in 1953, and is authorized to make loans to small businesses and to victims of disasters.

Loans to small businesses are authorized up to a total of $150 million outstanding at any one time. The maximum loan to any one borrower is $250,000, and maximum maturity generally 10 years. Loans may be made only if financial assistance is not otherwise available on reasonable terms and if there is reasonable assurance of repayment. Moreover, direct loans are made only where the extension of credit jointly with private banks is not possible. The budget assumes that the 1956 level of about 1,200 loans will continue in 1957. More than two-thirds of the loans made so far have been made jointly with private banks. The current interest rate on small business loans is 6 percent.

The Administrator also has broad authority to make loans to victims of floods or other disasters. Generally, his policy is to designate disaster areas, residents of which are eligible for special financial assistance. There is no limit on the amount that may be loaned to each borrower, but the aggregate outstanding at any one time may not exceed $25 million. The President is recommending that this limitation be increased. Loans for housing may have maturities up to 20 years, but other loans are limited to 10 years. Interest rates on disaster loans are set by law at 3 percent. The Small Business Administration also administers disaster loans previously made by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Appropriations of $105 million have been made to finance the small business and disaster loans programs since the agency was established. An additional $30 million will be needed to finance loans in 1957.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT

The only credit programs administered by the Treasury Department and included in this analysis are the liquidation of Reconstruction Finance Corporation loans and the 1947 loan to the United Kingdom. The Treasury Department is also authorized to make civil defense loans, up to $250 million outstanding at any one time, upon certification by the Federal Civil Defense Administrator; however, no new commitments for civil defense loans are anticipated for 1956 and 1957.

Reconstruction Finance Corporation.—The Reconstruction Finance Corporation Liquidation Act provided for termination of the Corporation on June 30, 1954. The Corporation's foreign loans have been transferred for liquidation to the Export-Import Bank, certain mortgages to the Federal National Mortgage Association, disaster loans to the Small Business Administration, and business and public agency loans to the Treasury Department. During the 3-year period from June 30, 1954, to June 30, 1957, business and public agency loans and commitments will have been reduced from $283 million to about $58 million.

Loan to United Kingdom.—A loan of $3,750 million was made to the United Kingdom in 1947 and 1948. It is a 50-year loan at 2-percent interest. Repayments of principal have been made on schedule, beginning in 1951. They are deposited directly in miscellaneous receipts and are not available for new loans.

EXPORT-IMPORT BANK OF WASHINGTON

The Export-Import Bank is the principal foreign lending agency of the Government. Its total loan and loan insurance authority is $4.9 billion; in addition, it has $100 million of authority to insure American exporters against certain risks of expropriation and confiscation. Its major goal is the expansion of trade between the United States and foreign countries. It extends loans to finance American exports and imports and the development of sources of strategic materials, and to promote the economic development of underdeveloped countries. The Bank also acts as an agent for the International Cooperation Administration in the Department of State in administering loans and makes a limited number of loans under authority of the Defense Production Act.

Increased emphasis is being placed by the Bank on guaranteeing loans, rather than making loans directly. The Bank has also instituted a system of extending lines of credit to approved exporters. Loan maturities vary from twelve or more months on export credits to a number of years on developmental loans. Interest rates vary with the type of loan and are directly related to prevailing yields on United States Government securities; they are lower on loans made to or guaranteed by a foreign government. Present rates range from 3½ percent on short-term export credits to 6 percent on certain long-term unguaranteed loans. Losses have been extremely small and income is more than adequate to cover costs; reserves amounting to $365 million on June 30, 1955, have been set aside for future contingencies. Annual dividends are being paid to the Treasury at the rate of 2¼ percent on capital stock.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

The only credit program of the Department of State included in this analysis is that of the International Cooperation Administration. The Administration and its predecessor organizations—the Foreign Operations Administration, the Mutual Security Administration, the Economic Cooperation Administration, and the Technical Cooperation Administration—have made loans to foreign governments as part of a broad program to assist in the restoration of economic stability and to promote the economic development of underdeveloped areas in the free world.

More than half of the loans were made during 1949, shortly after passage of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1948. Most of the loans are administered by the Export-Import Bank as agent for the International Cooperation Administration. Their maturities are 28 years, except a loan to India which is for 30 years, and the basic materials development loans which are for 10 to 20 years. Interest charges on most outstanding loans are 2½ percent, with interest on some loans up to 5 percent. Costs of administering the loans are financed from funds available for the general administration of the agency. The first significant repayments begin in 1956.

Special Analysis G

FEDERAL ACTIVITIES IN PUBLIC WORKS AND OTHER CONSTRUCTION

Information on Federal public works and other construction activities is presented in this analysis on an overall basis because these activities are an important part of the total construction activities of the Nation. Detailed information on each program is shown in part II of the budget under the agency responsible for the program. A reconciliation of the public works expenditures with the major categories of special analysis D, entitled "Investment, operating, and other budget expenditures" is shown on page 1139.

Direct Federal construction currently constitutes about 8 percent of total construction in the United States, and federally aided State and local construction represents another 4 percent. Most of the public works facilities and structures are built by the private construction industry under contracts with Federal, State, or local agencies. Substantial amounts of private construction also result from Federal assistance and incentives to private organizations and individuals.

This analysis describes the various Federal construction activities, and the tables on pages 1140 to 1144 summarize the authorizations and expenditures for direct Federal construction and for grant and loan programs to aid State and local construction. Some of the various forms of Federal assistance to private construction activities are also indicated in the narrative statement, but the Federal cost of this assistance is not included in the figures on public works expenditures.

The expenditures shown for public works in this analysis are budget expenditures rather than the value of the work put in place during the year. Although budget expenditures for a continuing program approximate the value of work put in place on federally owned projects, they include only the Federal portion of the cost of the State and local public works aided. The non-Federal portion of the total cost of Federal grant programs for public works approximately equals the Federal share, but for individual projects or governmental units this share may vary substantially.

The volume and types of Federal construction vary from year to year as national needs and objectives change. Economic conditions and fiscal policies, the level of construction costs, and the magnitude of State, local, and private construction also affect the Federal program.

Total Federal expenditures for public works are estimated to increase from $4.2 billion in the fiscal year 1956 to $4.5 billion in 1957. Although expenditures for military public works and atomic-energy construction are expected to decline by $62 million, this will be more than offset by an increase of $364 million in civil public works expenditures, including direct Federal construction and grant and loan programs. The increases in direct Federal construction are largely the result of progress on construction of water-resources projects, started in 1955 and 1956, and new public-building projects to be started in 1957. Increases in Federal-aid expenditures reflect principally the proposed program of Federal assistance for general school construction.

Civil Public Works

The term "civil public works" as used in this analysis includes all those public construction activities, financed or aided by the Federal Government, which are required for the civil functions of the Nation, as distinguished from those works required for major national security programs. Expenditures for civil public works in 1957 reflect the administration's partnership policy in the development of natural resources and other public works. This policy is carried on by relying on private initiative wherever possible, by encouraging State and local interests to formulate plans and to undertake developments on their own responsibility, by sharing in the costs where national responsibilities are involved, and by undertaking as Federal developments those essential projects which are clearly within the area of Federal responsibility. The budget for the fiscal year 1957 includes some new and expanded public works programs for enhancing the economic growth and well-being of the Nation.

Table 2 summarizes expenditures for civil public works for the fiscal years 1955, 1956, and 1957, by Federal agency.

[a] Deduct.
[1] Includes outstanding obligations and unobligated balances as of June 30, 1956.

Approximately 83 percent of the total expenditures for Federal civil public works in the fiscal year 1957 will be for projects and programs started in earlier years. Expenditures for continuation of this work in 1957 are estimated at $1.9 billion, with $6.5 billion required in later years to complete. Included in this continuing work are a number of direct Federal water resources projects and several programs for the development of other natural resources such as construction of roads and facilities in the national forests and parks which will require a number of years to complete. Also included in continuing work are the grants to States for the Federal share of the work to be done on Federal-aid highways under apportionments made through the fiscal year 1956.

Expenditures for new projects and programs in 1957 are estimated at $315 million, with $3.2 billion required thereafter to complete. A total of 77 authorized water resources projects are recommended for starting in 1957. Under proposed legislation, the Bureau of Reclamation will undertake additional comprehensive water resource developments, the Corps of Engineers will start new navigation facilities, a new Federal assistance program for general school construction will be inaugurated, the Tennessee Valley Authority will begin construction of two additional steam-electric generating units, and a number of new buildings for the use of the Federal Government will be undertaken. Funds are also included under proposed legislation for Federal participation in 1957 in partnership water resources projects.

INVESTIGATIONS AND STATUS OF PLANNED AND AUTHORIZED PROJECTS

Efficient and economical design and construction of public works require adequate basic data and surveys and careful preparation of plans for these facilities prior to construction. Effective use of public works for countercyclical purposes also requires that they be planned well in advance so as to be available for undertaking when economic conditions and budgetary policy warrant. Construction expenditures in this analysis do not include costs of basic data collection and preliminary surveys; however, they do include detailed project planning costs.

Basic data.—The programs for collection of basic data are designed to meet a wide variety of nationally important needs, as well as to provide data for use in the investigation and planning of Federal and other construction projects. A total of $54 million is recommended in the fiscal year 1957 for general coverage data collection including geodetic surveys and topographic mapping, geologic and soil surveys, and assembly of hydrologic and climatologic data.

Preliminary surveys and investigations.—Careful preliminary investigation is necessary to determine the need for projects and their engineering and economic feasibility. Inadequate examination of the factors involved in project formulation before authorization may result in approval of projects having questionable justification or in seriously underestimating project costs. Appropriations and allotments totaling $15 million are included for the fiscal year 1957 for preliminary investigations of river basin and other construction programs. In addition, $1 million is included under proposed legislation for a survey to determine whether hydroelectric power can be economically developed from the tides at Passamaquoddy Bay.

Detailed planning.—Preparation of project plans in advance of construction provides for orderly programing of project construction and may prevent expensive changes in project designs during the construction period. Such planning also provides an opportunity to verify the economic feasibility of projects, as well as their estimated cost, before construction is started. Funds for advance preparation of plans in the fiscal year 1957 are estimated at $26 million. This total includes $8 million to enable the Corps of Engineers and the Bureau of Reclamation to plan a number of projects already authorized by the Congress. Planning will also be underway on some Federal hospitals and buildings. In addition, a substantial amount of planning is carried on as construction progresses on large water resources projects.

The budget also provides $12 million of new authority under the Housing Amendments of 1955 for the Housing and Home Finance Agency for repayable advances to State and local agencies for the planning of their public works.

Authorized reserve.—An adequate authorized reserve of soundly conceived projects is necessary to permit a wise selection of projects for starting in accordance with program needs and economic and budgetary requirements. Agency reports indicate that, on the basis of present costs, $10.3 billion of work has been authorized, either by general or specific legislation, and is scheduled in the agencies' advance programs. About $8 billion of this authorized work is included in the river basin programs of the Corps of Engineers and the Bureau of Reclamation.

TABLE 4.—Reserve of authorized projects and programs after fiscal year 1957, by agency

| | Total cost of projects (billions) |
|---|---|
| Projects authorized by specific legislation: | |
| Corps of Engineers | $5.8 |
| Bureau of Reclamation | 2.3 |

| Projects or programs considered to be authorized by general legislation: | |
| Civil Aeronautics Administration | .3 |
| Forest Service | .9 |
| National Park Service | .2 |
| Other agencies | .7 |
| Total | 10.3 |

Planned projects.—By the end of the fiscal year 1956 Federal agencies will have an estimated $0.8 billion of authorized Federal projects planned to a stage where construction could be started, and advance planning in various stages of completion on an additional $3.8 billion. Comparable totals for 1957 are estimated at $1.5 billion and $3.6 billion, respectively. Most of this planned reserve consists of water resources projects. By the end of 1957, the Corps of Engineers will have completed planning on about $529 million of work on which construction will not have started, and the Bureau of Reclamation, about $518 million. In addition, the Corps of Engineers will have planning in process on another $2.1 billion of work, and the Bureau of Reclamation will have planning underway on $723 million of work. A substantial amount of planning will also have been done by State and local agencies on highways, airports, and hospitals for which Federal grants are authorized.

PROGRAMS BY MAJOR FUNCTION AND TYPE OF FACILITY

Civil public works expenditures are listed in table 5 according to the major functions used in this budget for the classification of Federal programs, with subclassifications according to the type of facility involved. Most functions require some public works. In some functions, expenditures for public works represent only a small part of the total cost of the functional program. In other functions such as natural resources, over one-half of the expenditures are for various types of construction. About 75 percent of total civil public works expenditures in 1957 will be for natural resources and transportation programs.

NATURAL RESOURCES

The natural resources programs include the multiple-purpose control and development of rivers and streams for flood control, irrigation, hydroelectric power, municipal water supply and other purposes, and the conservation and development of land, forest, mineral, recreational, and fish and wildlife resources. Public works expenditures for these purposes will amount to $688 million in 1957, compared with $707 million in 1956, which includes $32 million for the flood disaster relief work in the Northeastern States. By far the largest proportion of these expenditures is for water resources developments.

Corps of Engineers.—The water resources program of the Corps of Engineers is nationwide in scope, except for the Tennessee Valley area. It involves the construction of multiple-purpose storage reservoirs for flood control, hydroelectric power and related purposes; the construction of protecting levees and flood walls; the improvement of floodways; and beach erosion control works. Navigation projects of the Corps of Engineers are discussed in this analysis under the commerce and housing section.

In 1957, construction will be continued on 22 multiple-purpose projects, including work on 2 additional power-generating units at Garrison Reservoir, 96 predominantly flood-control projects, and 6 beach erosion projects. The multiple-purpose projects are widely distributed throughout the country. In flood-control work, emphasis will be given to the acceleration of protective works in the northeast which are to be started in 1956, and to the continuation of construction on the Mississippi River and its principal tributaries, particularly the Missouri. Large flood-control projects are also underway in the Los Angeles and Central Valley areas of California and in central and southern Florida. Seven projects now underway will be completed in 1957.

[1] Nonconstruction costs excluded; proposed legislation included.

Eighteen new local flood-protection projects, which will provide benefits primarily to urban and industrial areas, are recommended for starting in 1957. Six of these will be completed within that year. Eleven new flood-control reservoirs will be initiated in 1957, one of which will be completed within the year. Two beach erosion projects will be started and funds are also provided for initiation of work on a second powerplant at Fort Peck Dam in Montana.

Bureau of Reclamation.—The Bureau's program for development of water resources for irrigation and other purposes in the 17 Western States consists primarily of continuation of construction on 53 irrigation and power projects, including 22 units of the Missouri River Basin program. Two of these projects and one of the Missouri River Basin units will be completed during the fiscal year 1957. Rehabilitation work on 10 reclamation projects constructed in prior years is also scheduled for the 1957 program. About three-fourths of the recommended funds will be for the following 12 major developments: Palo Verde diversion project in Arizona-California; Central Valley, Santa Maria, and Solano projects in California; Palisades project in Idaho; Weber Basin project in Utah; Columbia Basin project in Washington; Bostwick division in Nebraska-Kansas; Glendo unit in Wyoming; Helena Valley and Yellowtail units in Montana; and additions to the electric power transmission system in the Missouri River Basin.

Bureau of Reclamation facilities scheduled for completion in 1957 will provide a full water supply for 184,000 new acres and supplemental water for 689,200 acres of presently irrigated lands.

The 1957 budget also provides funds for initiation of construction by the Bureau of Reclamation on the Collbran project, Colorado, and the Talent division of the Rogue River Basin project, Oregon, as well as powerplants and related facilities on the Colorado-Big Thompson project, Colorado, and Weber Basin project, Utah. In addition, funds are recommended under proposed legislation for initiation of construction of the comprehensive Upper Colorado River development in the States of Arizona, Colorado, New Mexico, Utah, and Wyoming; the Fryingpan-Arkansas project in Colorado; the Ventura project in California; the Juniper division of the Wapinitia project in Oregon; and the Washoe project in Nevada-California. The total cost of these five developments is estimated at $1.1 billion. Appropriations of $20 million will be required for the initial year of construction, with first-year expenditures estimated at $8.6 million.

International Boundary and Water Commission.—This Commission participates with a similar agency of Mexico in the construction of water conservation and control facilities on the Rio Grande River. The 1957 program of the Commission consists of continuation of construction of Anzalduas Dam, started in 1956.

Tennessee Valley Authority.—The water resources development program of the Authority is generally similar to that of the Corps of Engineers except that it is confined to the Tennessee River Basin. In addition to hydroelectric facilities, most of them associated with multiple-purpose projects, the agency has a number of steam-electric generating stations and an electric power transmission system. Power from these facilities and from hydroelectric plants of the Corps of Engineers in the Cumberland River Basin is used to supply the needs of consumers, including the Atomic Energy Commission, throughout the TVA power area.

The 1957 construction program of the Authority provides for starting construction of two additional steam-electric generating units at the Johnsonville steam plant and continuation of construction of one unit proposed to be started in 1956 at the John Sevier steam plant. Funds are also provided to start construction of a new navigation lock at Wilson Dam and of additional fertilizer manufacturing facilities. Budget expenditures in 1957 for construction of TVA facilities are estimated at $64 million.

Summary of Federal electric power activities.—A substantial part of the construction under Federal water resources development programs includes provisions for generation of electric power. This power is produced by hydroelectric facilities included in multiple-purpose reservoir projects such as those constructed by the Corps of Engineers, the Bureau of Reclamation, and the Tennessee Valley Authority. In addition, the TVA has steam-electric generating plants in operation and under construction.

Generating capacity installed by Federal agencies now amounts to 17.33 million kilowatts, or about 16 percent of the total capacity of the class I utility systems in the United States. An additional 2.68 million kilowatts of capacity is scheduled for completion during the calendar years 1956 and 1957, which will bring the total Federal capacity to 20.01 million kilowatts. When all projects now under construction or programed in the budget are completed, total capacity will be about 23.12 million kilowatts.

In the fiscal year 1957 additional transmission lines required for the integration and marketing of federally produced power will be constructed by the Bonneville Power Administration, the Bureau of Reclamation, and the Tennessee Valley Authority. A total of 1,082 miles of transmission lines will be added to existing Federal systems during that year, bringing the total in operation to about 27,200 miles. Expenditures in 1957 for these facilities will be $62 million.

Federal participation in partnership water resources projects.—In line with the administration's policy of participating with non-Federal interests in the development of water resources where national interests are involved, this budget includes $20 million under proposed legislation to enable the Bureau of Reclamation and the Corps of Engineers to participate in 1957 in new partnership undertakings such as the Green Peter-White Bridge Reservoir in Oregon, the John Day Reservoir in Washington and Oregon, and the Bruces Eddy Reservoir in Idaho. It is expected that the Federal Government will construct or finance the nonpower aspects of these projects. Assistance will be given to other partnership projects as specific proposals are developed. In addition, the Markham Ferry project in Oklahoma for which the Federal share of the cost was provided in 1956, is expected to be under construction by non-Federal interests in 1957. Work on the Cougar multiple-purpose project in Oregon, begun as a Federal project in the fiscal year 1956, will continue on a basis which, under pending partnership legislation, will permit local interests to install power facilities.

Summary of water resources and related developments.—While the major part of water resources development is classified under the natural resources function, other water resource developments are carried out under programs for agriculture and agricultural resources and commerce and housing. Expenditures for all of these water resources and related developments are brought together in table 7.

Other natural resources programs.—Expenditures for other public work programs under the natural resources function will amount to $89 million in the fiscal year 1957, as compared with $81 million in 1956. Work under these programs includes construction of roads and trails in the national forests, national parks and on other public lands, and continuation of work on 6 national parkways. Provision is also made for the construction of buildings, utilities, and other facilities to help accommodate the increasing number of visitors at the 181 national park and monument areas. Construction by the Bureau of Indian Affairs includes work on about 500 miles of roads and trails, on irrigation systems, and on buildings and utilities needed principally for the Indian educational program. The program of the Fish and Wildlife Service includes continuation of construction of the Devil's Kitchen Dam on the Crab Orchard wildlife refuge. The Bureau of Mines will continue construction of helium production facilities, and will make further grants to the State of Pennsylvania for drainage of anthracite mines.

COMMERCE AND HOUSING

The public works activities under this function include various transportation facilities, housing and community development, and construction of civil defense facilities. Transportation facilities constructed or financed by the Federal Government include highways and roads, air and water navigation aids and facilities, and the Alaska Railroad. Expenditures for transportation facilities, amounting to $1,073 million, account for 46 percent of the expenditures for civil public works in 1957.

Public roads.—The Bureau of Public Roads administers a program of grants to States to aid in the construction of highways, and also constructs highways in the national forests and on other public lands. Pending final determination of the amounts required for the President's Interstate Highway program, the dollar estimates included in this budget under proposed legislation cover only the continuance of the Federal-aid highway program at the annual level authorized in the 1954 act. Expenditures for grants under the present program are estimated to be $787 million in 1957. The Federal-aid highway systems now have a combined total length of about 742,000 miles. Other highway and road expenditures by this agency will provide in 1956 and 1957 for construction and improvement of some 895 miles of forest highways, which link with the principal highway systems of the Nation, as well as for access roads.

Water navigation aids and facilities.—The largest expenditures in this area are by the Corps of Engineers. Navigation projects of the Corps include improvement of channels and harbors, construction of locks, dams, canals, and alteration of obstructive bridges, as well as navigation features of some multiple-purpose projects. In 1957, construction will be continued on 61 navigation projects, including 14 channel and harbor projects, 1 lock and dam, and 1 bridge which will be substantially completed in that year. Construction will be initiated on 13 new channel and harbor projects (including 1 project under proposed legislation), 1 bridge, and 28 small projects costing less than $150,000 each. Four of the new channel and harbor projects and all of the small projects will be completed in 1957.

The Saint Lawrence Seaway Development Corporation is constructing that part of the Saint Lawrence Seaway which is in United States territory. Related navigation improvements are being built by Canada, and the power development of the Saint Lawrence River is being constructed by the State of New York and the Province of Ontario. Estimated Federal expenditures in 1957 on construction of the seaway amount to $42 million.

Airports and air navigation and research facilities.—Expenditures by the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics for research facilities are expected to decline as a result of the completion of the $75 million Unitary Plan wind tunnel program initiated in 1950. Projects proposed in the 1957 budget include new facilities for studying flight at hypersonic speeds, improvement of existing facilities to permit testing at higher altitudes and higher temperatures, and other improvements in research facilities at the Langley, Ames, and Lewis laboratories. The total cost of the proposed facilities is estimated to be $15 million.

Under an expanded program of Federal grants-in-aid for the construction of airports, projects will be programed at approximately 420 airports during 1957. Expenditures for this program in 1957 are estimated at $50 million. Expenditures for installation of air navigation facilities throughout the Nation will increase to $19 million. Work on the previously authorized expansion of the Washington National Airport will be virtually completed in 1957.

Other transportation facilities.—The Office of Territories will continue construction in 1957 on highways in Alaska and on the Alaska Railroad, and will spend $17 million for these purposes. Funds are also provided for construction of the Jones Point Bridge over the Potomac River near the District of Columbia.

Housing and community facilities.—The Federal Government encourages the construction of low-rent public housing units through loans to local housing authorities. The 1957 budget contemplates starting construction of 35,000 units as compared with an estimated 25,000 units in 1956. In addition, it is estimated that 23,000 units will be completed in 1957 compared with 17,000 in 1956. The Housing and Home Finance Agency will provide loans to colleges and universities for the construction of dormitories and other facilities in those instances where private financing is not available. Gross loans in 1957 are estimated to amount to $60 million, of which $27 million will be to public institutions. Other expenditures consist largely of payments on grant commitments for defense community facilities, loans for public facilities under the Housing Amendments of 1955, and provision of public works in Alaska and the Virgin Islands.

Civil defense.—Under this program, financial assistance is provided to States and localities for the construction and renovation of emergency control centers and civil defense training facilities. Expenditures in 1957 are estimated at $2 million.

VETERANS' SERVICES AND BENEFITS

Under the hospital program of the Veterans Administration, authorized in 1947 and subsequent years, 71 new hospitals and 11 conversions of existing hospitals have been completed. Construction of new facilities at Topeka, Kans., and Houston, Tex., will continue, and construction of neuropsychiatric hospitals at Cleveland, Ohio, and in the San Francisco Bay area, California, will begin in 1957. The two remaining general hospitals, for Washington, D. C., and Cleveland, Ohio, are scheduled for construction after 1957, although the 1957 budget includes funds for preparation of architectural drawings.

Of the four replacement projects currently contemplated, the one at Long Beach, Calif., is now being designed and will be under construction in 1956; the first phase of construction at Downey, Ill., will begin in 1957; and the architectural drawings for the Jackson, Miss., and Oakland, Calif., projects are scheduled to be started in 1957.

Other activities under this function include work by the Quartermaster General of the Army to maintain existing monuments and cemeteries and to provide additional grave sites, and construction by the American Battle Monuments Commission on 14 cemeteries in foreign countries. Construction of a memorial in Hawaii and one each on the east and west coasts of the United States are also proposed.

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS AND FINANCE

Public works activities under this function provide for starting construction of office buildings and living quarters, where necessary, for the United States Government abroad. In addition, provision is made for remodeling and construction of an addition to the State Department building in Washington, D. C., at a total estimated cost of $58 million.

LABOR AND WELFARE

Health facilities.—The Department of Health, Education, and Welfare administers a program of grants to States to aid in the construction of hospitals and other medical facilities. Only the grants made to public agencies are included as public works in this analysis; those for private facilities are shown in table 8. Expenditures in 1957 for grants to public agencies will amount to $37 million, or 45 percent of total medical facilities grants.

The Department's health programs also include, in 1957, construction of hospital and other medical facilities for the Indian population, and a new maximum security building and major repair and rehabilitation work at St. Elizabeths Hospital, Washington, D. C.

Education and research facilities.—Legislation to authorize a new 5-year program of general assistance for school construction is recommended. The budget includes $375.5 million of new obligational authority for this program in 1957, with expenditures estimated at $150 million. Although part of this money might be used to purchase local school bonds and to help establish reserve funds to help assure payments of obligations issued by State school-financing agencies, the whole amount is classified under grants-in-aid in this analysis. A 2-year extension of Public Law 815, which authorizes Federal grants for school construction in defense areas and districts burdened by Federal activities, is also proposed. Expenditures for school construction assistance in federally affected areas are estimated at $94 million in 1956 and $63 million in 1957.

Prison facilities.—The 1957 construction program for the Federal Prison System includes 2 new penal institutions and various minor projects at 13 institutions. Other construction, by Federal Prison Industries, Incorporated, will provide maximum employment and training opportunities for prisoners.

AGRICULTURE AND AGRICULTURAL RESOURCES

The Department of Agriculture, in 1957, will continue the program of upstream flood-prevention work, including construction of diversion ditches, floodways, and floodwater-retarding structures, in the 11 watershed areas authorized under the 1936 Flood Control Act, and will also continue work in a number of small pilot watershed treatment areas for which funds were first appropriated for the fiscal year 1954. An increase in funds is provided in 1957 for the new program started in 1955 under the Watershed Protection and Flood Prevention Act. Under this act the Department provides technical and financial assistance to States and local groups for works of improvement in upstream watersheds to prevent damages from soil erosion, floodwater, and sedimentation, and to further the conservation, development, utilization, and disposal of water. Total expenditures of the Department in 1957 on works of improvement under these three programs will amount to $21 million.

Other construction work by the Department of Agriculture in 1957 includes more adequate facilities for research and for further development of the National Arboretum.

GENERAL GOVERNMENT

Public works classified under this function include the construction and major alteration and improvement of administrative and other buildings required to carry on the Government's business. The 1957 program contemplates starting a new headquarters for the Central Intelligence Agency. Also proposed are (1) the initiation of a general program of air conditioning of Government buildings where warranted by climatic conditions, and (2) the remodeling for general office use of those buildings which the Post Office Department will no longer need as new buildings become available under its lease-purchase program. The lease-purchase programs carried on by the General Services Administration and the Post Office Department are discussed in a later section on "Other Federal activities in construction."

Other direct Federal construction in this category includes continuation of work on new office buildings for the Senate and House of Representatives, and extension and reconstruction of the central portion of the Capitol.

In addition, the Federal Government provides assistance, through grants and loans, for construction of various facilities in the Territories and the District of Columbia. The Office of Territories will assist in construction of a high school, rehabilitation of the civil auditorium, and other improvements in Samoa; and rehabilitation or construction of schools, hospitals, powerplants, and various other facilities in the Pacific Islands Trust Territory. Federal loans assist the District of Columbia in a program of general public improvements.

Major National Security Construction

Department of Defense, military public works.—The military public works program includes both overseas and domestic operational, tactical, logistical, training, and testing facilities for the Air Force, Army, and Navy. Additional facilities are also being constructed for the civilian components reserves and the National Guard.

In the fiscal years 1956 and 1957, emphasis will be placed on the further development of those Navy airfields used for training and for operation of jet aircraft and the provision of facilities for berthing and drydocking the large-type aircraft carriers. The Air Force will continue the construction of strategic and air defense installations, including expansion and modification of the aircraft control and warning system. The Army will concentrate on construction of antiaircraft guided missile facilities. Family and troop housing, community facilities, and a moderate amount of replacement construction are also included in these service programs.

Expenditures for the above purposes are estimated at $1.9 billion in each of the fiscal years 1956 and 1957.

Atomic Energy Commission.—Expenditures in 1957 by the Atomic Energy Commission will provide primarily for continuing construction of production plants begun in prior years. Work will also continue on the atomic power reactor at Shippingport, Pa., the very high energy accelerator at Brookhaven National Laboratory, and other research and development facilities. Of the projects authorized in 1956, expenditures will be chiefly for weapons facilities, reactors and related facilities, including ground prototypes of a surface ship reactor and a submarine advanced reactor, and facilities related to the development of civilian atomic power. New projects proposed for 1957 include improvements to existing production plants, additional weapons development facilities, modifications required to ground test facilities related to the Aircraft Nuclear Propulsion program, various research facilities, and some community and administrative construction. Total expenditures in 1957 are estimated at $301 million.

Other defense related construction.—A major increase in plant capacity at the Government-owned plant at Nicaro, Cuba, for the extraction of nickel and cobalt, is planned for completion in 1957 at a total cost of about $43 million.

Other Federal Activities in Construction

In addition to publicly owned civil and national security public works, there are other types of Federal activities, involving loans, loan guaranties, grants, or direct Federal expenditures, which affect construction. The distinguishing feature of these expenditures is that they contribute principally to the physical assets of cooperatives, and nonprofit private groups, or of individuals, whereas public works are limited both in the foregoing sections of this analysis and in special analysis D to additions to Federal, State, and local governmental physical assets.

Digitized for FRASER

Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis

ASSISTANCE TO COOPERATIVES AND NONPROFIT GROUPS

One important group of these programs consists of Federal assistance to cooperatives and nonprofit institutions such as colleges and hospitals, for the construction of facilities. These are discussed below and shown in table 8.

TABLE 8.—Federal expenditures for cooperatives and nonprofit groups (not included in civil public works)

| Total | 266.6 | 282.8 | 325.5 |

[b] Deduct, less than $50,000.

The Rural Electrification Administration makes loans primarily to rural cooperatives to finance electrification facilities and rural telephones. Electrification loans approved through the calendar year 1955 total $3 billion. Over 93 percent of the farms in the United States now have central-station electric service and new electrification loans are largely for additional generating facilities and heavier distribution systems, required by increased customer demands. The rural telephone loan program was initiated in 1950. About 600,000 subscribers will be provided with modern telephone service under approved loans now totaling about $264 million.

Grants are made to States by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare for construction of both public and privately owned hospitals and medical facilities. Grants for public facilities are classified as public works and are discussed elsewhere in this analysis. Expenditures for private facilities, most of them operated on a nonprofit basis, represent 55 percent of total grants for medical facilities and will amount to $45 million in 1957. A new program of grants for assistance in the construction of medical and dental research and teaching facilities is also proposed, with first-year appropriations of $40 million.

Under proposed legislation, the Federal Government will, in 1957, also encourage construction of more adequate medical facilities through the guarantee of private loans for such construction.

Provision is also made in the budget for the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare for the continued construction of buildings for Howard University and Gallaudet College.

Loans in 1957 to private, nonprofit colleges and universities by the Housing and Home Finance Agency for the construction of dormitories and other facilities are estimated to amount to $33 million.

The Bureau of Old Age and Survivors Insurance will continue construction in 1957 of a new building to house its central operations, to cost about $25 million. This building is being financed from the Federal old-age and survivors insurance trust funds.

AIDS FOR PRIVATE CONSTRUCTION

Another group of Federal programs, consisting of loans, loan guaranties, tax concessions and occasional grants, direct aid, and other incentives, stimulates construction by farmers, homeowners, and businesses. This construction adds up to an important segment of the Nation's total construction.

In the field of housing, the Federal Housing Administration and the Veterans Administration operate programs for the insurance or guarantee of mortgages on private homes, under which substantial amounts of private housing are financed. In 1957, increased private investment in housing will be encouraged by expansion of the military housing mortgage insurance program, and by mortgage insurance on cooperative and urban renewal housing. The Federal Housing Administration will also insure mortgages on new and rehabilitated houses in urban blighted areas and on low-cost housing for families displaced by slum clearance.

The Farmers' Home Administration makes direct loans for farmhouses, buildings, and water facilities, and insures private loans for these purposes. The Department of Agriculture's program for soil and water conservation and flood prevention also encourages construction of water-control structures on farmers' lands. The Commodity Credit Corporation makes loans for the construction or expansion of grain-storage facilities and provides storage-use guaranties to encourage commercial construction of such facilities.

The Congress, in 1954, provided basic authority for a lease-purchase program to acquire needed Federal public buildings. Under this program, new buildings are built by private interests, and the Federal Government makes payments extending over a period of 10 to 25 years. At the end of the period the Federal Government will own the buildings. Fifty-three projects involving construction costs totaling $105 million were approved during the first session of the 84th Congress. Additional projects costing over $250 million are expected to be considered for approval by the end of 1957. It is anticipated that 38 buildings will be completed and occupied during 1957.

Special Analysis H

FEDERAL AID TO STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS

Federal expenditures for aid to State and local governments in the fiscal year 1957 are estimated at $4,019 million, 6 percent of all net budget expenditures. This total, which includes grants-in-aid, revenues shared with the States or their subdivisions, and loans to States and other public bodies, is $302 million above the revised estimate for the same purposes in the current fiscal year. Individual programs are listed in the detailed table in this special analysis.

Some increase over 1956 is estimated for nearly all the grant-in-aid programs. Major elements in the overall increase of $302 million are the proposed new program of general assistance for school construction, for which expenditures in 1957 are estimated at $150 million; substantial additional amounts for highway and airport grants; and an increase for the unemployment insurance program, partly because some of the collections of the Federal payroll tax will be credited next year to the individual State accounts instead of a reserve fund to be held for loans to the States.

Table 1 shows Federal-aid expenditures for the years 1948 through 1957 and their relative budgetary importance for the Federal Government and the State and local governments.

In June 1955 the Commission on Intergovernmental Relations established in 1953 completed its studies of the division of responsibilities between the Federal Government and the State and local governments. The Commission report and 15 supporting studies were transmitted by the President to the Congress and were also published. The Commission's suggestions concerning Federal grants-in-aid and other aids to States and their subdivisions, as well as tax sources, governmental functions, and intergovernmental tax immunities, are now under review in the Executive Branch.

General description of the analysis.—Federal aid is a device of intergovernmental cooperation through which the Federal Government helps to finance selected State and local programs of special national interest or concern. Most Federal aid takes the form of grants-in-aid. In the estimates for the fiscal year 1957, net budget expenditures for grants total $3,853 million, including $374 million under proposed legislation; shared revenues total $90 million; and loans, $77 million, including $2 million under proposed legislation.

The amounts shown as Federal aid do not include Federal administrative expenses incurred in providing the aid to State and local governments. The figures do include aid to the District of Columbia and the Territories.

Grants-in-aid.—In the case of grants-in-aid, the Federal financial participation is not based on a particular service rendered specifically for the Federal Government by the State or local government but instead supports a State or locally administered program. In most cases, the distribution of Federal funds among the States is determined by a formula set forth in the basic law.

The laws governing grant-in-aid programs contain provisions restricting Federal expenditures to specified purposes. States or local governments seeking to qualify for grants are usually required to meet certain conditions and standards on such matters as State or local financial participation, approval of State plans, the designation of an administering agency, a merit system of personnel selection, reporting system, and audits. In their details, these Federal requirements vary considerably among programs.

Legislation governing a few grant-in-aid programs permits aid to private nonprofit agencies or institutions. The program of grants to aid in the construction of hospitals and other health facilities, administered by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, is an illustration. It is estimated that $45 million or 55 percent of Federal expenditures for these grants in the fiscal year 1957 will be used for private hospitals and other private health facilities. The program, nevertheless, is one in which the States have a central role through the preparation of statewide programs, the approval of individual projects, and the channeling of the Federal payments. Therefore the entire amount authorized and spent for the program is included as Federal aid in this table. The part going to private institutions is indicated separately.

On the other hand, certain Federal programs may incidentally involve grants to particular State or local governmental agencies, even though they are not primarily programs of grants-in-aid or loans to State or local governments. For example, the Public Health Service and the National Science Foundation make research grants to colleges and universities, including some State and local institutions. These payments are not included in the tabulation.

Payments of unemployment allowances to veterans of the Korean conflict and to former Federal civilian employees are considered direct Federal programs. The States, as a service to the Federal Government, make the benefit payments through their unemployment compensation offices as agents of the Federal Government and are fully reimbursed. Their expenses of administration are paid by the Government as part of its general grants-in-aid for unemployment compensation and employment service administration. These administrative costs in the States are not separately identifiable and are therefore included in the Federal-aid total even though the benefit payments are excluded.

In a few instances, grants-in-kind are made, usually involving commodities, services, or structures; wherever these can be identified in the budget they have been included in this analysis. Principal among them are grants of agricultural commodities to schools, welfare departments, and other public agencies. This is additional to the grants specifically for the national school lunch program, shown under labor and welfare. On the other hand, the donation of previously acquired property or its sale at less than cost is not reflected in the figures. For example, the tabulation omits grants of surplus public housing properties to local agencies which, on the basis of original cost, are estimated at $51,894,000 in 1955, dropping to $14,616,000 in 1956, as the dispositions are largely completed.

Shared revenues.—Classified as shared revenues are (a) payments to States and localities of a portion of the proceeds from the sale of certain Federal property, products, and services; and (b) payments to the Territories of certain Federal tax collections derived within their boundaries or from transactions affecting them. Shared revenues from property and products are derived mainly from public lands in the West, and the Federal law usually requires that the State or local share be used for schools or for schools and roads in the county where the Federal lands are located. The payment of tax collections to the Territories (e. g., internal-revenue collections for Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and Samoa) are included in this analysis to the extent that they are included in budget receipts and expenditures. Some revenues collected under Federal laws for the benefit of the governments of Guam, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands are paid directly to those Territories, without affecting Federal budget accounts.

Loans and repayable advances.—Loans are made to State or local governmental bodies by several Federal agencies for specified types of public improvements, such as low-rent public housing, slum clearance, and urban renewal, by the Housing and Home Finance Agency. Also included in the category of loans are certain advances made by the same agency for the planning of non-Federal public works; these advances are repayable if the planned projects are carried out. Advances are also made by the Federal Civil Defense Administration in the operation of its supply procurement fund, which represents a central purchasing operation for State and local civil defense stocks. In the fiscal years 1956 and 1957 States and municipalities will procure directly a greater volume of their supplies and equipment, thus reducing advances from the fund.

Part of the Alaska public works expenditures represents Federal advances of funds to be repaid by the government of the Territory.

Budget expenditures for loans in most cases are net amounts, representing for any year the gross amount of loans and advances minus credits for certain collections during the year. As estimated for the fiscal year 1957, gross disbursements for loans and advances to State and local governments are estimated at $581 million, collections at $504 million, and the net excess of loans over collections at $77 million. In a few cases, collections are not deducted from gross disbursements but, instead, are credited directly to miscellaneous receipts of the Treasury. These collections (which are shown in special analysis B as repayments of loans by States, municipalities, and other public bodies) totaled $257,000 in 1955 and are estimated at $108,000 in 1956 and $110,000 in 1957.

Major programs.—In the budget estimates for 1957, grants to States and local governments account for four-fifths of all budget expenditures estimated for labor and welfare, and about half of the net expenditures for commerce and housing.

The largest grant program is public assistance, for which the budget includes $1,312 million of grant expenditures under existing laws and $166 million under proposed legislation to continue temporarily the present Federal formula governing grants to State public assistance payments. The next largest grant is for the construction of highways, estimated at $787 million of expenditures in 1957. The President has recommended an expanded program of highway grants to assure early improvement of the 40,000-mile interstate highway system; pending final determination of the amounts involved for the interstate system, the expenditure estimate covers only the continuance of the present annual level of authorizations.

The President is recommending also a 5-year program of general assistance for school construction, for which the budget includes $375 million of new obligational authority for 1957, with expenditures estimated at $150 million. Although part of this money might be used to purchase local school bonds and to help establish reserve funds to assure payments of obligations issued by State school-financing agencies, the whole amount is classified under grants-in-aid in this analysis.

In addition, the President is recommending a 2-year extension of the program of Federal aid to assist communities in providing new schools in areas especially affected by Federal activities. Other large construction grant programs are for hospitals and other health facilities and for airports.

Major nonconstruction grant programs, besides public assistance, include aid for school operation in areas especially affected by Federal activities, State administrative costs of unemployment compensation and employment services, provision of school lunches, public health services, vocational rehabilitation, and vocational education.

Proposed legislation.—Federal aid to State and local governments would be affected by several of the recommendations for legislation which are included in the budget. Besides the school and highway construction programs, and temporary continuance of the present formula for public assistance grants, the President is recommending grants to help strengthen State industrial safety programs; the extension and improvement of the public health grants, including mental health; assistance to enable the Territory of Alaska to take over the care of the mentally ill; an increase in grants for child welfare services; and new programs relating to nurse training, the reduction of juvenile delinquency, improvement of educational opportunities for mentally retarded children, and the promotion of self-help and self-care among persons on State public assistance rolls.

Factors affecting aid expenditures and allocations.—The amounts expended for most programs of Federal aid are subject to two kinds of limitation: The establishment of maximum amounts in the basic authorizing laws and the necessity for annual appropriations by the Congress. However, in the public assistance program the Federal payment is a reimbursement to the States of a portion of their expenditures. The amount paid to each State is determined by a statutory formula applied to actual caseloads and individual benefit rates established by the State. Consequently, the amount appropriated in advance does not necessarily limit the total of Federal payments for a given year. Congress customarily provides a deficiency appropriation if this is necessary to cover the claims submitted by the States.

Most Federal grant-in-aid statutes provide for the allocation of money among the States according to formulas containing specified measures of need, such as population, area, per-capita income, incidence of certain diseases, or road mileage. These formulas vary considerably from one program to another, depending on the nature of the

http://fraser.stlouisfed.org/
Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis

activity or services for which the aid is given. A few grants are allocated to States as a percentage of State expenditures within specified statutory limitations. Other grants are distributed as an equal amount to each State. Some allocation formulas are statutory while others are established by the administering Federal agency on the basis of criteria listed in the laws.

The vocational rehabilitation formula enacted in 1954 provides for variation by States in both the allotment of funds and the requisite matching share, in inverse proportion to per-capita income. Similar formulas are recommended in this budget for grants-in-aid in the field of health.

Citations to the basic laws are included in the pertinent appropriation language in part II of the budget, which also contains the appropriation accounts from which the detailed table in this analysis is compiled. Statutory citations for grants-in-aid and shared revenues are published annually by the Treasury Department in the Annual Report of the Secretary of the Treasury on the State of the Finances (table 105 in the Report for 1954). The Secretary's Annual Report shows also, by programs, the Federal payments to the individual States in the last completed fiscal year (table 106).

Relationship to other budget figures.—All the amounts shown in this special analysis represent budget expenditures, as defined in the introduction to part I. In most cases, the expenditures in a given fiscal year correspond closely to the amount of the appropriation, but in some instances the expenditures for grants or loans are made from an appropriation which also finances direct Federal operations or Federal administrative expenses. When this occurs, the amounts tabulated in this analysis ordinarily represent an estimate of that part of the expenditure which is paid as aid to State and local governments. Also, there are certain programs—chiefly construction—where there are substantial differences between appropriations (or other authority to incur obligations) for any year and expenditures in that year. This arises from the fact that construction projects usually cannot be completed and paid for within a fiscal year. In 1957, for example, the hospital construction and school construction programs of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare show substantial differences between the recommended appropriation and estimated expenditures.

The detailed tabulation of Federal expenditures for aid to State and local governments is arranged according to the functional classification used in the budget message. In order that this analysis may be related readily to the analysis of investment, operating, and other budget expenditures presented in special analysis D, that tabulation shows separately in each category the amounts of Federal aid to State and local governments. In table 2, the Federal-aid programs are recapitulated to follow the outline of special analysis D.

[2] Less than one-half million dollars.

District of Columbia.—Many Federal-aid programs provide financial assistance for specific public services in the District of Columbia on the same basis as in the States. In addition, this analysis includes programs of particular aid for the District of Columbia in the form of a general contribution to help defray the costs of the local government, assistance in building the District's hospital center (which is additional to aid made available under the general State-aid hospital and health facility construction program), and loans for capital outlays under the District government's public works program.

Other financial relationships.—Apart from grants-in-aid, loans, and shared revenues, many other Federal expenditures and policies affect the finances of State and local governments. Types of transactions not covered in the tabulation of aids include the following:

(a) Reimbursements for various specific services, such as payments to public educational institutions for tuition of veterans and of students from the Armed Forces and payments to local governments for care of Federal prisoners in local institutions.

(b) Contractual payments to public institutions for research and training in specified fields.

(c) The value of surplus educational and hospital supplies, materials, and equipment, and of housing and other real estate donated or sold at substantial discounts to State and local agencies. The surplus public housing mentioned earlier is in this category of omitted grants-in-kind.

(d) The payments of property taxes, or payments in lieu of property taxes, made upon Federal property under the provisions of various laws. When such payments are based upon a percentage of revenues, however, as in the case of the Tennessee Valley Authority, they are included in the shared-revenue section of the table.

(e) The transfer to the unemployment trust fund of the excess of receipts from the Federal unemployment tax over operating costs of the Federal-State unemployment compensation and placement program to the extent that this annual transfer is devoted initially to setting up a reserve of $200 million from which loans can be made to States which will deplete their own reserves for benefit payments. Such loans, if made, will be trust fund transactions and therefore would not be reflected in the tabulation of budget expenditures for Federal aid. The $200 million reserve will be completed with $49 million of the transfer to be made in July 1956, and it is estimated that a further transfer of $32 million will be available for credit to the accounts of the several States. The $32 million is classified as a Federal expenditure for grants-in-aid.

In addition, the table does not reflect various indirect financial benefits accruing to State and local governments, such as the lower interest rates which those governments may enjoy because of exemption from Federal income tax of interest paid on State and local debt; the indirect Federal guaranty of municipal obligations issued for low-rent housing and urban renewal; deductions of State and local income, property, and other taxes from personal and corporate incomes in computing Federal income tax; services which may be rendered to other governmental units by Federal agencies in the ordinary course of their operations; and some programs administered cooperatively for the purposes of both the State and Federal Governments, such as agricultural crop reporting or the National Guard.

Some of these financial benefits, of course, have counterparts in the form of services rendered or occasional payments made to the Federal Government by the States or their subdivisions.

Special Analysis I

FEDERAL RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT PROGRAMS

Net budget expenditures for the research and development programs of the Federal Government in the fiscal year 1957 are estimated at $2,557 million. This is an increase of $301 million over 1956 and $472 million over 1955. The increase from 1956 to 1957 is primarily for national security programs, which account for $226 million of the aggregate $301 million increase in expenditures. These amounts include expenditures both for the conduct of research and for increase of research and development plant. Conduct of research includes funds spent for applied and developmental research as well as for basic or fundamental research, the latter amounting to less than 10 percent of the total.

Table 1.—Total Federal research and development expenditures

[In millions]

| Purpose | 1955 actual | 1956 estimate | 1957 estimate |
|---|---|---|---|
| Conduct of research and development | $1,898.2 | $2,011.5 | $2,225.5 |
| Increase of research and development plant | 186.5 | 244.6 | 331.2 |
| Total | 2,084.6 | 2,256.1 | 2,556.7 |

Research and development expenditures for major national security activities account for 84 percent of the total Federal expenditures for this purpose in 1957, of which the military functions of the Department of Defense alone account for 62 percent and the Atomic Energy Commission 21 percent. Other research and development expenditures in 1957, totaling 16 percent, are chiefly accounted for by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare with 5 percent, the Department of Agriculture with 4 percent and the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics with 3 percent. Included under the heading "major national security" in table 2 are expenditures of the Department of Defense for military functions and for mutual weapons development under the program of military assistance to our allies, the Atomic Energy Commission, and the General Services Administration for increasing the supply of strategic and critical raw materials under the program for expansion of defense production.

| 1956 (estimated) | 1,921 | 335 | 2,256 |
| 1957 (estimated) | 2,147 | 410 | 2,557 |

The total research effort of the Nation is under continued study by the National Science Foundation as a basis for recommending to the President policies to strengthen research and to define the role of the Federal Government in its support.

Federal support for research and development is estimated to represent approximately half the total expenditures of the country for this purpose. Private industry is the second largest supporter of research with lesser amounts provided directly by foundations and educational institutions and minor amounts by State and local governments.

In this analysis the term "conduct of research and development" includes activities in which the primary aim is either to develop new knowledge or to apply existing knowledge to new uses. These activities may be carried out in Government installations or in the facilities of private, State, or local organizations using Federal funds. Generally excluded from this definition are expenditures for routine testing, mapping, and surveys, experimental production, information activities and training programs including fellowships for the support of graduate students in the sciences. This special analysis also omits expenditures of the Census Bureau, Bureau of Labor Statistics, and other agencies for the collection of general-purpose statistics, some of which were included in the similar tabulations of "Federal research and development programs" in preceding budgets. The major economic statistical programs of the Federal Government are discussed in special analysis J in this budget.

Expenditures for increase of research and development plant include amounts for physical facilities such as land, buildings, and major equipment, regardless of whether the facility is to be used or owned by the Federal Government or by a private, State, or local organization.

All expenditures in this special analysis are net budget expenditures as defined in the introduction to part I of the budget; the estimated amounts include expenditures from supplemental appropriations proposed for later transmission. Table 17 relates the figures in this special analysis to the analysis of investment, operating, and other budget expenditures presented in special analysis D.

Department of Defense—Military Functions

The objective of the military research and development program of the Department of Defense is to develop new and improved weapons, equipment, and techniques which will significantly increase the effectiveness of the Armed Forces. The program consists primarily of applied research and development to meet this objective, with some support of basic research directly related to current development programs or likely to have future military significance.

CONDUCT OF RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

This special analysis includes those expenditures for conduct of research and development by the Department of Defense which are provided for in the research and development category of the Department's budget. This category includes contracts with industry and nonprofit institutions and work in the laboratories and test stations of the military services. Estimates on this basis give a fair indication of the costs directly related to the Department's research and development programs, but they omit substantial costs associated with research and development which are carried in other budget categories. One example is the costs of military personnel engaged in research, development, and test activities, estimates of which are shown separately in table 4; another is the construction of research and development facilities included in the military public works category, discussed separately below. Of much greater significance, however, are the costs in the procurement categories for production in quantity of prototypes of new weapons and equipment for test and evaluation, for facilities for experimental production, and for procurement of certain standard supplies and military equipment used in research, development, and test activities. Prototypes of the many new types of combat and support aircraft under development, the construction of experimental ships of many classes, and the large quantities of developmental missiles and test vehicles required in the expanding guided missiles programs of the three departments are examples of types of major developmental costs which fall in the procurement categories of the budget. The portions of the procurement programs which support research and development cannot be clearly defined, but it is estimated that they are at least equal to the total shown for Department of Defense research and development in this analysis and that the amounts involved are increasing substantially as the results of previous research and development are translated into prototype weapons and equipment.

During the fiscal year 1956, the military research and development program is being reoriented to accelerate work on ballistic-type guided missiles, on nuclear propelled aircraft, and in fields of special importance to continental defense. This is being accomplished by changes in emphasis within the program and through the use of the flexibility provided by the Department of Defense emergency fund and the special transfer authority of $50 million provided in the 1956 appropriation act. The obligations for the major programs summarized in table 5 reflect these changes as currently planned for 1956 and 1957. Expenditures of the Department for the conduct of research and development, which in table 5 have been adjusted to reflect changes made last year in the research and development budget category, show a slight decline in 1956 because of program adjustments in 1954 and 1955. Expenditures are expected to rise again in 1957 and subsequent years as a result of increased obligations in 1956 and 1957 for operation of test ranges and other facilities and the reorientation of the programs described above.

Within the Department of Defense, the research and development program is administered by the three military departments under the general direction of the Secretary of Defense. More than half of the expenditures are for work performed under contracts with industry and nonprofit institutions; the remainder goes for work in Department of Defense facilities and for the administration of the program. The composition of the planned 1957 program is shown in table 6. The amounts for operation and management of facilities are those which are not distributed directly to the other programs under the current practices of each department.

INCREASE OF RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT PLANT

Estimates shown in this analysis for increase of research and development plant of the Department of Defense include all public works construction at installations having as their primary mission research, development, and testing, and that part of construction at other installations which is in support of the research and development program. Expenditures for minor construction and equipment for research and development plant are included in estimates for conduct of research and development.

MILITARY ASSISTANCE

As part of the military assistance program, the United States cooperates through the mutual weapons development program with a number of foreign countries to accelerate their development of advanced nonnuclear weapons. Current participants in the program, which is administered by the Department of Defense, are the United Kingdom, France, The Netherlands, Belgium, Norway, and Italy. Projects are financed jointly by the United States and the countries undertaking particular developments. Expenditure estimates in table 8 represent spending by the United States.

The projects are conducted by scientists and technicians of the participating countries and are directed at developing weapons which are particularly well suited to the defense requirements of these countries and to their capacity for production and maintenance of modern arms. Guided missiles, aircraft, communications and electronics equipment, and other weapons and equipment are under development. Through the projects in each country and through the establishment of joint regional efforts, such as the Air Defense Technical Center for Europe, the program helps provide technological solutions to mutual defense problems.

ATOMIC ENERGY COMMISSION

The research and development program of the Atomic Energy Commission comprises both basic research and applied research and development. Basic research is conducted in the physical and life sciences to secure a better understanding of nuclear phenomena and of the effects of nuclear radiation on living organisms. The applied research and development includes efforts to improve present methods of refining uranium and producing fissionable material, to improve weapons systems, to find ways to achieving controlled thermonuclear reactions, and to develop means of producing useful power from atomic reactors. The research and development program is conducted in the Commission's laboratories, which are operated by private contractors, and in universities and other private research institutions. A large part of the research effort is devoted to meeting military requirements. At the same time it produces information which is also necessary to progress in the application of atomic energy to civilian uses. Moreover, the Commission is devoting an increasing amount of its research efforts to the development of peaceful applications of nuclear energy.

The research and development program for production and weapons is chiefly directed to increasing the capacity and efficiency of plants which produce uranium metal, other feed materials, and fissionable materials, and to developing concepts which lead to new and improved weapons.

Reactor development research is devoted primarily to the conversion of atomic energy to useful power. In the civilian field, the Commission will in 1957 be working on eight concepts of reactors for the generation of economic electrical energy, with increasing participation by private industry and public power groups. To meet military requirements, the Commission will expand work on developing transportable reactors to supply power at remote bases and propulsion reactors for submarines, surface ships, and aircraft. In support of these specific programs, the Commission conducts research and development work on reactor materials and components, heat transfer systems, separations processes for used fuels, reactor safety, and related problems. In 1957, expenditures for the construction of specific reactor prototypes and related research, development, and test facilities will increase substantially.

Under physical research the Commission conducts investigations in chemistry, physics, and metallurgy which provide the basic information for further advances in nuclear energy. A major portion of this effort is devoted to exploration of the nature of nuclear structure and forces through the use of particle accelerators, including very high energy machines. Construction of accelerators, including the multibillion electron volt accelerator now under construction at Brookhaven National Laboratory, will continue in 1957. Major improvements and additions to research facilities at the Oak Ridge and Brookhaven National Laboratories and at the Commission-supported University of California Radiation Laboratory will be initiated in 1957.

In the fields of biology and medicine, the Commission's research consists mainly of studies to determine the detrimental effects of atomic radiation on plant and animal life, to discover methods of combating such detrimental effects, and increasingly to develop methods of using atomic energy and radioisotopes for the general welfare in the fields of agriculture and medicine. A medical reactor is included in the construction of the medical research center which was initiated in 1956 to replace the existing center at the Brookhaven National Laboratory.

Department of Health, Education, and Welfare

The largest research programs of the Department are those of the Public Health Service. Significant research is also conducted by the Office of Education, the Food and Drug Administration, and other units.

Table 10.—Expenditures of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare for research and development

The Public Health Service conducts or supports research in the diagnosis, cause, and treatment of illnesses of the population. Special emphasis upon research problems related to particular diseases is provided through activities of the National Institutes of Health, organized as Institutes for Cancer, Heart, Mental Health, Dental Health, Arthritis and Metabolic Disease, Microbiology, and Neurology and Blindness. Table 11 indicates expenditures of the several institutes as well as other units of the Service.

| Other, Public Health Service | .7 | 2.0 | 2.1 |
| Total, Public Health Service | 71.7 | 85.9 | 110.3 |

The bulk of the increase proposed for 1957 in the National Institutes of Health is for expansion of extramural programs, primarily research grants to medical schools and other research institutions and to individuals. Increased emphasis is being placed on research of a fundamental character. In addition, legislation will be proposed to authorize grants to aid in the construction of medical and dental research and teaching facilities. Intramural expansion is limited to increased utilization of research facilities which will be nearly completed in 1956.

Other units within the Public Health Service provide for research in methods to improve control of infectious and communicable diseases and such environmental health problems as sanitation, air pollution, and water pollution. Efforts are also directed toward analysis and evaluation of supply, demand, and utilization of professional health personnel, as well as study of many other broad areas affecting the health of the Nation.

Under recent legislation authorizing cooperative research, the Office of Education will enter into contracts and agreements with colleges, universities, and State agencies for the conduct of research on educational problems of nationwide significance. These include problems related to the mentally handicapped, students with special abilities, and juvenile delinquents; recruiting and retaining teachers; school building needs; the effects of population mobility on the schools; the use of television in education; and changing needs for vocational education. In addition the Office conducts research designed to answer questions arising in the daily operation of schools and colleges.

The Food and Drug Administration conducts applied research for the proper discharge of its enforcement obligations. This includes development of improved testing techniques and formulation of standards of purity and safety for foods, drugs, therapeutic devices, cosmetics, and related products.

The Social Security Administration conducts studies relating to the extent of protection which people have under public and private insurance, benefit and assistance programs, and to children's health and welfare.

The Office of Vocational Rehabilitation administers a research and development grant program to increase and extend knowledge of all phases of vocational rehabilitation and to improve and expand the national program of vocational rehabilitation of the handicapped.

The Department also conducts a small amount of research on problems relating to civil defense, under delegation from the Federal Civil Defense Administration, for which expenditures are shown under the Office of the Secretary in 1955 and 1956 and under the Federal Civil Defense Administration in 1957.

Department of Agriculture

The research program of the Department of Agriculture is concerned with the production, storage, distribution, and utilization of agricultural products and with human nutrition and home economics. This program is conducted in facilities operated by the Department, through grants to State agricultural experiment stations, and in cooperative research projects chiefly with these stations.

Table 12.—Expenditures of the Department of Agriculture for research and development

[In millions]

| Function | 1955 actual | 1956 estimate | 1957 estimate |

| 400 Natural resources | 5.8 | 7.1 | 7.5 |
| Total, Department of Agriculture | 71.2 | 87.9 | 99.4 |

The major portion of this program is administered by the Agricultural Research Service, which engages in or supports research on crops, farm and land management, livestock, agricultural product utilization, and human nutrition and home economics. The budget provides for increases in 1957 for expansion of research conducted by the Department to meet pressing problems of agricultural production and utilization, and to strengthen the cooperative program at the agricultural experiment stations. These increases are more than offset by decreases in construction of research facilities.

The Agricultural Marketing Service studies means of maintaining and improving quality, reducing costs, and expanding outlets in the marketing of agricultural products.

Research conducted by the Forest Service has four main purposes: To improve forest and range management practices; to develop measures for the protection of forests from fires, insects, and diseases; to improve forest products and lessen waste; and to develop more efficient harvesting and utilization of forest products.

Other research activities are conducted by the Farmer Cooperative Service, which assists farmer-owned cooperatives in improving their business operations; and the Foreign Agricultural Service, which seeks to enlarge foreign markets for American agricultural products.

Expenditures for 1957 also include sums estimated to be expended to accelerate research and extension programs directed toward lower production costs, new uses for farm products, and expanded domestic and foreign markets.

National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics

The National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics conducts basic and applied research to improve the design and performance of aircraft and guided missiles, including research in aerodynamics, powerplants, and aircraft structures.

Table 13.—Expenditures of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics for research and development

| Increase of research and development plant | 30.4 | 20.5 | 20.0 |
| Total, National Advisory Committee on Aeronautics | 73.8 | 71.0 | 75.0 |

The Committee is primarily concerned with the problems of military aviation. Because of the importance of this work to other national security programs, an increase in expenditures is projected in 1957. Many of the Committee's findings will be of value to civil aviation as well.

The research program is carried on at the Committee's 3 laboratories and 2 flight stations and involves actual flight tests of piloted and pilotless aircraft, experimentation with the aid of wind tunnels and other specialized equipment, and theoretical studies. Research operations are being initiated during the current year in three large supersonic wind tunnels constructed at the Committee's laboratories under the Unitary Wind Tunnel Plan Act of 1949. Additional facilities proposed in 1957 reflect the emphasis being given to problems of flight at supersonic and hypersonic speeds, such as aerodynamic heating, and problems of higher altitude flight.

National Science Foundation

Under its basic legislation enacted in 1950, and Executive Order 10521, issued in 1954, the National Science Foundation is assuming increasing responsibility for the encouragement and support by the Federal Government of general-purpose, basic research in this country. This support is provided through grants by the Foundation in the mathematical, physical, medical, biological, engineering and related sciences to colleges, universities, and other research institutions.

Table 14.—Expenditures of the National Science Foundation for research and development

| International Geophysical Year | .3 | 6.5 | 18.0 |
| Total, National Science Foundation | 8.5 | 19.6 | 42.3 |

The 1957 budget will permit a substantial increase in the support of individual basic research projects and in the support of special facilities for scientific investigations and experimentation. Such facilities include university computers and nuclear research reactors, biological field stations, the first major radio astronomy center in the Nation, and plans for the development of a new optical astronomy observatory.

In addition to its direct support of research the National Science Foundation is responsible for studying the Nation's research efforts and recommending to the President policies relating to the place of the Federal Government in the encouragement, support, and conduct of research.

As a nonrecurring activity, the Foundation has been assigned the responsibility for supporting the United States program for the International Geophysical Year to be held in 1957–58. This is a worldwide undertaking in geophysical research now involving some 40 countries with cooperating national programs, the findings and data from which will be mutually available for the advancement of the world's knowledge about the earth and its physical characteristics. Expenditures for the International Geophysical Year are estimated to increase substantially in 1956 and 1957 under the proposed schedules for procurement of equipment and the establishment of observation stations.

Included in the expenditures for the regular activities of the National Science Foundation are funds for continuation in 1956 on a greatly reduced basis of the synthetic rubber research program formerly supported by the Federal Facilities Corporation, Treasury Department, as successor to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Department of the Interior

Research expenditures of the Department of the Interior are primarily for the saline water conversion program, and for the Geological Survey, the Bureau of Mines, and the Fish and Wildlife Service. Substantially increased expenditures are estimated in 1957 for the Geological Survey and the Bureau of Mines to implement the recommendations of the President's Cabinet Committee on Minerals Policy.

The Office of the Secretary coordinates a program to develop low-cost processes for converting saline water to fresh water in quantities sufficient for municipal, industrial, and agricultural use.

The Geological Survey conducts investigations into the nature and occurrence of minerals and mineral fuels and seeks to improve the discovery and development of the Nation's mineral resources. Studies are also made of our water resources looking toward their conservation and improved utilization.

Bureau of Mines research is concerned with the scientific, technological, and economic problems of the mineral industries and improvement of the health and safe working conditions of miners. This research relates to the production, processing, transportation, storage and utilization of fuels, such as coal, petroleum, natural gas, and oil shale and of minerals and metals.

The Fish and Wildlife Service makes basic studies of the fish and wildlife resources of the Nation. It undertakes research to increase the production of various species and to provide protection against their unlimited exploitation and depletion.

Research is also carried on by the Bureau of Reclamation in connection with its construction program, and by the National Park Service which conducts recreational, archeological, and historical studies.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

Research and development in the Department of Commerce is conducted chiefly in the National Bureau of Standards, the Maritime Administration, the Civil Aeronautics Administration, and the Weather Bureau. Smaller amounts are spent by the Patent Office, the Bureau of Public Roads, and the Office of Business Economics.

TABLE 16.—Expenditures of the Department of Commerce for research and development

| 600 General government | .6 | 1.5 | 2.8 |
| Total, Department of Commerce | 9.2 | 20.6 | 23.9 |

To meet its responsibilities for the establishment, maintenance, and improvement of fundamental standards of measurement, the National Bureau of Standards conducts basic and applied research and development programs in various fields of physical science. An increase in the Bureau's regular expenditures is estimated for the fiscal year 1957 to enable it to serve more adequately the scientific needs of industry, Federal agencies, State and local governments, and universities. Increased expenditures are anticipated also for site acquisition and planning of new laboratory facilities to replace presently inadequate buildings in the District of Columbia.

The research and development activities of the Maritime Administration include a program of Liberty Ship conversion and engine improvement, development of plans for improved ship design, and research and development leading to improved cargo handling equipment and practices.

The Air Navigation Development Board, a joint board of the Commerce and Defense Departments, conducts research and development work on the common system of air navigation and traffic control. In addition, the Civil Aeronautics Administration develops and evaluates aeronautical devices and instruments and performs medical research work on human problems affecting aircraft design and operation.

The comprehensive program of research on hurricanes, tornadoes, and other severe storms which was begun by the Weather Bureau in fiscal year 1956 will be continued and expanded in 1957 to improve the accuracy of forecasts and storm warnings.

OTHER AGENCIES

Research is also conducted by a number of other agencies in furtherance of their assigned responsibilities. These include the General Services Administration, Veterans Administration, Treasury Department, the Tennessee Valley Authority, the Federal Civil Defense Administration, the United States Information Agency, the Post Office Department, the Federal Communications Commission, and the Advisory Committee on Weather Control. The General Services Administration research is almost entirely contract research, financed from funds available to the President under the Defense Production Act, and is directed toward increasing the supply of strategic and critical raw materials.

Special Analysis J

FEDERAL ECONOMIC STATISTICAL PROGRAMS

This analysis presents a summary of the major economic statistical programs of the Federal Government, showing the amounts provided for these programs for fiscal years 1955 and 1956 and the amounts recommended for 1957. Continuing current statistical programs are shown separately from the periodic censuses, for which expenditures fluctuate widely from year to year. For the current programs, the budget for the fiscal year 1957 includes direct obligations estimated at $35.1 million—an increase of $3.2 million over fiscal year 1956. For the periodic census programs, the 1957 budget includes obligations of $4.8 million, less than half the $10 million obligated in fiscal year 1956.

A number of recent studies have been concerned with the adequacy of present statistical series to serve the purposes for which they are used, and have focused attention on the need for specific improvements. Recommendations for improvements have been made in the testimony of governmental, business, and labor economists and analysts before the Joint Committee on the Economic Report, and in reports made by the Joint Committee. Specific suggestions were made in the reports of the five committees of expert consultants established by the Federal Reserve Board, at the request of the Joint Committee, to appraise certain statistical fields. Recommendations have also been made by other individuals and organizations within and outside the Government concerned with understanding present and projected levels of the various sectors of our economy. The program of basic economic statistics for 1957 has been formulated in the light of these recommendations. It includes provision for meeting the more urgent needs for improvement in fields where immediate action is feasible.

CURRENT PROGRAMS

The Government's major current statistical programs are summarized here by broad subject areas, rather than by agency, to give some indication of the interrelationships existing among statistical programs of different agencies and to aid in evaluating the overall statistical program. For each area, the obligations incurred in the fiscal year 1955 and estimated for 1956 and 1957, as well as the agencies concerned, are shown in the following summary:

Direct obligations for major current statistical programs, by broad subject areas

[1] Includes $100,000 to the Department of Commerce for development of electronic equipment.

The programs included in this overall summary are shown by agency in the table at the end of this analysis. They account for most of the basic economic statistics of the Federal Government. Other statistical programs not included in this summary (e. g., those of the Bureau of Employment Security, Social Security Administration, Office of Education, Bureau of Mines, Housing and Home Finance Agency, Interstate Commerce Commission) also contribute importantly to the Government's overall statistical system, primarily as a consequence of statistical data collected in the course of administrative operations.

Labor statistics.—This area includes the figures compiled by the Bureau of the Census on the number and characteristics of persons in the labor force, including their employment and unemployment status; by the Bureau of Labor Statistics on employment by industry in nonagricultural establishments, labor turnover, wages, industrial injuries, and related topics; and by the Agricultural Marketing Service on farm labor. Substantial improvement is being made in this area in the current year to provide greater detail and more reliable information on the level and trend of employment and unemployment. This is essential for understanding the current economic situation and for studying the factors which interfere with full employment.

For fiscal year 1957, the increase of about $300,000 in this area is for a number of programs within the Bureau of Labor Statistics. It provides for extension to additional States of the newly developed cooperative Federal-State program for collecting statistics on labor turnover; for extension and technical improvement in industrial injury statistics; for a study of labor conditions in Hawaii as required by law; and for printing the revised Occupational Outlook Handbook. Provision is also made for preparation of a semimonthly report on employment in manufacturing, because of the needs expressed by economic analysts for more frequent data in this area.

Prices and price indexes.—Included in this area are the work of the Bureau of Labor Statistics on consumer prices and wholesale prices and the work of the Agricultural Marketing Service on prices received and paid by farmers. Maintaining the accuracy of these price indexes is essential. They serve as significant general indicators of the state of the economy, and they are also relied on for specific purposes involving large sums of money. The BLS consumer price index, for instance, is used as a factor in adjusting wage rates for millions of workers, and the Department of Agriculture's price indexes are used in determining parity prices and crop loans to farmers.

The increase in this area for fiscal year 1956 provided for a national survey of farmers' expenditures designed to provide new weights for the index of prices paid by farmers and to improve the national and State estimates of farm production expenditures and of net farm income. Field enumeration for this survey will be completed in fiscal year 1956, and the results will be analyzed during fiscal year 1957.

An increase is provided for work in the area of price statistics for 1957 for improvements needed to maintain the BLS consumer price index on a sound basis. The additional funds requested for 1957 would make it possible to collect prices for many items every month rather than every 3 or 4 months, and to improve the techniques used in collecting data on rents. The 1957 increase to BLS, however, is offset by the decrease in funds for the Department of Agriculture's work on prices, as a result of the completion of the field work for the farm expenditures survey.

Construction and housing.—Responsibility for a coordinated program of statistics on construction activity is shared by the Business and Defense Services Administration and the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The need for expanding and improving data in this area has been repeatedly stressed by economic analysts within and outside the Government, and in hearings held by the Joint Committee on the Economic Report.

For the fiscal year 1957 the budget includes an increase of about $700,000 for this program, designed to meet the most urgent needs for more accurate and detailed measures of activity in this important segment of the economy. Most of this increase ($600,000) is in the budget for the Business and Defense Services Administration. It provides for improving the soundness of present statistics on new private nonresidential and State and local public construction activity; and for initiating the collection and publication of data on expenditures for alterations and repairs and on materials use. An increase is also included for the Bureau of Labor Statistics to obtain data on labor requirements for construction. Provision is also made for a sample survey of the status of development of plans for various types of public works by State and local governments, to be made by the Bureau of the Census.

The need for more recent information on the number and characteristics of the Nation's housing units is met by inclusion of funds for a national housing inventory in fiscal year 1957, discussed below under Periodic Census Programs. An additional $175,000 is also included in the 1957 budget for the Housing and Home Finance Agency, which is not included in this summary analysis, to develop information on the factors influencing the current market demand for housing.

Production and distribution.—Statistics on production and distribution—the largest area included in this summary of current programs—comprise the current business, industrial, agricultural, and foreign trade statistics compiled by the Bureau of the Census; crop and livestock estimates and economic and statistical analysis of the Agricultural Marketing Service; research on the economics of production by the Agricultural Research Service; and the productivity statistics program of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Nearly two-thirds of the 1957 increase of $1.2 million in this broad area is for expansion of programs in the Department of Agriculture. In the Agricultural Research Service, provision is made for an expanded program of local studies to provide information needed as a basis for action to improve the earning capacity of low-income farm families, and also for increased research and analysis of economic problems confronting farmers in the Great Plains States. In the Agricultural Marketing Service, the 1957 budget allows for further needed improvements in crop and livestock estimates, and for expansion of economic and statistical analyses for specific agricultural products.

The budget for the fiscal year 1957 also includes additional funds for current programs of the Bureau of the Census relating to production and distribution. Of particular importance in terms of overall economic analysis is provision for the initiation of direct monthly estimates of total retail commodity inventories, to supply data needed for better understanding of business trends. Allowance is made for the rise in the costs of compiling foreign trade reports resulting from the increased volume of our exports and imports. Funds are also included for the compilation and publication of the biennial County Business Patterns published jointly by the Census Bureau and the Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance, Social Security Administration. This volume shows numbers of employees and taxable payrolls for major kinds of business for each county and State in the United States, and is widely used in market analysis.

A small increase to the Bureau of Labor Statistics provides for case studies of the application of automation at the plant level and for estimating the degree and effect of adoption of specific types of automation on an industry basis.

Agricultural marketing research.—The agricultural marketing research activities conducted by the Agricultural Marketing Service are directed primarily toward increasing market efficiency, expanding market outlets, and improving the quality of agricultural products. The specific research projects included in this activity rely heavily on the collection of statistical data.

The increase of about $600,000 included for this area in the budget for the fiscal year 1957 provides for expanded research on market development, market organization and costs, market transportation and facilities, and evaluation and improvement of product quality for a variety of agricultural products.

Population and vital statistics.—The major current program of the Government included under this heading is that of the National Office of Vital Statistics, located in the Public Health Service, which compiles the national statistics of births, deaths, marriages, and divorces. Also included in the area is the work of the Agricultural Marketing Service on various aspects of farm population.

The budget for fiscal year 1957 includes an increase of about $185,000 for the farm population work of the Agricultural Marketing Service to provide for field studies in selected areas, to be made in cooperation with State agricultural colleges. These studies will be concerned with problems of underemployed rural manpower, ways of improving occupational skills, utilization of health facilities, and effects of extension of social security to farmers.

National income and business financial accounts.—The statistical and analytic programs included in this area are those of the Office of Business Economics on preparation of national income and product data, measurement and analysis of current and long-term business trends, and computation of the balance of international payments; of the Internal Revenue Service on tabulations of personal and corporate income tax returns; of the Bureau of the Census on financial and other operations of State and local governments; and of the Federal Trade Commission and the Securities and Exchange Commission on their joint quarterly financial reports program.

The major increase in this area in the budget for the fiscal year 1957 is $240,000 for the Office of Business Economics to provide for basic improvements in the national accounts and related economic indicators. The additional funds allow for improvements in the estimates of consumer expenditures in the national income and product accounts and in the monthly estimates of manufacturers' inventories, sales and orders; and for remedying certain inadequacies in present estimates of plant and equipment expenditures. Provision is also made for resuming quarterly publication of data on business births and deaths; and investigating the feasibility of improving weekly indicators of current economic change. These improvements have been strongly recommended in recent studies of the statistics needed in interpreting economic trends and determining economic policy.

An increase of about $25,000 for the Securities and Exchange Commission provides for improvement in the SEC portion of the estimates of expenditures for new plant and equipment (prepared jointly with the Office of Business Economics) and in the SEC portion of the quarterly financial reports program (prepared jointly with the Federal Trade Commission).

PERIODIC CENSUS PROGRAMS

Legislation enacted in 1950 (Public Law 767, 81st Cong.) provided for a census of governments to be taken for the year 1952 and every fifth year thereafter, to obtain data on taxes and tax valuations, governmental receipts, expenditures, indebtedness, and employees, for States, counties, cities, and other governmental units in the United States. No funds were appropriated for the 1952 census, and there has been no census of governments since 1942. The budget for the fiscal year 1957 includes $2,100,000 for the 1957 census of governments, of which an estimated $857,000 will be obligated in fiscal year 1957. This census will make available national, State, and county totals of basic data, and comparative statistics regarding individual governments of significant size.

The budget for 1957 also includes funds for a national housing inventory to be made by the Bureau of the Census. This survey will provide data for the Nation, for regions, and for 35 important metropolitan areas. It will show the number and characteristics of dwelling units in existence and the extent to which the housing supply has been affected in size and quality since the 1950 census of housing by demolition, abandonment, conversion, new construction, modernization, and deterioration.

Censuses of agriculture, business, manufactures and mineral industries covering calendar year 1954 were initiated in fiscal year 1955 and will be completed in fiscal year 1957. Preparatory work for the next censuses of business, transportation, manufactures, and mineral industries (scheduled to be taken covering the year 1958) will begin in fiscal year 1957, and the 1957 budget includes $150,000 for this purpose.
